R. C. BARSTOW, B.M.

The Hon. the Native Minister, Wellington.

R.—C.

The Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY to the CHIEF PROTECTOR.

Auckland.—Purchase of Mahurangi from Thames Natives sanctioned by the Governor. Colonial Secretary's Office, Auckland, 14th April, 1841.

SIR,—

With reference to your letter of the 12th inst., submitting a proposal from the united tribes of the Thames to sell a tract of country in the vicinity of the Waitemata known as "Mahurangi," to the Crown, I do myself the honor, by the direction of the Lieut.-Governor, to convey to you his Excellency's sanction to the purchase being completed at the price mentioned in your communication.

An order has been accordingly transmitted to the Colonial Storekeeper to provide the barter, as specified below; and the Colonial Treasurer has been apprised that the sum of Two hundred pounds (£200) in specie will be required to meet the payment, warrant for which will be prepared as early as possible.

I have, &c.,

WILLOUGHBY SHORTLAND.

The Protector of Aborigines, &c., &c., Auckland.

Enclosure in No.1.

List referred to of Barter for the purchase of "Mahurangi" and its vicinity, containing One hundred thousand acres, more or less.

No. 2. The Hon. The COLONIAL SECRETARY to the CHIEF PROTECTOR.

Mahurangi.—Sanctioning Payment of £5 to Hoete. Colonial Secretary's Office, Auckland, 11th June; 1841.

SIR,—

With reference to your report of the 4th inst., on an application from the Chief Hoete (or William Jowett), for remuneration for services performed by him in pointing out the boundaries of the district, lately purchased by the Crown, called Mahurangi, referred to you under blank cover of the 2nd inst., I have the honor, by direction of the Governor, to acquaint you that a warrant has been prepared in your favor, and will shortly be transmitted to the Colonial Treasurer, empowering that officer to pay into your hands the sum of £5 (five pounds) to enable you to remunerate Hoete.

This sum will be impressed against you until the receipt of Hoete, duly attested, is forwarded by you.

I have, &c.,

WILLOUGHBY SHORTLAND.

The Protector of Aborigines.

P.S.—It will be necessary to explain clearly to the Natives who sold the land in question, but who neglected to point out the boundaries, the reason of this sum of £5 being deducted from the purchase money. You will also be pleased to have care taken that the deduction is made at the time of the issue of the barter to the Natives.

W.S.

No. 3. The Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY to the CHIEF PROTECTOR.

Auckland.—Pomare's Interest at Mahurangi purchased. Colonial Secretary's Office, Auckland, 5th April, 1842.
SIR,—

I have the honor, by the direction of the Governor, to inform you that His Excellency has been pleased to sanction the purchase of a small vessel for the Chief Pomare, in part payment for his interest in the land at Mahurangi, sold by that chief to the Crown for the sum of One hundred and fifty pounds (£150).

The account of this expense will, therefore, appear in the Contingent Abstract of your Department, and the Colonial Treasurer has received instructions to disburse the money on the proper accounts duly vouched being presented.

I have accordingly to request that you will take steps to bring the matter to an immediate conclusion.

I have, &c.,

JAMES STUART FREEMAN, Chief Clerk, for the Colonial Secretary.

The Chief Protector of Aborigines.

No. 4. The Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY to the CHIEF PROTECTOR.

To purchase Cattle for Wiremu Hoete. Colonial Secretary's Office, Auckland, 14th April, 1842.
SIR,—

With reference to your letter of the 20th ultimo, requesting His Excellency's sanction to the purchase of cattle for transfer to the Native chief Jowett, to complete the amount of consideration due to him, on behalf of the Ngatipaoa tribe, for land at Mahurangi, I am instructed to convey to you the Governor's authority for the purchase of four cows for the purpose above mentioned, and for traffic with the Natives generally.

You will therefore have the goodness to furnish the accounts to the Colonial Treasurer in the proper form, to enable that officer to prepare a warrant for the amount for His Excellency's signature.

I have, &c.,

WILLOUGHBY SHORTLAND, Colonial Secretary.

The Chief Protector of Aborigines.

Mahurangi—Reporting his Visit to the District. Native Secretary's Office, 24th February, 1852.
SIR—

In compliance with your directions to me at the Kawan I proceeded to ascertain the nature and extent of the Native claims to the Mahurangi and Matakana District, the limits into which their reserves could be confined, and the relative extent of those reserves compared with the rest of the block.

Its Native History.

The country between Auckland and Whangarei was originally inhabited by a tribe called the Ngatirongo, a branch of the Kawerau, of whom Parihoru and Hemara are the remnants, who had from time immemorial waged fierce disputes with the Thames Natives relative to the right of fishing in the rivers of this district, which right was at last finally given up to the Ngatipaoas by the Ngatirongo, and such was the relative position of these tribes when the Bay of Islanders' invasion commenced. The Ngatirongo were exterminated with the exception of two or three small parties or families, who either fled before Hongi Hika, in common with the rest of the Natives, or, taking advantage of relationship with the Bay of Islanders, amalgamated themselves with the conquerors. Among the former is the present claimant Reweti, and to the latter belongs Hemara, who took refuge with Pomare, and Parihoru, who took refuge at Whangarei. At length the Bay of Islanders in their turn were driven back by the Waikato and Thames Natives, and, the Mahurangi tribe having been exterminated, the Thames Natives, who, as before stated, had acquired the right to the bays and rivers (there being none to contend with them), now took the land also, and on the arrival of Her Majesty's Government at Auckland, they sold their claims to the whole block.

The accompanying plan will show the extent of the claims of the Ngatirongo compared with the rest of the block, in which two distinct parties and interests exist. Hemara and party, who merely wish a large reserve to live on, and Parihoru, who urges extravagant claims on a large portion of the block.

Hemara's Statement as to his Father's Signature to Deed of Sale being Fictitious.

Hemara has proved to me that his father's name was inserted by Pomare in the deed executed by that chief, after his father's decease, and that the document is not genuine, and that he had remonstrated at the time with His late Excellency Governor Hobson, who guaranteed him certain reserves and sacred places, which statements are also corroborated by evidence.

He has with his party, numbering about 100 individuals, no other place to reside on, and the whole of the Natives in the country are convinced of his right to what he claims, which I have prevailed upon him to curtail to the extent delineated on the plan, consisting of timber land, no part of which can be said to be available for the location of European farmers.

Chief Parihoru's Claims.

Parihoru does not appear to be so strongly supported in his pretensions by the Natives in general, as the feeling among them is that he should relinquish his claims to all the land originally sold by Ngati Paoa as far as the Arai, and receive a small payment for the same, in addition to his reserve where he now resides, which would be just and reasonable.

I have, &c.,

JOHN GRANT JOHNSON, Interpreter.

The Native Secretary, &c.

No. 6. The NATIVE SECRETARY to the Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Mahurangi.—Respecting the purchase of that district. Native Secretary's Office, Auckland, February 24th, 1853.

SIR,—

In accordance with your letter of the 9th inst., authorizing me to proceed to Mahurangi, to endeavour to procure a settlement of the Native claims to land in that district, I have the honor to report that I proceeded to the residence of the Chief Hemara, situated near the south head of Mahurangi Harbour, for the purpose of ascertaining the nature of his claim to a large tract of land which he now occupies. From all I can learn, this Native has a claim to some reserve or compensation in that district, as his ancestors formerly occupied it, and he has no other place where he can subsist; and his claims are backed by several other Natives. A considerable block is also claimed by a Native named Parihoru, which includes land sold by the Government, and also land belonging to land claimants.

As the negotiations concerning this affair were likely to extend over several days, and as there was small probability of any settlement of the exorbitant Native claims, and as I had to return to Auckland at an early date, I left instructions with John Johnston to remain on the spot, and to make himself more fully acquainted with the nature and extent of the claims, which could only be obtained by a lengthened sojourn in the locality; and I further directed him to endeavour to bring the respective claimants to Auckland, where they might be more induced to listen to reason than at their own places.

Mr. Johnston's report I herewith forward, which gives a full account of the nature of the respective claims.

These Natives, especially Hemara, are more obstinate on account of their receiving payments from Europeans for permission to cut firewood and timber on the disputed land, which there would be no means of stopping unless the Native Land Purchase Ordinance were put in force.

The Natives are now in Auckland, and I would suggest that the affair should be settled on the most liberal terms as regards Hemara, who appears to have a claim; but with regard to Parihoru, the question seems more difficult, as he lays claim to large tract of land which contains several farms belonging to the Europeans who have purchased from old land claimants who have got Crown grants, and also a farm of 50 acres, for which a settler named Boyds has got a Crown grant; and this tract he asserts his intention of holding, and threatens to pull down Boyds' house and mill; and as his claim is acknowledged by most of the Natives who previously sold the land, I think that it would be judicious to extinguish it by giving a money payment and also a reserve of land.

I have, &c.,

C. L. NUGENT, Native Secretary.

The Honorable the Colonial Secretary, &c., &c., &c.

No. 7. Mr. COMMISSIONER JOHNSON to the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

Parekakau.—Reporting offer by Wiremu Reweti of a Block of 1,500 Acres. Hot Springs, Mahurangi. 3rd June, 1854.

SIR.—

I have the honor to inform you that I have seen the piece of land offered for sale by Kereihi, the wife of the Wiremu Reweti of Orakei, and beg to recommend its purchase for the sum of One hundred pounds (£100), being the amount which she expressed her willingness to receive for it some time since.

The name of the place is Parekakau, and it is, properly speaking, a portion of the Wainui, reported on in my letter to yourself of this day's date, and to the plan accompanying which I beg to refer you for a description of it.

It appears to have been given up as a portion to Kereihi and her immediate relations by the Natives of this place; and I think it would be advantageous to purchase it for the sum I have named, which might be paid at Auckland, where the owner resides. The extent is about fifteen hundred acres, and the quality of the ground is of much the same character as the rest of the block, which I have already described.

I have been disposed to recommend a liberal price for these two blocks with a view to incite the owners of the land behind Mahurangi, known as the "Kaipara Flats," to bring the negotiations which are being carried on with them to a favourable termination.

I have, &c.,

JOHN GRANT JOHNSON, Sub-Commissioner for Purchase of Native Land.

Donald McLean; Esq., J.P.,

Commissioner for Purchase of Native Land.

No. 8. Mr. COMMISSIONER JOHNSON to the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

Wai.—Reporting offer of the Block. Hot Springs, Mahurangi, 3rd June, 1854.

SIR,—

I have the honor to inform you that I have this day returned from the inspection of a tract of country offered for sale by certain Natives named in the margin,

Note.—Hemara, Te More, Tirohia, Kahe, Tutamoe, Paora, Tamiwhahine, Pani, Wakatea, Hori Kingi, Te Roa, Taikiamana. Wi Hemara, Koniria, Pohipi Ngonge, Makaore, Rapana, Arama Karaka, Henare Winiata, Te Peta, Te Waka Tuaea, Henare Te Rawhiti, Paora Kawaru, Kaupapa, Tohetai, Tohehau, Kawerahi, Te Hemara who are descendants of the ancient Kawerau tribe, for the sum of Eight hundred pounds (£800).

Tamaiti, Herewini, Tamihana, Pene, Te Reweti, Hira, Mereana, Hiria Heni, Matiu, Makereta, Piri Paraone, Takaia, Nikora, Herekino, Taiora.

This tract of country is known by the name of the Wainui, and is situated immediately behind that part of the Mahurangi Block which lies between the Orewa and Waiwerawere creeks; and I estimate the contents, after a careful survey of two of the sides according to the enclosed plan, to contain fourteen thousand acres.

The flooded state of the creeks during the late rains prevented my reaching the North-western angle of this block; but the bearing being taken by compass from the other points would leave the boundary sufficiently determined, until a proper survey could be undertaken at a more propitious season of the year.

This block is of an available character, being composed of low ranges covered with the most magnificent kauri forest, and intersected with hollows of open land capable of cultivation; and I would urge you to recommend its purchase by the Government, as it is only distant about twelve miles from the North Shore of the Waitemata River, and lies in the direct track of the proposed Northern road through Mahurangi to the Bay of Islands.

The position of the back boundary of the old Mahurangi purchase, which was cut by Mr. Reader Wood, the present Deputy Surveyor General, does not appear to be known by the persons engaged in the timber trade, and several parties with Government licenses are now cutting wood on the Native lands.

The Maories, in the first instance, rather connive at these proceedings; but when a large quantity of sawn stuff has accumulated at the pits, they come down upon the sawyers suddenly, and detain the timber until their demand for compensation is satisfied. A case of this nature came to my knowledge, where the European had to pay this party of Natives the sum of One hundred pounds (£100); and in other cases "bushes," or portions of forest land, have been purchased for as much as One hundred and fifty pounds (£150); and in one instance a Maurice Kelly is reported to have monopolized the timber over all the country between the Weiti and the Waitemata River, by direct purchase from the Native owners; and that he retails portions of the same to other Europeans at a great profit, much to the dissatisfaction of the public, who consider the right of leasing timber on land which is not private property to belong to the Crown alone.

You will no doubt see without further explanation, the very detrimental effect that these irregular proceedings must produce upon the endeavours which are made to extinguish the Native title to this part of the country; and it also prevents the sawyers from settling down and purchasing land, which many of them would do, where they could combine a small farm with their avocation, which would tend much to elevate the condition of this class of labourers in the colony, and for which purpose the portion of country now offered appears well adapted.

I would therefore suggest for your consideration that the sum of Six hundred pounds (£600) be paid down immediately to the sellers; and that the sum of Two hundred pounds (£200) be retained until the 1st of January, 1855, by which time a survey of the land can be undertaken, if the adjoining blocks should not be previously obtained from the Natives.

Should the foregoing arrangements receive the sanction of His Excellency the Officer Administering the Government, the Natives are desirous that the Six hundred pounds (£600), which will then be payable to them, should be transmitted here to me for distribution; and I think that it would be conducive to the public service if you could comply with their request, as the parties interested, about fifty in number, are nearly all assembled at this place, and could not repair to Auckland at this season of the year without great inconvenience to themselves.

I have, &c.,

JOHN GRANT JOHNSON, Sub-Commissioner for the Purchase of Native Lands.

Donald McLean, Esq., J.P.,
Native Land Commissioner, &c., &c., &c.

No. 9. The CHIEF COMMISSIONER to Mr.
COMMISSIONER JOHNSON.

Wainui.—Authorizing the Purchase of the Block. Land Commissioner's Office, Auckland, 20th June, 1854.
SIR,—

I have the honor to acknowledge receipt of your letters of the 3rd instant.

With reference to the purchase of the Wainui Block, estimated by you to contain fourteen thousand acres, for a sum of Eight hundred pounds (£800), Six hundred pounds (£600) of which you intend to pay at once to the Natives, and the remaining sum of Two hundred pounds (£200) in January 1855, I have the pleasure of conveying to you His Excellency's authority for concluding the arrangement, and, to enable you to do so with as little delay as possible, the sum of Six hundred pounds (£600) for this purpose is forwarded to you to the care of Te Hemara by Mr. Daldy's boat that sails this evening for Mahurangi.

The leasing of timber from the Natives, which you describe as being carried on to a great extent, must be gradually checked, so that the existence of such an irregular system, that has grown up in consequence of land-purchasing being so much in arrear, may not impede your operations. This subject I have brought fully under the notice of Government, and means will soon be adopted to check the evil, probably without any immediate intervention on your own part beyond discountenancing the system as far as you can.

In accordance with your recommendation, I have offered Kereihi of Orakei the sum of One hundred pounds (£100) for her claims to a piece of land at Mahurangi, but she seems to expect a horse, which she says was promised to her by George Grey in addition to the sum of One hundred pounds. I would thank you to inform me if you have any recollection of such a promise being made, as Major Nugent is not aware of it.

I have, &c.,

DONALD MCLEAN, Land Commissioner. J. G. Johnson,

Esq., J.P., District Commissioner, Mahurangi.

No. 10. Mr. COMMISSIONER JOHNSON to the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

Omaha.—As to Claim of the Government on this Land. District Commissioner's office, Whangarei, 23rd December, 1854.

SIR,—

With reference to your letter of the 28th November, enclosing reference concerning Native claims to the Crown lands at Omaha and Oruru, I beg to inform you that the Government merely extinguished the rights of the conquerors over Omalia, and that the original proprietors residing at Pakiri and in the Oruawharo maintain that the Ngatipaoa and Ngapuhi had a claim to the land they sold to Mr. Clarke to the North of Point Rodney—and I think it very questionable if they had—so that in this case I am not in a position to insist on their accepting a certain compensation for the land in question, but must wait until they choose to dispose of their ownership.

The case of Oruru I will attend to as soon as I have an opportunity of proceeding to the North, probably in February next.

I have, &c.,

JOHN GRANT JOHNSON, Land Commissioner. H. T.

Kemp, Esq., Native Secretary, Land Department.

No. 11. Mr. COMMISSIONER JOHNSON to the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

Wainui.—Has paid £600 for this Block. Mahurangi, 22nd June, 1854. SIR,—

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 20th instant, conveying his Excellency's authority for concluding the purchase of the Wainui Block, and forwarding the sum of Six hundred pounds (£600) for that purpose. This sum has been paid by me this day to the claimants assembled at the village on the Native Reserve, and the subsequent further division of the same amongst themselves, and the amounts which have been devoted to appease the jealousy of the Ngatiwhatua has entirely set at rest any apprehension which may have existed of uneasiness in that quarter.

I beg to enclose the deed from the Natives to the Crown, duly signed and executed according to your general instructions and precedent furnished, as far as the circumstances will permit.

I have, &c.,

JOHN GRANT JOHNSON,
District Commissioner.
Donald McLean, Esq., Land Commissioner.

No. 12. The CHIEF COMMISSIONER to Mr. SURVEYOR CHURTON.

Mahurangi.—Relative to survey of the Pakiri Block.

Chief Land Purchase Commissioner's Office,

Auckland, 30th August, 1858.

SIR,—

The Native Chief Kiri states that, when you were engaged in surveying the Pakiri Block, he objected to include Omaha in the boundary; and that he prevented, on some occasion, your using a survey chain on that part of the lands he wished to retain.

I am anxious to know from you if such was really the case, and whether any or what objections were made by Kiri or his party to the survey of, or inclusion within the boundaries, of any of the land on the coast line from the Ti to Pakiri; as it appears that the Natives now adduce claims to certain portions about Omaha, and elsewhere, that are not exhibited on the map of the block which you furnished to me.

Your own recollection and that Mr. McDonnell, who was with you, will decide the point now under reference by the Natives, and I shall feel obliged by an early reply.

I have, &c.,

DONALD MCLEAN, Chief. Commissioner. A. Churton, Esq., Mahurangi.

No. 13. Mr. COMMISSIONER ROGAN to the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

Respecting Te Kiri's Claim to the Pakiri Block. Auckland, 28th September, 1859.

SIR,—

With reference to your letter, dated 27th ulto., requesting me to proceed to Omaha to communicate with Te Kiri, and enquire into and report on land claimed by him within the Pakiri blocks, for the information of His Excellency the Governor, I have the honor to acquaint you that I proceeded to Pakiri, and stated to Kiri the object of my visit, and he agreed to accompany me over the boundaries of the land claimed by him.

Accordingly, on the following day, 15th instant, we proceeded to the ground, and followed along the Native pathway, which leads from Whakatuwhenua, or Cape Rodney, to Omaha, and when we arrived at a place which is marked M on the accompanying tracing, Te Kiri halted and pointed out a spade mark, which he stated was made by him in presence of a number of Natives and the Surveyor, previous to the survey of the Pakiri block, and that he called Mr. Churton's attention to this place at the time, and Mr. McDonnell, who was one of the survey party, substantiated generally what Kiri stated. The claim he prefers is bounded by the line colored pink, and follows the water line from Whakatuwhenua along the coast to the point where that line strikes the harbour, which is shown on the accompanying tracing, and contains about (668) six hundred and sixty-eight acres.

We proceeded to Omaha, and I said to Te Kiri that I considered he was in error, in the first instance, in not having a clear understanding as to the land he wished to have reserved.

He replied that his boundary was pointed out to the Surveyor long before the land was surveyed, and, When it was being subdivided, he stopped the survey at the same place where the mark was made, and warned the Surveyor that the pegs would be pulled up.

I then stated to Kiri, that, without entering into the question as to who was right, in order to get rid of the misunderstanding which existed as regards the whole question, I proposed at once, on my own account, that he should waive his claim over the whole of the land claimed by him, and that I should secure him, say, five acres (5) of land in the township, and that I should recommend the Government to give him some small sum in addition, more in consideration of labour expended in building houses, planting, fencing, and cultivating, than any claim he might have to the land, telling him at the same time that I was not authorized by the Government to do so, and was not at all certain that my proposal would be approved. He considered this over for some time, and when I pressed him for a reply, he said he would not accept from the Government land which belonged to himself, and a discussion ensued which arrived at a point beyond which I did not think it advisable to persevere, and told him that I should leave the whole matter as it stood before.

He was then told, that it was matter between him and the Government, and not the survey party, who should be looked upon in the same manner as the bill hooks with which the lines were cut. He then replied that the survey might be proceeded with, but he should pull up the pegs, and he considered this was a sufficient protest.

After some time, I proposed that he should accompany me to Auckland, in order to decide the question in some way with Government, to which he at once assented.

When the vessel was prepared to sail for Auckland, Kiri came to me and represented that he was in great trouble owing to his son being in the last stage of consumption, and that his friends objected to his leaving the settlement in consequence. I promised either to write to him from Auckland, or to call at Pakiri soon to bring the question to an issue.

On my arrival in town I mentioned to Mr. Churton what Kiri advanced, and he admits having witnessed the mark being made, but is quite clear that Kiri is under a misapprehension as regards the Reserve, as he never, during the period of survey, explained to him that he intended to reserve this place, and that no question whatever arose until long after the survey was made and the money paid over to the Natives, and as the Chief Commissioner who negotiated this purchase is of the same opinion, I am inclined to think that the large reserve which Kiri now claims was an after-thought of his, although he seems quite clear that he never alienated this portion of the block.

I have, &c.,

JOHN ROGAN, District Commissioner.
Donald McLean, Esq.,
Chief Commissioner, Auckland.

No. 14. Mr. COMMISSIONER ROGAN to the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

Whangateau.—Respecting Tawhitu's Claim to Land claimed by Mr. Dacre. Auckland,
SIR,—

At your request, I have the honor to state, for the information of His Excellency the Governor, that I proceeded to Whangatean to inquire into the nature of Tawhitu's claim to a piece of land situated on that river within an old purchase; and, when I arrived at the settlement, the natives had gone to Te Ngaere. The boundaries of the land claimed by him as a reserve were, however, pointed out to me by a Native named Nuku, which correspond as nearly as possible with that shown on the tracing enclosed herewith. I overtook Tawhitu, who was on his way to Auckland to arrange with Mr. Dacre, the proprietor, and secure the possession of the land. As this place has been purchased many years ago, and included in the late Pakiri purchase, in the payment for which Tawhitu participated, I cannot see what claim the Natives can have to this place except by occupation. At the same time, as there are several plantations and houses on the land, and the Natives have had undisturbed possession of the land for ten years, I submit that it would be very desirable to make some arrangement with Mr. Dacre in order to secure the Natives in possession of their homes.

I have, &c.,

JOHN ROGAN, District Commissioner.

Donald McLean, Esq., Chief Commissioner.

No. 15. Mr. COMMISSIONER ROGAN to the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

Omaha.—Respecting Te Kiri's Claim. Auckland, 13th February, 1861. SIR,—

With reference to a portion of land situated at Omaha, in the Pakiri purchase, held in dispute by Te Kiri which is reported in my letter of the 28th September, 1859, and according to an arrangement with him I proceeded to Omaha on the 7th instant, with a view to arrive at a better understanding, and, if possible, to settle the question. On my arrival at Omaha, a messenger was despatched to Pakiri for Te Kiri and his brother, who arrived late on Saturday, the 9th instant. On Monday, the 11th, we proceeded to Whakatuwhenua, where the Natives pointed out about ten acres of land, which embraces the landing-place, together with a portion which is more particularly described on the accompanying sketch. Te Kiri insisted upon retaining this place before entering into any negotiations with me regarding the part he was willing to cede, which, he stated, entirely depended on the terms I was prepared to offer him. We then returned to Omaha, and traversed the Kaiohuohu Stream to its source, and on to Motururu, the sea coast. The whole of the land seaward of this boundary he has determined to hold for his own and his friends' use, and, as there is a party of Natives belonging to Tauranga located on a portion of it, he could not easily, if he would, dispose of it, as it would be difficult to oust these people from their cultivations. The land between Kaiohuohu and the straight line shown on the tracing, which comprises a great portion of the land held in dispute, he agrees to waive all claim to, excepting the ten acres above referred to, for the sum of £100. After this arrangement was closed, a difficulty arose between Te Kiri and Te Tawera people regarding a cultivation within this boundary on an allotment of land purchased by a settler who is most anxious to occupy it, and, after a long discussion, Kiri gave me to understand that he would induce the Tawera Natives to give up their cultivations, and a sum of £10 or £20 will be required for this purpose.

I have the honor to submit that I may be authorized to carry out the above arrangement without delay, as it will enable settlers to enter upon quiet possession of land which they purchased from the Government a considerable time ago, who have been waiting until the present time in the hope that this question may be brought to a conclusion.

With regard to the portion of land which contains 163 acres reserved by Te Kiri, it would materially facilitate my operations hereafter in negotiating for the greater part of it if I am authorized to purchase for Te Kiri 30 or 40 acres of land which is situated on the coast line between Whakatuwhenua and Pakiri, which he is most anxious to obtain.

The land is not likely to be purchased by any Europeans as it is very hilly.

I have, &c.,

JOHN ROGAN,
Donald McLean, Esq., District Commissioner.

Chief Commissioner.

Mr. COMMISSIONER ROGAN to the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

Omaha.—Enclosing Receipt for Claims of Te Kiri. Mahurangi, 20th February, 1861.
SIR,—

Referring to my letter of 13th instant, I have now the honor to enclose herewith a receipt for £100 and £10, which has been paid to Kiri in consideration of waiving his claim to a portion of land held in dispute at Omaha, and for defining the boundary between the part retained by himself and that disposed of to the Government.

I succeeded in arranging with Kiri, as is stated on the receipt, to induce Te Tawera Natives to abandon their cultivation this season, and the balance remaining in my hands, £10, shall be paid into the Treasury when I return to Auckland.

The boundaries of the reserve at Whakatuwhenua have been altered by Te Kiri, at my request, so as to leave out nearly the whole of the land on the east side of the road leading to the beach at that place.

I have, &c.,

JOHN ROGAN, District Commissioner.
Donald McLean, Esq., Chief Commissioner, Auckland.

Enclosure.

No tenei ra, no te 18 o nga ra o Pepuere, 1861, ka riro mai i an, na te Rokena, Kotahi rau pauna moni. Ko te tikanga o enei moni, he whakapumautanga i te rohe o te wahi whenua kei Omaha, ka kapea nei ki waho o te rohe o to te Kuini wahi, he whenua moku ko te rohe tenei:— Ka timata ki te puwaha o te wai o Kaiohuohu, ka haere tata atu ki Motururu, ki te moana. Ko te kumore ki te taha ki te maraugai o tenei rohe ka puritia; ko te taha ki te hauauru o tenei rohe kua riro katoa atu i a Te Kuini i te hokonga o te Makarini i mua.

Ko tahi wahi, kei te Whakatuwhenua ka puritia hei nohoanga moku, kua oti i a maua ko te Rokena te whakarite, me te whakatakotoria nga rohe.

A Kotahi te rau pauna i riro mai i au mo te waerenga o te Tawera i roto o te pihi whenua o te Pakeha, ko Kunihi (Duncan Mathieson), a maku te whakaaro ki aua tangata mo te mea ka whakarerea rawa o ratou mahinga ki taua wahi.

The mark of X TE KIRI.

Kai Titiro,
Kenneth McKenzie, Te Keene.

No. 17. The CHIEF COMMISSIONER to Mr. COMMISSIONER JOHNSON.

Pakiri.—Relative to Survey of Boundaries of Omaha Block.

Land Commissioner's Office,

Auckland, 21st March, 1861.

SIR,—

With reference to your letter of the 31st December last, reporting that you had been negotiating with the Natives at Pakiri for a block of land in that neighbourhood estimated by you at from 45,000 to 50,000 acres.

In order that your time and that of the surveyor at Whangarei should not be taken up with this negotiation, I have had the external boundaries perambulated by Mr. Churton, accompanied by some of the principal Chiefs concerned in the sale thereof, who estimates the area of the block at 38,000 acres.

I had previously intended to instruct you come up to Pakiri to complete the purchase with the Natives, but from the information contained in your report above referred to I found that I should be able to effect the arrangements with the Natives without putting the Government to the expense, and yourself to the trouble, of coming up to Pakiri.

The Natives have agreed to alienate their claims to this block for the sum of One thousand and seventy pounds (£1,070), of this amount Two hundred and seventy pounds (£270) were paid to them on the 12th inst., and the remaining sum of Eight hundred pounds will be paid when the arrangements for the purchase of the lands situated between Pakiri and Te Arai on the North and Te Ngaere on the South have been completed. The price for the large block is not to exceed 8d. per acre, and when it is considered that the whole of these lands have been previously paid for by the Government, it is absolutely necessary that the utmost economy should be exercised in making a payment to the few Natives resident on the lands, as I find on enquiry that they also participated in the payments made to Nagatipaoa and others.

In all cases where lands have been purchased, and a fair price given to the Natives, it appears to me that a nominal sum is all that can be considered as justly due to those claimants whose rights from various causes may not have been recognized at the time. I mention this that you may bear it in mind in any future negotiations of a similar nature. I have been particularly anxious to avoid taking you away from the important duties you are now engaged upon, and am anxious to know when you have completed the arrangements for the blocks now being surveyed by Mr. Sinclair, in order that a definite report may be sent in to the Government on the land purchases in your district, and also what progress you have made in your negotiations for Parua Bay.

I have, &c.,

DONALD MCLEAN, Chief Commissioner.

J. G. Johnson, Esq.,

Whangarei.

No. 18. Mr. BRISSENDEN to the UNDER SECRETARY, Native Department.

Purchase of Pakiri and Owhetu. Auckland, 11th May, 1874.
(Telegram.)

I HAVE at last succeeded in clearing away the many obstacles attending the purchase of 20,000 acres of the Pakiri Block; the right to cut kauri for thirty-one years had been ceded to Stannus Jones and Co., who had paid the Natives £400. I have however, purchased land and timber, and am about to conclude with the owners to-day for the sum of £1,600 to the grantees, and £50 to outside claimants. I have further to inform you that I have purchased a small block of 520 acres, named "Owhetu" the greater portion of which is in forest), for the sum of £100. Accounts and vouchers will be forwarded by first opportunity. Please notice by this that I shall require a further sum of money immediately. Other blocks are in course of negotiation.

E. T. BRISSENDEN,

Government Land Purchase Agent.

H. T. Clarke, Esq., Under

Secretary, Native Department, Wellington.

s.—C.

No. 19. Mr. BRISSENDEN to the UNDER SECRETARY, Native Office.

Auckland, 30th May, 1874.

SIR,—

In reply to your telegram No. 588, dated 29th instant, I have the honor to forward, as directed by you, deeds and agreements, by Native and other owners, of the blocks of land specified.

In regard to the Pakiri Block, I desire to point out that it contains over 31,000 acres. The agreement is signed by Arama Karaka, and John Sheehan as trustee for Wi Apo, an infant, and by Hori te More, claimant, to succeed his son Panapa, deceased.

There is one grantee who has not yet come into the negotiations. I have good reason, however, to believe that I shall succeed in obtaining her consent as well; but in the meantime the present agreement gives the Government two-thirds of the block, containing all the best land, and comprising that portion of it through which the main road from Mahurangi to Port Albert is now being constructed by the Public Works Department.

The usual "runangas" have been held on the block, and all parties have agreed that the land shall be equally divided, and that Hori te More shall succeed to Panapa. This secures to the Government two-thirds of the block, as above mentioned; and as soon as Judge Rogan, now in Auckland, makes the necessary order of succession, the title will be legally complete.

To return to the portion of the Pakiri Block purchased, I may state it is the best portion of it, as it contains several thousand acres of fine alluvial soil, watered by the Hoteo River, and offers the best site that could be found north of Auckland for a special settlement, the distance from steamer at Mahurangi being only eight or nine miles from the centre of the block.

The price paid is £1,650, a low rate when we take into consideration that the land is surveyed, and through the Court.

I found it impossible to deal with the Natives at first, on account of the demand that the whole of the purchase-money should be paid in full at once. However, it was ultimately settled in this way: £850 was paid into the hands of the Natives, and the balance, £800, was lodged in the Bank of New Zealand by me, in their presence, to a special account—namely, the Pakiri purchase account—as per enclosed agreement, so that I hold the sum of £800 in trust till the title is made complete by the action of the Native Land Court.

The £50 additional to that mentioned in the agreement was for the purchase of outside claims. The receipt (voucher) I have sent to the Hon. the Colonial Treasurer.

I also enclose the deed of the Ara Kiore Block, 470 acres, which has passed through the Native Land Court under an interlocutory order, which I think quite sufficient for Government purposes.

I have sent C. E. Nelson north with £400 to pay deposits on Muriwhenua, and other blocks of Native land under negotiations. I hope to be able to follow him in a few days on the receipt of necessary means.

You will notice that I have not been able to confine my transactions to the blocks of land only for the purchase of which I sent in requisitions for money owing to delays in getting the Native owners together when I required them; so I have used the moneys on the purchase of other blocks. It would, greatly assist my negotiations if I could have a sum of money on hand for general purchase advances on lands that are likely to come under my notice from day to day.

I therefore enclose a requisition for £1,000 for general advances on account of land purchase.

The Taungako Block of about 5,000 acres, now under survey will be finished in a few days. I hope to send you particulars by next mail.

I have, &c.,

E. T. BRISSENDEN.

H. T. Clarke, Esq., Under Secretary,
Native Department, Wellington.

No. 20. Mr. H. T. CLARKE to Mr. BRISSENDEN.

Native Office (Land Purchase Branch),
Wellington, 12th June, 1874.

SIR,—

I have the honor to return herewith two deeds, as per margin, and to draw your attention to several matters which you have omitted.

All instruments of disposition by Natives of land to persons other than of the Native race are not valid, unless previously explained by an interpreter, under the Native Lands Act, 1873," and the signatures attested by a Resident Magistrate or a Judge of the Native Land Court, and one other adult credible witness. This has not been done in either of the cases under notice. The interpreter should endorse on the back of the deed a clear statement in Maori of the contents of the deed, and sign it. This has not been done. The interpreter should then record a certified copy of such indorsement in the Native Land Court of the district in which the land affected is situated. I enclose herewith a specimen deed which will perhaps more clearly indicate the proper course to be taken, and request you to refer to section 85 of "the Native Lands Act, 1873," where instructions as to the proper execution of deeds by Natives are definitely set forth.

I have, &c.,

H. T. CLARKE, Under Secretary.
E. T. Brissenden, Esq.,
Auckland.

No. 1. The CHIEF PROTECTOR to the Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Suggestions as to Land Purchases. Waimate, 28th July, 1840.

SIR,—

I beg leave to submit to you for the consideration of His Excellency the Lieutenant-Governor a few remarks which have occurred to me and hastily thrown together relative to the office I have the honor to hold.

The purchasing of land from the Natives for the Government forming a part of my duties as Protector of Aborigines; in order thereby to facilitate the same, and to prevent any embarrassment in this duty, I would suggest:—

1st. That when lands are required for the Crown, the same be signified to me from the Colonial Secretary's Department, stating (1) the quantity required, (2) the district in which required, (3) the maximum to be paid per acre, and (4) the proportion to be reserved for Natives.

The first suggestion would prevent an unnecessary outlay of property beyond the immediate wants of the Government. The second suggestion has for its proposal the most eligible situations to be first occupied, as the Natives seem disposed to part with land in every district. The third is to establish some general principle for effecting purchases, it being impossible to state precisely what may be the amount of property required to complete purchases. Fourthly, whether it might not be desirable to make some reserve in every district where the purchase exceeds, say 20,000 acres. Such a reserve as that proposed would materially affect the Natives at a future time, securing a land fund to carry out the philanthropic views of the Government towards the aborigines.

In paying for land I would suggest the propriety of drawing upon Government for supplies in the way of promissory notes, say at three or six months after date. This plan would admit of time to get the requisite supplies, and is applicable in cases where horses, cows, &c., may be required; and I think it is a plan that would be satisfactory to the Natives.

In connection with all purchases of land there will be an item of expenditure under the head of "Supplies of food," it being customary, not only to give the chiefs, but also their dependents who accompany them, a feast of boiled flour and sugar, &c., at such times.

As it may not be convenient to the Government to have the lands they may purchase immediately surveyed, and as it may be equally inconvenient for the Natives, who are too much governed by the impulse of the moment to wait for the payment thereof until surveyed, it appears necessary that in all cases some pains should be taken to ascertain the boundary line. In order to effect this, I beg leave to request an allowance for a horse and about four Natives.

The cost of the four Natives would be about Eighty pounds (£80) per annum.

In connection with this subject I presume there may be considerable demands upon me (requiring both the use of a horse and these Natives) in the settlement of disputes between Natives and European settlers. It will be some time before we shall be able to persuade the Natives to refer their disputes to the Magistrate of the district, and in many cases it will be found better to visit them than to insist upon their visiting the Magistrate.

GEORGE CLARKE, P.A.

The Colonial Secretary, Russell.

No. 2. HIS EXCELLENCY LIEUT.-GOVERNOR HOBSON to GEORGE CLARKE, Sen., Esq.

Auckland.—Instructions to purchase land from the Ngatiwhatua. Waitemata, October 20th, 1840.
SIR,—

You are hereby authorized to treat with the Ngatiwhatua tribe, on behalf of Her Majesty the Queen, for the possession of the largest portions of their territory, if possible in a continuous section, taking care to reserve for the Natives an ample quantity of land for their own support; and you are further authorized to give, in payment for the same, money or barter to any amount you think just and equitable, both for the Government and the Natives, submitting to me as soon as possible an account of your proceedings.

I have, &c.,

W. HOBSON.

George Clarke, Esq., &c., &c., &c.

The CHIEF PROTECTOR to the Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Auckland.—Transmitting documents relative to purchase of land in the Waitemata District, Manukau, &c.
Russell, November 4th, 1840.
SIR,—

I have the honor to transmit to you, for the information of His Excellency the Lieut.-Governor, my report, together with the deed of purchase of land, duly executed at the Waitemata; also the original agreement between Captain Symonds and the Native chiefs, entered into previous to my arrival at that station; with a translation of a statement made by Davis Tamaki to Rev. R. Maunsell, relative to the original purchase made by Mr. Mitchell; together with copies of letters addressed to Rev. R. Maunsell and Davis Tamaki.

I have, &c.,

GEORGE CLARKE, Protector of Aborigines.
The Colonial Secretary, &c., &c.,
New Zealand.

Enclosure 1 in No. 3.Memorandum.

DAVIS'S' STATEMENT regarding the SALE of KARANGAHAPE, &c., &c.

"WHEN we spoke to Mitchell and White, when we pointed out to them the extent of country belonging to us, they had said to us, 'Have you a large country in your possession?' We then said, 'Our boundary line is at Otahuhu, and runs along the district belonging to Ngatipaoa until it reaches Waitemata.' This is what we said when we pointed out to them the extent of our territory. From thence their hearts avariciously conjectured that the whole was for them, we having only intended to point out the extent of our land.

"The exact spot that was pointed out for them was Karangahape. The boundary lines of that place are these:—The boundary on the outside, that is, looking towards Orua, is Kakamatua; proceed inwards along the coast to Puponga on to Karangahape, till you arrive at Nihotupu.

"Our names, that were attached to that deed, were intended for that portion of land only."

Copied from a translation by the Rev. R. Maunsell.

GEORGE CLARKE, P.A.

October, 1840.

Enclosure 2 in No. 3.MEMORANDUM by GEO. CLARKE, Esq., Protector of Aborigines.

Purchase of Lands in Auckland District.

FOLLOWING the instructions of His Excellency the Lieut.-Governor, I embarked, on the 10th October, in H.M.S. "Britomart," and arrived at Waitemata on the 12th, when I immediately proceeded to take steps for the purchase of the land on which the Crown establishment is about being formed. Owing, however, to the absence of one of the parties who had claims, and who had left for Manukau, I was thus unable to accomplish that object.

In the different enquiries which I have instituted among the Natives—a sketch of which I proceed to give—His Excellency will at once perceive the perplexing difficulties presenting themselves on every side, if not preventing, yet retarding the full accomplishment of his wishes in purchasing the extent of country it might be desirable to have in the District of Waitemata and the Thames. The principal purchases made about the Government establishment, some before and some after the proclamation, are: on the south side, by Mr. Clayton, about two years ago, and a portion of land by Mr. Denzel, about the time of the proclamation, the disputed land of Captain Symonds, together with a considerable tract of country claimed by Messrs. Fairburn, Taylor, and Hamlin. These purchases (reserving a small portion for the Natives at their especial request) would, if admitted in their full extent, leave a very inadequate portion for the Crown. The claimants to the north side of Waitemata are: at North Head, Mr. Taylor, and a large portion of the upper part of the river, on the north side, is claimed by a Mr. Webster. This purchase appears to have been made since the proclamation; it is said however, to have only then been completed. A large part of the country on the western side of Waitemata was bought by Mr. White of Hokianga, an earnest only having been given. He has, I hear, since then relinquished his claims to that part of the country. On the 20th the Chiefs Te Kawau, Tinana, and others, met at the house of Captain Symonds, where, to the satisfaction of all parties, we finally adjusted the considerations for the land, the deed of conveyance being read to the chiefs in the presence of His Excellency the Governor, the officers of the "Favorite," and of several of the Civil Department; the chiefs at the same time promising to sell a still larger tract of country when the Governor should finally reside among them. I have lost no favorable opportunity of getting the outlines of the country proposed as an addition to that already paid for, which I am happy to say is so far adjusted as to fully warrant the survey commencing immediately. I have not been able to make purchases to the extent desired in His Excellency's instructions, but am in treaty for a considerable extent of land beyond that already purchased.

G. CLARKE,

Protector of Aborigines.

4th November, 1840.

No. 4. Mr. PEOTECTOR CLARKE to the Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Auckland.—As to Amount paid to Te Reweti for Land in this District. Protector's Office, 11th February, 1841.
SIR,—

I have the honor to acknowledge your letter of the 5th inst., requesting a more explicit statement of the whole amount agreed to be paid to the Chief Davisi (Te Reweti) for land at Auckland. I beg leave to refer you to the deed of purchase, which, with a translation thereof, I had the honor of transmitting to your office on the 4th November, 1840, containing an explicit statement of all the articles to be paid for the said land.

I have, &c.,

GEO. CLARKE,
Protector of Aborigines.

The Colonial Secretary, &c, &c.,

New Zealand.

The Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY to the CHIEF PROTECTOR.

Tamaki.—Purchase of Land sanctioned. Colonial Secretary's Office, Auckland, 28th May, 1841.
SIR,—

With reference to your letter of yesterday's date submitting proposals from the Ngatipaoa tribe to sell to the Crown a tract of country in the vicinity of Auckland on the west side of the Tamaki River, and from the chief Pororua to alienate his interests in the lands of Mangonui, near Oruru, I have the honor, by the direction of the Governor, to inform you that His-Excellency sanctions the completion of the purchase on the terms mentioned in your communication.

An order has accordingly been transmitted to the Colonial Storekeeper to provide the barter as specified below, and the Colonial Treasurer has been apprized that the sum of One hundred pounds (£100) will be required to meet each of these payments, a warrant for which will be prepared as early as possible.

I have, &c.,

WILLOUGHBY SHORTLAND.

The Protector of Aborigines.

Enclosure.For Tamaki.

CONSIDERATION to be paid for the land within mentioned on the west side of Tamaki:—

SECOND LIST. For Mangonui.

CONSIDERATION for the interests of the Native chief Pororua in the land of Mangonui, near Oruru:—
£100 (One hundred pounds) in specie. 1 Boat, or, in lieu, 1 horse.

W.S.

No. 6.The SURVEYOR-GENERAL to the Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Contents of Tamaki Purchase.
Surveyor-General's Office,
Auckland, 5th June, 1841.
SIR,—

I have the honor to state, for the information of His Excellency the Governor, that the land recently purchased from the Natives of the Ngatipaoa tribe, the boundaries of which have been described to me by the Chief Protector of Aborigines, contains an area of about (6,000) six thousand acres, as nearly as it is possible to estimate it without actual survey of the western and southern boundaries.

I have, &c.,

FELTON MATHEW,

The Hon. the Colonial Secretary.

Surveyor-General.

The CHIEF PROTECTOR to the Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Balance of Goods on hand due to Native Chiefs.

Protector's Office,

Auckland, 7th June, 1841.

SIR,—

I do myself the honor to enelese herewith a copy of the memoranda specifying articles on hand, due to the Chiefs therein mentioned for the respective purchases of Mangonui, Tamaki, and Mahurangi.

I have, &c.,

GEORGE CLARKE, Chief Protector.

The Hon. the Colonial Secretary.

MEMORANDA for Chief PORORUA.

June 1, 1841.

PAYMENT on hand for the land at Mangonui:—

For Chiefs WILLIAM JOWETT, RUINGA, and PUHATA.

June 2nd, 1841.

PAYMENT on hand for the land at Tamaki:—

For Chiefs RUINGA and KAHUKOTI.

PAYMENT on hand for Mahurangi:—

No. 8. The CHIEF PROTECTOR to the Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Auckland.—Offers of land by Ngatiwhatua.

Protector's Office,

Auckland, June 29th, 1841.

SIR,—

Davis, Kawao, and others, chiefs of the Ngatiwhatua tribe, being desirous to sell to the Government a tract of country lying to the south of Auckland, extending to the Manukau, containing Ten thousand acres, more or less, for Two hundred pounds in specie, four horses, thirty blankets, one tent, one cedar box, and ten cloth cloaks,—I do myself the honour to request that you would obtain His Excellency the Governor's sanction to the above purchase.

I have, &c.,

GEORGE CLARKE,

Chief Protector of Aborigines.

The Hon. the Colonial Secretary.

No. 9. The CHIEF PROTECTOR to the Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Auckland.—Offer of land on the Waitemata. Protector's Office, Auckland, June 29th, 1841.

SIR,—

I do myself the honor to request that you would obtain His Excellency the Governor's sanction to the purchase of a piece of land lying on the north side of the Waitemata Harbour, extending from the north head of the harbour, about eight miles west, containing Six thousand acres, more or less, from the Chief Tinana and others. The consideration required by the Natives is One hundred pounds in specie, one horse, with bridle and saddle, and one boat.

I have, &c.,

GEORGE CLARKE,

The Hon. the Colonial Secretary. Protector of Aborigines.

No. 10. The Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY to the # CHIEF PROTECTOR.

Waitemata North.—Purchase to be completed.

Colonial Secretary's Office,

Auckland, 29th June, 1841.

SIR,—

With reference to your letter of this date, No. 41—21, submitting proposals from the Chief Tinana and others to sell to the Crown a tract of country lying to the north side of the harbour of the Waitemata, extending from the north head of that harbour, eight miles in a westerly direction, and containing about Six thousand acres,—I have the honor, by the direction of the Governor, to inform you that His Excellency sanctions the completion of the purchase on the terms mentioned in your communication.

An order has accordingly been transmitted to the Colonial Storekeeper to provide the barter as specified below; and a warrant will be immediately prepared to enable the Colonial Treasurer to pay into your hands the sum of One hundred pounds, which will be impressed against your name until the deed for the land, duly executed and witnessed, is lodged in this office.

I have, &c.,

JAS. STUART FREEMAN, (For the Colonial Secretary).

The Protector of Aborigines.

No. 11. The CHIEF PROTECTOR to the Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Auckland.—Offer of Land on the Waitemata.

Protector's Office,

Auckland, 10th December, 1841.

SIR,—

I am desired by the Te Reweti and others to request that you will, at your earliest convenience, inform His Excellency the Governor of their wish to sell to H.M.'s Government a large piece of land on the northern side of. Waitemata, adjoining that recently purchased from the Chief Tinana and others, I therefore do myself the honor to request instructions from His Excellency relative thereto.

I have, &c.,

GEORGE CLARKE,

Chief Protector of Aborigines.

The Hon. the Colonial Secretary.

No. 12. The CHIEF PROTECTOR to the Hon the COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Auckland.—Agreement to sell Land.

Protector's Office,

Auckland, 29th December, 1841.

SIR,—

The Chiefs Kawau and Davis having agreed to sell to Her Majesty's Government a portion of land to the north-west of Auckland, containing Ten thousand acres, more or less, for the following consideration, viz., Three hundred pounds sterling, three horses, two saddles, two bridles, and forty blankets, I have the honor to submit the above proposal for the approval of the Governor.

I have, &c.,

GEORGE CLARKE, Chief Protector.

The Hon. the Colonial Secretary.

No. 13. The Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY to the CHIEF PROTECTOR.

Auckland.—Purchase of Land sanctioned. Colonial Secretary's Office, Auckland, 30th December, 1841.

SIR,—

With reference to your letter of yesterday, stating that you have entered into a preliminary agreement for the purchase of a portion of land, situate north-west of the Town of Auckland, containing about Ten thousand acres, for the consideration named, viz., £300 in cash, three horses, two saddles, two bridles, and forty blankets, I do myself the honor, by the direction of the Governor, to convey to you His Excellency's sanction to your concluding the purchase, and to inform you that a warrant has been prepared in your favour for the sum of Three hundred pounds for that purpose, which will be impressed against your name in the Treasury, until you produce the deed of conveyance for the above land, duly executed by the chiefs, and properly witnessed.

Instructions have also been forwarded to the Colonial Storekeeper to issue, on your requisition, the necessary articles of barter, and the stores, to the chiefs above named.

I have, &c.,

WILLOUGHBY SHORTLAND.

The Chief Protector of Aborigines.

No. 14. The CHIEF. PROTECTOR to the Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Offer of Land at Riverhead.

Protector's Office,

Auckland, 19th May, 1842.

SIR,—

I have the honor to lay before you of the information of His Excellency the Governor, a proposal on the part of the chiefs Tinana, Tantari and others to sell to the Government a considerable tract of country adjoining the land already purchased by the Government at Waitemata, and taking in both sides of the Native road leading from Waitemata to Kaipara. The country is generally barren, with, here and there, small forests of Kauri, which are being destroyed by European sawyers without remunerating the Natives; and its principal importance is that of connecting Auckland with the important District of Kaipara and the Wairoa. Should His Excellency deem the purchase of this district important. I would suggest that Mr. Meurant should immediately be sent with the Natives (who are now anxiously waiting the Governor's pleasure relative thereto) to ascertain as correctly as possible the boundary-line.

I have, &c.,

GEORGE CLARKE, Chief Protector.
The Hon. the Colonial Secretary.

No. 15. The CHIEF PROTECTOR to the Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Purchase of Land on the Manukau Road.
Protector's Office,
Auckland, 20th June, 1842.
SIR,—

I have the honor to apprise you, for the information of His Excellency the Governor, that I have agreed with the Native chief Davis, on behalf of Her Majesty's Government, for the sum of Forty pounds (£40) as a compensation for land surveyed and sold to Mr. Heather and others on the Manukau Road by the Government, amounting in all to about two hundred (200) acres, more or less, a deed of which has been prepared and duly signed by Davis; and I have to request that an authority may be given to the Hon. the Colonial Treasurer for the payment of the same.

I have, &c.,

GEORGE CLARKE, Chief Protector.

The Hon. the Colonial Secretary.

No. 16. The Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY to the CHIEF PROTECTOR.

Relieving the Chief Protector from purchasing Land.

Colonial Secretary's Office,
Auckland, 25th November, 1842.
SIR,—

I have it in command from His Excellency the Officer Administering the Government to inform you that, on the 31st December, 1842, you will be relieved of that portion of your duties which involves the negotiating with the Aborigines for the purchase of land on behalf of the Crown.

That part of your instructions, therefore, which relates to this subject will cease to be in force from the above date; but it is to be understood that purchases, the preliminaries of which have been arranged previously, are to be completed, and the deeds lodged in this office by you.

I have, &c., (For the Colonial Secretary)

WILLIAM CONNELL.

The Chief Protector of Aborigines.

No. 17. The Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY to the CHIEF PROTECTOR.

Auckland.—Land purchase arrangements. Colonial Secretary's Office, Auckland, 29th December, 1842.
SIR,—

Referring to my letter of the 25th ultimo, No. 85, in which you were informed that, from and after the 31st instant, you will be relieved of that part of your duties which is connected with the purchase of land from the Aborigines, I am now commanded by the Officer Administering the Government to acquaint you that His Excellency purposes making the following arrangements for the transaction of affairs of this nature with the Natives:—

Such lands as may be from time to time required for the purposes of colonization will be reported and recommended by the Surveyor-General for purchase.

These recommendations will be referred to you for your report on the two following points:—

Whether the Natives are disposed to sell the land, and

What reserves you consider necessary to be made for their benefit out of such land.

On the recommendation of the Surveyor-General, and your report being approved, a notice will be published in the Maori Gazette, intimating that such land has been offered for sale by such parties, and calling on all other Natives who have claims thereon to send in a statement of the same by a given period; after the expiration of which, the Natives who have offered the land for sale will, provided no counter claim be substantiated in the interim, be considered the lawful and sole owners of the land, and will be treated with accordingly.

The agent will then be despatched, accompanied by a surveyor, to treat with the owners of the soil on the spot, and these two officers together will furnish the following information:—

A plan shewing the extent, boundaries, and quality of the land, and the estimated number of acres. This plan will also describe any river or particular feature of the country.

An agreement signed by the parties, stating the amount demanded and the time of payment. If barter be required, the document should contain also the value in money of each article.

On the confirmation by the Governor of these preliminaries, the purchase is to be immediately completed, and the signed deed forwarded to the Surveyor-General, in order that the land therein contained may be inserted in the map of the district, county, or parish, as the case may be; and also in a general map of New Zealand, on which all the lands purchased from the Aborigines will be shown, of which copies will be periodically forwarded to the Secretary of State for the Colonies.

In conclusion, I am directed to say that in cases of long-existing feuds, arising from lands, the ownership of which is disputed by two tribes, it will still be within your province to recommend for purchase by the Government the lands in dispute, as a means of setting at rest such contentions; and it will be equally part of your duty to forward to Government any applications you may receive from the Aborigines on the subject of the sale of land, which will always receive due consideration from His Excellency.

I have, &c.,

WILLIAM CONNELL, (For the Colonial Secretary).

The Chief Protector of Aborigines.

No. 18. Statement showing SUMS PAID and VALUE of STORES issued to ABORIGINES in exchange for LAND during the Years 1840, 1841, and 1842.

FELTON MATTHEWS,

Commissioner of Audit.

R. A. FITZGERALD.
Audit Office, New Zealand,
15th September, 1843.

T.—C.

As to negotiating for Land.

Protector's Office,
Auckland, 1st November, 1843.

SIR,—

Since I had the honor of forwarding my report on the tenure by which the Natives held their lands, dated 17th ultimo., several important considerations naturally arising out of the subject have occurred to me, which, as they appear to have an important bearing both upon the wellbeing of the Natives and the best interests of the Colony at large, I take the liberty of submitting to His Excellency the Officer administering the Government.

It will be obvious to His Excellency, from the very complicated nature of the question, that no purchase could be effected but by a person possessing some general knowledge of the principles by which the claims of the Natives are governed, and that to perform such services satisfactorily would require considerable time, and that large blocks of country could not possibly be obtained without prejudicing the interest or coming in contact with the prejudices of some of the tribes.

Ngapuhi District.

For instance, in the northern district, inhabited by the Ngapuhi generally, there are at least one hundred hapu, or small tribes, embracing a population of about 20,000 souls resident in the country lying between the North Cape and Bream Head. Now, assuming the quantity of land contained within these limits to be about 5,000 square miles, we cannot average more than 1,500 as available for agriculture. This computation, if correct, would give about 15 square miles, or 10,000 acres of available land for each hapu, and as they require a large piece, independent of their cultivations, for pig runs, it would leave but a small block of desirable land eligible for disposal to Government, and as their independence is only to be maintained by holding possession of their land, think it would not only be difficult, but very injurious to them to purchase large blocks of country, even if offered.

They can dispose of small portions of land without embroiling themselves with their neighbours, and with manifest advantage, but in attempting to dispose of large tracts of land they are certain either to injure themselves or to come into collision with others.

Disinclination to sell large Blocks.

In support of my position I would remind His Excellency that since the period when his determination to discontinue the purchase of small pieces of land was made known to the Natives not a single one has been added to the demesne lands of the Crown, and that the only instance of a large block having been offered for sale—viz., that by Kaihau, has revived old and bygone animosities between two tribes.

The Natives are not only not willing, but cannot by any means be induced to part with their paternal possessions, which in general are the best lands, both for soil and situation, the country contains; and I hesitate not to say that the overplus lands at present in the hands of the Natives, of really a valuable and desirable character, can only be acquired by a gradual process of small purchases.

I have, &c.,

GEORGE CLARKE,

The Hon. the Colonial Secretary.

Chief Protector.

The CHIEF PROTECTOR to the Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Protector's Office, Auckland, 10th February, 1844.

SIR,—

I have the honor to forward the enclosed return of horses already paid to the Natives for land sold to H.M.'s Government; showing also the number still due to the chiefs.

I have, &c.,

GEORGE CLARKE, Chief Protector.

The Hon. the Colonial Secretary.

Enclosure. Return of HORSES paid and to be paid the NATIVES for LAND sold to H.M. GOVERNMENT.

Protector's Office, Auckland,
10th February, 1844.

No. 21. The NATIVE SECRETARY to the CHIEF TARA, Waiheke.

Mr. Maxwell's Claim to Motutapu Island. Auckland, 25th January, 1847.
FRIEND TARA,—

The report of the Commissioners appointed by the Governor to investigate Mr. Maxwell's claim to Motutapu was; that upon the payment to you of Twenty pounds (£20) the island should become the property of Mr. Maxwell.

Come, therefore, or send some confidential person to obtain your money which I hold.

From your Friend,

J. J. SYMONDS.

To Tara.

No. 22. The Hon. the SURVEYOR-GENERAL to the Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Requesting Advance of £64 10s. for Purchase of the Tiki Block.
Surveyor-General's Office,
Auckland, 21st December, 1847.
SIR,—

I have the honor to request that the Colonial Treasurer may be authorized to advance me the sum of Sixty-four pounds ten shillings, in order to purchase from Native Chiefs Rewiti and Keene a block of land, situated on the north side of the Tamaki Road, and containing about One hundred and fifty-eight acres (158 acres).

I have, &c.,

C. W. W. LIGAR, Surveyor-General.
The Hon. Colonial Secretary. The Auditor-General requested to prepare the warrant required.

A. SINCLAIR.

25th January, 1843.

No. 23. The Hon. the SURVEYOR-GENERAL to the Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Tiki.—Reporting Purchase of the Block.

Surveyor-General's Office,
Auckland, 29th December, 1847.

SIR,—

I have the honor to forward acknowledgment of the sale of land, called "The Tiki" by the Native Chiefs Reweti and Keene, and the receipt for the purchase money of the same; I have also to request the requisite authority for this expenditure.

I have, &c.,

C. W. W. LIGAR.
The Hon. the Colonial Secretary.

The Hon. the SURVEYOR-GENERAL to the Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Judge's Bay.—Sale of it disputed by Orakei Natives.

Surveyor-General's Office,
12th September, 1843.

SIR,—

I beg leave to forward a letter from the Ngati Whatua tribe at Orakei respecting the land between Mataharehare and Orakei Bays, which they state they did not intend to include in the purchase effected by Mr. Clarke for the Crown. The subject having been recently brought before the notice of His Excellency the Lieutenant-Governor in an interview with these Natives, they were told that any communications they might wish to make to Mr. Clarke should be forwarded for them, but that in the opinion of His Excellency they had failed in establishing their claim, as the land was included in the boundaries of the deed of sale signed by them; and that they should have brought their claim forward some years ago when they saw the land surveyed and laid off in small portions for sale, or when they saw the Europeans taking possession of it by fencing and building thereon.

I have, &c.,

C. W. W. LIGAR, Surveyor-General.

The Hon. the Colonial Secretary, &c., &c.,
&c.

The letter alluded to forwarded to Mr. Clarke with a copy of this one, and Mr. C. informed that H. E. will be glad to receive any remarks on the subject which he may wish to make.

By command, A. SINCLAIR.
15th September, 1848.

Enclosure 1 in No. 24. GEORGE CLARKE, Esq., sen., to the Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Auckland.—Respecting Native Claim to Judge's Bay. Waimate, 2nd October, 1848. SIR,—

Your letter of 16th September, enclosing a letter from the Chief Hira, of Orakei, together with a copy of a letter from the Surveyor-General "on the subject of a claim set up by the Ngatiwhatua tribe to a portion of land situated between Mataharehare and Orakei," I duly received this day; and I have the honor to transmit to you for the information of His Excellency the Lieut.-Governor the following remarks:—

In the absence of all public records upon the subject in dispute, it appears to me that His Excellency's remarks are conclusive. If the Natives have permitted the surveys to be made of the said lands, and some of the allotments to be occupied, without having brought the case under the notice of the authorities, I fully concur in considering that the Ngatiwhatua tribe have failed in establishing their claims.

If the surveys of the land in dispute were made during the time when I had the honor of holding office under Her Majesty's Government, the Natives would doubtless have brought the subject under my notice. I have no record or recollection of their ever having done so.

I have written a letter to the Ngatiwhatua tribe in answer to the one they have written me, which, with a translation, I herewith enclose for the approval of His Excellency the Lieut.-Governor.

I have, &c.,

GEORGE CLARKE.

The Hon. the Colonial Secretary, &c., &c.,
&c.

Enclosure 2 in No. 24. GEORGE CLARKE, Esq., sen., to Chief TE HIRA, Orakei.

Auckland.—Denying Hira's Claim to Judge's Bay. Te Waimate, 2nd October, 1848.
FRIEND TE HIRA,—

I have seen the letter you wrote me, in which you request me to go to Auckland to make straight the boundaries of certain lands sold by you, some time ago, to the Governor. There is no need in my going to Auckland. I think that you are in error. It is reported that these lands were surveyed many years ago. How is it you did not come to me when I was at Auckland? if you had done so it would have been arranged long since. Whose doing is this that lands which have been sold by you so many years should be again disputed? I have often told you how disgraceful a thing it is to dispute or deny your former transactions.

From your Friend, GEORGE CLARKE.

To Te Hira, Orakei.

A true translation— HENRY T. CLARKE.

No. 25. The Hon. the SURVEYOR-GENERAL to the Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Hobson's Bridge.—Twenty Acres offered for sale.

Surveyor-General's Office,
Auckland, 21st October, 1848.

SIR,—

I have the honor to report for the information of His Excellency the Governor-in-Chief that the Native Te Keene has offered the Twenty acres adjoining the land granted to Mr. Meurant, at Hobson's Bridge, to the Government for the sum of Fifteen pounds, and I have to request that the Auditor-General may be authorized to prepare an impress in my favour to that amount.

I have, &c.,

C. W. W. LIGAR,

The Hon. the Colonial Secretary, Surveyor-General. &c., &c., &c.

Dr. SINCLAIR. Approved—

G. GREY.

23rd October, 1848.

Referred to the Auditor-General,

A. SINCLAIR.

23rd October, 1848.

No. 26. The Hon. the SURVEYOR-GENERAL to the Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Sale of Land by Te Keene at Hobson's Bridge.

Surveyor-General's Office,
27th December, 1848.

SIR,—

I have the honor to forward a deed of purchase executed by the Native Te Keene, adjoining that granted to

Mr. Meurant, at the junction of Tamaki and Epsom roads, and containing his receipt for the sum of Fifteen pounds, advanced to me in compliance with my request of the 21st October last.

I have to request that I may be furnished with a certificate of this deed being deposited in your office in order to support my imprest account.

I have, &c.,

C. W. W. LIGAR,
Surveyor-General.

No. 27. The CIVIL SECRETARY, Auckland, to Mr. COMMISSIONER MCLEAN.

Appointment as Native Land Commissioner.

Civil Secretary's Office,
Auckland, 5th April, 1850.
SIR,—

In order that no doubt may exist as to the legality of your proceedings in the purchase of lands for the Crown from the Aboriginal Natives of this Colony, His Excellency the Governor-in-Chief has been pleased to appoint you, by the instrument which I have now the honor to enclose, to be a Commissioner to treat with the Native chiefs of New Zealand for cession of such lands as may be required from time to time by the Crown.

His Excellency gladly avails himself of this opportunity of testifying to you the high sense he continues to entertain of the ability, judgment, and discretion with which you have invariably performed these and all other duties which you have been called upon to fulfil whilst in the employment of the Local Government.

I have, &c.,

C. A. DILLON, Civil Secretary.
Donald McLean, Esq., &c., &c., Taranaki.

No. 28. NATIVE LAND PURCHASE COMMISSIONER GAZETTED.

Civil Secretary's Office,
Auckland, 5th April, 1850.

HIS EXCELLENCY the Governor-in-Chief has been pleased to appoint, by Letters Patent under the public seal of the Islands of New Zealand, DONALD MCLEAN, Esq., to be a Commissioner to treat with the Native chiefs of New Zealand for the cession of such lands as may be required from time to time for the occupation of settlers resorting to the said colony.

By His Excellency's command,

C. A. DILLON, Civil Secretary.

No. 29. The Hon. the SURVEYOR-GENERAL to the Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Respecting Purchase of Mount Hobson.
Surveyor-General's Office,
18th August, 1851. SIR,—

I have the honor to report, for the information of His Excellency the Lieutenant-Governor, that the Natives at Orakei have offered a piece of land containing one hundred and eighty acres, forming the north slope of Mount Hobson, and adjoining the property of Captain Kelly and Section No. 14, for the sum of One hundred and fifty pounds, which I recommend to be accepted as fair and reasonable, considering the quality and situation; and, if approved by His Excellency, I have to request that the above sum may be made available for the purchase as soon as possible, as the Natives have made it one of the stipulations of the contract.

I have, &c.,

CHAS. W. LIGAR, Surveyor-General.

The Hon. the Colonial Secretary

No. 30. The ASSISTANT NATIVE SECRETARY to WM. DONNELLY, Esq.

Tamati Waka's Claim to Great Barrier.
Native Secretary's Office,
Auckland, 24th October, 1851.
SIR,—

Tamati Waka Rewa has come to this Office, to-day, to state that nothing has yet been done to settle his claim to the Great Barrier Island, although he has been to Auckland three times for that purpose, in pursuance of the directions of the Governor-in-Chief, conveyed in the letters of the Native Secretary.

I have now to request that you will forthwith take steps, in accordance with His Excellency's commands, to have the matter brought before the Chief Justice in the way pointed out by the Ordinance for quieting titles to land in New Ulster.

I have, &c.,

C. L. NUGENT, Assistant Native Secretary.
William Donnelly, Esq., Native Counsel.

No. 31. The Assistant Native Secretary to Wm.

Donnelly, Esq.

Tamati Waka's Claim to Great Barrier. Auckland, 3rd January, 1852.

SIR,—

In relation to my letter of the 8th July last, referring a Native, by name Tamati Waka, to you, in order to be instructed as to the proper method of preparing his claim to certain lands in the Great Barrier Island, for which W. S. Grahame holds a Crown grant, on behalf of the mortgages of Messrs. Abercrombie's estate, I have the honor to request that you will be so good as to forward me, with the least possible delay, a report on the whole matter as regards the steps you have taken to elucidate the claim, as I have been informed that, after the lapse of some months, it has been discovered that Tamati Waka's land has not been included in the grant to Messrs. Abercrombie.

Yon will also be so good as to acquaint me whether I am rightly informed as to the latter point, viz., the non-inclusion of Tamati Waka's land in the above mentioned grant.

I have, &c.,

C. L. NUGENT, Assistant Native Secretary.
Wm. Donnelly, Esq., Native Counsel.

No. 32.G. F. SWAINSON, ESQ., Surveyor, to the Hon. the SURVEYOR GENERAL.

Waikoukou.—Dispute as to its boundaries. Pukeharekeke, 23rd January, 1852.

SIR,—

I have the honor to report that I arrived at this place on Wednesday last, and was accompanied by Paramena, a chief of the Ngatiwhatua, in order that Haimona's dispute about the Waikoukou purchase might be settled. Paramena proceeded at once to Kaipara to bring Haimona to the spot, and on Thursday I proceeded with Arama Karaka and Manihera to Waikoukou, who pointed out the boundaries of the purchase, as contained in the deed, and dug holes at various points particularly at Waipapa, which is in the disputed piece. Haimona's "Tapu" was erected on the West bank of Waikoukou, and he had commenced a small cultivation. In the evening of the same day Paramena returned (Haimona having remained at Waikoukou), and said that it was all settled, and that I was to meet Haimona, in order that he might point out the boundaries. This I did this morning, but, after a korero, both Haimona and Paramena agreed that the interference of Arama Karaka and the others, in pointing out the boundaries before their arrival, had put an end to any settlement they had come to before (this appears an old Native custom, and is called a Mahi Kohuru). The land on the west side of Waikoukou is to remain in the possession of Haimona, and the chiefs advised Arama Karaka to give the undisputed piece for the £30 already advanced to him. This, however, he refuses to do, but will see you himself on the subject. Haimona has also gone to Auckland to explain the matter. Waikoukou, from its junction with the Araruna to where it runs into the Kumeu, would make a good boundary, and would be, I think, an almost equal division of the land. Hira has pointed out to me the boundaries of Pukeharakeke.

I have, &c.,

GEORGE F. SWAINSON.
The Surveyor-General. &c., Auckland.

CHIEF HAIMONA to the Hon. SURVEYOR-GENERAL.

Auckland.—Relative to Waikoukou. January 24th, 1852.

FRIEND Mr. LIGAR,—

Salutations to you. This is a word to you. You and your men (Natives) have broken the seal of Waikoukou. This is a dishonest transaction of you and your men. Did you suppose that in thus acting dishonestly all would be right? It will not be right, for I still live. I live, and my land lives too. This is a species of a murder of the whole of you with reference to me.

Haimona, Hauraki.

To Mr. Ligar, Auckland.

(Memo.)

THIS letter relates to the making out of a boundary on the west side of the river Waikoukou, about midway between the Kaiparar and Waitemata, by a Native named Arama Karaka.

The stream, Waikoukou, is now made the boundary by Haimona, which is still disputed by Arama Karaka.

C. W. D. LIGAR, Surveyor-General.

CHIEFS of ORAKEI to HIS EXCELLENCY COLONEL WYNYARD, Deputy-Governor.

Auckland.—Disputing the purchase of Taurarua, or Judge's Bay. Orakei, May 29th, 1852.

FRIEND THE GOVERNOR,—

Salutation to you. The following are my words to you, that you may be aware that this place about which we now address you—the place on which Mr. Martin and Mr. Kissling reside—that piece was included by mistake; this is a communication to you that you may be aware. It is for you to pay for that place, for ten years have passed away without a payment being made for that place; but if Governor Grey had still been here he would have paid for it.

These are all my worlds.

From TE HIRA and TE KEENE.

Referred to the Surveyor-General.

June 2nd, 1852.—

C. L. NUGENT.

(Memo. by Surveyor-General).

I HAVE no belief in the statement that these places were not fairly sold by the Natives on the first arrival of the Governor—a mistake could scarcely arise. The former papers required.

C. W. D. LIGAR.

No. 35.W. DONELLY, Esq., Native Counsel, to the NATIVE SECRETARY.

Respecting Waka's Claim to part of the Barrier Island. Native Land Office, Auckland, 6th December, 1852.
SIR,—

I have the honor to inform you that, upon the receipt of your letter of the 3rd instant, I lost no time on time in endeavoring to elucidate the real position of Tamati Waka with respect to the different owners of land upon the Barrier Island. After the completion of my own separate labours upon the subject I had recourse to Mr. Grahame, who, with the utmost frankness, and without solicitation on my part, produced all the papers upon the subject in his possession. After having, with Mr. Grahame's valuable assistance, fully mastered these papers, I consider myself to be in a proper position to report to you, for the information of His Excellency the Lieutenant-Governor that not only is there no reason whatever to suppose that Tamati Waka's land, or any portion of it, is included in the Crown Grant held by Mr. Grahame's principal, but that, on the contrary, there is every reason to believe that, by the express instructions of the Commissioner of Land Claims, who adjudicated upon the case, the land in question was carefully excluded from those lands for which Crown grants were issued. Further, I have not been able to ascertain that Tamati Waka is at present in any way involved with any of the European holders of land upon the Island. In one direction, indeed, his land joins that of Mr. Whitaker; but, if any dispute between him and his neighbour, Mr. Whitaker, should occur during the absence of His Excellency the Lieutenant-Governor, may I pray you to assure His Excellency that I shall give instantaneous and undivided attention to the interests of the Native chief.

I have, &c.,

WILLIAM DONNELLY, Native Counsel.
The Native Secretary.

Pukekauere, sold by Keene and others December, 27, 1853, disputed by Henare.
Surveyor General's Office,
27th June, 1853.
SIR,—

In compliance with your instructions, I have examined the claim of Henare to the block of land known as Pukekauere, as per margin; further, I have the honor to report that I went over the boundaries as marked by Keene and others, and shown to Mr. Surveyor Swainson at the time of sale. I have farther the honor to state that the claim made by Henare is quite groundless, and rests on the following unfounded assertion:—"That the Keene did not sell all the land included in the boundaries as shown by him to Mr. Swainson.

Maori Scheme in the disposal of Land by giving False Boundaries.

This is a favourite scheme with the Maori to get money, and is conducted in the following manner:—The parties who sell a block of land, and not giving a portion of the money to all who may have a claim, to evade the claim of the thus neglected party, the salesmen give the names of false boundaries, thus giving rise to the numerous claims to portions of land by misled chiefs who have been unjustly dealt with by their fellow-claimants.

Nga Hokowhitu sold by Tautari to Maurice Kelly for a Vessel.

I also examined the claim of Parata to the block of land sold by Tautari, as per margin. Parata's claim has not the slightest foundation.

I also examined the claim of Manihera and others to two blocks of land known by the names of Te Kauri and Kaiakeake. This claim I would recommend as worthy of consideration, as per accompanying sketch.

Waiparera, sold by Tinana and Tairua to the Government, 2nd June, 1853.

I also examined the claim of Paora to the block of land known by the name of Waiparera. This claim is unjust. Tinana and others having sold it to Government, kept back that portion of the payment as due to Paora as a joint claimant; then, to escape claim being made on him by Paora, he gave false names of the boundaries as sold him, misleading Paul as to what he had sold; hence Paul's claim to the south-west portion of Waiparera.

I have, &c.,

JOHN WHITE, Interpreter.
The Surveyor-General, &c., &c.

No. 37. The Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY to the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

AS to Proper Form of Native Deeds.
Colonial Secretary's Office,
Auckland, 22nd November, 1854.
SIR,—

With reference to your letter of the 7th inst., in reply to mine of the 3rd inst., on the subject of the form of deeds used in the purchase of native lands, I am directed by His Excellency, the Officer Administering the Government, to observe that, although it is desirable that purchases of such lands be made absolutely and for a final sum, there is no reason why the sum fixed upon should not be paid by instalments.

I am directed to add that no particular form of deed is necessary, except that the conveyance be made to Her Majesty Queen Victoria, her Heirs and Successors.

I have, &c.,

ANDREW SINCLAIR, Colonial Secretary.
D. McLean, Esq., Land Commissioner.

No. 38. Mr. COMMISSIONER KEMP (Acting for the Chief Secretary) to the Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Orakei.—Reporting offer by the Natives of a Block of Land

Land Purchase Office,
Auckland, 13th December, 1854.
SIR,—

I do myself the honor to report for His Excellency's information that a valuable block of land, containing about Four hundred and seventy acres, situated at Orakei, has been offered by the Native owners for sale to the Government. The acquisition of this piece of land would be the means of completing an entire block, portions of which have already been purchased by the Government. The Native owners have asked Five thousand pounds (£5,000) for it. On Saturday the 9th inst. I offered them the sum of Eleven hundred pounds (£1,100), which they declined. They received some time since the sum of One thousand three hundred and twenty pounds for four hundred and ninety-nine acres adjoining, paid by the Surveyor-General and Mr. Commissioner McLean.

It is said that this block would realize to the Government a very considerable sum of money; but, before proceeding any further in the negotiations, I should wish to be guided by His Excellency's instructions, as to whether (looking at the position of the block) I might be authorized, if a favourable opportunity offered, to make an advance upon the sum already offered, as, upon further consideration, there does not appear to be a danger in this case of prejudicing other purchases, if a larger sum were offered to them.

I think, perhaps, that from Fifteen to Eighteen hundred pounds (£1,500 to £1,800) would effect the purchase.

I have, &c.,

H. T. KEMP, Native Secretary.

The Hon. the Colonial Secretary,

Auckland.

No. 39. Province of Auckland.

RETUBN SHOWING the NUMBER of ACRES PURCHASED by Mr. COMMISSIONER MCLEAN during the YEAR 1854.

No. 40. Return SHEWING the NUMEER of ACRES for which Mr. COMMISSIONER MCLEAN is in TREATY, and PARTIALLY PAID for during the Year 1854.

No. 41. MEMORANDUM by Mr. COMMISSIONER KEMP (acting for the CHIEF COMMISSIONER).

Tirikohua Block.—Reporting on Native claims. 4th January, 1855.

ENCLOSED herewith are three letters received this day from the three principal Natives who object to the occupation of the land at Tirikohua by Major Russell and Mr. Newman.

The purchase was originally made by Mr. Johnson, and, as far as I can learn, in the most complete and satisfactory manner. The objection has arisen in consequence of the non-delivery of a share of the payment to Ruka; and in Simon's case, because he would not accept the share allotted to him. Piripi also, the writer of one of these communications, appears to have been the person deputed by the tribe to negotiate with the Government for the sale of the land, but did not act up to the trust confided to him. In his letter, money is recommended to settle this difference. Mr. Johnson states, as will be seen by a minute of Mr. McLean's on Mr. Newman's letter, 21st October, 1854, that the claim is unjust. A relative of Ruka, the principal opposing man, who brought in the letters, confirms the fact that these men have cropped the ground this season; and he has given me to understand that, if a sum of money were offered, the Natives would come into town to receive it, and the difficulty be removed. The sum paid by Mr. Johnson for this block was Four hundred and thirty pounds (£430)-Ruka's name is not in the deed of conveyance; but the Surveyor-General of opinion that his claim was taken into consideration and settled at the time the payment was made.

For DONALD MCLEAN, H. T. KEMP.

The Hon. the Colonial Secretary,

Auckland.

No. 42. The NATIVE SECRETARY to the Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Auckland.—Purchase of block at Orakei.

Land Purchase Office,

5th February, 1855.

SIR,—

I have the honor to report, for the information of His Excellency the Office Administering the Government, that the Native title to a block of land at Orakei, containing Four hundred and seventy acres, has been extinguished, of which a sketch, furnished by a surveyor, is herewith enclosed. The sum of Two thousand pounds was paid to the Native owners, and a deed executed on the 3rd inst.; the original deed and translation is also enclosed.

The payment for this block having been final and complete, I beg to state that it may be opened for sale as soon as the Government may think well to proclaim it.

I have, &c.,

H. T. KEMP, Native Secretary.

The Honorable the Colonial Secretary. U.—C.

No. 43. Memorandum of CASE advanced from the COLONIAL TREASURY for LAND PURCHASES.

For the Colonial Treasurer, JAMES S. BAYLIS.

Colonial Treasury,

Auckland,

17th February, 1855.

No. 44. The CHIEF COMMISSIONER to Mr. COMMISSIONER HAY.

Waiheke.—To undertake the Survey of some Land. Land Purchase Department, Auckland, 26th June, 1855.
SIR,—

I received a note from you a few days ago stating that you were unable to come to town at the time appointed by you. As you have not been able to do so, I should be glad if you would undertake to survey some land at Waiheke, which has been sold by Kingi Hori Pokai te Ruinga to the Government, the boundaries of which have not yet been defined. A copy of the deed of sale for this purchase will be supplied to you from this office.

I should be glad if you could accompany a millwright named Clough, presently at Auckland, to survey the boundaries of a piece of land which the Natives at Taupo, near Orere, wish to dispose of in order to keep their mill in working order. The price for the land can be determined by the Natives and myself after the boundaries have been defined and pointed out to you in the presence of the several Native claimants.

I have, &c.,

DONALD McLEAN, Chief Commissioner.
G. W. D. Hay, Esq.

No. 45. The Hon. The COLONIAL SECRETARY to the CHIEF LAND COMMISSIONER.

No Funds available at present for Land Purchases.

Colonial Secretary's Office,

Auckland, 26th September, 1855.

SIR,—

I am directed by His Excellency the Governor to inform you that, in consequence of the financial arrangements which have been made, there will not be for some time any funds available for the purchase of Native lands unless they can be furnished by the Provincial Governments; and I am further to instruct you that no new negotiations should be entered into for the purchase of Native land without the direct sanction of the Governor, and no engagement made for the payment of any money on this account without a similar sanction.

You are requested to communicate these instructions to all Commissioners or other officers engaged in Native land purchases, and to direct their strict observance of them.

I have, &c.,

ANDREW SINCLAIR, Colonial Secretary.
Donald McLean, Esq., Principal Commissioner.

No. 46. Native Land Purchase Department.

ABSTRACT of LANDS PURCHASED from the NATIVES between the 5th July, 1850, and 31st March, 1856.

NOTE.—The estimated area of the various purchases is not to be relied on as accurate, as many of the blocks have not been surveyed. Descriptions of the land have been given as correctly as possible; but from the want of a topographical survey of the country, the proportions of level, hilly, good and bad land, &c., could not be stated. Purchases made in the Auckland Province prior to March, 1854, are not included in the accompanying returns. The contingent expenditure connected with the purchases is not included in these returns.

DONALD MCLEAN,

Chief Commissioner for the Purchase of Land from the Natives.

No. 47. Auckland District.

No. 48. Province of Auckland.

No. 49. Statement of the CASH ADVANCES made by the COLONIAL TREASURER, at Auckland, to DONALD MCLEAN, Esq., on account of the purchase of LAND from the NATIVES, 29th April, 1854, to 30th April, 1856.

No. 50. The CHIEF COMMISSIONER to the Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY.

In reference to Native Deeds.
Land Commissioner's Office,
Auckland, 5th May, 1856.
SIR,—

Referring to your letter of the twenty-sixth (26th) ultimo, acknowledging receipt of certain deeds transmitted to your office with my letters as per margin, I have the honor to observe that similar deeds to those alluded to in your letter, as documents which would not operate as a conveyance according to the law of real property in force in New Zealand, have been hitherto submitted to and approved of by the Attorney-General as sufficient conveyances.

There are several of the receipts that do not profess to be legal conveyances, but which are, nevertheless, ample evidence of the transactions entered into with the Natives for the purchase of lands; and many of them are intended only as temporary receipts until the final arrangements with the Natives (such as the extent of the purchase, the position and extent of the reserves, the total amount of purchase money, &c.,) are concluded, when a complete and binding document should be executed on the form which I have been in the habit for years of using, and which I have never yet known a Native to dispute. On the contrary, the final deeds of sale are considered by the Natives as irrevocably binding, whilst an English form of conveyance would be frequently repudiated by them, from the fact that it could not be literally translated so as to be understood by them; and I believe that the only binding treaties with most barbarous Natives have been those that were most clearly understood by them. The same rule is certainly applicable to the New Zealanders; and I have seldom heard of any English form of conveyance they have signed which they have not disputed.

I should feel much obliged if I can obtain from your office separate receipts for these documents, as I want them as vouchers to my accounts.

I have, &c.,

DONALD, MCLEAN, Principal Commissioner.
The Hon. the Colonial Secretary.

No. 51. Instructions to Connect and Consolidate Native Land Purchases.

Crown Lands to be connected as much as possible. MINUTE.

FOR obvious reasons which it is unnecessary to detail, the Governor considers it highly important that the European population should not be more than necessarily isolated; he therefore desires that instructions be given to the Land Purchase Commissioners to use their utmost endeavours to connect and consolidate Crown lands, and not to commence negotiations for the purchase of land, unless adjacent to and connected with Crown lands without special reference to himself.

Government House,
4th June, 1857.

T. GORE BROWNE.

No. 52. The CHIEF COMMISSIONER to Mr. COMMISSIONER F. DILLON BELL.

Waiheke.—Claim of Mr. S. A. Wood at Whakanewha. Land Commissioner's Office, Auckland, 1st August, 1857. SIR,—

I have the honor to transmit for your information copy of a letter addressed to His Excellency by the Natives Hoterene Taipari and Eruera Te Ngahue, of Kauaeranga, as having relation to the claim of Mr. S. A. Wood to a piece of land at Whakanewha, Island of Waiheke. The writers have been informed that no payment has been made to Mohi by the Government for land at Whakanewha, but that a claim to land in that locality, by Mr. Wood, will shortly be investigated by a Land Claims Commissioner, who will receive any statement they may wish to make having reference to said claim. I would suggest that due notice of the day of hearing be sent both to Mohi and to these Natives.

I have, &c.,

THOS. H. SMITH,
F. Dillon Bell, Esq., (For Chief Commissioner).
Land Claims Commissioner.

No. 53. The CHIEF COMMISSIONER to JAMES PREECE, Esq., Coromandel.

Tamaki—Respecting Claim of Paora Te Putu on the Block.

Chief Land Purchase Commissioner's Office,

Auckland, 14th October, 1857.

SIR,—

The Native Chief Karaitiana has been urging that a small payment should be made to Paora-te-Putu for his claims through the Waiohua for Tamaki.

I apprehend that making payments for lands that have been fairly purchased, and so long in the possession of Europeans, would form a most dangerous precedent, and I mention the circumstance to you in the hope that you will induce, as far as possible, the Natives of your district from reviving claims, the adjustment of which would, if admitted by the Government, be attended with endless difficulties, however necessary it may in some cases become to deviate from the principle here enunciated.

I have, &c.,

DONALD MCLEAN, Chief Land Purchase Commissioner.
James Preece, Esq., Coromandel.

No. 54. The CHIEF COMMISSIONER to the DISTRICT LAND PURCHASE COMMISSIONERS.

General Instructions as to Land Returns to be compiled.

Land Commissioner's Office,

Auckland, 20th November, 1857.

SIR,—

I have the honor to request that you will forward to this office at your earliest possible convenience a complete return and concise report of all transactions in which you have been engaged since the 30th June, 1856; what sums you have paid on account of old liabilities; what new liabilities you have incurred during the same period; the ascertained or estimated acreage of all blocks, not only of those actually purchased, but also of those concerning which negotiations have been entered into. In short, the return should be, as far as possible, complete enough to enable this office (taking it in conduction with those of the other District Commissioners) to supply the General Assembly with full and accurate information concerning all transactions with the Natives in any part of the country. It is necessary to have the return so compiled as to give a topographical idea of the lands acquired in your districts.

I have, &c.,

DONALD MCLEAN,

To District Land Purchase Commissioners. Chief Commissioner.

No. 55.MEMORANDUM.

Acquisition of homesteads by Europeans to be promoted.

RECOMMENDED that His Honor the Superintendent be communicate with in reference to the introduction of a clause into the Provincial Land Regulations, by which Europeans in certain districts may be enabled to obtain a title for the homesteads acquired for them from the Natives through the General Government.

The subject has been fully reported upon in my letters, as per margin, and I advert to it now in the hope that it may be considered by the Provincial Government when framing their new Land Regulations.

The letters, memoranda, and correspondence on the subject of homesteads generally, as referred to the Provincial Government, are recorded in the Colonial Secretary's office.

Auckland,

November 24th, 1857.

DONALD MCLEAN, Chief Commissioner

Province of Auckland.

Return shewing QUANTITY and QUALITY of LANDS in the possession of the PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENT on the 1st January, 1859

No. 57.ABSTRACT RETURN of all REJECTED APPLICATIONS made by the Natives during the period intervening between 1st January, 1840, and 31st December, 1845, to sell Land to Her Majesty's Government.

Applications to sell land to the Government during the above-mentioned period were usually made in person, to which verbal answers were generally given.

DONALD MCLEAN, Chief Commissioner.
Native Land Purchase Office,
15th August, 1860.

v.—C.

Native Land Purchases.

Return to an ORDER of the HOUSE of REPRESENTATIVES, dated 7th August, 1860, "for a Statement of the various Sums expended out of the £180,000, being the portion of the Loan of £500,000 allocated for the Purchase of Native Lands in the Northern Island. Such Return to specify the number of acres purchased in each District the date of purchase; by what Commissioner effected; and the price per acre. Such Return also to state the amount of the said £180,000 unexpended; the balance due on each provincial account; and how such balances are now invested."

Province of Auckland.

Auckland District.

DONALD MCLEAN.
10th August, 1860.

NOTE.—The price per acre cannot be deducted from these returns, as very many of the payments are on account of blocks of land purchased prior to 30th June, 1856, and many payments are instalments on account of blocks, the survey of which in some instances has not been completed, or the purchase money fixed; in each of these cases the sums paid are not correctly represented by the acreage standing against them.

For the Chief Land Purchase Commissioner,

JOHN ROGAN, D.C.

Province Of Hawke's Bay.

Note.— The acreage of the blocks purchased prior to the 30th June, 1856, is not shown in this return; the total number of acres shown are those for which the negotiations have been entered into since the 30th June, 1856.

The total payments shown in the return, after deducting the credit on Arrear Account (£12,735) allowed by the House of Representatives, do not exhibit the whole cost of the acres shown, as in many instances the payments are but instalments upon large blocks, the final price of which is not yet fixed.

JOHN ROGAN, District Commissioner, For the Chief Commissioner.

Province Of New Plymouth.

R. F. PORTER Assistant Treasurer.
Treasury, Auckland,
29th August, 1860.

Native Purchases and Surveys.

IN reference to the Order of the House of Representatives, calling for "a Return showing the number of acres over which the Native title has been extinguished during the twelve months ending the 1st June, 1861, and the purchase money paid or agreed to be paid for the same; also the number of acres surveyed during the same period by surveyors acting under the orders of the Land Purchase Department," the Chief Commissioner supplies the following information:—

Bay of Islands District.

The only two purchases are as under:—

The Ahipara Block was purchased prior to 1st June, 1860, but was not included in the last return furnished.

The Commissioner residing at the Bay of Islands has been called upon to supply information as to the number of acres surveyed.

Whangarei and Kaipara Districts.

Number of acres surveyed during the period, fifty thousand eight hundred.

Thames and Piako Districts.

Number of acres purchased, 6,000.

Amount of purchase money, £350.

No surveys executed, as the Commissioner was detached from this district in August, 1860.

Province of Wellington. No purchases have been made since 1st July, 1860.

Twenty seven thousand and sixteen acres have been surveyed during the same period, an amount apparently small, but large when the number of district surveys (40 in number) is taken into consideration.

These surveys include lands purchased, lands under negotiation, lands reserved for Natives, and lands in the hands of the Natives.

Much time has been spent during the same period in determining and surveying the back boundaries of former purchases in the Wairarapa.

In the Province of Ahuriri no fresh purchases have been made, but a surveyor attached to the department has been employed in surveying the external boundaries of blocks under negotiation and reserves for the Natives.

DONALD MCLEAN.

Return showing the number of ACRES over which the NATIVE TITLE has been extinguished

during the year ended 30th June, 1862;
showing, also, PAYMENTS made during the same period in the Wellington and Hawke's Bay Provinces, on account of LAND purchased prior to the 30th June, 1861.

NOTE.—Payments on account of blocks the Native Title to which has not yet been extinguished are not included in this Return. In those instances where the acreage is not given, the payments are on account of blocks the Native Title over which was extinguished prior to 30th June, 1861.

JOHN ROGAN, District Commissioner,
For the Chief Commissioner,
August 21st, 1862.

Return showing the number of ACRES surveyed by OFFICERS of the LAND PURCHASE DEPARTMENT
during the year ended 30th June, 1862.

Province of Auckland.—Number of acres surveyed from 1st June, 1861, to 30th June, 1862, (70,177)
Seventy thousand one hundred and seventy-seven.

In the Provinces of Hawke's Bay and Wellington the surveyors have been principally employed in defining the boundaries of disputed land and Native reserves.

JOHN ROGAN, District Commissioner,
For the Chief Commissioner,
August 21st, 1862.

No. 61. APIHAI Te KAWAU to His Excellency the GOVERNOR In CHIEF.

Orakei—No one to interfere with his Lands.
FRIEND GOVERNOR GREY,—
Ongarahu, 27th January, 1863.

Salutations! My love for you is very great. Friend! I have heard of the work of the people who have been speaking to you about my lands Orakei, Okuhu, and whakatakataka. These are my lands. I will not allow any person or persons to talk (negotiate) to you about my lands. Those places are to remain a residence for myself and my children, that we may be near you to guard you all and our town (Auckland). My mind is always with you. I will never depart from the good understanding which has always existed between us. My thoughts are still fixed on you, and will always remain so until I depart (die) from your presence. These are all my words to you.

From your loving friend,

APIHAI TE KAWAU

His Excellency the Governor, Auckland.

Return Of Lana Purchase Expenditure, Etc.

ACCOUNT showing the Present Condition of the LAND PURCHASE FUND of the Province of Auckland, together with a Detail of the Items of Expenditure charged upon the Fund.

In addition to the expenditure included herein, this Account is chargeable with a further sum on account of Ten per cent on Sales of Lands from 1st January, 1864, to 30th June, 1865. Returns of these sales not yet received.

Province of Auckland.

J. WOODWARD, Assistant Treasurer.
Treasury, Wellington,
10th August, 1865.

Return of LAND PURCHASES in the PROVINCE of AUCKLAND, showing the Locality and Extent of the Blocks acquired since 1st January, 1864, under "Loan Act, 1856."

R. E. E. PLIMPTON, Native Accountant.
7th August, 1865.

Return Of Native Lands For Which Negotiations Have Been Commenced.

Schedule Of Districts In Which Land Has Been Purchased.

Schedule Of Land Purchases In New Zealand.

No. 64. Lieut.-Colonel McDONNELL to Mr. J. KNOWLES.

Little Barrier Island. Auckland, 7th August, 1873.

SIR,—

I have the honor to report my return from the Northern district of Auckland, and state, for the information of the Government, that, on proceeding to Otamatea from here to see Arama Karaka about the Little Barrier, and his grievance respecting the land purchased by Thomas Henry, of Whangarei, I met Arama Karaka at Helensville on the 2nd July. He was on his way up here, a writ having been taken out against him. After conversation between Arama Karaka and myself about the 500 acres of land he lays claim to, though occupied by Mr. Henry, he agreed to take 6s. an acre, or £150 for his claim on the land; but he declared emphatically that his treatment had been most unjust, and that he consented only in consequence of his being pressed for money. I wrote a telegram and sent it to Major Green, in Auckland for transmission to Wellington, acquainting the Government with what had passed.

I spoke to Arama Karaka about the Little Barrier Island, and from what he and other Natives have told me, I believe that Arama Karaka and Hori te More are the principal owners. Arama is willing to sell the island, and asked me to go and see the quality of the land and timber on it before anything further is said. I think it may be purchased at a fair price, and, should the Government wish to dispose of it again, a large profit might be realized, for, had it not been understood it was Government property, it would have been bought some time ago. I will wait until I receive instructions before I visit and report on the Island in question.

On the 3rd July I proceeded to Mangawhau to see Parore and Tirarau in reference to the Mangakahia land, and gained the information required; after which, with some trouble, I procured a Native to accompany me to Mangakahia, but did not reach Mangakahia till the morning of 5th. The Native proved ignorant of the road, and we were over fifty-four hours in the bush without food of any kind, and it rained all the while, making a heavy fresh in the rivers we had to cross. On arriving at Mangakahia I met the chiefs Matiu and others, and, subject to approval, arranged for a piece of land called Pekapekarau, and directed Mr. Parris to survey it: the price asked is 2s. 6d. an acre, but I have left this an open question.

Another block of considerable size and fair land is offered for sale, called Totarapoka. The Natives told me that His Honor Mr. Gillies wished to obtain this block, and was going over it, but something prevented him. Should the Government desire this piece of land, the chief Parore has claims adjoining, and wishes to accompany the officer sent to negotiate the purchase, so as to be able to protect his interests. Through fatigue arising from my bad journey I was detained at Mangakahia, but proceeded on the 6th to the Bay of Islands, en route for Mangonui; reached Ahipara on the 18th, and then held a meeting with the principal chiefs of the place in reference to the land called the Victoria Valley.

Timoti Pohipi and others said they were not at all anxious to sell their land; that my visit had rather taken them by surprise; but that they were glad to see me, and would hear what I had to say to them. I pointed out that they could never use all their good land, and the best plan was to dispose of a portion so that immigrants could be placed upon. They seemed to approve of this, only said that if they sold their lands cheaply for such a purpose, and no Pakehas came to reside on it, they would have sold their lands cheaply to no purpose. I then explained that if good land was sold by them Pakehas would not only be glad to come, but would remain and prove a lasting benefit to the Natives. "Your land," I argued, "is as a fat ox, the whole of which you cannot consume; a part of which you offer for sale to buy utensils to cook and enjoy the remainder; but what a fool I would be to take what you offer—namely, the horns and hoofs. No: sell me a quarter of your bullock and the Government will then give you that which will enable you to turn the remainder to advantage." The result was, they agreed to have a meeting, and let me know what lands they would sell to the Government; that on my return to Auckland I should hear from them on this and other subjects.

I was very much pleased with the appearance of these Natives; they are evidently well; disposed, and anxious that their future should be prosperous. The children appear to be numerous and healthy in this district.

On the 22nd of July I left Ahipara for Mangonui. I did not think it prudent to press the sale of the land on these Natives after what had been said, for Natives, as a rule, are very jealous in dealing with their lands, and caution and judgment have to be exercised to obtain confidence in return and insure a favourable result. This is the reason I have not made myself as fully acquainted with the particulars of this block, and the road to Whangape, as under other circumstances I should have done, but I trust that the Government will be satisfied with the course I have adopted.

I returned to the Bay of Islands on the 24th of July, but hearing that some hitch was likely to occur at Mangakahia, I returned there; and after leaving everything in that district in a satisfactory state, I reached Auckland via Kaipara on the 5th of August, after an absence of thirty-five days.

I have, &c.,

THOS. McDONNELL, Land Purchase Commissioner,

John Knowles, Esq., Under Secretary Public Works,
Wellington.

Part 1.—Negotiations Completed.

Part II.—Negotiations in Progress.

Part III.—General Expenses.

Part 4.—Recapitulation.

Richard John Gill, Accountant.

Native and Defence Office,

29th July, 1874.

No. 66. LANDS PURCHASED under the IMMIGRATION and PUBLIC WORKS ACT of 1870, and declared to be WASTE LANDS of the CROWN.

No. 67. Return of Names of Europeans from whom Lands, &c., have been Purchased.

1st August, 1875.

Return giving the Names of all Europeans from whom Lands or Claims to Lands have been purchased, or to whom Compensation has been paid, in respect of Claims to Land out of the £700,000 set apart for the purchase of Native Lands; also showing the Amounts paid to each of such persons respectively, and the Position and Area of Blocks in respect of which such Payments have been made.

Statement Relative to Land Purchases, North Island.

Under Immigration and Public Works Acts of 1870 and 1873.

10th-August, 1875.—Statement of Native Minister Relative to Land Purchases in North Island.

Mr. Speaker,—

I consider it due to the House that a statement should be made by me in reference to the expenditure of moneys authorized under the Immigration and Public Works Acts, 1870 and 1873, for the purchase of Native lands in the North Island. I think this has become necessary, as I am aware that much has been said during the recess calculated to lead to the belief that sufficient care had not been taken to guard the public interests. I hope to be able to disabuse the minds of honorable members if they entertain such ideas, and to show that the Government have at great disadvantage endeavoured faithfully to carry out the views of the House, and have succeeded as well as could be reasonably expected.

When it was decided by the General Assembly that a public estate should be acquired in the North Island for the purposes of colonization, the difficulties which had to be encountered were of no ordinary character.

From the year 1840 to 1862 the task of acquiring land from the aborigines was not so difficult, the Crown having the exclusive right of purchase. The Constitution, Act maintained the right of pre-emption; but, through the action of this House, the Crown abrogated this provision of the Constitution, relinquished its right of pre-emption, and passed a law throwing open lands held by the Natives to private purchasers. Capitalists were not slow to avail themselves of the wide field thus opened out to them of profitably investing their money, and from time to time valuable tracts of country were obtained by them.

Able agents, many of them formerly officers of the Native Department, were employed. They were to be found in every district buying up the very choicest portions of the country, and year by year, through their operations, the carrying out of any large colonial scheme of land purchase was rendered more and more difficult.

In the year 1870 the Immigration and Public Works policy rendered it necessary that large tracts of country should be acquired for settlement. Accordingly the General Assembly voted first a sum of £200,000, and then a further sum of £500,000, to acquire land from the Natives. In undertaking this task the Government found itself with scarcely any officers of experience to carry out the delicate work of land-purchase negotiations. Men of ability were in the employ of the Government, but, with few exceptions, they were unacquainted with this peculiar duty, and could not therefore cope successfully with the experienced agents in the employ of capitalists to be met with in all parts of the Island. It must be remembered that lands which had passed through the Native Land Court were open to all alike—there was no exception in favour of the Government. A slight advantage only was gained by the colony under the provisions of the Immigration and Public Works Acts over lands which had not been adjudicated upon, which gave the Government protection for two years.

It was found expedient to make terms with the most active and successful of these agents, and offer them inducements to enter the Government service. Without their co-operation it was almost hopeless to carry out to a successful issue the objects this House had in view when it placed at the Government's disposal such large sums of money.

Even with the assistance of these gentlemen, I have only to refer honorable members to the reports of the land purchase officers and agents laid on the table of the House to show that the difficulties which had to be encountered were of no ordinary kind, and yet the results are, I submit, on the whole very favourable to the country.

It should also be remembered that the peaceful aspect of Native affairs in the North Island has tended to advance the settlement of the country, and has increased the demand for land by capitalists from the South Island and the Australian Colonies. In 1873 unimproved land could be purchased in the Waikato for prices not exceeding ten shillings per acre; the same lands cannot now be purchased under from one to two pounds per acre. Such has been the competition for land that the agents for private parties have gone into districts proclaimed under the Immigration and Public Works Act, and have purchased choice blocks at a higher rate than the Government were offering, with the full knowledge that they had no chance of obtaining a title during the currency of the Proclamation, but trusting to make their claims good, when it should lapse.

I need not take up the time of the House by enlarging on this subject, but I have said enough to convince honorable members that, in acquiring the estate which has been secured, we have had much to contend against from the competition of our own countrymen, to say nothing of the trouble and anxiety of dealing with a race so proverbially jealous and tenacious of their land as the Natives.

With these preliminary remarks, I will now give a statement of the operations respecting the purchase of lands up to the end of the past financial year.

The land-purchase operations north of Auckland have been carried on by Mr. White, R.M., Mangonui, Mr. Kemp, Civil Commissioner, Auckland, Lieut.-Colonel McDonnell, Mr. Brissenden and Mr. Preece.

A return presented to Parliament last year, by command of His Excellency the Governor, showed that in the Hokianga District—the Government had acquired by purchase 2 blocks of land, containing 11,086 acres, at a cost of ?1,904 5s. 7d., or 3s. 5¼d. per acre; in the Bay of Islands District—4 blocks of land, containing 28,999 acres, at a cost of ?2,965 12s., or 2s. 0¾d. per acre; and in the

Kaipara District—6 blocks of land, containing 29,018 acres at a cost of ?2,633 19s. 6d., or 1s. 9¾d. per acre—making altogether 69,103 acres, and costing ?7,503 17s. 1d., the average price being 2s. 2d. per acre.

This cost includes surveys and all incidental expenses.

The return also shows that negotiations had been entered into for the further purchase of 20 blocks of land, the area of which was estimated at 248,490 acres. The amount paid on these 20 blocks was £1,207 10s.

These transactions will be more easily read in the following tabular form:—

During the past financial year, in the districts of Mangonui, Bay of Islands, Hokianga, and Whangarei, several valuable blocks of land have been acquired, in addition to those noted as transactions incomplete in the above return. The completed transactions from 1st July, 1874. to 30th June, 1875, are as follows:—In the

- Mangonui District—2 blocks of land, containing 28,527 acres, at a cost of ?3,728 18s. 3d., or 2s. 7½d. per acre; in the
- Hokianga District—34 blocks of land containing 131,097 acres, at a cost of ?11,765 13s. 2d., or 1s. 9½d. per acre; and in the
- Whangarei District—3 blocks of land, containing 61,941 acres, at a cost of ?6,607 14s. 6d., or 1s. 11½d. per acre

The total area of land purchased during the year, North of Auckland, has been 221,565 acres; and the amount paid, including surveys and incidental expenses, ?21,569 5s. 11d., being 1s. 11¼d. per acre.

- The incomplete negotiations of land purchases during the past year in the above districts may be classed,—

1st. Lands that have passed the Native Land Court, the transactions for acquiring which are nearly complete.

2nd. Lands surveyed, and awaiting sittings of Land Court at Kaihu, fixed for 11th August

3rd. Lands under survey, and intended to be brought before the Land Court in September next.

4th. Lands, the surveys of which have not yet been commenced.

Of the lands that have passed the Native Land Court, 10,406 acres are in the Mangonui District; 5,200 acres in the Bay of Islands District; 6,942 acres in the Hokianga District; and 82,313 acres in the Kaipara District—a total of 104,861 acres, and on which moneys amounting to £2,150 15s 10d. have been paid. A sum of £6,075 4s. 9d. is required to complete these purchases. I know of no reason why these lands should not be acquired within the next month or two.

The lands surveyed and awaiting the sittings of the Land Court at Kaihu, on the 11th of August, represent 14 block, having an area of 116,601 acres, and on which advances have been made to the amount of £3,996 16s. 10d. The lands are situate in Mangonui District, 11,906 acres; Bay of Islands District, 23,974 acres; Hokianga District, 45,421 acres; and Kaipara District, 35,300 acres.

The lands—11 blocks—now under survey by the Inspector of Survey's Department, Auckland, are estimated to contain 31,000 acres. Advances have been paid on these lands amounting to £1,092 3s. 2d. The lands are situate in the Mangonui District, 17,500 acres; Bay of Islands District, 6,500 acres; Hokianga District, 3,000 acres; and Whangarei District, 4,000 acres.

The lands awaiting survey, are 13 blocks in the Bay of Islands, Hokianga, and Whangarei Districts, the estimated area being 110,800 acres. No price has yet been fixed for these lands. Advances to the amount of £636 2s. have been made to the Natives interested in them.

The following form shows the transactions in the several districts North of Auckland, during the past year:—

Thames and Piako Districts.

The negotiations during the past year in the Thames district carried on through Messrs. Mackay and Puckey, assisted by Hoterene Taipari, have been mainly directed in closing up transactions entered into in 1872-73. Lands within the proclaimed gold-fields, which were included in agreements made between the Natives and the Crown for gold mining purposes, and lands within the same district not subject to gold mining agreements.

The lands acquired and under negotiation in this district on the 30th June, 1874, with the cost and advances, are shown in Parliamentary Paper C. 4, of last year, as under.

For the purchase of 438 acres of the Thames foreshore, there was paid the sum of £2,941 13s. 6d.; and on other completed transactions over 20 blocks of land, containing Including 5,305 acres (£675) since treated as an incomplete transaction.

117,056 acres, payments were made amounting to £17,436 13s. 4d. Besides these purchases, several old claims over the Waitoa and Piako lands were settled, at a cost of £923. This payment extinguished Native claims over 31,230 acres of land.

The incomplete transactions noted in the return represented 475,005 acres, on which advances had been made to the amount of £27,343 10s. 1d. Included in this area is the Ohinemuri Block of 132,175 acres, since proclaimed a gold-field, on which advances have been made by way of purchase of the sum of £12,714 14s. As, however, much opposition and many difficulties had to be overcome, which would lead to an indefinite delay in opening the district as a gold-field, it was deemed advisable in the interests of the public to enter into an agreement with the Native owners to acquire the right of mining for gold and other minerals, besides the right to sell timber and lease lands for agricultural and other purposes. The advances made on account of the purchase are a first charge on the miners rights, fees, leases, &c, arising within the block. The sum of £1,109 15s. has already been recovered.

The work done in the Thames district during the past year has been the completing the purchase of 9 blocks of land, containing 35,411 acres, the total cost of which has been £4,026 12s. 11d., or 2s. 3¼d. per acre (these 9 blocks have been under negotiation since 1872); also the purchase of 1 block, containing 245 acres, for the sum of £166 14s.

The incomplete transactions to date are the purchases of 30 blocks of land, containing about 456,410 acres (these transactions were commenced in 1872-73). Payments have been made on these blocks to the amount of £30,244 9s. 5d. There are also 14 other blocks of land that have been negotiated for during the past year, estimated to contain 40,251 acres, on which advances have been made to the amount of £1,027 5s. 11d. In the latter area is included the Coromandel foreshore, not yet surveyed, estimated at 1,400 acres.

In addition to the above purchases, negotiations are advanced for the acquiring of land in the Patetere district, estimated to contain 249,000 acres; on this purchase payments have been made to the amount of £3,916 13s. 4d.

In the Thames and Patetere districts, the operations during the past year are shown in the form below:—

Bay of Plenty and Taupo Districts.

Negotiating Officers—Messrs. Davis and Mitchell.

The operations in this district during the past year have been confined to the completing of purchases and leases under negotiation prior to 1st July last year. The work has been much retarded, owing to tribal jealousies of the Arawa Natives, and the want of surveyors to determine the boundaries of the several blocks of land.

The transactions to 30th June, 1875, are shown in the following Return:—

East Coast and Poverty Bay District.

Negotiating Officers—J. A. Wilson and Captain Porter.

During the past year a large area of land has been negotiated for in this district, but, owing to the blocks not being surveyed, most of the transactions are incomplete. The Natives living between the East Cape and Poverty Bay evince a desire to sell or lease to the Crown their surplus lands, and in all probability there will be acquired, within a reasonable time, several valuable blocks suitable for pastoral and agricultural purposes.

The completed transactions are—The purchase of the Tolago Bay Township block, of 252 acres, for £645 3s. 1d.; and the Waihirere Quarry block, at Gisborne, of 28 acres, purchased by Mr. R. M. Locke, for a sum of £114 15s. From this latter block, stone for metalling the roads approaching Gisborne Township is now being quarried. Also, the leases of Mootu block, of 67,980 acres, for fifty years; the Waikohu Matawhai block, of 43,479 acres for twenty-five years; and the Rotukatuku block, of 5,600 acres, for twenty-one years. This last-named block has an extra value on account of its oil springs.

The incomplete transactions have been the negotiations for the purchase of 11 blocks of land estimated to contain 154,840 acres, on which payments have been made amounting to £3,192 11s. 11d.; and leases over 13 blocks of land, estimated at 225,500 acres, on which advances have been made to the amount of £1,579 2s.

Wairoa District.

Negotiating Officer—Mr. J. P. Hamlin.

In this district negotiations have been entered into for the purchase of 4 blocks of land, estimated to contain 231,000 acres; and for the leasing of 3 blocks of land, of about 77,000 acres. These lands had been leased for twenty one years to Europeans, who have conveyed their interests to the Government, the Native owners having also agreed to sell, after sufficient reserves are surveyed and marked off for their own use and occupation.

The total land-purchase transactions entered into under the Immigration and Public Works Acts of 1870 and 1873, in the Province of Auckland, to 30th June, 1875, are shown in the following return:—

The average cost per acre of the lands purchased in the province has been, including all expenses, 2s. 6¾d. per acre.

Hawke's Bay Province.

Mr. R. M. Locke, and J. P. Hamlin, are in charge of land-purchase operations in this district. The transactions during the past year have been mainly the completing the purchases over blocks of land within the Seventy-mile Bush, the area of which is stated to be 240,537 acres.

Wellington Province.

During the past year the negotiations for land purchases in this province have been conducted by Mr. James Booth, assisted by John Buller and Major Keepa.

The transactions to 30th June, 1874, were the acquiring by purchase 29 blocks of land, containing 324,330 acres, at a cost of Further payments of £1,233 17s. have been made on these blocks during past year.

£34,566 10s. 6d., and the negotiating for the purchase of 89 blocks, estimated to contain 433,911 acres, on which payments have been made amounting to £10,143 17s. 2d.

During the past year, 1874-75, the completed transactions have been the purchase of 24 blocks, containing 105,372 acres, at a cost of £9,315 11s. 2d. The incomplete ones, the negotiating for the purchase of 768,115 acres, and the leasing of 307,835 acres, on which advances have been made amounting to £25,359 16s. 4d.

The following return shows the complete and incomplete land-purchase transactions in the Province of Wellington to 30th June, 1875:—

Average cost per acre, 2s. 1d.

Taranaki District.

The land-purchase operations in this district have been carried on by Mr. Parris, Civil Commissioner.

The transactions to 30th June last year were the acquiring by purchase 8 blocks of land, containing 113,870 acres, also, negotiating for the purchase of 4 blocks of land, containing about 53,000 acres, on which advances were made to the sum of £2,194 6s. 5d.

During the present year there has been purchased 5 blocks of land, containing 56,629 acres, making a total of 170,499 acres, at a cost of £25,381 19s., or 2s. 11¾d. per acre; also negotiating for the purchase of 6 blocks of land estimated to contain 84,130 acres, on which advances have been made amounting to £674 3s. 6d. There has also been paid for the survey of the Patea River the sum of £162 1s.

General Summary.

From this statement it will be seen that the area of land acquired by purchase or lease since 1872, the year the Government commenced the present land purchases under "The Immigration and Public Works Act, 1870," have been—

A total of 1,331,522 acres, purchased at a cost of, including £13,000 charged for expenses of department, commissions, &c., £164,218 10s. 1d., or 2s. 5¾d. per acre; and 391,601 acres leased, on which has been paid the sum of £2,987 9s. 1d.

The incomplete transactions represent—

A total of 2,941,842 acres under purchase, and 1,552,502 acres under lease. In all 4,464,344 acres, on which has been paid, including £13,135 2s. 9d. for departmental services the sum of £118,823 1s.

From these totals it will be seen that no less than 6,187,467 acres of land have been negotiated for since 1872, on which moneys have been paid amounting to £286,029 0s. 2d.

The total amount charged against the sums voted by Parliament for land-purchase purposes to 30th June last was referred to by my honorable colleague, the Colonial Treasurer, in his Financial Statement, as £377,059 18s. 1d. Some explanation may be necessary as to the difference between this sum and that of £286,029 0s. 2d., before noticed by me as the total payments made for actual land-purchase purposes, a difference of £75,344 4s. 6d.

This amount is made up from payments made to the

This sum of £75,344 4s. 6d., as against £286,029 0s. 2d. actually paid for land, certainly appears large, but it must be borne in mind that, with the exception of £20,500 advanced to the New Zealand Settlements Act, the whole has been charged in accordance with the votes of this House. The fact should also not be lost sight of, that a large proportion of the expenses incurred by the Native Land Court have been in the investigation of title to the land purchased under the provisions of the Immigration and Public Works Acts.

The Government have steadily kept in view the twofold objects of providing land for the large influx of population, and of securing those districts to the colony through which public works and undertakings are being carried on.

In the consideration of this question there is another point which should be mentioned—the Government have endeavoured to acquire land in large blocks, where possible. The advantage gained is obvious; but, in doing so, of necessity lands of all descriptions were included. Much land fit for special settlement has been purchased. Lands supposed to be of average quality have, on closer inspection by the surveyors, turned out better than was anticipated.

Reports of the surveyors have been laid on the table of the House.

A large area of land has been secured in the Taupo country, which, as every one knows who has been through that district, is generally of inferior description, but even for that there has been considerable competition.

There are some valuable blocks now under negotiation, which, in the course of a few months will be in the hands of the Government. But I would ask honorable members, especially those of them who are not acquainted with the difficulties and the sometimes harrassing work of negotiation with the Natives, to restrain impatience. Lands are now being purchased in districts where a few years ago a European could not show his face. In proof of this, I would only point to the Taranaki and Upper Whanganui Districts; and, if the Government carry on the work as they may deem safe and advisable, a large colonial estate will be obtained; but, if undue pressure is brought upon the Land Purchase Agents to urge on these purchases, not only will our present, good understanding with the Native race be endangered, but the main object in view marred, by unwise and premature action.

Negotiations of this nature can only be carried out with the intelligent assent of the Natives, and this can only be obtained when they have realized the advantages to be gained from having European settlers in their neighbourhood.

Part 1.—Negotiations Completed.

Part II.—Negotiations in Progress.

Part III.—General Expenses.

Detail of EXPENDITURE to 30th June, 1875, on Account of LAND PURCHASES and LEASES in the NORTH ISLAND.

Part IV. – Recapitulation.

Statement Relative to Land Purchases, North Island.

Under Immigration and Public Works Acts 1870 and 1873. By The Hon. The Native Minister, Sir D. McLean.
MR. SPEAKER,—

In pursuance of the course adopted last year, I propose to lay before the House a statement of the land-purchase operations of the Government under the Immigration and Public Works Acts for the year ended 30th June, 1876; but, before doing so, I may be permitted to make a few general remarks for the information of honorable members.

It will be remembered that, in the statement I had the honor to make last year, I took occasion to mention some of the obstacles which had to be contended with by the Government in the task of acquiring a landed estate for the North Island, not the least of which was the superior advantages held by the experienced agents of capitalists and speculators in buying up large tracts of country. I am happy to inform the House that during the past year the Government agents have been less exposed to obstruction in carrying out to a satisfactory issue their arrangements with the Natives.

To the north of Auckland several valuable blocks of land have been purchased, some of which are well adapted for settlement. Some delay took place in completing these transactions, from the circumstance that the land could not be passed through the Native Land Court till proper surveys had been made. These having been accomplished, no difficulty was experienced in bringing negotiations to a successful issue; and, of the one hundred and one transactions originally entered into, nearly the whole have been completed; 443,856 acres have been acquired at a cost (inclusive of expenses) of £43,895 1s. 8d., or 2s. per acre.

The value of many of these blocks was not really known till the country had been opened up by surveys; and it is reported by the surveyors and Europeans in the district who have inspected the land that they are eminently adapted for settlement. Appeals have on more than one occasion been made by the Natives to have these lands peopled by an English population, and they have readily disposed of some of the best of their lands to induce European settlement.

Viewing the large extent of country that has been from time to time acquired from the Natives in the North, and the representations that have been made by the District Officer, appointed under the Native Land Act of 1873, as to the quantity of land still in the possession of the Natives, it has become a question for consideration whether, after the present negotiations are completed, it would be right, regard being had to the wants of the Natives, for the Government to acquire any more land in that district.

Most of the lands to the North of Auckland in the possession of the Natives are, through the medium of the Native Land Court, held under Crown grant; and the cordial relations which exist between them and their European neighbours indicate that the time has arrived when the Ngapuhi and Rarawa tribes may be considered as upon an equal footing with the Europeans.

Of the lands purchased to the north of Auckland, 229,559 acres have been handed over to the province to be dealt with under the existing land laws.

I will take next in order—the Coromandel and Thames District. Many circumstances have, during the past year, tended to retard the completion of these purchases. Several of the blocks have been before the Native Land Court, and the Native owners ascertained, and are in a fair way of being finally acquired, the conveyances to the Crown only requiring one or two signatures to complete the purchases. One of these blocks is the Waikawau and Moehau, containing 118,802 acres, upon which payments have been made amounting to £15,930 6s. 9d. Several of the purchases in this district are encumbered with timber leases, having currency for periods varying from 21 to 99 years. The above lands are of little value for agricultural purposes, but the Superintendent of Auckland, whom the Government, under "The Immigration and Public Works Act, 1870," were bound to consult, urged upon the Colonial Government the desirability of acquiring the fee-simple in the belief that the lands were auriferous. It must also be borne in mind that these purchases were recommended with the full knowledge that these leases existed. So strongly was the then Superintendent, Mr. Gillies, impressed with the importance that the purchases should be made without delay, that he represented to the Government the desirability of keeping the Land Purchase Agent supplied with money, and even made advances out of his own means to accomplish this object. I will quote his own words:—

"Being personally aware that a very large sum might be saved to the colony and the province on this purchase (Waikawau and Cape Colville Blocks) by dealing with the Natives at a tangi at Ohinemuri, I felt myself justified in advancing to Mr. Mackay the sum of two thousand pounds for that purpose. I proceeded with Mr. Mackay to Ohinemuri, and was present when he was negotiating with the Natives there assembled, and I feel convinced that a large saving, both in time and money, was effected by his being placed in funds promptly to conduct these negotiations. I trust that you will approve of my action in this matter, and that the amount advanced will be at once repaid. Permit me further to suggest that provision should be made in future for providing funds by which advantage can be taken promptly of such circumstances as the above, which occasionally arise."

There are certain blocks of land on the Upper Thames, Waitoa, and Piako Rivers, amounting to an estimated area of 200,000 acres, the purchase of a principal part of which, it is believed, will soon be completed. A considerable portion of these lands are looked upon as suitable for settlement. Mr. Mackay has for some time been endeavouring to arrange the differences of the Native owners in respect to boundaries, and has succeeded in getting several blocks surveyed, so that I hope at no distant period these lands will be thrown open for sale and occupation.

The purchases in the Thames district that have been completed amount to 145,441 acres, at a cost (inclusive of expenses) of £23,231 17s. 1d., or 3s. 3d. per acre.

Owing to difficulties interposed by one or two sections of the Arawa tribe, it has been deemed prudent to discontinue for the present all land purchases in the Bay of Plenty district. The nature of those obstructions will be seen by reference to the reports of the Land Purchase Agents, already laid on the table of the House. The agents have consequently been withdrawn.

At Taupo the like difficulties were not encountered, and larger areas have been acquired, either by purchase or lease. The survey of 62,787 acres has already been completed, and further surveys are in progress over lands estimated to contain 261,000 acres.

In these districts 99,974 acres have been purchased, at a cost of £14,258 11s. 6d., or about 2s. 10d. per acre.

I will now refer to the East Coast and Wairoa districts. In the former very little has been completed, although large areas are under negotiation. Land purchase arrangements in this district being now the subject of inquiry, need not at present be further alluded to.

In the Upper Wairoa large blocks have been acquired to the extent of 146,080 acres. I may here mention the great change that has come over Native feeling in the interior of that part of the country. The Urewera, a tribe but a few years ago at deadly feud with us, and who, even after friendly relations were established pertinaciously refused to sell an inch of their lands, were considerable owners in these blocks. With some hesitation they submitted to allow these claims to be adjudicated upon by the Native Land Court. Their claims were heard, and they were well satisfied with the result; and yielding to the persuasion of the co-claimants of other tribes, joined in the sale, and received their share of the money. Ample reserves have been set apart for the Natives, which are not included in the figures quoted above.

The transactions within the Province of Auckland, completed since the 30th June, 1875, are—at a total cost of £103,009 12s. 11d. (inclusive of survey and incidental expenses), at an average price of 2s. 5½d. per acre.

The total results of the land purchases in the Auckland Province since 1872 are as follows:—

In the Hawke's Bay District no purchases have been made during the year.

In Wellington fair progress has been made, and several purchases have been satisfactorily completed. I would, however, point out that the quantities as set forth in last year's Statement were greatly over-estimated. Since then surveys have been made, and the actual acreage ascertained. I will allude to this subject again presently.

The transactions completed since 30th June, 1875, amount to 58,425 acres.

The total of the purchases in the Wellington Province amount to 440,927 acres, at a cost of £58,409 13s., or 2s. 8d. per acre, including all expenses.

The area of the land surveyed during the past year was 69,113 acres. A large amount of survey work has to be done before the whole of the transactions in this district can be correctly computed. The area of land handed over to local administration amounts to 179,944 acres.

In the Taranaki Province the engagements that stood open on the 30th June, 1875, have, during the past year, been completed. Since then arrangements for acquiring 41,252 acres have been entered into. Negotiations have also been begun for the purchase of several large blocks of heavily timbered land estimated to contain about 200,000 acres.

The purchases completed during the past year amount to 82,381 acres, making a total for the Taranaki District of 252,880 acres, at a cost of £36,393 0s. 3d., about 2s. 10½d. per acre. The lands handed over to be administered under local land laws were 87,269 acres.

Recapitulation of land purchases in the several provinces which have been completed:—

The lands held under lease are in the Province of Auckland, and amount to 339,499 acres. So that the completed transactions, including the leases, cover an area of 2,109,471 acres.

To give some idea of the extent of the work completed, I may mention that 245 deeds, representing 1,924,602 acres, have been received in Wellington, and have been deposited in the Crown Lands Office.

When it is considered that each block, however small, involved a great deal of time and patience, unlike similar negotiations with Europeans, the result as shown above may, I think, be considered very satisfactory.

I will now say a few words on the uncompleted transactions. In the district to the north of Auckland, there are twenty-seven blocks, representing 57,536 acres, which have been surveyed, and are awaiting investigation in the Native Land Court. On these lands advances have been made. As soon as the Court has decided upon the proper Native owners, there is no reason why these should not be completed immediately after. There are twelve other blocks to the north of Auckland, not included in the above, now being surveyed, and which also will be submitted to the Native Land Court, and closed as soon as practicable.

The incomplete transactions for the purchase and lease of lands are as follows:—

I have not included in these figures the estimated 200,000 acre blocks in the Taranaki Province. The land purchase transactions last year, in a return laid before Parliament last Session, show as follow:—

At the close of the year ended 30th June, 1876, the several purchases and leases are as follow:—

From the above figures, as compared with those given last year, it would appear that the negotiations entered into during the year represent only 96,783 acres; but this is not the case, the actual area brought under negotiation being 573,916 acres. The difference is explained by the fact that some areas approximately given in last year's return have in certain instances proved less, on actual survey, than the estimate.

For instance, in Auckland the areas were under estimated by 45,650 acres, whereas in Wellington the land was over estimated by 506,033 acres, in Hawke's Bay by 15,000 acres, and in Taranaki by 1,750 acres, making an actual difference of 477,133 acres over estimated. The deficiency is, however, more than made up by the transactions of the present year, which are stated thus:—

The following is a summary of the transactions completed last year:—

General Summary.

The several purchases and leases completed and incomplete up to the 30th June last, and the total expenditure, are shown in the following table:—

—a total area of 6,284,250 acres, equal to one-fifth of the entire area of the North Island, on which has been paid the sum of £445,404 2s. 1d.

The unexpended balance of the £700,000 voted by the General Assembly for the acquisition of land in the North Island was, on the 30th of June last, £254,595 17s. 11d.

The balances available to complete outstanding liabilities and new purchases that may be undertaken are—

As I before observed, a great deal of the delay in concluding the early purchases was from the want of a properly-organized staff of surveyors, as required under the provisions of the Native Land Act of 1873. But the difficulty was in a great measure removed by the energy of the Inspector of Surveys and the officers working under him. By his report, which has been laid on the table, it will be seen that a great deal of work has been done by his department. I will give his figures:—

Surveys in progress—

It will be seen by honorable members from the foregoing statement that the Government has not relaxed in its efforts during the past year to acquire on reasonable terms an estate for the North Island which, as immigration and settlement progress, will be found valuable for colonizing purposes.

Part 1.—Negotiations Completed.

Part II.—Negotiations in Progress.

Part I.—Negotiations Completed.

[In cases where the negotiations have been completed during the past year the name of the block is printed in italics.]

Part II.—Negotiations In Progress.

Part III.—General Expenses.

Part IV.—Recapitulation.

Native Office, Wellington, 18th September, 1878.

Part III.—General Expenses.

Part IV.—Recapitulation.

No. 1. The CHIEF PROTECTOR to Mr. EDWARD MEURANT.

Manukau.—Land Offered for Sale. Protector's Office, Auckland, 12th January, 1842
SIR,—

The chiefs Tihi and others having offered to sell to Her Majesty's Government a tract of country, situated on the Manukau, I am directed by His Excellency the Governor to instruct you to proceed to that district and ascertain as far as possible the extent of the land they propose selling, the names of the boundary lines, the quality of the land, and its locality, with reference to land claimed by Mr. Fairburn, and the land of and about Awaroa, and furnish me with a report on the same immediately on your return.

You will find the chief's sons ready to accompany you, and point out the boundary lines. You will endeavor to ascertain whether any other land besides that purchased by Mr. Fairburn has been sold in the neighborhood, and carefully exclude as a portion of the purchase any such lands; and, lastly, you will give publicity to the natives in the vicinity of the object of your visit.

I have, &c.,

GEORGE CLARKE.

Mr. E. Meurant.

The CHIEF PROTECTOR to the Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Pukaki.—Offer of Land. Protector's Office, Auckland, 24th January, 1842.
SIR,—

I have the honor to inform you that the chief Tihi and others propose to sell to Her Majesty's Government a tract of country situated on the east side of the Manukau, containing thirty thousand (30,000) acres, more or less, for the sum of four hundred pounds, six horses, two bags of flour, and two bags of sugar.

I have, &c.,

GEORGE CLARKE, Chief Protector.

The Hon. the Colonial Secretary.

Governor's Minute.

Mr. Clark is requested to revise this letter by stating in full the boundary of the land purchased on the Manukau.

W. H.
1st February, 1844.

No. 3. The CHIEF PROTECTOR to the Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Manukau.—Boundaries of Land already Purchased. Protector's Office, Auckland, 3rd February, 1842.
SIR,—

Referring to His Excellency the Governor's note of February 1st, requesting a revision of my letter, stating full the boundary of the land purchased on the Manukau, I do myself the honor to forward the following description to be appended thereto, of the land purchased from Te Tihi, copied from the deed duly executed and signed by Te Tihi himself:—The northern boundary commences at a place called Otaimake (on the Manukau); from thence to Patoetoe; from thence to Wairata, Ohutu, and Ratahi. The southern line commences at Waipapa and is formed by Te Mata to Whararuhara, Hopu Hopu, Tara-komuku, and the Kaurikaranga; the western line by Otaimske along the Manukau, until it reaches Waipapa. The eastern line is formed by Puketutu, Weraroa, Te Mura and Te Rape. A place Waimihia included in these boundaries is reserved for themselves.

I have, &c.,

GEORGE CLARKE, Chief Protector.

The Hon. the Colonial Secretary.

No. 4. The CHIEF PROTECTOR to the Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Manukau.—Purchase Money for Pukaki. Protector's Office, Auckland, May 24th, 1842.
SIR,—

I have the honor to inform you that the native chief Tihi, and the party with him, who disputed the land which he sold to Her Majesty's Government at Pukaki on the Manukau, have arrived, and are anxious that the remaining part of the payment due for the said land—viz., two hundred pounds and four horses, be paid at your earliest convenience.

I have, &c.,

THOMAS S. FORSAITH, Sub-Protector. (for the Chief Protector).

The Hon. the Colonial Secretary.

No. 5. The CHIEF PROTECTOR to the Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Te Karaka.—Offer of Land. Protector's Office, Auckland, 27th May, 1842.
SIR,—

I have the honor to lay before you for the information of His Excellency the Governor, a proposition from the chief Jabez Bunting and others, to sell a portion of land known as "Te Karaka," situate on the Manukau, near Papakura, containing about two thousand (2,000) acres, more or less.

As I expect Jabez Bunting here shortly, I would beg to be made acquainted with His Excellency's pleasure with regard to this offer at your earliest convenience.

I have, &c.,

GEORGE CLARKE, Chief Protector.

The Hon. the Colonial Secretary.

The Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY to the CHIEF PROTECTOR.

Pukaki.—Authorizing Balance for Purchase of Land. Colonial Secretary's Office, Auckland, 27th May, 1842.
SIR,—

With reference to your letter of the 24th instant, reporting the arrival of the native chief Tihi, with his party, for the purpose of settling the balance of two hundred pounds and four horses, due from Her Majesty's Government for the purchase of land at Pukaki on the east side of the Manukau, I have the honor to inform you that His Excellency the Governor has been pleased to sanction the same, and the necessary instructions have accordingly been issued for carrying it into effect.

I have, &c.,

WILLOUGHBY SHORTLAND.

The Chief Protector of Aborigines.

Enclosure 1.

Ihaka's Receipt.

RECEIVED by us the sum of two hundred pounds sterling, and two horses, as balance of payment for our land.

IHAKA TE MANIA.

Witness—A. KENNEDY.
January 28th, 1842.

Enclosure 2.

Tihi's Receipt.

RECEIVED by us two horses for a portion of our land at Papakura, or as balance of the payment for it.

The mark x of TIHI.

Witness—GEORGE CLARKE, C.P.A.

No. 7. The CHIEF PROTECTOR to the Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Manukau.—Offers of land by Kaihau. Protector's Office, Auckland, 17th August, 1842.

SIR,—

With reference to the tract of land offered for sale by the Chief Kaihau and others, estimated to contain twenty thousand acres, a sketch of which has been lately forwarded to you, I have the honor to inform you that the chiefs are willing to alienate the said lands for the sum of Five hundred pounds sterling: but as some considerable time will probably elapse 'ere the purchase can be finally adjusted in consequence of instructions lately received from your office relative to this subject, they are desirous that a deposit of One hundred pounds be paid down as security.

I should strongly recommend the adoption of this line of proceeding in reference to purchases of land made from the Aboriginies, as it tends to allay their natural impatience, whilst it gives them ample assurance of the fulfilment of the contract.

I have, &c.,

GEORGE CLARKE,

The Hon. the Colonial Secretary Chief Protector.

No. 8. The Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY to the CHIEF PROTECTOR.

Sanctioning purchase of land between Manukau and Waikato. Colonial Secretary's Office, Auckland, 29th August, 1842.

SIR,—

In reply to your letter of the 16th instant, No. 65, in which you state that the Native Chief, Kaihau, is desirous to sell to Her Majesty's Government, a tract of land situate between Manukau and Waikato, estimated to contain thirty thousand acres (30,000) for the sum of (£500), and request that a deposit may be paid to the natives at once, as an assurance of the intention of Government to complete the purchase when the transaction has been finally adjusted; I do myself the honor to acquaint you by direction of the Governor, that the Colonial Treasurer has been instructed to prepare as early as possible for His Excellency's signature a warrant for the sum of fifty pounds (£50), and to impress the same against your name until the purchase has been completed and the deed for the land lodged in this office.

In order to ascertain the boundaries of the contemplated purchase, for insertion in the deed of conveyance, the Surveyor General has been requested to direct a surveyor to accompany Mr. Meurant and the natives over the land, and to report accordingly.

You will therefore have the goodness to instruct Mr. Meurant to put himself in communication with the officer, whom the Surveyor-General may appoint, in order to arrange the time and mode of carrying this order into execution.

I am further commanded to inform you that any portion of the stipulated payment, which the natives may be disposed to take in goods from the Colonial Store, will be duly issued upon your requisition.

I have, &c.,

WILLOUGHBY SHORTLAND.

The Chief Protector of Aborigines.

No. 9. The CHIEF PROTECTOR to Rev. JOHN WHITELEY.

Te Karaka Block—Disputes as to Sale of Protector's Office, Auckland, December 7th, 1842.
SIR,—

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your's, dated Kawhia, October 8th, 1842, conveying to me information of complaints preferred by Jabez Bunting and his friends against Kaihau and others for illegally disposing of portions of land known by the names of Te Karaka and Ruwaimoko, and in reply beg to acquaint you that Te Karaka has not been purchased by the Government, and is not included in the boundaries of that under engagement of sale by Kaihau. With reference to their remaining disputes, I may state that, prior to the engagements with Kaihau being closed, the Chiefs Weteri and Waata who were present when appealed to by Katipa, of Kaihau's party, acknowledged that the boundaries specified were perfectly correct, so that Jabez's objections appear altogether frivolous.

I have, &c.,

GEORGE CLARKE, Chief Protector Aborigines

John Whiteley, Kawhia.

No. 10. The CHIEF PROTECTOR to the Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Transmitting Deed of Land, Sold by Ngatiteata. Protector's Office, Auckland, December 9, 1843.
SIR,—

I have the honor to forward the enclosed deed with a translation, being a conveyance by Kaihau and others of the Ngatiteata tribe of a certain block of land therein described, situate between Manukau and Waikato, to

Her Majesty's Government.

This purchase has been completed according to the terms authorized in your letter of August 29th, 1842. The land in question appears to have belonged to several tribes. I consider the titles of two of the principal of these claimants, viz., the Ngatiteata and the Ngotiamao, to be extinguished by the accompanying deed, but I question whether that of the Ngatipo is so; as however the consideration given is considerably within the ratio that has been estimated as the cost of land per acre, there will be ample funds in the hands of the Government to meet any other equitable demands that may be made.

There have been several reserves pointed out and guaranteed to the Natives, which it will be necessary to have defined, and it should be clearly understood that all Native cultivations are excluded.

I have, &c.,

GEORGE CLARKE, Chief Protector.

The Hon. the Colonial Secretary.

No. 11. The CHIEF PROTECTOR to the SURVEYOR-GENERAL.

Mr. Meurant to visit Weteri. Protector's Office, Auckland, 13th December, 1843.

SIR,—

By a communication received from the Colonial Secretary's Office, dated 11th instant, I have been informed that the services of Mr. Meurant have been transferred to your department. In a subsequent communication, however, from the Secretary's office, I am requested to instruct Mr. Meurant to visit Wiremu Weteri to acquaint him that his Excellency will not consent to withdraw from his engagement. But, presuming these directions concerning Mr. Meurant to have been inadvertently forwarded to me, as that gentleman had been previously removed from my department, I do myself the honor to submit the entire clauses to you in order that the wishes of his Excellency may be carried out:—

"I am at the same time to request that you will have the goodness to instruct Mr. Meurant to visit Wiremu Weteri, and apprise him that His Excellency will not consent to his withdrawing from his engagement, and must hold him answerable for any breach of the peace. You will also request Mr. Meurant to communicate with Jabez Bunting, who his Excellency considers may have sufficient influence over his uncle to induce him to remain quiet."

I have, &c.,

GEORGE CLARKE,

The Surveyor-General, &c.

Chief Protector, Aborigines.

The Hon. the SURVEYOR GENERAL to the Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Kahawai Block offered for Sale: 10,000 acres. Surveyor General's Office, 5th May, 1847.
SIR,—

I have the honor to report for the information of His Excellency, the Lieutenant-Governor, that Te Wherowhero, Wetere, and Kati, Native Chiefs from Waikato and Manukau, have applied to me to purchase, on the part of Government, a block of land on the south shore of Manukau Harbor, called Kahawai, estimated roughly to contain ten thousand acres, and are anxious to have an answer for which they are waiting in Auckland.

It is bounded on the north and east by Government land.

On the west by a creek of the Manukau, called Wharehono.

On the south by native land.

I understand that the principal reason that induces them to offer the land for sale, is, because it is tapued and useless to the natives, being sacred to them but not to Europeans. The children of Te Wherowhero are buried there, as well as the late Captain Kent, who lived with one of this Chief's daughters.

I have every reason to believe that Katipa, a Chief of Manukau, has claims to the land offered for sale, and he should, I consider, be made a party to the transaction, should His Excellency, the Lieutenant-Governor, approve of purchasing it.

I think it would be a desirable acquisition to the Government, as it abuts on Crown Land, is well situated with reference to the portage between the Manukau and Waikato, and would be some of the first land required if the European population should increase in this neighborhood.

I have, &c.,

C. W. W. LIGAR, Surveyor General.

The Hon. the Colonial Secretary.

Governor's Minute.

Dr. SINCLAIR,—

I have no objection to a negotiation, for the purchase of this land, being entered into by the Surveyor-General, care being taken that all the native chiefs, having a claim to it, are made parties to the sale.

May 6th, 1847.

G. GREY.

Manukau—In reference to Mangere. Orakei, February 12th, 1849. To Te Wherowhero and Governor Sir George Grey.
Friends!

Mr. Geddes has come to me, saying that his land has been given to Kati. We told him that we had no authority over this matter. We gave the land to Mr. Geddes after his giving us property for it, as a place for him and his heirs for ever. Friends! our hearts are very troubled about this matter.

From your Friend,

TE KEENE.

THE writer is one of the Ngatiwhatua tribe, who sold the land now occupied, or rather laid out as a Native village at Mangere; the real grievance being that the future occupants are to be a tribe or tribes from Waikato, and hence the jealousy of the writer and some of his tribe.

C. W. W. LIGAR.

10th March, 1849,

No. 14. The NATIVE INTERPRETER JOHNSON to the SURVEYOR-GENERAL.

Manukau—As to Weteri's claim to Mangere. Native Secretary's Office, 23rd July, 1852.
SIR,—

In compliance with the directions I received, I saw Te Kauwau and the Ngatiwhatua tribe on the subject of Weteri's claim to the land at Mangere, who stated that he had no recognized right to any part of that district, but that they had originally sprung from a common ancestor; that Weteri did not allow Kauwau any share of the money he got by the sale of land on the south side of Manukau; therefore the, Ngatiwhatua did not admit Weteri's claim to the land on this side; that even Weteri had no claim to Ihumatao, where he now resides, except through him, Te Kauwau, who had been born there, and had always regarded that place as his property; while on the other hand Weteri and his party had been separated from them for generations, and transferred their claims to other parts of the country, on the south side of Manukau, and in Waikato.

He however told me to say, that if the Governor had no objection to allow Weteri Twenty Pounds (£20), or even half that sum, for any claim he might fancy to arise from their having sprung from a common ancestor, that he Te Kauwau, would not raise any objection, although Weteri had never allowed Te Kauwau to participate in the proceeds of the sale of lands elsewhere sold by Weteri and derived from the same ancestor through whom Weteri now claims Mangere.

That recently, during the last survey of Mangere, on hearing of Weteri's claim, he had gone there with Te Wherewhero, and remonstrated with Weteri on his conduct, and that Weteri had then publicly confessed his error and promised to relinquish their claims; but he supposed that Weteri wanted money and was trying it again.

On arriving at Ihumatao, I was informed that neither Epiha nor Weteri were there; but having assembled the Natives of the place and questioned them, I found their statements corroborated that of Te Kauwau. They were unable to point out any particular piece of land claimed by Weteri, but said that Weteri, having sprung from a common ancestor with Te Kauwau had a general claim on all lands sold by Te Kauwau on the north side of Gedde's line, but none on that sold by Mohi to Mr. Jackson; and that if Weteri did not receive a payment, he would drive Major Greenwood off. They were not excited on the subject, and I merely regarded this as a threat to extort a payment.

I have, &c.,

JOHN GRANT JOHNSTON, Interpreter.

The Surveyor-General, &c.

No. 15. Mr. INTERPRETER JOHNSON to the SURVEYOR-GENERAL.

Manukau.—Wetere's Claim to Mangere. Native Secretary's Office, 28th July, 1852.

SIR,—

I have the honor to report that, in accordance with your directions. I again yesterday went to Ihumatao, carrying with me the £25 which Wetere had consented to take on Saturday, but repudiated again on Monday morning, calling at Orakei on the way, where I obtained the assistance of the chief Te Wiremu (the principal owner and seller of the land to Mr. Tinlay) to accompany me, and use his endeavours to stay the proceedings of Wetere.

We first saw Jabez Bunting (Epiha) and his party, who, I was pleased to find, entirely disapproved of the conduct of Wetere, stating that if he committed any overt act he could not expect any of them to assist him. Their words were these:—"Verily we believe him to be mad." With this chief I left the Twenty-five pounds (£25), as he promised to exert himself by every means in his power to make Wetere accept the money. Finding that Wetere had not arrived, I remained at Ihu Matao that night, and this morning saw Waata and the other natives at the pa. The tenor of their remarks were to the same effect as those of Jabez Bunting, that they thought Wetere altogether wrong and were in no way inclined to assist him. I then went to Omarangi, and counselled the Natives there who promised to stand aloof from Wetere: here a few young men shewed a troublesome spirit, but were speedily silenced by the arguments of the Ngatiwhatua chief who accompanied me.

I was at this point just preparing to return when we perceived Wetere carrying a taiaha or long spear in his hand, approaching the premises of Major Greenwood. I immediately crossed the creek towards Major Greenwood's tents with a view of arresting Wetere in his purpose, whereupon he passed by me without making any remark and went across the creek to the Native settlement which I had just left.

We then held a general meeting of the Natives at Omarangi, where they told Wetere openly what they had previously told myself; and further, that he had been quarrelling with all the Natives, and no wonder he now quarrelled with the Europeans; and before leaving, they intimated their intention to me of holding a general meeting to put him down.

Wetere was at first very violent, but gradually relaxed when he found everyone against him. He called the Natives a parcel of slaves, and that he would burn their houses over their heads if they did not take part with him. He cited the conduct of Heke and Rangihaeata, and said, "Look what they have done, and still they have not been destroyed," and that he would follow their example. After a very lengthened discussion between Wetere and the Natives, in which he declared himself firm to his purpose, I returned; the Natives assuring me that Wetere dare not so far outrage public opinion as to commit any aggression at present.

On my way home I passed through Major Greenwood's premises, and told his overseer that perhaps Wetere might come over and threaten them; that if he did so, he would most probably be single handed, and that their best plan was to allow him to talk, and go on with their work without taking any notice of him.

I have, &c.,

JOHN GRANT JOHNSON, Interpreter.

The Surveyor-General, &c.

No. 16. Mr. INTERPRETER JOHNSON to the SURVEYOR GENERAL.

Manukau.—Native claims at Mangere. Native Secretary's Office, 9th August, 1852.
SIR,—

I have the honor to report to you that not finding Te Whero Whero at Mangere, I followed him to the Big Muddy Creek on the Manukau, where he was engaged in cutting out a monster canoe wherein to carry away the remains to Waikato of the Chief Kati, interred at Mangere.

On communicating to him the purport of my visit, and after having read the letter from the Native Secretary, he expressed himself satisfied. He said "he was aware that some of the natives had endeavored to make difficulties with a view of inducing him to leave Mangere, but that their schemes would be of no avail as he was determined not to relinquish that place on account of remarks made by any of the natives; but that if the Government had wished him he would have left it at once." I explained to him that the matter would now be set at rest by his receiving a Crown Grant, by which his possession would be similar to that of the Europeans to their lands: at which the chief and the rest of the tribe seemed greatly pleased.

Te Whero Whero stated that he had always been, and intended to be, a staunch friend to the Government; that he carried the weight of the principal chiefs in the country with him, who were all firm in their adherence to the Queen; and that while such was the case, nothing was to be apprehended from men like Wetere, who was one of themselves, but whose conduct was so unreasonable that none of them would support him. He further observed that the agitation which had been raised about lands had for its sole object the extortion of money, on the part of people who had either participated formerly in the payment of the same lands they now claimed, or whose indirect connection with the owners of the lands was so remote as not to constitute a valid claim at all, and ought to be treated by the Government with indifference. He did not, however, think they would persevere because their party was so small compared with the great body of the natives, that if they did so, they would inevitably meet with disaster.

He also intimated his intention of embodying in writing, for His Excellency's information, the names of the chiefs and tribes over whom his influence extends, who would respond to his call and who were firmly united to support himself and the Government, and finally, that if anything was going forward amongst the natives of sufficient importance to claim the attention of Government, he would not fail to give the earliest authentic information.

I have, &c.,

JOHN GRANT JOHNSON, Interpreter.

C. W. Ligar, Esq., Surveyor General.

WAATA KUKUTAI, to HIS EXCELLENCY the LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR.

Manukau.—Offering to sell Te Awaroa and other places. Waikato, 4th November, 1852.>
FRIEND THE GOVERNOR,—

Salutations to you! Friend, the following are our words to you, that you may be informed, concerning our land, named Paetawa, Whakapapa, Te Waihoroi kiore, Awaroa, for all that piece—for Taki Nikau—which is being stolen by Ngatiteata. Therefore we are concerned about the stealthy work of Te Katipa regarding our land. We know that his work is a wrong work, his work by stealth. Now we beg to inform you that we are willing to give up these large pieces of land to you; and, if you approve, write it in a letter to us. Now this is another word we have for you. Should the Ngatiteata arrive to speak with you concerning these lands, do not attend to them, to their speech. They are stealing our land. Beware of that man, Katipa; he is a thief. Do not give away your goods for nothing. If a European steals property or money, is he not judged for his misdeeds, for his theft? Is not that your law? Be aware that the following are the names of the chiefs of the Ngatitipa, the owners of the land, viz., Eruete, Hura Makape, Matenga, Hohepa, Po, Arama Karaka, Niui, Terawhiti, Mohi, Ruka, Paua, Paeturi, Ruihana, Pakanae, Te Kawhena. Thus you see what a number of chiefs there are of Ngatitipa; twenty chiefs, to whom the land belongs. That is all.

From, &c.,

WAATA KUKUTAI.

Memorandum.

The lands alluded to in this letter are on the east side of Waiuku, and include Foley's claim, the circumstances connected with which are mentioned in my report, dated November, 1851, on claims at Waiuku. As far as I can learn, the writer's claims are valid, and as they are a party who have always opposed the sale of land to the Europeans, but have now come forward to offer land for sale, it would be attended with good effect, if a purchase were made from them, absorbing the claim of Foley, of which a portion has been sold to Mr. Codlin, provided they can settle with Katipa. The land offered is very desirable.

JOHN G. JOHNSON, Interpreter.
8th November, 1852.

Memorandum.

The land is adjoining the village lately laid out at Waiuku, and part of this land has already been sold to a settler named Codlin. This land was originally sold by the Chief Katipa, but the writer of this letter, by name Ruihana, one of the most turbulent chiefs of the Waikato district, disputes this sale, and, I understand, brought upwards of 100 men to Codlin's place, and cut down part of his fence.

C. L. NUGENT, Native Secretary.
10th November, 1852.

This must be referred to the Surveyor-General for a report.

R. H. W., Lieutenant-Governor.
27th November, 1852.

Report.

Any land offered for sale in the vicinity of the Awaroa, should, I think, be bought. To accept of this offer would, as Mr. Johnson states, absorb a claim preferred by the Ngatitipa upon a part of Foley's claim, and finally settle that question. When Katipa failed to wrest a part of Foley's claim from the Government by his misrepresentations, he thought of throwing it into the land claimed by the party who have written this letter. If a quiet title can be procured for any or all of the land remaining in that district, it is desirable. When Mr. Johnson goes to Rama Rama, he might be authorized to negotiate for this land.

C. W. W. LIGAR, Surveyor General. 7th December, 1852. Approved, as suggested by the Surveyor-General, if Mr. Johnson can be spared.

R. H. W., Lieutenant-Governor.
13th December, 1852.

Manukau—Respecting the Waiuku Block. Native Secretary's Office, 1st January, 1853.
SIR,—

I have the honor to report that after having settled the limits of the Rama Rama purchase, I proceeded to negotiate for the land in the district of Waiuku offered by the Ngatitipa, as directed in the Hon. the Colonial Secretary's B.C. 52/1265.

I found that this block was the joint property of the Ngatitipa, the Ngatitahinga, the Ngatitamaoho, and the Ngatitehinga tribes, or in other words that these four tribes had all claims on the land. The three former of whom unanimously agreed to dispose of it to the Crown, but the sale was opposed by Katipa, Chief of Ngatiteata as will be seen by the enclosed letter which I received from Te Katipa, which I beg to forward with a copy of the answer I returned to that Chief.

To have rejected the offer on this account would have given offence to the three first mentioned tribes, who are the acknowledged proprietors; I therefore thought it most prudent to bring about an amicable understanding between them and Te Katipa before I either decidedly accepted or rejected their offer, and having obtained the consent of the other tribes to allow Katipa to participate in the sale and receive a share of the payment, which I am given to understand is what he in reality wants. I employed a Chief named Karaka, who acts as a neutral negotiator and peace maker in all the Native differences in the Waikato river, to settle this difficulty before proceeding to mark the land or take further steps in the matter, and I feel confident that from these measures, his consent will be fully obtained in a few days.

State of Lower Waikato.

This block of land is of first rate quality, and considerable in size. These tribes whom I visited on the Waikato appeared satisfied, and warm in their expressions of attachment to the Government, and all along the river their crops of wheat were flourishing and large in extent compared with those of former years.

I also beg to transmit a letter from the Chief of Ngatitipa to His Excellency on this subject.

I have, &c.,

JOHN GRANT JOHNSON, Interpreter.

The Native Secretary, &c.

Mr. INTERPRETER JOHNSON to the SURVEYOR-GENERAL.

Manukau.—Pukekohe Block. Auckland, 7th May, 1853.
SIR,—

I have the honor to enclose for your information the result of my enquiries relative to the disputed portion of Pukekohe, and request information as to what further steps I am to take in the matter.

I have, &c.,

JOHN G. JOHNSON, Interpreter.

Memorandum.

Purchased from Ngatiteata in 1842.

Pukekohe was offered for sale by Waaka Kaihau and the Ngatiteata, in August, 1842, and payments in cash and goods were made to that tribe to the amount of £320.

This purchase was immediately opposed by the Ngatitamaoho, the Ngatimahanga and the Ngatihaua, who espoused the cause of their relations Mohi and tribe, (the present claimants) whose ancestor Te Whare Aitu was the most recent owner of Pukekohe, for although the block could not have been acquired without extinguishing the claims of the Ngatiteata, the testimony of all the principal natives in the country goes to support Mohi as the party having the strongest claim. A continued opposition was maintained by Mohi's party until the close of the year, 1852, when Mohi's supporters, the Ngatitamaoho, proposed to give a great feast to the chiefs of Waikato, and to make large presents to them, which presents were to be procured by the sale to Government of two tracts of land, viz., Ramarama and Waiau. The sale of these lands was, however, opposed by the Ngatiteata, and mutual concessions were made between the two parties, the Ngatiteata withdrawing their opposition from Ramarama and Waiau, on the understanding that the other party were to withdraw their claims from Pukekohe: with a proviso that a share of the remaining payment should be made to satisfy Mohi's claim.

These engagements were entered into in writing, by both parties by the document, a translated copy of which is annexed.

The Ngatiteata then received a further payment of £100: and at the Remuera feast the above arrangements were finally completed by a payment of six casks of tobacco to Mohi, which was distributed amongst his supporters.

These facts are all admitted by the natives.

From the perusal of the foregoing it will be seen that Mohi, though the principal owner, has actually received a very small payment for this land: and in consideration of these circumstances the Government have offered him and his adherents £200 in satisfaction of all their claims: but as they have been sellers of small pieces of land under the pre-emption proclamation for considerable prices, which they seem to regard as the standard value of land, they will not consent to the terms offered them.

JOHN GRANT JOHNSON, Interpreter.

Manukau.—Respecting Purchase of Maro-o-Hinewai Block. Native Secretary's Office, 14th May, 1853.
SIR,—

I have the honor to report that, in accordance with the Surveyor-General's instructions, I proceeded on the 11th instant to Tuimata and assembled the natives, who offered the Maro-o-Hinewai for sale, and obtained the consent of the three parties concerned—Pepene, for the Papakura tribe; Te Nga, for those of Maketu; and Haimona, for the resident natives of Tuimata, as well as the Ngatiteata, to whom they are related.

Boundaries.

We then perambulated the boundaries which are defined, being situated between the Government blocks of Ramarama and Pukekohe, and which I have more particularly described in the Land Purchase Book at the office of the Surveyor-General, and containing about Three thousand (3,000) acres, more or less.

I have not been able to fix a price with the natives. They demand Three hundred (£300), but I think they may be induced to accept £250. I have arranged with them to meet at the Survey Office, on Monday next, to complete the sale.

I have, &c.,

JOHN GRANT JOHNSON.

The Native Secretary, &c.

Manukau.—Respecting Pukekohe and other Blocks. Native Secretary's Office, 14th June, 1853.
SIR,—

I have the honor to report to you that, after having marked the boundaries and negotiated for the tract of land called Tirikohua, as detailed in my letter of the 2nd instant, I determined the boundaries of the Pukekohe purchase on the Waikato side, the extreme end of which place I found occupied by the Ngatikarewa tribe (a branch of the Ngatipo tribe), and arranged with them to meet me in Auckland on the 20th instant, to settle on the amount of payment they would take for the final adjustment of their claims.

Pukekohe.

This tribe now assert their right to the south side of Pukekohe, independently of Moses, and as they do not appear to have been parties to the former sale, I would respectfully suggest, for the consideration of the Government, the propriety of liquidating their claims, in conjunction with those of the Aketai, by a payment not exceeding an equivalent amount to that formerly paid to the Ngatiteata for the reasons stated in the enclosed memo on the Pukekohe purchase, and the claims thereon. I have subsequently received an offer of a valuable tract of country lying between Tirikohua and Tuakau. The demands of the owners have been as yet too extravagant to be acceded to, but should the Government be pleased to order me to proceed in the negotiations for this tract, I entertain no doubt of being able to curtail their demands to a reasonable amount; and should this be accomplished, and the purchase completed, it would have the effect of confining the Tuakau natives to a reserve (not excessive in quantity) to the land they actually require, and to concentrate their energies in the agricultural pursuits in which they are now embarking in conjunction with the new flour mill in course of erection at Tuakau.

On the 4th instant, I proceeded to Te Puni, and met the native claimants, Epiha and Pera, on the ground; and in conjunction with them marked the boundaries of the block—commencing at the Roto and extending to the Waikato—obtaining an extension of the original boundary from them of several thousand acres, as delineated on the enclosed sketch, the extent of the whole being Eight thousand (8,000) or 9,000 acres. This part of the country is not of so available a character as that about Tuakau, being more hilly and broken, in consideration of which I beg to suggest that a sum not exceeding £175 would be just and reasonable satisfaction for these claimants to this tract.

Having performed the foregoing part of my instructions, I next proceeded up the Waikato with Haimona Paetae and others, to mark the boundaries of the land lately sold by him and the Chief Wetere, known as Mataheka. On arrival there we found that a feast had just taken place at Whangamarino, at which a large number of the Waikato natives were present under the Te Wharepu, and fierce discussions had occurred relative to the disputes among them about Waerenga (a large tract of country extending from the Waikari lake to the Thames).

The chiefs had, at this meeting, unanimously determined to lay a tapu on the whole of this district, extending from Mangatawhiri on the west side to the frith of the Thames, for the purpose of preventing any of the individual members of the tribe selling any portion of this country, as they think that individual natives assert urgent claims for land for the purpose of obtaining them for sale. They assemble to meet us to the number of 200 or 300 men, and appeared very firm in their purpose; so much so, that I think any attempt at present to acquire this tract would not be attended with success, and only tend to foment their quarrels amongst themselves, which are now assuming a serious aspect. Te Whero Whero is at present in Waikato, endeavoring to obtain from the Ngatihaua a recognition of his claim to Waerenga; and has stated that should the adverse party persevere in its pretensions, he will sanction an appeal to arms in the coming summer. Under these circumstances I deemed it prudent not to urge the point with reference to Mataheka, but to suggest that the Chief Weteri be requested to return the instalment of £80 which he has received, until the excitement amongst the natives in this part of the country has subsided. Weteri does not, however, appear to be to blame in the matter, as the opposing party acknowledged his right to certain parts of Mataheka—although they would not allow the compact which had been entered into by all the chiefs to be broken.

Having performed the duties directed in the instructions I have received up to this date, I left Waikato on the 10th, and returned to Auckland via the Thames on the 13th instant.

I have, &c.,

JOHN GRANT JOHNSON, Interpreter.

The Native Secretary, Auckland.

Manukau—Respecting Claims of Ihaka to Oruarangi. Land Purchase Department, Auckland, 1st November, 1854.

ANNEXED is Mr. Johnson's report in reference to an application of a native by the name of Ihaka, for a piece of land at Mangere, forwarded to this office by the Native Secretary (Major Nugent), October, 1854.

H. T. KEMP.

The land alluded to is Oruarangi, a small patch about seventy acres in extent, to the West of Mangere farms, and separated by a creek bearing that name from the native reserve at Ihumatao, to which it may be said to be contiguous, and to form a part. Jabez and Weteri claimed it in common with the writer, but it having been sold to Geddes by the Ngatiwhatua, the real owners, it reverted to the Crown when it took possession of the surplus of the Geddes-Imlay claim. The Surveyor-General allowed the natives I have mentioned to occupy it as an act of grace—it being expedient to do so—during the troubles that took place on the location of Mangere in 1851; and I recommended him not to purchase their claims over it. I have heard—but I cannot vouch for the truth of the report—that private Europeans have given Weteri, &c., a douceur to let it fall again into the hands of Government.

The Ngatiwhatua would not like a payment being made on account of this land; but if Mr. Ligar has done anything more about it, it has been done while I have been at the North, and I have no cognizance of the same.

I have, &c.,

JOHN GRANT JOHNSON, District Commissioner.

Donald McLean, Esq., &c.

No. 23. Mr. COMMISSIONER KEMP (Acting for the Chief Commissioner) to the Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Waiuku.—Has paid the Sum of £1,500 on account of that Block. Land Purchase Department, Auckland, 14th November, 1854.

SIR,—

I have the honor to report for the information of His Excellency the Officer Administering the Government, that, with a view to carrying out arrangements which had been entered into by Mr. Commissioner McLean for the extinguishment of a number of native claims to the Waiuku Block, the sum of Fifteen hundred pounds (£1,500) has been paid to them under the following circumstances.

On the day before Mr. McLean's departure for the South, it was understood that the Native tribes to whom I now refer were willing to accept a sum of Twelve hundred pounds (£1,200) for the extinction of their claims; but, on the succeeding day, fresh demands were made by them, and to a very much larger amount.

As an important claim had since arisen made by a Native chief named Epiha or Jabez, and the sum of Fifty pounds having been formerly promised to him by the Surveyor-General if he would surrender that claim, aware also that the Waiuku Block was much needed for the Province, and feeling, moreover, convinced, from the disposition evinced during the discussion, that so large a body of the Natives interested in the sale of this land could not soon again be brought together, and, if brought together, that the sum which they would now be induced to take would at any future time be rejected, the sum above mentioned, which appeared to be fair and reasonable, and sufficient to meet the different claims, was accepted by them, a deed having been duly executed and signed on the 11th inst., a translation of which shall be forwarded without delay. The reserves in the Waiuku Block have been all parambulated by Mr. White, in the presence of the Natives, and the surveyor, Mr. Ormsby, who has been engaged for some time in laying off the boundaries of the block, and of the Native reserves, which are not, however, quite finished. It would be very desirable, indeed, if His Excellency would be pleased So cause instructions to be sent to Mr. Ormsby to hasten the completion of the surveys of the reserves, in order that the block might, as soon as possible afterwards, be opened up for selection.

Mr. White, who has been chiefly employed in carrying out the details preparatory to the payments for the block, would be ready, as he has always been, to assist the surveyor, in the event of any difficulty arising. As this is a point of some importance, to be carried out by the surveyor as early as possible, I would venture to recommend it for His Excellency's consideration and approval.

I have, &c.,

H. T. KEMP, Native Secretary.

The Hon. the Colonial Secretary, Auckland.

No. 24. The CHIEF COMMISSIONER to the NATIVE SECRETARY, Auckland.

Waiuku.—Approval of preliminary steps taken. Land Commissioner's Office, Wellington, 5th February, 1855.
SIR,—

In reference to your letter to the Colonial Secretary of the 14th November last, reporting that you had paid the Natives the sum of £1,500 for the Waiuku Block, I have the honor to acquaint you that I entirely concur in the course which has been adopted by you as detailed in the above mentioned letter.

With regard to Epiha's claim for £50 on account of this land, it appears to me that, under the circumstances, and seeing that the sum had been previously promised by the Surveyor-General, the payment by you was perfectly right. At the same time, his father Wetere having taken part in the whole proceedings and received his full share of the purchase money, this claim of Epiha's has, in my opinion, no just foundation; and considering Mr. John White's intimate acquaintance with the Ngatitamahoho party, it is to be regretted that he did not interfere to prevent what I cannot help looking upon as an imposition on the part of Epiha.

If Mr. Ormsby is unable to conduct the survey of the Waiuku Block with sufficient rapidity to ensure its speedy preparation for settlement, the services of Major Russell should be made available to hasten its completion.

So soon as Mr. White and the surveyor can certify to you that the exterior boundaries and native reserves have been accurately surveyed, and that a plan is prepared to accompany your report, I would suggest that no time should be lost in having the land in question, in as far as this Department is concerned, thrown open for immediate occupation by the settlers.

I have, &c.,

DONALD MCLEAN, Chief Commissioner.

H. T. Kemp, Esq., Native Secretary, Auckland.

Manukau.—Claims of Wetere on Major Greenwood's Property arranged for. Land Purchase Department, Auckland, 12th June, 1855.
SIR,—

I have the honor to report to you for the information of His Excellency the Officer Administering the Government, that I have visited Major Greenwood's farm, near Mangere, to enquire into and adjust the claims of the Native Chief Wetere to certain lands that have been disposed of by the Crown in that vicinity.

The land respecting which a difference took place between Major Greenwood's overseer and Wetere forms a portion of about 69 acres at a place called Oruarangi which Wetere and his people have had under cultivation for years. I can find no evidence that Wetere was ever paid for this land. He always objected to the sale of it by Te Tawa, a chief of the Ngatiwhatua tribe. He has been offered payment, and I believe he has accepted some remuneration for a portion of Major Greenwood's property, but this particular spot and other portions of land, comprising altogether his conjoint interest with Te Tawa, to about One thousand two hundred acres in the places specified in a receipt herewith enclosed, has never been alienated by him.

Under these circumstances I deemed it advisable to pay this chief a sum of Sixty pounds (£60) for his claims to the land above alluded to, and I hope that His Excellency will be pleased to approve of this expenditure.

I have, &c.,

DONALD MCLEAN, Principal Commissioner.

The Hon. the Colonial Secretary, &c., &c., &c.

Approved—R. H. W. 14th June, 1855.

Referred to the Attorney-General to know whether the conveyance is sufficient.

A. SINCLAIR.

14th June, 1855.

The document referred to is not a conveyance in the legal signification of that term, but it appears to be explicit that Wetere gives up all claim to the land, and would, I apprehend, be deemed by the Natives sufficient to effect that purpose, or Mr. McLean, I presume, would not have taken it.

FREDERICK WHITAKER, Acting Attorney-General.
18th June, 1855.

No. 26. MEMORANDUM.

Purchase of Ihaka's rights on Great South Road.

THE native chief, Ihaka Takanini, of Papakura, who claims the land through which the Great South Road passes, is now in town; and it is most desirable that a treaty should at once be entered into with him to purchase the land through which the road is to go, in order that there may be no obstacle to the formation of this road, which has been stopped for several months, in consequence of the opposition of the natives to a road being made through their land.

The quantity of land required from Ihaka for this road is about ten acres.

It is also desirable that a right of road should be acquired from this chief for the Karaka road, and that a piece of five acres for a ferry reserve on the south side of the Karaka river should be purchased.

The Provincial authorities have frequently expressed a desire to have these questions settled; hitherto this chief has declined to accept anything like reasonable terms. I believe now that these questions can be arranged for a sum of eighty pounds if the matter is settled at once, but, if delayed, double the sum may be requisite. I therefore respectfully submit that this case should be settled to-day if possible.

DONALD MCLEAN, Chief Commissioner.

Approved—T. G. B.

September 23rd, 1856.

The CHIEF COMMISSIONER to Mr. COMMISSIONER JOHNSON.

Pukekohe—To define the boundary of a Native Reserve. Land Commissioner's Office, February 3rd, 1857.
SIR,—

I have the honor to request that you will proceed to define the boundary of the Native Reserve in the Pukekohe Block.

The fact of your having been engaged in negotiating the purchase of the Pukekohe points you out as the best qualified of the officers of this Department to undertake the duty. In making the Pukekohe purchase, a large portion was set apart as a Native Reserve, the exact boundaries of which were not defined at the time, nor has anything been subsequently done to settle this question.

Land in that locality is now becoming very valuable; and, from what I can learn, several portions of the reserve have been alienated to Europeans, a circumstance which must give rise to difficulties and litigations, unless the question is definitely arranged without further delay.

It will be, of course, your duty to observe strictly the terms of the contract entered into between the Government and the Natives for the cession of the Pukekohe Block, and to assure the Natives an equal quantity of waste land to what you may now be able to induce them to relinquish, in order that the Government may fulfil its engagement with the European purchasers who have selected portions of this reserve.

The Provincial Government are sending a surveyor to accompany you on this service, and it is essential that the boundaries may now be so clearly defined in the presence of the Natives that no future disputes may arise out of this purchase.

I have, &c.,

DONALD MCLEAN, Chief Commissioner.

J. G. Johnson, Esq., J.P.,
District Commissioner, Whangarei.

Enclosure. AGREEMENT RESPECTING RESERVE IN PUKEKOHE BLOCK.

Ko te whakaaetanga tenei o Ihaka, o Mohi, o Hone Te Muhu, o Te Pepene te Tihi, o Te Akitai katoa, mo Pukekohe, kia whakaotia rawatia ta ratou paanga ki taua whenua. Ko ona rohe enei. Ka timata ki te Pou o Rangiwhiri, haere tonu i runga i te raina o te Bailey, Ngapuketurua, Puketarakihia, tomo noa ki te ngahere, haere tonu ki Tutaenui,—ka nawe ki te hauauru i runga i te rohe o Tutaenui, a haere tonu atu ki runga i te kaha hauraro o Tirikohua ki te rua o nga poka, ka tapahi ki te hauauru ki te raina e tika mai i te Ahua-a-te-ruarangi i Manukau i te ara roa ki Waikato; ka tukua rawatia ki a Te Kuini o Ingarangi, ki ona uri i muri i a ia, ake, ake. Koia tenei whakaaetanga i tuhituhia ai—ki tenei ra—ki te tekau ma whitu o nga ra o Hune i te tau 1853.

Heoi ano nga wahi e kapea mo matou i roto i enei rohe kua oti te korero—ko te wahi ki te tino Pukekohe i huaia Te Awanui o Taikehu, koia tenei ka porotakaia i roto i te whakaahua ki te taha ki tua o tenei pukapuka. Ko te utu ki a matou, e whakaaetia ai enei tikanga—kia Rua rau pauna, e homai ana ki roto i o matou ringaringa, i tenei ra i te 17 o nga ra o Hune; 1853.

IHAKA TAKAANINI, TE
RAIHI, HONE TE MUHU.

He mea whakaae ki te aroaro o PATRICK J.
HOGAN, AHIPENE WAKA KAIHAU, JOHN GRANT JOHNSON, Interpreter.

Translation.

Pukekohe.

This agreement, entered into by Moses, Hone te Muhu, Pepene te Tihi, and all the Akitai Tribe, being the final settlement and giving up of all right and title to Pukekohe, or claim thereto whatsoever; the following being the boundaries agreed to:—Beginning at the post at Rangiwhiri, and going on in the line of Mr. Bailey on Ngapuketurua and Puketarakihia, entering [unclear: the orest] and on to Tutaenui, then going in a westerly direction until it cuts the northern boundary of Tirikohua, to the second hole, then going on to the West, entering the line coming from Ahu a te Ruarangi at the Manukau to the long road to Waikato,—is given up to the Queen of England and her heirs for ever: for this reason this agreement has been entered into on this the seventeenth day of June, in the year 1853.

That portion of Pukekohe called Te Awa nui o Taikehu is reserved for us, and is encircled by a line on the plan annexed. The payment to us for our consenting to these terms (above specified) is Two hundred pounds, now given into our hands, on this the seventeenth day of June, in the year 1853.

IHAKA TAKAANINI, TE
RAIHI, HONE TE MUHU.

Agreement signed in the presence of PATRICK J.
HOGAN, AHIPENE WAKA KAIHAU, JOHN GRANT JOHNSON, Interpreter.

A true translation. JOHN WHITE, Interpreter.

No. 28. The CHIEF COMMISSIONER to Mr. COMMISSIONER SEARANCKE.

Waiuku.—Blocks to be Surveyed. Land Commissioner's Office, Auckland, 7th February, 1857.
SIR,—

I have the honor to request that you will proceed at your earliest convenience to Waiuku and place yourself in communication with the Native Chiefs, Katipa and Ahipene, relative to the survey of certain blocks of land in the Manukau district, i.e., Kawakawa, Kai o te manu, Kaihau, Tukiororangi, Kaihau, Opoia, Matakairau, and Taitomo, on which instalments have already been paid by the Government, the extent and eligibility of which it is now necessary to define, in order that the several purchases may be completed.

From your own experience in the performance of the duties now assigned to you, it will not be necessary for me to issue detailed instructions. It will, however, be of primary importance that the boundaries should be clearly and unmistakeably defined; and the reserves, where they occur, should be carefully laid off in the presence of the Natives concerned in the sale, so that any future difficulties or disputes connected therewith may be prevented, and the final cession of the land amicably obtained.

The Chiefs Arama Karaka and Wetere have a claim to some portion of these blocks, and may express a wish to accompany you in the preambulation of the boundaries. But inasmuch as Te Katipa has hitherto been the principal party concerned in the preliminary negotiations you will be good enough to consider him as the individual representing the vendors, and secure either his own attendance and co-operation or that of any of his tribe he may depute to accompany you.

Should you be able, in any of the blocks referred to, to select an eligible reserve of 500 acres, which may at some future time be conveyed to Te Katipa by a grant from the Crown, I must request you to mark it off with other reserves selected by the Natives or stipulated for by the conditions of the Deed of Sale, taking care however to refer the same to me, for the information of the Government, and not by any means intimating to that Chief, the purpose for which it is intended.

The enclosed copies of Deeds and Receipts, which you will be good enough to return when no longer required, will put you in possession of all necessary information relative to the boundaries, conditions, and reserves in each several purchase.

The arrangements as to the further cash payments that it may be necessary to make to the Natives for those blocks cannot, of course, be decided upon until the surveys are completed, when the Government will be in a better position to decide upon the amount to be paid to the vendors for the final surrender of their claims.

I have, &c.,

DONALD MCLEAN, Chief Commissioner.

W. N. Searancke, Esq., Government Surveyor.

No. 29. W. N. SEARANCKE, Esq., to the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

Manukau.—Reporting on Blocks recently surveyed. Auckland, 8th June, 1857.
SIR,—

Having concluded the survey and plan of the different blocks of land included in the South Head of Manukau, I have the honor to remark on them as follows: that it will be advisable on account of the numerous payments made on different portions, the boundaries of which are very complicated, and in order that the remaining sums due on the land be as widely and fairly diffused as possible, to divide this land into four parts or blocks; three on which money has been paid, and one on which no money has been paid.

No. 1 block, Eight thousand five hundred acres (8,500 acres), includes Te Mako, Te Ngaio, Kaihau, Te Tuhionorangi, Kaiotemanu, and the Kawakawa, minor blocks; on all of which money has been advanced, in various sums, to the amount of £430 (Four hundred and thirty pounds). The Rev. Mr. Hamlin holds a Crown Grant for Five hundred acres, (500 acres) included in this block. The sum I would recommend as payment for this land is 1s 6d. (One shilling and sixpence) per acre, i.e., £666 13s., deducting payment made of £430, leaving the sum of £236 13s. for distribution among the numerous claimants, which I propose to apportion thus:—

The block is nearly equally divided into timber and fern. Kauri is large and abundant, but difficult to get at, from the roughness of the fern land (on the East side,) which is poor, broken and bleak. On the West Coast the land is good quality, with abundance of Puriri timber. No. 2, joining to No. 1, is the Tatangarau Block, Two thousand seven hundred and sixty acres. On this no payment has yet been made. For this I propose to pay at the rate of One shilling and sixpence (1s. 6d.) per acre, amounting to Two hundred and seven pounds (£207.) This I would recommend to be paid to the Ngatihuiarau tribe, of whom the principal owners of this block are, Te Huatau, Penekuki, Hone Mangaia, Ihaia, and Raniera. This block is nearly all timber, kauri of the finest description. The valley of the Tatangarau is formed of the richest soil, with detached pieces of timber and bush.

No. 3 block of Six thousand two hundred and nineteen acres (6,219 acres), includes Kaitara-Kokoreke and the Oharau Blocks, on which payments have been made in various sums to the amount of (£225) Two hundred and twenty-five pounds, and is detached from No. 2 block by a reserve of about Three thousand five hundred acres (3,500 acres), known by the name of the Wharau reserve. The Rev. Mr. Hamlin holds a Crown Grant for Five hundred acres (500 acres) in this block. The sum I would recommend as payment for this land is One shilling and eight pence (1s. 8d.) per acre.

—This sum is left for distribution among the claimants, who in this block are more numerous than in any other, and more conflicting.

This block may be divided into Fern and stunted Manuka, Three thousand five, hundred acres (3,500 acres); Kauri and Puriri timber, Five hundred acres (500 acres); bush, Eight hundred acres (800 acres); and sandhills covered with a Pohutukawa scrub, Seven hundred acres (700 acres). The Fern and Manuka is the greater portion of a poor and sterile soil. The timber land is rich and covered with very fine timber, easy of access by cart from Manukau Harbour. The bush land is also of rich quality. The sand hills are covered with Pohutukawa trees and Toetoe, but no soil fit for cultivation.

No. 4 block, Opoia, One thousand and four acres (1004 acres); one payment of (£35) Thirty-five pounds has been made on this block, of which (800 acres) Eight hundred acres is poor fern land, and Two hundred and four acres (204 acres) of bush, rich soil, but no heavy timber, along narrow strips of land intersected down the middle by a deep swamp; is separated from No. 3 by lands belonging to the Natives. This land I propose to pay for at the rate of One shilling and sixpence per acre.

—of which sum I propose to give to the original seller, Aihepene, £5 9s., and to Te Warihi, the owner of the portion of the land lately added to the original purchase, £35. In addition I beg to say that it will be necessary in a great measure to be guided in the settling of the payments due on this land by the different owners of the land.

I have, &c.,

WILLIAM N. SEARANCE.

Donald McLean, Esq., Chief Commissioner, Auckland.

The Assistant NATIVE SECRETARY (acting for the # Chief Commissioner) to Mr. COMMISSIONER JOHNSON.

Pukekohe—To Report on claims of Ihaka and Mohi. Land Commissioner's Office, Auckland, August 1st, 1857.
SIR,—

I have the honor, by direction of His Excellency, to transmit copy of a letter addressed to him by the Chief Mohi upon the subject of the Pukekohe reserve.

Not finding in this office any report of your proceedings taken upon the Instructions addressed to you on the subject by the Chief Commissioner, and dated February 3rd, 1857, I have been unable to reply to a statement made by the Chief Mohi, to the effect that when the Pukekohe reserve was marked off by the surveyor who accompanied you for that purpose in February last, neither he nor any of the other Natives concerned were present, and that they do not accept the boundaries as there cut. His Excellency has therefore directed me to request that you will report fully upon this subject.

I have, &c.,

THOS. H. SMITH, For the Chief Commissioner.

J. G. Johnson, Esq., District Commissioner, Whangarei.

CHIEF MOHI to the GOVERNOR.

Hurae, 17 o nga ra, 1857.
E HOE E TE KAWANA,—

Tena koe. E mea ana matou ki nga Pakeha e noho ana ki runga ki to matou whenua ki Pukekohe, mau te tihanga kia neke atu nga Pakeha ki to te Kuini wahi. Ko matou e haere ana ki te mahi i taua wahi; ko te toru tenei o nga pukapuka ki a koutou. Heoi ano.

Na MOHI.

Ki a Te Kawana, Kei Akarana.

Translation.

July 17th, 1857.
FRIEND THE GOVERNOR,—

Salutations to you. What we have to say concerns the Europeans who are residing on Pukekohe; it will be for you to cause those Europeans to move on to the Queen's part. It is our intention to go and work that place. This is the third letter we have sent to you.

From MOHI.

To His Excellency the Governor.

CHIEF MOHI AND IHAKA to the GOVERNOR.

Hurae 28 1857.

E HOA E TE KAWANA,—

Tena koe. Tenei ano ta matou kupu ki a koe, kia rongo mai koe. E mea ana matou ki nga Pakeha e noho ana ki runga i to matou whenua i Pukekohe; e mea ana matou mau te kupu ki nga Pakeha kia whakahokia ki runga ki to te Kuini wahi whenua, no te mea he kainga pumau tenei mo matou, mo a matou tamariki ta te mea ko to matou kainga pumau tenei mo a matou tamariki ake, ake, ake. Heoi ano.

Na matou katoa ki a koe.

Na MOHI, Na IHAKA.

Ki a Te Kawana, Kei Akarana.

Translation.

July 28, 1857.

FRIEND THE GOVERNOR,,—

Salutations to you. This is our word to you. Do you listen with respect to those Europeans who are residing on our land at Pukekohe. We think that you should send word to those Europeans to return on to the part belonging to the Queen, because we wish to retain the land in question as a permanent place for our children for ever. This is all.

From the whole of us.

From MOHI and IHAKA.

To His Excellency Governor Browne.

No. 31.Mr. COMMISSIONER JOHNSON to the ASSISTANT NATIVE SECRETARY (acting for the Chief Commissioner.)

1857.
SIR,—

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 1st instant, on the matter of the Native Reserve at Pukekohe, requesting, by His Excellency's direction, that I would report fully on the same.

In complying with your request, I would remark that the subject does not appear from your letter to be clearly understood. It is still unsettled, and the survey which has been completed can only be regarded as a preliminary step to its settlement. No terms have, as yet, been made with the Natives concerning the portions of their Reserve which had been sold under George Grey's Regulations previously to the matter having been referred to this Department for adjustment.

The course I adopted, which Mr. McLean also approved, was to survey the Reserve, circumventing the portions sold by the Government, so that when the survey was finished and a plan produced, we might see the actual extent of the Native land which had been erroneously sold, and what the difficulties were which had to be adjusted with the Natives.

I sent word to Moses and Isaac, when I was proceeding to the ground with the surveyor, and requested them to meet me there, but they did not make their appearance. (I think I afterwards heard that they were absent at a feast on a visit to their friends somewhere, and perhaps did not receive my message). The contract surveyor was waiting with his party to commence work, and I myself had no time to spare, my presence then being urgently required in my own district, whither I returned immediately after having pointed out the locality and explained to the surveyor what was required to be done. I did not hesitate, under the circumstances of the case, to commence the survey without the presence of the Natives, as I made the agreement with them at the final payment for the block in 1853, and know exactly what was then promised to them. I am also fully aware of the justice of their complaint, but I was not in a position to satisfy them, had they been on the ground, as I would not have directed the surveyor to include land in the Native Reserve which had been previously granted by the Crown to private individuals.

You will perceive that, until this survey was completed, and the quantity of Native land sold ascertained, it was not in my power to carry out the instructions I received relative to giving the Natives an equal quantity of waste land to what I might be able to induce them to relinquish, in order that the Government may fulfil its engagements with the European purchasers who have selected portions of this Reserve, and not having settled the business finally, I did not make any written report of the same.

I have not been in Auckland since this occurred, and had no opportunity of moving further in the matter, which I presumed would have been in my absence attended to by some other officer of the Land Purchase Department.

I have, &c.,

JOHN GRANT JOHNSON, District Land Commissioner.P.S.—Enclosed is a memorandum of the original agreement made with Moses.

J. G. J.

T. H. Smith Esq.,
Assistant Native Secretary, &c., &c., &c.,
Auckland.

No. 32. MEMORANDUM by Mr. COMMISSIONER JOHNSON.

Pukekohe.—Relative to Boundaries of the Reserve. 12th August, 1857.

MEMORANDUM of Boundaries of Pukekohe Reserve, as originally agreed to between C. W. Ligar, Esq.,

Surveyor-General, and Moses and Isaac, chiefs of the Akitai, Mr. Johnson being Interpreter on the occasion.

Commencing on the Pukekohe boundary line where it is joined by the western extremity of the back line of Mr. Taylor's selection, along that line as far as the distance from the Papakura River to Cole's former line at the terminus of Hewling's line, thence at right angles across the ranges to the back line of Williams' selection (Kokako,. I think, is the name of the place), thence westward along Williams' back line to the junction of the Pukekohe line aforesaid, which also forms the eastern line of the Waiuku Block, thence along the said line to the point of commencement.

JOHN GRANT JOHNSON, District Land
Commissioner.

No. 33. The CHIEF COMMISSIONER to W. N. SEARANCKE, Esq., District Surveyor.

Waiuku.—To settle for Blocks already Surveyed. Chief Land Commissioner's Office, Auckland, September, 1857.

SIR,—

I have the honor to request that you will proceed to Waiuku with as little delay as possible to settle with the natives for the several blocks of land which you have been surveying in that district, and on which instalments to the extent of Six hundred and eighty-five (£685) pounds have been paid by Government.

The several blocks for which you are in treaty may be computed altogether at Seventeen thousand five hundred acres, and it is desirable that you should finally complete the purchase of these, or of any others adjacent to them, at a price not to exceed, if possible, Two shillings per acre. The sum of One thousand pounds is placed at your disposal for the purchase of the surveyed portions.

From your knowledge of the locality and of the native owners of the land, I need not furnish you with more detailed instructions as to the best mode of settling this question, which has, moreover, been fully discussed with you verbally at various times.

I have, &c.,

DONALD MCLEAN, Chief Commissioner.

W. N. Searancke, Esq., District Surveyor.

No. 34. W. N. SEARANCKE, Esq., Government Surveyor, to the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

Pukekohe.—Reporting on Native Claims to that Block. Auckland, 16th September, 1857.

SIR,—

I have the honor to submit for the information of His Excellency the Governor the following report on a piece of land in the Pukekohe Block, claimed by Mohi and Ihaka on behalf of their tribe, as a portion of the Native Reserve set apart at the time of the sale of the block to the Crown, but which has been conveyed by the Crown to Europeans.

The Pukekohe Block was purchased by the Surveyor-General in June, 1853. A reserve for the aboriginal owners, including their old settlements, plantations, and burial-places, was agreed to, and a memorandum (copy of which is hereunto annexed) of the boundaries drawn up.

The memorandum of boundaries of the reserve, I am of opinion, has not been adhered to in the survey made by Mr. E. Fairburn, the officer employed in laying out the sections in this block; a large part of the reserve, about 850 acres, having been alienated by the Crown to himself and Mr. T. Russell.

The error appears to have arisen from the surveyor being unaccompanied by any of the Natives interested in the reserve.

The Native Chiefs Mohi and Ihaka, after the survey was completed, came to Auckland to see the Surveyor-General, who (Mohi states) acknowledged the justice of their complaint respecting the portion of the reserve surveyed, and promised that it should be rectified. This has not been done.

As this land has been alienated by the Crown, it will be necessary, in order that its obligations may be fully carried out, at once to come to an understanding with the aboriginal owners. This I did not consider myself authorized to conclude. Mohi strongly urged that the land in dispute should be given up to him as a part of the reserve, as originally agreed to; that he did not wish to sell it, on account of the numerous burial-places on it.

Ultimately he requested that I would defer any further negotiations until Ihaka, who is very ill, would be sufficiently recovered to take part in it.

I have, &c.,

WILLIAM N. SEARANCKE, Government Surveyor.

No. 35. Mr. COMMISSIONER SEARANCKE to the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

Manukau.—Reporting on meeting to receive payments for land on the South side of Manukau. Waiuku, 5th October, 1857.

SIR,—

I have the honor to submit, for the information of His Excellency the Governor, the following Report on the late meeting of the Ngatiteata tribe at Waiuku to receive the balance of the money due on the lands on the South side of Manukau Harbour. The meeting as called by you at Waiuku, on the 8th ult., was, from the absence of Te Katipa, (detained by the illness of his son, Te Kepa, at Waiuku,) without any result.

On my arrival at Waiuku with Te Katipa, on the 23rd ultimo, I found that the Natives had returned to their settlements. I immediately sent round to them, and, after some delay, succeeded in re-assembling them at Waiuku on Monday, the 28th ultimo.

Notwithstanding the many conflicting claims and statements, the Natives assembled evinced throughout a general wish that every one having a claim on the land should receive a portion of the payment, which wish on their part was, so far as I was enabled to judge, very fairly carried out. The sum of Two thousand pounds (£2,000) was demanded by them as the final payment; this it was not in my power to consent to; but, in addition to the sum of One thousand pounds (£1,000) which I had received, I consented, subject to the approval of His Excellency the Governor, to make another and final payment of Two hundred pounds (£200) to the Katipa Te Awarahi.

I consented to this on the following grounds:—

- 1st. That the Natives were on the point of again dispersing, when the settlement of this long pending negotiation would have been indefinitely postponed.
- 2nd. That its situation on the Manukau harbour, together with its proximity to Auckland, its valuable forests of Kauri timber, must render it a district valuable for European settlement.
- 3rd. It is a step towards the annexation of a large block of land to the already purchased Waiuku district. I may also be permitted to call attention, as one important feature in this case, to the large number of advances made, extending, over a period of nine years, for which I have been thus enabled finally to settle, by obtaining land.

On these grounds, I recommend this additional sum, with the full confidence that the completion of this long-pending negotiation will tend to other sales of land in this district by the aboriginal owners.

I have, &c.,

WILLIAM N. SEARANCKE, District Commissioner and Surveyor.

Donald McLean, Esq.,
Chief Commissioner.

No. 36. Mr. COMMISSIONER SEARANCKE to the CHIEF COMMISSIONER

Puketapu.—Reporting offer of that Block. Auckland, 8th October, 1857.
SIR,—

I have the honor to report for the information of His Excellency the Governor, that a block of land, situated in the Manukau Harbour, known by the name of Puketapu, has been offered for sale by the Ngatiteata natives. This piece of land, containing about Three thousand five hundred acres (3,500), situated on the middle of the Manukau Block, purchased by me at Waiuku on the 2nd instant, was reserved by the owners at the time of the survey for their own use. From its central position, it is highly desirable that this sale should, if possible, be at once effected. The block may be divided into three equal parts, of fine timber land, rich fern land, and rather poor fern and stunted manuka.

The sum I proposed to pay for this block was Four hundred pounds (£400). Two sections of One hundred acres (100 acres) in each are to be reserved for Ihaia te Manga; and at Whakarongo one section for Aihepene Kaihau, to be conveyed to them by Crown grants, His Excellency the Governor consenting.

I have, &c.,

WILLIAM N. SEARANCKE, District Commissioner and Surveyor.

Donald McLean, Esq.,
Chief Commissioner,
Auckland.

No. 37. MEMORANDUM by Mr. COMMISSIONER SEARANCKE.

Manukau.—Completion of Negotiations.

The negotiation for the purchase and payment of the land at the South head of Manukau was completed at Waiuku on the 2nd October, letters having been written previously to all the aboriginal owners to assemble there in order that their respective claims might be openly canvassed, and they were also informed that the payment to be then paid at Waiuku would be final. Pepene and his friends of the Ngatitamaoho tribe had, at the meeting at Ihumatao, and subsequently, to the Chief Land Purchase Commissioner, given up all claims to any portion of the payment of this land to Te Katipa and the Ngatiteata tribe. I arrived at Waiuku on the 23rd September; from that date to the 2nd October, the respective claims were daily and openly discussed, upwards of two hundred and fifty men, women, and children being assembled together. I took every opportunity during that time of bringing forward, also of calling upon, those parties who had been privately stating their claims to portions of the payment, to publicly before the meeting make their claims (I allude more particularly to Wiremu Hunia and Ihaia te Kopi, and others); this they would not do, confining themselves to privately demanding of me to pay some portion of the money to them personally. They not being resident on the land, and the claim being, I considered, very small, their influence also being very trifling, I did not think myself justified in making any portion of the payment to these parties, to the prejudice of their relations resident on the land, and to whom I paid the money for the claims of themselves, and relations; and this I did at the wish and by the consent, of the whole of the Natives then and there assembled at Waiuku.

W. N. SEARANCKE.

27th October, 1857.

No. 38. Mr. COMMISSIONER SEARANCKE to the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

Pukekohe.—Report on disputed Reserve. Land Commissioner's Office, Auckland, 17th November, 1857.
SIR,—

I have the honor to submit, for the information of His Excellency the Governor, the following report upon the disputed reserve at Pukekohe.

The final purchase of Pukekohe Block was made by the late Surveyor-General (C. Ligar, Esq.) and Mr. District Commissioner Johnson, on the 16th June, 1853.

A reserve of land, particularly named as Te Awanui o Taikehu, is made in the Deed of Sale for the aboriginal owners, neither the extent nor the boundaries being there defined, but after completion of the sale a verbal arrangement respecting the boundaries was made with the Natives, I believe by Mr. Johnson. In the latter part of the same year, 1853, Mr. E. Fairburn was instructed by the Surveyor-General to mark out the block into sections; which duty being performed, he returned to Auckland, and was followed immediately by Ihaka and Mohi, who, at an interview with the Surveyor-General, stated that the piece of land reserved by them for their own use, and known by the name of the Awanui o Taikehu, had been included by Mr. Fairburn in his survey; they complained also that Mr. Fairburn had not, in accordance with Mr. Ligar's promise, given them notice of his survey of Pukekohe, in order that some of them might have accompanied him to point out the limits of their reserve. In consequence of this protest, the Crown grants for European selection in this block were for some time withheld, but subsequently issued.

The Natives have constantly, from that time to the present, both verbally and in writing, protested against the occupation of this land; they have also repeatedly cautioned the settlers themselves, in a firm though friendly manner, against making improvements on land which was especially reserved by themselves at the time of the sale.

Having received instructions from you, as Chief Land Purchase Commissioner, to investigate this case, I wrote to Mohi and Ihaka, who arrived in Auckland on the 2nd instant, when, as they still persisted in their claims, and after several days discussion no settlement was arrived at, I agreed that we should proceed on to the ground, when the precise locality of the Awanui o Taikehu, named in the deed as the reserve, might be pointed out to me.

Ihaka and Mohi did not keep their appointment with me at Pukekohe, but I obtained the assistance of several other natives of the same tribe, who clearly pointed out the land claimed by them, being a large and very fertile tract of country, dotted with their former settlements and cultivations; the burial places also of several of their chiefs were pointed out upon the land thus claimed, the precise extent of the land which they demand I found it difficult to define, but have marked it on the accompanying sketch by a yellow line.

The reserve set out for them by Mr. E. Fairburn, but which the natives have never recognized as the one originally agreed upon between Mr. Johnson and themselves, I have marked with a pink line; the area of this is about Three thousand one hundred and fifteen acres (3,115 acres).

Having been now for some time endeavoring to settle this dispute with the Natives, and finding that they are resolved to maintain their claim upon this land, for which Crown grants have been issued to European settlers, and a large portion of it actually in their occupation, as re-sold by the original purchaser under the Crown; considering also that any acknowledgment on my part of the right of the Aborigines to any portion of land sold by Government to private individuals, would tend to shake that confidence in the value of a title from the Crown which it is desirable to maintain undisturbed, I have throughout my negotiation with Ihaka and Mohi treated the matter lightly, and as a casual error of the surveyor arising from his ignorance of the localities. In this light the Natives look upon it, but depend upon His Excellency to restore to them the land which was especially reserved at the time of the sale of the Pukekohe Block, and which is now held and occupied by European settlers.

The extent of land claimed by the Natives as included in their reserve, but which has been sold by the Crown to private individuals, is about Two thousands and ninety-nine acres (2,099 acres). On this there are three residents, Messrs. Carruth, Meldrum, and Arrowsmith, occupying together 793 acres.

Duly considering the extent of the interests thus involved, and the extreme difficulty and delicacy of this question, I have most carefully abstained from committing myself to any initiative step towards its adjustment, wishing the Natives rather to propose some means of settling it. As they have not done so, confining their claim to the land itself, I am compelled to refer the case back to next, the 19th instant, in order that this long protracted dispute may at once be settled.

The quantity of land contained within the boundaries of this reserve as claimed at present by the Natives, and pointed out to me upon the spot, is about Five thousand and fifty-four acres, but Messrs. Baber and White, who were present at the verbal arrangement with Mr. Johnson, expressly state that they are not entitled to more than two miles square, i.e., Two thousand five hundred and sixty acres (2,560 acres), which, to include the lands known by the name of Te Awanui o Taikahu, and the boundaries as mentioned in Mr. District Commissioner Johnson's Memorandum, would cover not only the lands occupied by Messrs. Arrowsmith, Meldrum, and Carruth, and the section owned by Messrs. Hall and Fairburn, with a small portion of Mr. R—'s section, but also Twelve hundred and sixty acres of the reserve as set out by Mr. Fairburn.

I have, &c.,

WILLIAM N. SEARANCE.

Donald McLean, Esq., Chief Commissioner,
Auckland.

Pukekohe.—Desiring that the European settlers may be removed.

E HOA E KAWANA,—

Akarana, 4 Tihema, 1857.

Tena ra ko koe. Tenei ano ta matou kupu ki a koe. Kia whakahokia nga Pakeha e noho ana ki runga i to matou pihi i Pukekohe i te Awa nui o Taikahu, kia whakanohoia ki runga ki to Te Kuini wahi, ta te mea ko to matou kainga pumau tenei mo a matou tamariki. Kei reira hoki to matou urupa. E kore tenei wahi e tukua ki aua Pakeha; engari mo matou, mo a matou tamariki.

Ehara i a koe tenei he, ehara i a Te Raika, engari no te Pepene. Ehara i te mea no nga ritenga Maori tenei. Engari no te ture o Te Kuini o te Kawanatanga hoki o Niu Tireni, no te mea kua waiho koe hei hoa aroha ki nga tangata katoa, kia tika ai te noho a te Pakeha a te tangata Maori, ake, ake.

Na Matou tenei pukapuka,

NA MOHI, Na Te Akitai katoa.

Translation.

Auckland, 4th December, 1857.

FRIEND THE GOVERNOR,—

Salutations to you. This is our word to you (it is to request you) to send back the Pakehas who are residing upon our piece (of land) at Pukekohe, at the Awa nui o Taikehu, and to locate them upon the Queen's part, as this is our permanent place for our children; our burial-places are also there. This part will not be given up to those Pakehas, it is for ourselves and our children.

This fault is not yours, or Mr. Ligar's, it is the fault of Mr. E. Fairburn. This is not a matter having reference to Maori customs, it is from the law of the Queen and of the New Zealand Government, for you have been appointed as the loving friend of all the people, to cause the Pakeha and Maori to live properly together for ever. This letter is from us,

From MOHI, And all the Akitai.

His Excellency the Governor,
Auckland.

Pukekohe.—Native Reserve at Taikehu occupied by Europeans. Auckland, 4th December, 1857.

MY DEAR SIR,—

I enclose a letter from Moses and other Natives of the small tribe of Akitai, living at Pukaki, on a subject which seems to require serious attention. As I have always advised the New Zealanders, in all parts of the country, to sell their surplus lands to the Government, and to accept grants for sufficient reserves for themselves, you will not suspect me of any desire to cause embarrassment to Her Majesty's Colonial Government in bringing under your immediate notice the following case, which I have investigated at the request of my Native friends; and I believe the following to be a correct statement.

On the 17th day of June, 1853, the Akitai tribe surrendered to the Government a tract of land bordering on Manukau Harbour, called Pukekohe. They have in their possession a copy of the deed of surrender, with a plan annexed to the land given up.

By the terms of that deed a particular reserve, at a place called Te Awa nui o Taikehu, is excepted from the surrender, and in the plan annexed to the deed this is marked off, and the words "Native Reserve, Te Awa nui o Taikehu," are written over the place.

No measurements are given, either in the case of the whole block or of the reserve cut out of it, but the quantity of land intended to be reserved may be estimated by the proportion which it bears to the whole block on the face of the plan.

In the year 1854 Edwin Fairburn was sent down to survey the block, and lay it out in sections for purchase.

On his return he is stated to have made application for land forming part of the above Native reserve, to what extent I am not aware, and to have bought it for his own use.

Some opposition, I believe, was made to the issue of the Crown grants, but this seems to have been overruled, and the question is now further complicated by Mr. Fairburn's having now re-sold the land to settlers, who have already begun to cultivate it.

You will see that the letter of the Native claimants entirely exonerates the Government from any blame, as they believe that Mr. Fairburn must have given wrong information.

The following is a translation of their letter:—

Auckland, 4th December, 1857.

O FRIEND, O GOVERNOR,—

Greeting This is our word to you, that the Pakehas who are settling upon our reserve, at Pukekohe, at the Awanui o Taiehu, be removed, and placed upon the Queen's portion, because this is a permanent abode for us and for our children, and our burying-place is also there. This place will not be given up to these Pakehas, but rather it is for us and for our children.

Neither you nor Mr. Ligar are to blame for this, but Mr. Fairburn. This petition does not come out of Maori customs, but out of the law of the Queen and of the Government of New Zealand, because you are constituted as a friend to all men, that both English and Native may settle justly now and hereafter.

MOSES,

For all the Akitai

I have, &c.,

G. A. N. ZEALAND.

His Excellency Colonel Gore Browne, &c., &c., &c.

Enclosure.

Auckland, December 7th, 1857.
FRIEND THE GOVERNOR,—

Salutations. This is a word to you. We have heard from the Bishop that our land at Pukekohe is given back to us. Friend, this is right.

Friend, this is another word. Let the fences and houses which are upon our land remain there for us, for the timber is from our own land.

Friend the Governor, will you be quick in sending the Europeans away from off our land, as we are intending to go thither to cultivate our land at Pukekohe.

From your loving friends,

IHAKA. MOHI.

The Governor,
Auckland.

Mr. COMMISSIONER ROGAN to the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

Pukekohe.—Reporting on the Native Reserve in that Block. Auckland, 19th July, 1858.
SIR,—

I have the honor to inform you that I proceeded by appointment to Pukaki, on the 28th ultimo, and arranged with the Chief Mohi to go to Pukekohe with Ihaka and a party of his tribe on the following day, for the purpose of ascertaining the boundaries of the land claimed by the Akitai Tribe as the Awanui o Taikehu Reserve, within the Pukekohe purchase.

After arriving on the ground and making myself well acquainted with the locality, I referred to the copy of Deed of Purchase, which gives no clue whatever to the boundaries of the Awanui o Taikehu. I then adopted Mr. Johnson's description of boundaries of the reserve agreed to between the Surveyor-General and the Natives, as is stated in the Memorandum dated 12th August, 1857.

The boundary commences at a point on Baileys, old survey line on the western extremity of Taylor's back boundary, and follows a survey line which was cut by Mr. Fairburn, without any of the Native owners being present at the time.

I subsequently ascertained from Ihaka that there was no objection to the adoption of this line as the Northern boundary of the Reserve.

By Mr. Johnson's Memorandum the distance along this line should be equal to that from Cole's Inn to Papakura River, which, in a direct line, is 195 chains; the boundary should then run at right angles from this point to Rokako; such a line would include about 2100 acres sold to Messrs. Williamson, Fairburn, and Russell; it would also cut off a portion of the sections belonging to Messrs. Newman, Mahon, Hawke and Russell. Having ascertained the position of the boundaries of the disputed portion of the Reserve before entering upon the discussion of the question with the Natives on the ground, I became satisfied that about 2,600 acres of land which, by the agreement of the officer negotiating the purchase, should have been included in the Reserve, had been granted by the Crown to European Settlers.

On Friday, the 2nd inst., Ihaka and Mohi, with their followers, accompanied me to a hill called Pukewhau, and stated that that was the boundary of the Reserve which they had decided upon at the time of sale, and were determined to adhere to, and that the boundary of the Reserve which was marked on the tracing in my possession was wrong; neither Ihaka nor any of his tribe were consulted, nor did they witness the surveying of these boundaries, which was part of the arrangement with the Surveyor-General, &c. It was impossible for me to dispute what the Natives said, as the memorandum by Mr. Johnson, who was a party under Mr. Ligar to the purchase, supported the Natives in their statement; and, as it appears to me quite useless to attempt any negotiation with Ihaka for the land occupied by, the Pukekohe settlers, I decided on coming to terms, if possible, with that Chief for about Five hundred acres (500 acres) of land, which was included in the boundary pointed out by him at Pukewhau, which would disturb Crown Grants amounting to about Fourteen hundred acres (1,400 acres), in addition to the land already alluded to. I therefore undertook the responsibility of negotiating the purchase of this portion of the Reserve claimed by the Natives, for the following reasons:—

Because the cutting of the line from Pukewhau to Kokako would cost the Government at least Sixty pounds (£60) in surveying alone.

Because, if the Native boundary were adopted, it would interfere with the Crown Grants as above stated.

And because it is desirable to have straight lines for boundaries, instead of zigzag ones, which would be the case if the boundary pointed out by Ihaka were adopted.

After repeatedly requesting Ihaka to remove the boundary back to the straight line, he assented, but asked an exorbitant payment, and afterwards reduced his demand to Three hundred pounds (£300). I immediately offered him Fifty pounds (£50), and after a length of time, finding he would not accede to my offer, I proposed to recommend the payment of Fifty pounds additional, when Mohi rose and pulled up the boundary marks, and the survey was proceeded with, and the limits of the reserve have been determined as shown in the plan herewith enclosed.

I have, &c.,

JOHN ROGAN, District Commissioner.

Donald McLean, Esq.,
Chief Commissioner, Auckland.

Pukekohe area land survey

No. 42.Mr. COMMISSIONER ROGAN to the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

Pukekohe.—Forwarding Deed of Conveyance of Reserve. Auckland, 26th July, 1858.
SIR,—

With reference to my letter of 19th inst., I have the honor to enclose a deed of conveyance of a portion of the Pukekohe Reserve for which the sum of One hundred pounds (£100) was paid to Ihaka and Mohi on Saturday last, 24th. A description of boundaries is also enclosed for Proclamation in the New Zealand Gazette, which, however, may not be necessary, as the land has been included in Crown grants issued to settlers.

I have, &c.,

JOHN ROGAN, District Commissioner.

Donald McLean, Esq., Chief Commissioner,
Auckland.

No. 43.Mr. COMMISSIONER ROGAN to the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

Ramaroa.—The Native Owners will not accept the Price fixed. Auckland, 26th April, 1859.
SIR,—

With reference to Mr. Searancke's memorandum 57-351 regarding the final settlement of Ramaroa and Opoia, situated in the Manukau District, I have the honor to acquaint you, for the information of His Excellency the Governor, that I proceeded to Waiuku on the 2nd inst. for the purpose of paying the last instalment for the above named blocks. Immediately after my arrival, I communicated with Katipa, who objected to the small sum to be paid for the land, and repeated what he and the other Natives stated to yourself at the Land Purchase Office, namely, that the question of price had never been settled between them and Mr. Searancke, and it was most probable the Natives would not accept the sum of One hundred and twenty-five pounds (£125) as the final payment. It was, however, arranged that messages should be sent to the claimants in the district, and that sufficient time should be allowed for the Natives to assemble at Waiuku. Accordingly, in about ten days afterwards I met the Natives, who discussed the question of price with me for several days; and although many of them were disposed to take the money, yet there were several of the leading men, including Katipa, who raised objections owing to the smallness of the amount, and requested me to return the money to the Government.

I then proposed to make an arrangement regarding the price to be paid for Waitara Block, which has recently been surveyed by Mr. Sinclair, giving them the extent in acres; but some of the claimants to this land being absent, the Natives present desired to postpone the question of price for this block until your return to Auckland.

The enclosed tracing will illustrate the different blocks of land above referred to.

I have, &c.,

JOHN ROGAN, District Commissioner.

Donald McLean, Esq., Chief Commissioner,
Auckland.

The RESIDENT MAGISTRATE, Waiuku, to the NATIVE SECRETARY.

Manukau.—Retaining Possession of Land until wanted. Waiuku, 29th July, 1862.
SIR,—

On the 25th instant Rata Patiti came and stated to me that the Government, having satisfied his claim on the new township (which was recently surveyed on the Waikato, at Mauku), by giving him Fifty pounds sterling, he would now leave the land unless the Government requests him to remain until it is taken possession of by Europeans; for, if unoccupied, other Maoris will come and make further claims.

I have, &c.,

JAMES SPEEDY, Resident Magistrate.

The Native Secretary,
Auckland.

I approve.

D. POLLEN.

15th August, 1862.

Memorandum.

Manukau.—Recommending certain Crown Grants to be issued.

CONVENED a meeting of Natives at Pukaki, on the 5th instant. Ihaka and his father Pepene Te Tihi and Pita advised me to be careful in recommending the issue of Crown grants for any land in this neighbourhood of Papakura, except the reserves through which the Great South Road runs, to be made out in Ihaka's name, and a reserve, called Te Wharau, situated on the Tamaki, to be granted to Mohi. Ihaka was very much pleased at the prospect of getting a Crown grant for Papakura, and he is going to call a general meeting of all the Natives in the district of whom he has control, and I am to receive an invitation to attend. His object is to induce the people to subdivide their lands at Te Kuikui and elsewhere, in order that no difficulty shall be in the way of their obtaining Crown grants. The Pukaki Natives objected to the issue of a Crown grant to Te Retimona for Maketu until a general meeting is called.

Recommended that a Crown grant be issued to Ihaka Takaanini for the Papakura Reserve, and that Mohi and Iha a te Ngu should receive a Crown grant for 260 acres, on the Tamaki, called Te Wharau. Also that Paora Tuhaere should receive a grant for land at Orakei, called Purewa. This should be referred to Mr. Sinclair, with a request that he should construct the plan requisite for the issue of the grants at once.

JOHN ROGAN, District Commissioner.
December 13th, 1862.

Approved. Let action be taken at once.

F. D. BELL.

December 13th, 1852.

No. 1. The CHIEF COMMISSIONER to Mr. FRED. RING, Auckland.

Kapanga.—Respecting purchase of land from Natives. Land Commissioner's Office, Auckland, 28th January, 1857.

SIR,—

With reference to your letters of December 3rd and January 23rd expressing a wish to purchase from the Natives of Cormandel, through the General Government, a small piece of land estimated at Five acres situated on the Kapanga Creek.

I have the honor to inform you that if the aboriginal owners of the land in question are willing to dispose of it in conjunction with an adjacent tract of country of considerable extent, it is quite competent for the General Government to extinguish the Native Title to it, but that so soon as it becomes Crown Land the favour of disposing of it is vested in the Provincial Government.

In the present state of the law, therefore, it is impossible for the General Government to sanction the purchase in the manner proposed by you.

I have, &c.,

DONALD MCLEAN, Chief Commissioner.

Mr. F. Ring, Auckland.

The CHIEF COMMISSIONER to HIS EXCELLENCY the GOVERNOR.

Cormandel and Thames.—General Report. Native Land Purchase Department, Auckland, 5th June, 1857.
SIR,—

I have the honor to report, for your Excellency's information, the result of my late visit to the Thames and Coromandel Harbour Districts.

- After leaving Auckland, I proceeded to the Thames, where I had a conference with the Ngatipaoa tribes respecting the purchase of the Piako district. The Ngatipaoa chiefs followed me in their canoes to Pukorokoro (a small river to the west of the Piako), where I found Mr. Drummond Hay and a party of Natives. I held a meeting with the whole of the claimants, who agreed to proceed with Mr. Hay to point out the boundaries of their land and settle their conflicting claims and differences respecting such portions as were claimed by other tribes. This being completed, Mr. Hay was instructed (a copy of which is herewith enclosed) to furnish a plan of the district about to be ceded—estimated at about 140,000 acres—and a date was to be fixed on which all the claimants should be assembled at Auckland to effect a final settlement of that long-pending question.
- From Pukorokoro I proceeded up the Thames in the expectation of meeting Taraia, who had left there some days previously; consequently I have not been able to see him in reference to the purchase of some land he offered to the Government in the Coromandel district near Cape Colville.
- From the Thames I came back to Waiheke for the Chief Puhata, who has offered to give up a space of land containing about Four or five square miles for the purpose of gold digging, which offer may be availed of by the Government, if necessary, although I conceive it would be more prudent to discourage the search for gold until negotiations connected with the purchase are more matured.

There is, at present, a general indisposition on the part of the Natives to alienate their lands at Coromandel Harbour; and with the exception of the unsold portions at Mercury Island and a few small blocks on the main, there is nothing else open for immediate purchase in that district. These places they offer should be purchased as a means of leading to more extensive sales; but this must be done with caution, for if the Natives find an eagerness on the part of the Government to acquire their land, the opposition of the Natives to sell will increase in the same proportion as the eagerness of the Government to purchase is manifested. As far as I can ascertain, it is not so much a question of price that will weigh with them in this matter as a national feeling which prevails among many of the New Zealand tribes by which they enter into leagues and confederations against the sale of their country. Moreover, at Coromandel they are apprehensive that the discovery of gold in any quantity would lead to such an influx of disorderly Europeans as might annihilate or exterminate them.

Under all the circumstances, I did not deem it prudent to press negotiations during my stay, considering it more advisable to acquire information and disabuse the Natives of some of the fears they entertained, and to lead them to a more favourable consideration of the question.

In furthering this object, the Government would be very much aided by securing the services of Mr. Preece, who has been resident in the Coromandel as a missionary for the last twenty six years, having lived the greater portion of the time in the Thames District. Mr. Preece is now retired from the mission service. He is thoroughly acquainted with all the tribes, and knows the extent and general position of their claims. I would, therefore, recommend that he should be employed to carry on preliminary negotiations for such lands in the Coromandel District, where he is residing, as the Natives may from time to time be disposed to alienate, and that, in the meantime, until the work accumulates, he should receive pay at the rate of £100 per annum.

I have, &c.,

DONALD MCLEAN, Native Secretary.

His Excellency the Governor.

Enclosure. The CHIEF COMMISSIONER to Mr. DRUMMOND HAY.

Schooner "Tere," Taupo, 13th May, 1857.
SIR,—

I have had a consultation with Takurua, Hoera, Te Poihipi, and other chiefs at Taupo, respecting a settlement of their Piako claims, and have advised that they should point out to you the external boundaries of their claim, so as to prevent any future questions or encroachments by the Ngatipaoa or other tribes on the Ngatipaoa boundary; when the external boundaries are clearly marked off, it does not appear to me that it will be necessary to enter upon a subdivision of their own internal tribal claims, as this can be arrived at with sufficient accuracy for all the purposes of this Department without incurring the loss of time, delay, and expense of such a subdivision.

When you have completed this duty, you will furnish a map of the several large blocks you survey, and of such reserves, if any, beyond a swampy place called, which the late chief Hauauru wished to retain for eel fishing.

I intended to go on to Piako to see how the work on which you are employed was progressing, but find that it is needless now for me to do so, as you have not yet reached that place.

The Government feel anxious that this long pending question should be brought to a speedy and satisfactory termination, as otherwise the time and money expended upon it will amount to more than the land is worth after its acquisition.

I shall be in the vicinity of the Thames and Coromandel Harbour for some weeks, if you have any reference to make to me respecting the work on which you are engaged.

I have, &c.,

DONALD MCLEAN, Chief Commissioner.

G. W, Drummond Hay, Esq., &c., &c.,
Thames.

No. 3. Mr. PREECE to the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

Whakahore.—Respecting Eruera and Pita's Claims to Land. Stapleton, Coromandel, October 5th, 1857.
SIR,—

- I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letters, severally dated September 7th, 11th, and September 15th, with their enclosures.
- I am not able to report any particulars about Eruera's land until I have seen him, but in the meantime I would beg leave to suggest that both his and all other land unpurchased between Tikora's Point at the southern head of the Harbour and the Native residence at the Poka be purchased, reserving for the Natives all the land between the Poka and the Tiki.
- In your letter of September 11th you state that you had agreed with Pita for all the unpurchased and disputed land from Downing's to Kapanga, and referred him to me for final arrangements. When Pita returned, his party refused to confirm his arrangements, and demanded One hundred pounds (£100). When your letter of September 15th came to hand with Mr. Heaphy's Memorandum, I found that there were other pieces of unpurchased land besides those agreed for by you, situated on the Island of Whanganui at the north-western side of the Harbour. I therefore lost no time in endeavouring to arrange for the final settlement of all their claims both on the Island and on the main, from the entrance of the Harbour to the Kapanga Creek, which they are now willing to do for the sum of £100. Should these terms be accepted by the Government, I think that we shall soon have more land offered for sale. Should those two purchases be made to which I have referred, we shall then be in possession of all the coast of the harbours except the two Native reserves; the inland portions could be procured with less difficulty.
- With respect to Karaitiana's land, I am not able to come to any definite arrangement, because Mr. Heaphy has not stated what portion of the ninety acres belongs to Karaitiana, and what portion of it is in Wilson's claim. Karaitiana is quite willing to sell, and as he is going to Auckland it may, perhaps, be arranged whilst he is there. The piece of ninety acres beyond Calloway's claim I will attend to as soon as it is practicable to do so.

- In reference to Motutapere, I beg to suggest that it be made a Native reserve for the following reasons:—first, because the purchase is not a good one, it never having been completed, only a few articles were given as a deposit, the greater number mentioned were not given, nor was the principal owner ever consulted; secondly, because the island itself is not of any importance except for Natives; thirdly, because it is the only island that remains in Native possession of that tribe, and is the only place they will have to land when fishing or when at sea, and, therefore, of great importance to them.
- Waitataramoa is, I believe, a good purchase, and was sold by Webster or party to a man named James Demby, who now resides in Freeman's Bay. I was not aware that it had reverted to Government. Webster's purchase at Waiau, mentioned by Mr. Heaphy, was never proved. I was in Court when it was dismissed by Commissioner Richmond: the land had not been purchased, only the timber. The only valid purchase up the Waiau is that claimed by W. B. Moores, that, as a gold field, is, I believe, of great value. The party that are at work on the land are finding gold to a large extent. I believe that Morris would transfer his claim to Government for a trifling compensation. They would then purchase when offered the surrounding land, which would make an available gold field. I am convinced from the increasing quantity of gold found that before long gold will be found in large masses, therefore no expense should be spared at this time in procuring land.
- I am not aware to what purchases of Webster's at Kennedy's Bay and Mercury Bay Mr. Heaphy refers. There were no purchases made at Kennedy's Bay but one, made by Kenuedy, who was afterwards killed. I am not as yet aware whether that purchase is a good one or not. I will make enquiry, and report on it as soon as I get the necessary information.
- The only purchase made in Mercury Bay was made by Gordon Browne, who has long since been dead. I believe that it is both an extensive and valid one, I don't know who is the present claimant to it. The only purchase that Webster made in that part was part of the Mercury Island. The Natives will be ready to point out the boundaries any time in November, if they should first receive a week's notice, they will then be ready to arrange for the complete sale of the island.

I have, &c.,

JAMES PREECE.

To the Chief Commissioner,
Land Purchasing Department.

No. 4. The CHIEF COMMISSIONER to Mr. PREECE.

Big Mercury Island.—Respecting offer of Land. Chief Land Purchase Commissioner's Office, Auckland, 6th October, 1857.s

SIR,—

One of the principal claimants to a portion of the Big Mercury Island, a son of Tararoa's, has called at this office to dispose of the claims of a section of the Natives living at Mercury Bay to that island, and he expresses a wish that the land should be surveyed without delay. It is important that this should be done, and I have, therefore, to request your attention to it as soon as possible.

I enclose a letter from the Natives on this subject for your information, also a copy of a Deed of Sale from the Natives to William Webster, and a sketch of the island, exhibiting the portions of the Different Natives who have claims to it. The aggregate estimate of the area of the island, as indicated on the margin of the said Deed, is, of course, greatly exaggerated.

If necessary, a surveyor will be detached to accompany you to Mercury Island, but as the Natives appear desirous to alienate the whole of it, and as they admit that a large portion of it has already been sold, probably the necessity and expense of sending a surveyor might be obviated by your paying a visit to the island, and obtaining final surrender of the entire island, making such an equitable division afterwards of the purchase money as the relative claims of each tribe might entitle them to.

I am anxious to hear from you, at your earliest convenience, as to the steps you have taken to accomplish this duty.

The price can be decided when you have made all preliminary arrangements for obtaining the cession of the island from the Natives; and your report should indicate, as nearly as possible, the amount for which it can be purchased.

You will be good enough to forward to this office a requisition for the amount of any contingent expenses you may be subjected to, such as the wages of Native attendants, &c., while engaged in the performance of this service.

One of the principal objects to be kept in view, in completing this purchase at a moderate cost, is that of its being likely to lead to other and more important purchases on the main land.

I have, &c.,

DONALD MCLEAN, Chief Land Purchase Commissioner.

James Preece, Esq., Cormandel.

No. 5. The CHIEF COMMISSIONER to Mr. COMMISSIONER PREECE.

General.—Relative to certain claims in his district. Chief Land Purchase Commissioner's Office Auckland, 7th October, 1857.

SIR,—

- I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 5th instant, containing some practical information respecting the land question in the Cormandel district.
- For more easy reference, I have divided your letter into paragraphs—a plan the adoption of which, in public correspondence, facilitates reference.
- Paragraphs 1 and 2 do not require immediate action; I shall, therefore, pass them over for the present.
- Paragraph 3, recommending the purchase of the claims of Pita and others of his tribe to some new land, including all disputed claims from the North Entrance Harbour to Kapanga Creek, I have recommended for His Excellency's approval; and the sum named by you, viz., One hundred pounds; (£100), is furnished to you through Pita, by this opportunity, to enable you to complete these purchases, in addition to a further sum of Twenty pounds (£20) for the lower portion of the land—about Forty acres—between the Kauri Rock and Kapanga Creek, part of an old claim, for which the Natives allege a horse was promised.
- With regard to Karaitiana's land, and concurring with you in the importance of obtaining it, I have paid yesterday a sum of Fifty pounds (£50) on account of all claims whatever to Tuhitoto Bay, and a further instalment of £50, pending final arrangements on account of his claims to Ahuahu.
- The Island of Motutapere is also reserved in accordance with your recommendation, and a plan of it is now being prepared for Pita.
- I shall not now advert to paragraphs 6, 7, and 8, further than to thank you for the information conveyed, and to request, now a commencement is made, that you will use every endeavour to carry on the purchase of land in the Cormandel district as vigorously as possible, consistent with a due regard to the interests of the Natives and their various conflicting claims.

I have, &c.,

DONALD MCLEAN, Chief Land Purchase Commissioner.

James Preece, Esq., Coromandel.

Island of Motu Tapere.

THIS island lies in the gulf of the Thames, outside, and about half a mile to the N.W. of the North Head of Coromandel Harbour. It is steep, and closely covered with scrub, and is not adapted for European settlement. It forms a convenient haven for coasters and canoes, and perhaps might be adapted for a small fishing station. It is not improbable that at some future period a light-station may be required on it. I do not know of any indication of metals ever having been found upon the Island.

Motu Tapere was purchased from the Natives whose names are Arakuri, Te Aumarere, Te Tawaroa, by William Webster, on the 10th November, 1838, and goods to the value of £41 were alleged to have been given.

The claim (305) came before Mr. Commissioner Godfrey on the 17th June, 1844, but owing to the claimant having received the maximum quantity of land which it was legal for him to receive, under other claims, "No grant" was recommended, and the claim withdrawn.

The Natives of the tribe to which the sellers belonged now assert that although the island was intended to be sold, the full amount of payment was never made.

Ara Kuri is now alive. Pita, the chief of the Patukirikiri tribe, is the grandson of Tawaroa, and the successor of Te Aumarere.

The island is estimated to contain (40) Forty acres.

CHARLES HEAPHY, Surveyor.

The Chief Commissioner,
Land Purchase Department,
Auckland,

14th October, 1857.

This land being nominally in the hands of the General Government, at least being entirely at the disposal of the General Government, except that the Native title has not been quite extinguished, I submit that it should be reserved for the tribe who have still a part claim to it, and that a map of it should be prepared, and handed to the Native Chief Pita Taukaka, as trustee for the Patukirikiri tribe. The reasons assigned for reserving this island are so forcibly expressed by Mr. Preece that it appears unnecessary to advance further arguments in support of it.

DONALD MCLEAN.

14th October 1857.

No. 7. The CHIEF COMMISSIONER to Mr. PREECE.

Coromandel.—Forwarding £120 to extinguish Native Title to Land. Chief Land Purchase Commissioner's Office, Auckland, October 16, 1857.

SIR,—

I have forwarded to you, by the hands of the young chief Pita Taukaka, the sum of £120 for extinguishing the whole of the Native title to the lands from the North entrance of Coromandel Harbour to the Kapanga Creek; a plan of the whole of the lands ceded is furnished herewith, which you will append to the deed of transfer by the Natives to the Crown.

A copy of the form of deed to be used is herewith furnished for your guidance, but you may, of course, alter it to suit circumstances. These documents should be clear, simple, and intelligible, so as to be binding upon the Natives, and to represent in a natural and easy manner the nature of the transaction they are ratifying by signing their names.

I have, &c.,

DONALD MCLEAN, Chief Land Purchase Commissioner.

James Preece, Esq., Coromandel.

No. 8. Mr. PREECE to the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

General.—Acknowledging Receipt of various Letters. Stapleton, Coromandel, October 26th, 1857.

SIR,—

- I have the honor to acknowledge receipt of your letters and despatches of following dates: —October 6th, with its enclosures; October 12th, with its enclosures; October 14th, No. 229; October 14th, No. 230; October 14th, No. 231; also three dated October 15th, with stationery, copy of deeds, and money for the purchase of land belonging to the Patukirikiri tribe, One hundred and twenty pounds (£120).
- I am thankful to be able to state that I have completed the purchase of the whole island and all other claims of the Patukirikiri tribe on the mainland as far as Kapanga Creek. I have paid them the One hundred and twenty pounds (£120), and by this opportunity I forward the deeds drawn out on the sheet of parchment which had the plan on it. To prevent any mistake about the island in future, I have inserted its proper Native name in the deed, which is "Te Poroporo." Whanganui is neither the name of the island nor yet that of any place on the island, but that of the creek which is the boundary of Keven's land on the side next to the gold diggings.
- With a view to prevent any mistake in future about the land now purchased, I will supply the Natives with a copy of the deed now sent with a plan on the back of the same.
- In your letter of October 14th, No. 230, you state that Karaitiana had made a request that a small payment should be made to Paora Te Putu for some old claim; I fully agree with you that it would be a dangerous precedent to do so, but as Paora is a large land holder, and is the owner of land that it is very desirable should be purchased for the Government because it is the richest gold land in this district, I would therefore beg leave to suggest the propriety of making him a present from the Government, letting him clearly understand that it was in no way to be considered as given for payment for his claim, as all right to that had been paid for long ago. He has hitherto been opposed to sell land to Government, his determination has had its effect in preventing others from offering land for sale; he is, I believe, not very unwilling at the present time to sell. I believe him to be a very upright, worthy man.
- I herewith enclose a copy of a letter which I received from Maihi, a chief of Ngatiwhanaunga, offering some portions of land for sale. One portion is situated near to the present gold diggings at Waiau, and is, I believe, a most available portion as a gold field. Should that be purchased with the adjacent lands of Kitahi and W. B. Moore's, as recommended by me in my letter of October 5th, it would at once give to this province a good and available gold field. All the principal claimants are desirous of selling, but this is a portion of the tribe who strenuously oppose the sale of any land; the cause of which is that the Government had never given them any payment for their part of the island of Motunau. Their claim to compensation I consider to differ materially from that mentioned in the last paragraph. Paora did not put forth any claim for many years after the land had been sold, but this party arrived in Auckland on the evening of the day that the island was paid for; on the next day they put in their claim, and they have constantly from that time continued to make a demand for payment, but nothing has as yet been given to them, although their claim extends over a large portion of the island. I would therefore beg leave to suggest that something be done in this case, and that a sum be given as a bonus without in any way opening the question of their claim. I am quite sure that they would be satisfied with such an arrangement, and all difficulty would be removed.

- In your letter of October 6th, you requested me to go to the Mercury Island as soon as possible to arrange the claims of the different parties. Rawiri and his party are perhaps in great haste to settle their claims before other parties put in their claims also. I think that it will be better for all parties to be present at one time, I have therefore communicated with each party that has any claim, and am quite ready to go as soon as each party can accompany me there.
- You say in your letter of October 14th, No. 231, that you wish me, now purchasing has commenced, to carry it on vigorously, consistent with due regard to the interests of the Natives and their various claims. This I am prepared to do as far as I can. I have clearly pointed out what I consider the great hindrance to the sale of land at present; should these obstacles be removed I am of opinion that plenty of land will gradually be offered for sale; I am also of opinion that it would be prudent not to make any advance of money to the Natives on lands until the claims of the parties applying have been fully established.
- In your letter of October 15th, No. 226, you enclosed a letter from Ahurei requesting an advance of Fifty pounds (£50) on some lands near to Cape Colville; he has been with me and I find, after making due inquiries both from himself and others, that his right to the land proposed by him to sell is disputed by Natives of another tribe. I think that no advance should be made on that land until the contending parties have come to some mutual agreement.
- I have the honor to acknowledge receipt of your letter dated October 21st, No. 235, accompanying the maps. They came to hand alter I had written the above.

I have, &c.,

JAMES PREECE.

Donald McLean, Esq., Chief Commissioner,
Auckland.

No. 9. The CHIEF COMMISSIONER to CHARLES HEAPHY, Esq., Government Surveyor.

Waiau.—Respecting Survey of the Block. Chief Land Purchasing Commissioner's Office, Auckland, 15th December, 1857.

SIR,—

With reference to your letter of the 25th ult., relative to the surveys on which you are engaged at Coromandel, and suggesting that you should make a running survey of the Waiau Block, perambulating and marking the whole, but cutting only such lines as may be requisite to indicate clearly the boundary near contiguous and occupied localities.

I have the honor, by direction of the Governor, to inform you that His Excellency approves of these small and rugged blocks being made an exception from the rule which now obtains of cutting the whole external boundary of purchased blocks, more particularly because it may be hoped that adjacent blocks will be acquired which will entirely obviate the necessity for a completely-cut boundary.

I have, &c.,

DONALD MCLEAN, Chief Land Purchasing Commissioner.

C. Heaphy, Esq., &c., &c.

No. 10.Mr. PREECE to the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

Waiau and Awa Kanae.—Has paid a Deposit on the Block. Stapleton, Coromandel. May 6, 1858.

SIR,—

- Since my last communication I have made a deposit of One hundred and twenty-six pounds (£126) on the Waiau and Awa Kanae Block, which contains between two and three thousand (2,000 to 3,000) acres. I am now only waiting for an answer to my last letter and the arrival of Mr. Heaphy, when I shall complete the purchase. I wish Mr. Heaphy to survey a piece of land in front of the above block, so that it may have some sea-frontage, because, should the purchase be made without the frontage, there would be a difficulty to get access to the land; I have, therefore, delayed the purchase until the survey is completed. Coal exists on the above block, and is found in the whole of the ranges.
- The Matakita Block, which runs from the boundary of my estate to the top of the highest range, is not finished surveying, but will be completed when Mr. Heaphy comes. I think that it will contain about 2,000 acres. I shall make the purchase as soon as I get the map.
- For the Big Mercury Island I have given to Rawiri a deposit of Forty pounds (£40). I have not as yet received the map with the acreage of each party's claim; when I receive that I shall be prepared to complete the purchase of the whole island.
- The Wainuiototo Block is at present in dispute, and therefore must be delayed until settled amongst the Natives, which I hope will soon be done, I shall then take the earliest opportunity of making the purchase.
- I have not as yet received the map of the survey of the Kikowhakarere Block, therefore I am not able to take any step toward the purchase of that block.
- I have great hope that I shall be able to purchase another block shortly; but, as much of the land is covered with kauri, the Natives can at present get more by selling the trees and retaining their land than they can by the sale thereof. They get from 10s. to £1 per tree. There are also many other things which make them put more value on their land than they otherwise would do. The exertions of Mr. C. Davis to prevent the Natives from parting with their land have hitherto operated against the purchase of land, also the contention amongst the Natives themselves about their respective claims has had the same effect; the price that has been proposed to be given for land has been considered by them as too little.
- I am of opinion that if the Government would but give a little advance in price there would soon be more land offered for sale. I know that the Natives as a body are convinced that the time is at hand when each individual Native will do as he pleases with his own land. The conduct of Maihi and Horopeta, in selling the Waiau Block in spite of all opposition, has operated well. Taniwha told me lately that he was convinced that the Government would soon make a purchase of all the spare land, for that he had found that he and the other chiefs could not prevent other Natives from parting with their own land.
- The difficulties with which I have hitherto had to contend were of no ordinary character. Had it not been for the influence that I had with the Natives, and the confidence that they place in me, nothing, I believe, would have induced them to have sold any land. I have used every means in my power to accomplish the object. The labour in conducting these negotiations has been more than it would have been in some districts where there was ten times the quantity of land purchased. I shall embrace every opportunity to extend the purchase when there is a chance of doing so, because I am convinced that before the mineral resources of this district can be developed, the Native title to the land must be extinct, or every effort to prove them will fail. The Natives have neither energy nor perseverance enough to procure minerals, and besides, if they possessed both, their avarice would prevent them from bringing the product into market except they could get a price far above what merchants could give.
- And it would be equally injurious to Europeans to occupy unpurchased land, the endless evils that would take place would entirely defeat the object of developing the resources of the district, neither do I think that the Natives would allow it, even on a limited scale.
- Coal has been found at intervals along the whole range, and will, I think, be found both in quality and quantity far beyond the general expectations. If so, it will be a very great acquisition to the province.

I have, &c.,

JAMES PREECE.

The Chief Commissioner,
Land Purchase Department.

No. 11. The CHIEF COMMISSIONER to Mr. PREECE.

Mercury Bay—Respecting Lands offered for Sale. Chief Land Purchase Commissioner's Office, Auckland, 13th July, 1858.

SIR,—

I have the honor to transmit herewith the plans of three blocks of land comprised within five islands of the Mercury Group offered for sale to the Government—viz., Kawhiti Ihu, 200 acres; Rapuke, 200 acres; Whakahau lands 750, 100, and 70, 920 acres: total, 1,320 acres, with a rough plan of the Group. These plans have been copied on the margins of three printed forms of deed of sale, which you will have the goodness to fill up and return to this office when the negotiations have been completed.

Herewith also you will receive a general map of the Mercury Bay District, with the square miles of the country lying between the point near the town, on the North, and the Tairua Inlet, on the South, faintly delineated thereupon, so that you may be able roughly to estimate the area of any portion thereof; and, by extending these lines on the same parallels, the same rules will apply to any block which may be offered contiguous to the country embraced within the plan now furnished.

I have, &c.,

DONALD MCLEAN, Chief Commissioner.

James Preece, Esq., Coromandel.

No. 12. Mr. PREECE to the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

Ahuahu—Forwarding Deed of the Block. Stapleton, Coromandel, 16th July, 1858.

SIR,—

I herewith transmit the deed of part of the Ahuahu Block, which I purchased yesterday. It contains full half of the island; the remaining part of the island I could not agree for. I offered them the fixed price, but they demanded much more. They now have agreed to refer the subject to you for your direction. I shall be ready to pay them when I get your directions. Two deposits have been made some time past—one on Rawiri's claim of Forty pounds (£40), and one on Anaru's of Five pounds (£5).

Anaru is deputed by the others to wait on you. It would be well, if it could be done, to secure the whole island; but the two most important claims are Matenga's and Karaitiana's. Matenga will be here on Monday about his. Karaitiana I do not know what to do with; his is a very important claim, and should be secured at any price.

I think that it would not be well to take any notice of the deposit he had from you. Please to look to the map and see the harbour, and his claim in connection with it. You may depend that it will soon be needful for the Government to put some one there, as that is the station at which more smuggling is done than any other harbour in the land.

Yesterday the Natives were here about Wainuiototo; all the three parties have now agreed to part the money equally between them, but we could not agree about the price. I offered them Two hundred and forty pounds (£240), which would be Eighty pounds (£80) for each party, but they want Three hundred pounds (£300), and are going to you about it.

I believe that they will take what I have offered when they find that no more will be given. Three reasons I think may be named for purchasing.—First, it contains a very large proportion of kauri, which will at no distant time be of no small value. Secondly, it is commencing the purchase on the other side of the range, which, however long it may be delayed, will eventually be made. In the third place, it is a piece of land that has been contended for for at least two generations; the purchase of it will prevent any further dispute.

With respect to the Awakanae Block, I have seen Maihi, but as yet I have not been able to come to any conclusion. I find from all parties that the internal boundaries as marked by Mr. Heaphy on the maps are incorrect, half of what is marked as Maraea's belongs to Maihi. All the outer boundaries are perfectly correct; it is only the division between the land of each party; but as Maihi has a claim to meet soon, I have offered him Three hundred and twenty pounds (£320) for his claim, as that contains what is most wanted. I have not as yet had an answer. Horopeta will sell his, and Maraea could be left for the present.

All the plans are made on the deed, and ready waiting. I fear that not much land will be sold except the purchase money is increased; the Natives have by some means got to know the price that Keven's land has sold for, which will be very injurious here for some time.

July 17th.—Since writing the above, I have had the honor to receive your letters of June 29th July 6th, and July 13th.

The map of the Matakita Block, the printed deed, and the general map of the Mercury Bay District, mentioned by you as sent, have not as yet come to hand; they must have been left behind.

I return one letter which must have come by mistake as it is for some person at Maungatautari.

I should be glad to know by what party of Natives the islands mentioned by you are offered for sale, as that would be a guide to me in negotiating for them. When I go to Whakatane I shall be able to examine all the islands, as I believe that they want to sell several more; it would, I think, be well to purchase all that are worth anything, as I believe that they will before long become of value, when they may not be so easily procured.

There is a most valuable piece in this harbour near W. B. Moore's, which is offered; it is the place where the Custom-house will stand, if ever there is one here.

I shall purchase it without any regard to its acreage, as those small pieces cannot be purchased by that plan.

When the Collector of Customs was here, he thought it the only place fit for the Custom-house. Should it not be purchased now it would be difficult to get it.

I have, &c.,

JAMES PREECE.

Donald McLean, Esq., Chief Commissioner,
Land Purchase Department, Auckland.

No. 13. Mr. PREECE to the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

Coromandel—Reporting on Claims of Paora Te Putu. Stapleton, Coromandel, 27th July, 1858.
SIR,—

I have two letters from Paora te Putu about the land offered by Hopa and others for sale. I knew that there would be other claims put in, and therefore recommend that their deposit should be less than what they wanted.

Paora has, I believe, a good claim to part, but much less than he would wish us to think; also a man of the name of Enoka.

He, I believe, is the tinu take of Ngatikoheru, which was the tribe to whom the land belonged. I have written to Paora, telling him that I will see that his claim shall be attended to, but he wishes to refer the matter to you. You will see from a letter of his, which I enclose, that his expectations are too great. I should rather see the land first, before anything further is done, which I shall endeavour to do on my way to Whakatane, which I trust will be as soon as I can complete the two purchases now in hand, and the weather a little more settled. It would be imprudent to go at present.

If I can induce them to let the boundaries go where I want, there will be about 35,000 acres. From the calculation I have made from the map you sent me, there is more than 20,000. I shall be able to report on it on my return. Maka will be at Whitianga, and I will call on him. You will see from Paora's letter to me that he mentions the names of several persons as belonging to the land, but they are at Whakapirikau.

Paora and Enoka alone are the claimants of that tribe. There will be, I am aware, a few others from different tribes, but, as the extent is great, we shall be able to give something to all, and buy out each party's claims.

I have purchased the piece I spoke of in my last, near to W. B. Moore's, and will send the deed by the first safe opportunity. From all that I can hear, there is no opposition from any party to the sale of the land at Mercury Bay; all appear willing to sell; the great contention here is about price. The Natives have been informed that a few acres of Keven's land has been resold for £3,000, and they cannot understand what makes that of more value than the other land near to it. These things may wear off in time.

I have, &c.,

JAMES PREECE.

Donald McLean, Esq., Chief Commissioner,
Auckland.

No. 14. Mr. PREECE to the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

General.—Reporting on various Claims to Land in his District. Stapleton, Coromandel, 22nd October, 1858.
SIR,—

- I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of various letters for me to report on. I am now in possession of the proper information to do so.
- The claims both of Te Mariri and Wiremu Paiawa, although both sent separately, I believe to be the same. They do not, from what I can learn, possess any personal claim, but a tribal one. It was arranged by Mr. C. Davis, when the negotiations were going on between the Government and Waka, in connection with Te Mariri, Wiremu Paiawa, and the other Natives of the Barrier, that Waka was to give them some part of the payment, which he has not done: it is on that ground that their demand is made. I consider that they are entitled to some compensation, but of course not to anything like what they demand.
- With regard to the land offered for sale by Onehunga, I believe that she has some claim to it, but at present it would not be advisable to purchase it, as it is disputed, and only a small spot, situated at a distance from any land that has been purchased.
- Te Hoki's letter about the Waiau and Awakanae land cannot be received as a claim: the only piece that he has a claim to is Ongohe, which is left out of the purchase. He was present when Mr. Heaphy surveyed the land, and gave up all claim to it.
- Maraia Tiki has no personal claim to the Waiau Block. Maihi is acknowledged by all to be the only person who has any right to sell any part of that block. She must therefore go to him, and make her claim, as it will be impossible for her claims to be considered by any person making the purchase.

I have, &c.,

JAMES PREECE.

The Chief Commissioner,
Auckland.

No. 15. Mr. SURVEYOR SINCLAIR to the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

Mercury Bay.—Completion of Surveys in that District. Coromandel, 7th February, 1859.
SIR,—

I have the honor to report to you, for the information of the Government, that I have now returned to Coromandel, having surveyed and marked out the whole of the land at present offered for sale by the Natives in the Mercury Bay District, which is comprised in five blocks, containing together about 20,000 acres.

The only work now before me is to survey a small block of land near Waiau, containing about 300 acres, and to prepare plans of eleven blocks of land for the information of Mr. Preece.

May I therefore request that I may be duly authorized to return to Auckland to prepare finished plans of the above mentioned surveys for the use of the Government.

I have, &c.,

ANDREW SINCLAIR, Government Surveyor.

The Chief Commissioner,
Native Land Department, Auckland.

No. 16. The CHIEF COMMISSIONER to Mr. PREECE.

Mercury Bay.—Purchases of Land in that District. Chief Land Purchase Commissioner's Office, Auckland, 21st March, 1859.
SIR,—

With reference to your letter of the 5th February last, relative to several blocks of land offered for sale in the Mercury Bay District which you report to be unfit for agricultural or pastoral purposes, I have the honor to inform you that as the existence of valuable minerals on the land referred to by you is as yet a matter of uncertainty, and as it is unfit for agricultural purposes, it is desirable that a smaller price should be offered than has been recently given for land at Coromandel.

I am further directed to request that you will furnish an estimate of the probable cost of its acquisition, and report the probability or otherwise of its being purchased at a reasonable price.

I have, &c.,

THOMAS H. SMITH, For Chief Commissioner.

James Preece, Esq., Coromandel.

No. 17. THE CHIEF COMMISSIONER to Mr. PREECE.

Mercury Bay.—Blocks of Land to be Purchased. Chief Land Purchase Commissioner's Office, Auckland, 4th July, 1859.

SIR,—

With reference to your letter of the 21st ultimo, reporting on various blocks of land in the Mercury Bay District, I have the honor to inform you that His Excellency the Governor has been pleased to authorize the purchase of the Purangi, Whenuakite, and Hahei Blocks, at the prices therein named by you.

His Excellency has also directed that the sum of £300 should be advanced to you for the Whenuakite Block; £100 to complete the purchases in Mercury Island; and £100 to complete purchases in Coromandel Harbour, making in all the sum of £500.

I have, &c.,

THOMAS H. SMITH, for Chief Commissioner.

James Preece, Esq., Coromandel

No. 18. THE CHIEF COMMISSIONER to Mr. JAMES PREECE.

Waiau.—Concerning Purchase of Purangi and Awakanae Blocks. Native Land Purchase Department, Auckland, 6th October, 1859.

SIR,—

I have the honor to inform you, with reference to the latter part of your letter of the 26th September last, that His Excellency the Governor has been pleased to approve of the sum of £250, being advanced to you to complete the purchase of the Purangi Block, and also of £45 for a portion of the Awakanae Block, making a total of £295.

I have, &c.,

THOMAS H. SMITH, for Chief Commissioner.

James Preece, Esq., Coromandel,

No. 19. The CHIEF COMMISSIONER to Mr. JAMES PREECE.

Coromandel—Incompleteness of Deeds prepared by him. Native Land Purchase Department, Auckland, 3rd November, 1859.

SIR,—

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 26th September, transmitting deeds of sale of certain blocks therein named, the purchase of which is also reported by you as having been completed.

I am directed by His Excellency the Governor to observe that the deeds referred to have not been prepared with that care and neatness which is desirable in matters of such importance.

I have therefore to request:—

- 1st. That you will have the goodness to furnish translations of the Maori description of boundaries in the deeds now transmitted, as well as of any hereafter executed.
- 2nd. That you will in future take care that every deed of final session prepared by you shall be legibly written; shall contain a full description of boundaries; and shall have drawn upon the margin a plan of the land ceded, with the bearings and distances of the boundary lines marked upon it, also all names of places recited in the description of boundaries; the area by survey, with such information as may be sufficient to identify the land, and to indicate the boundaries beyond possibility of misunderstanding hereafter.

I have, &c.,

THOS. H. SMITH, (for Chief Commissioner).

James Preece, Esq., Coromandel.

No. 20. The CHIEF COMMISSIONER to JAMES PREECE, Esq.

Mercury Island—Sum to be paid to Matenga Ngaupara for his Claim. Native Land Purchase Department, Auckland, 20th December, 1859.

SIR,—

In reply to your letter of the 29th ultimo, reporting on a communication from Matenga Ngaupara referred to you for that purpose, I have the honor to inform you that the purchase of Matenga's claim on the Mercury Island for the sum of £100, as recommended by you has been authorized, and that Matenga has been referred to you accordingly.

I have, &c.,

THOS. H. SMITH, Assistant Native Secretary, (for Chief Commissioner).

James Preece, Esq., District Commissioner, Coromandel.

No. 21. The CHIEF COMMISSIONER to Mr. PREECE.

Mahurangi.—Karaitiana objects to money being paid to Maihi for Mahurangi Island. Land Purchase Office, Auckland, 8th June, 1860.

SIR,—

The Native Chief Karaitiana has informed me that the sum of (£30) Thirty pounds has been paid by you to Maihi Te Ohoka for the Island of Mahurangi, instead of having been paid to him, as he thinks it ought to have been, and now desires payment for the land. He also states that Forty pounds (£40) was paid to certain Natives at Opito, which ought to have been paid to him; and that Maaka; of Whangamaoro, who objected to the sale of the Hahei block, has no claim to that block, and that there is now no objection on the part of the owners to its being sold to the Government. Karaitiana has also requested payment for the Pungapunga block, which was surveyed by Mr. Kempthorne.

I have advised him to apply to you for a settlement of these questions, and have to request that you will investigate his grievances, and report the result for the information of the Government.

I have, &c.,

DONALD MCLEAN, Chief Commissioner.

James Preece, Esq., Coromandel.

No. 22. Mr. PREECE to the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

Mahurangi.—Respecting Karaitiana's claim to that Island. Stapleton, Coromandel, 23rd June, 1860.

SIR,—

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, dated June 8th, with respect to Karaitiana's statement about the island of Mahurangi.

He is wrong as regards the money paid: it was not £30, but £12; and as to his claim, he has none to that island. The only person except Maihi that has any claim to it, is a man named Enoka. I know that I shall have yet to give him a small sum, but nothing either to Karaitiana or his party.

In reference to the land purchased by me at Opito, Karaitiana came with the Natives to me, and withdrew his claim, and requested me to purchase it from them, which I did for £34, not £40, as stated by him. I am sorry that he cannot confine his statements to truth.

Regarding the Hahei block, I have constantly put them off until you came back, as you were present at their meeting at Kapanga. I am of opinion that something will have to be given to each party: perhaps the best way would be to purchase separately each party's claim.

With respect to the Pungapunga, I am quite ready to make the purchase as soon as Karaitiana comes to me about it.

I have, &c.,

JAMES PREECE.

To the Chief Commissioner,
Land Purchase Department, Auckland.

The CHIEF COMMISSIONER to Mr. PREECE.

General.—Transmitting Memorandum by Mr. Heaphy. Chief Land Purchase Commissioner's Office, Auckland, 15th September, 1860.

SIR,—

A Memorandum has been placed in my hands, by Mr. Heaphy, having reference to certain blocks of land which the Natives expect to receive payment for from the Government; a copy whereof is herewith enclosed, as I deem it highly important that you should be put in possession of any information of that kind which is received at this office, in order that you may be able to report upon the nature of these claims for the information of the Government.

I have, &c.,

DONALD MCLEAN Chief Land Purchase Commissioner.

J. Preece, Esq., Coromandal.

Enclosure.Memorandum by C. HEAPHY, Esq., PROVINCIAL SURVEYOR.

The Natives of Coromandel look to the Government for the undermentioned "Papa Tupus," viz.:—

Mr. Preece is of opinion that the Natives are not yet ready to commence negotiations for further sales. Mr. Preece when I applied to him on the subject, stated that in about a month, or some such period, he thought the Natives would be able to go to the Big Mercury Island on the subject of their claims there.

I think that when the payment is made to the Coromandel Natives for the Papa tupus set forth on the preceding leaf, it is very likely they will be prepared to offer further lands to the Government.

It is very desirable that the land which reverts to the Crown from Webster's purchases at Wai Totara near Waiau and Motu Tapere, as well as that at Kennedy's Bay and Mercury Bay should be definitely taken possession of as soon as possible, by being marked out on the ground. Any additional payments which may have to be made upon these claims will but conduce in effect to the final acquirement by the Government of those lands which the Natives have no occasion to retain for their own use, in the Coromandel district.

CHARLES HEAPHY,
16th August, 1857.

The Chief Commissioner,
Land Purchase Department.

No. 24.The CHIEF COMMISSIONER to Mr. PREECE.

General.—To defer Surveying Operations until the Summer Time. Land Purchase Department, Auckland, 6th May, 1861.

SIR,—

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 26th January last, reporting on two letters addressed to this office by Riria Poau preferring a claim to the Opitonui Block.

With reference to that part of your letter recommending that the survey of the block above mentioned, together with those of Mahakirau and Maumaupaki be proceeded with, I have the honor, by direction of His Excellency the Governor, to inform you that it is considered advisable to defer surveying operations in your district until the ensuing summer; and have to request that the intervening time be employed by you in searching out any additional information that may be procurable upon the titles to the land in question.

I have, &c.,

DONALD MCLEAN, Chief Commissioner.

James Preece, Esq., Coromandel.

No. 25. The CHIEF COMMISSIONER to S. PERCY SMITH, Esq., Government Surveyor.

Tokotea Block.—Survey to be made. Land Purchase Department, Auckland, 24th June, 1861.

SIR,—

I have to request that you will place yourself in communication with Paora's tribe at Koputauaki, to carry on an outline survey of the Tokotea Block. It will be unnecessary to make a regular survey of an expensive character, but at the same time the boundaries should be marked out in such a manner that no dispute may hereafter arise relative to them. Wahi Tapu, graves, cultivations, and other spots which the Natives may wish to have reserved to themselves should be properly surveyed and the boundaries distinctly marked out on the ground.

It will be necessary that some of the Native proprietors should accompany you to point out the correct boundaries, who will be paid for their services at the usual rate of wages for such work. The general object of the survey is to have the boundaries of the land given up by the late Paora's tribe for gold diggings, defined with sufficient distinctness, to avoid any possibility of dispute or encroachment on Native territory.

You will compute as accurately as you can the area of the land that has been ceded by Paora's people for gold-digging.

A few posts put up in places where you deem it necessary will be requisite, more especially where there are no rivers or natural boundaries.

I enclose for your guidance a copy of Memorandum of Agreement in which the boundaries of the land given up by them for gold-digging is described.

I have, &c.,

DONALD MCLEAN, Chief Commissioner.

S. Percy Smith, Esq.,
Government Surveyor, Coromandel.

No. 26. Mr. PREECE to the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

General.—Reporting as to the State of Land Purchasing Operations in his District.

A Report of the state of the Land Purchase Department in the District of Coromandel, 16 July, 1861.

The undermentioned blocks have been surveyed, and can be purchased when the money which has been granted for that purpose is forwarded:—

- Matarangi Block.—Eruera's.
- Ahuahu Block.—Matenga's.
- Te Pungapunga Block.—Karaitiana and Riria's.
- Kaituna Block.—Wiremu Hopihana's.
- Waikiekie Block.—Hira Te Pure's.
- Kikowhakarere Block.—Paora and Karaitiana's.
- Te Hoho Block cannot be purchased until the Mahakirau Block is purchased, as the deposit given on it is in excess of the value and is to be deducted from Mahakirau.
- Maumaupaki Block joins that of the Awakanae already purchased on the one side, and Mahakirau on the other, and contains by estimation about 4000 acres, and runs from the surveyed line of the Awakanae to the foot of Castle Rock. This is part of the district mentioned by Dr. Hochstetter as an available and payable Gold-field. About a fortnight since a nugget was found in a creek near this land which contains about two ounces of pure gold, which had been broken off from a solid rock by some kauri logs brought down the creek; it was carried down the creek by the flood, and found after the water had subsided. No search has as yet been made for the ground deposit, as the white men do not wish to excite the Natives; they had rather see the land quietly purchased by the Government first.
- Mahakirau Block commences where the Maumaupaki Block ends, and continues to Mercury Bay. A creek that runs through this block runs into Mercury River. It contains, by estimation, about 30,000 acres. A large portion of this block is excellent land: part of it contains a very good Kauri forest, other portions of it are, like the last block, gold deposits. I beg strongly to recommend the immediate purchase of both these blocks; there is no difficulty in doing so as there is not any dispute about them, the purchase can be made as soon as the survey is completed, as the Natives are very desirous of selling; but should gold be found in large quantities before that is done, there would be a great difficulty in making the purchase at all, as then, I believe, that no sum would induce them to part with it, whereas if we purchase now, we shall have in one block, from Coromandel to Mercury Bay, about 40,000 acres, on which prospecting operations would be going on, and on the other side of Mercury Bay the Government have a block already purchased of about 13,000 acres which is covered with quartz and iron stone, which always indicate a gold deposit; in fact gold has been found on this land; I saw a small but beautiful nugget of gold found there. I consider that the purchase of these blocks may, in future, prevent great disturbances.
- Opitonui Block joins the two last at Castle Rock and leads out to Whangapoua. It contains by estimation from 2,000 to 4,000 acres, a good part of it is very good land and contains a fine kauri forest; a large creek runs through the centre of it. Gold is supposed to exist on this as well as on the two last blocks, some very fine samples were got here about four years ago. There is a little dispute about the ownership of this block; a woman of Whangapoua of the name of Riri Porou claims part of it. I have thoroughly investigated this claim, and from the evidence given by all parties I am convinced that she has no selling claim nor right to interfere; she ought to receive something when the payment is made, which could be reserved for her, or her claim could be referred to some Court which had authority to adjust claims of that kind.
- The Opororo Block joins the Opito Block which has been already purchased. When this is purchased, the Opito Block could be thrown open for selection; the piece to be purchased may contain from 6 to 8,000 acres; the whole when open, will be about 3,000 acres; it is undisputed, and the purchase has been promised; I therefore beg leave to recommend the completion of this purchase.
- Waimoka Block is situated near the Opito Block, and joins the Matarangi Block. A deposit of £10 has been given on this; if the boundaries, as stated, should prove to be correct when surveyed, I should think that it would prove to be about 4, or 6,000 acres. The survey of all the above blocks could be made at the same time, as they are all close together.

- The Hahei Block is situated on the South side of Mercury Bay, and joins land already purchased to the extent of 1,300 acres. I have not as yet been able to complete the negotiations for this block. Each of the parties who contend for this land lay claim to the whole, but from all that I have been able to collect on the subject, I firmly believe that their claims are about equal. The one party have agreed to allow the money to be divided, and as the principal person of the other party who contended for the whole is dead, I think that I shall, in the end, be able to get them to allow me to divide the sum equally amongst them, and thus prevent serious disturbance amongst themselves, as neither will ever allow the other to possess it.
- The Whangamata Block, which has been offered by Rawiri, is, I fear, too much disputed to allow of any further steps being taken about it until the contending parties can make some mutual arrangement amongst themselves on that claim.
- Honoroa Block is situated in this Harbour, and contains about 150 acres of very good land; this is only waiting to be surveyed, and could then be purchased at once.

The above is the true state of the Land Question in this district at the present time, and although there has not been much land offered for sale of late, it has not been from any feeling adverse to the sale of land that has prevented the Natives from offering larger blocks, but from an idea that the prices given were not equivalent to the value of the land, which they consider will soon be worth a large sum when its mineral wealth is developed. I am of opinion that if a more liberal scale was adopted, it would have a good effect on the minds of the Natives, and at the same time restore their confidence in the Government.

JAMES PREECE.

No. 27. The CHIEF COMMISSIONER to JAMES PREECE, Esq., Coromandel.

Coromandel—Further Land Purchase not urgent. Native Land Purchase Department, Auckland, 3rd September, 1861.
SIR,—

With reference to your letter of the 17th July last, forwarding your general report of the state of the land purchases in your district, I have the honor by direction of His Excellency the Governor to inform you that there is no particular urgency for acquiring land in the vicinity of Coromandel Harbour, as the district, except for its probable mineral wealth, is of very little value otherwise; the land is poor; there is no extent of it suited for agriculture; the price expected by the Natives is beyond its intrinsic value; and I confess I do not see any particular object in paying a high price for land there at present.

I have, &c.,

DONALD MCLEAN, Chief Commissioner.

James Preece, Esq., Coromandel.

No. 28. The CHIEF COMMISSIONER to Mr. COMMISSIONER G. D. HAY, Thames.

Coromandel—Tribal Boundaries to be ascertained. Chief Commissioner's Office, Auckland, 27th September, 1861.

SIR,—

I have the honor to request that you will prepare at once to proceed to the Cape Colville District. You will ascertain and clearly define the tribal boundaries between Cape Colville and Te Aroha, reporting from time to time your progress in the enquiries, and also concerning the disposition of the Natives to afford you assistance in your investigations. To enable you to carry out these instructions you are authorized to employ two or three Native labourers as necessity may arise.

I have, &c.,

DONALD MCLEAN, Chief Commissioner.

G. W. Drummond Hay, Esq., &c., Auckland.

No. 29. The Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY to His Honor the SUPERINTENDENT, Auckland.

Coromandel—Pukekura Block offered for sale. Colonial Secretary's Office, Land Purchase Department, Auckland, 2nd May, 1862.

SIR,—

I have the honor to inform you that Te Moananui of Coromandel has offered for sale a block of land of 700 or 800 acres in that district, described as the Pukekura Block. The boundaries of the Block have, I find, been surveyed by an officer of the General Government, and Moananui has received advances to the extent of £55 upon it. Though aware of the objection to purchasing small blocks of land not of the best quality, yet, under the above circumstances, I think you will concur with me that in completing this transaction at the price of 3s. an acre (£112 10s. being the price of the whole block) I shall be consulting the interests of the Province of Auckland.

If you agree in this, the transaction shall be immediately closed.

I have, &c.,

WILLIAM FOX.

His Honor the Superintendent, Auckland.

Cabbage Bay.—Lands offered by Tahana Karei.

THE following blocks of land, situated at Cabbage Bay, Coromandel District, have been offered to the Government by Tahana Karei of the Ngatitamatera tribe:—

The survey of these blocks has been completed by me. They are adjoining some of Mr. Hay's late purchases, and are valuable from the fact that they will assuredly lead to other and more extensive acquisitions, as also from the nature of the soil which is excellent and well adapted to occupation by European settlers.

According to instructions received from the Chief Commissioner, I have offered Tahana the same price per acre as that paid by Mr. Hay for other blocks in the same locality, viz., 4s., which will amount to £33 4s. 4d. for the entire 166 0 12 acres which, after some endeavours on Tahana's part to increase the price, he has accepted.

S. PERCY SMITH, Government Surveyor.
4th October, 1862.

Minute.

Recommended that Mr. Smith should be authorized to pay Tahana and party the sum of £33 4s. 4d. for the blocks referred to, as they are well situated for locating settlers.

DONALD MCLEAN.

6th October, 1862.

His Honor the SUPERINTENDENT, Auckland, to the Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Coromandel—Land Purchase. Superintendent's Office, Auckland, 4th April, 1872.

SIR,—

I have the honor to enclose copy of a letter addressed to me on 20th March last by James Mackay, jun., relative to his being provided with funds to enable him to complete on favourable terms the purchase of two large blocks in the Cape Colville Peninsula. Dr. Pollen being absent, and being personally aware that a very large sum might be saved to the colony and the province on this purchase by dealing with the Natives at the tangi at Ohinemuri, I felt myself justified in advancing to Mr. Mackay the sum of Two thousand pounds for that purpose. I proceeded with Mr. Mackay to Ohinemuri, and was present when he was negotiating with the Natives there assembled, and I feel convinced that a large saving, both in time and money, was effected by his being placed in funds promptly to conduct these negotiations. I trust that you will approve of my action in this matter, and that the amount advanced will be at once repaid.

Permit me further to suggest that provision should be made in future for providing funds by which advantage can be taken promptly of such circumstances as the above, which occasionally arise.

I have, &c.,

THOMAS B. GILLIES, Superintendent.

The Hon. the Colonial Secretary, Wellington.

Enclosure Mr. JAMES MACKAY, jun., to the SUPERINTENDENT of AUCKLAND.

New Zealand Native Land Agency, Auckland, 20th March, 1872.

SIR,—

Referring to your request that I would inform you as to the progress made by me in purchasing and negotiating for the purchase of Native lands on the Coromandel Peninsula, I have the honor to inform you that no purchase has as yet been completed by me. The surveys and negotiations for the Waikawau and Cape Colville Blocks are in a forward state, and I anticipate being able to acquire these at a price not exceeding 2s. per acre. I have made considerable advances on account of these purchases, having either paid for or made myself privately responsible for goods and stores amounting to £1,367 1s. 5d. I have made application to the Agent for the General Government for an advance to enable me to recoup myself the sums actually paid from private funds, and to pay the other amounts for which I have become responsible, and have as yet received no reply to my communication, which was made on the 4th instant.

A sum of £5,000 would probably accomplish this now, and as the area of the Waikawau Block is estimated by the surveyor, O. M. Creagh, to be about 100,000 acres; and the Cape Colville Block is estimated by Mr. Tole to be about 50,000 acres. This would be a very desirable purchase, being only 8d. per acre.

I have made arrangements for the survey and purchase of the Whangamata and Hikutaia Blocks, but have deferred entering further on these at present, until the completion of the telegraph line through that district, for fear of any complication arising to delay that important public work.

Unless the General Government can make some alteration in financial matters, so as to make it as easy to purchase for the Crown as for private persons, the acquirement of these lands will be tedious and difficult. The great point in buying land from Natives is to be able to have money at command to take advantage of favourable opportunities like the present.

Dr. Pollen being absent from Auckland, and not being likely to return for some time, and as it is impossible without funds to proceed further with those negotiations, I would beg to request that you will be as good as to advance the sum of £2,000 to enable me to conclude these purchases, which are a matter of great importance to the Province, and to make provision for further advances, if necessary, not exceeding the sum of £5,000 above mentioned, and which advances I think you are justified in making, pending the completion of the General Government arrangements for supplying the necessary funds.

I have, &c.,

JAMES MACKAY, Junr., Agent for Land Purchase, New Zealand Government.

His Honor the Superintendent, Auckland.

No. 32. Mr. JAMES MACKAY, Junr., to the Hon. the MINISTER for PUBLIC WORKS.

Kennedy Bay.—Respecting its purchase. Wellington, 23rd July, 1872.

SIR,—

Referring to the question of the proposed purchase of the Harataunga or Kennedy Bay Block, Coromandel Peninsula, I have the honor to inform you that in accordance with your request I have communicated with His Honor the Superintendent of Auckland on the subject, and he is willing for the purchase to be made for any sum not exceeding Five thousand pounds: provided that all the flat land, excepting the portion absolutely required for Native residence and cultivation, be purchased at the same time and included with the remainder of the block for that price.

I have, &c.,

JAMES MACKAY, Jun.

The Hon. the Minister for Public Works,
Wellington.

No. 33. His Honor the SUPERINTENDENT, Auckland, to the Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Wellington, 26th July, 1872.

SIR,—

I have the honor to acknowledge receipt this day of your's of 24th instant, requesting the expression of my views on the enclosed copy of letter from Mr. Mackay as to land purchase at Harataunga. My views are correctly stated by Mr. Mackay in his letter.

I have, &c.,

THOMAS B. GILLIES, Superintendent, Auckland.

The Hon. the Colonial Secretary, Wellington,

No. 34. Mr. JAMES MACKAY, jun., to the Hon. the MINISTER for PUBLIC WORKS.

Whakairi—Purchase commenced. Wellington, 28th September, 1872.

SIR,—

I have the honor to inform you that negotiations have been entered into for the purchase of the Whakairi or Waiwhakaurunga Block, near Shortland, which contains nearly 15,000 acres, the title to which has been investigated by the Native Land Court; and I believe it can be purchased for two shillings per acre. I have, therefore, the honor to request authority to complete the arrangements, and also that the Agent for the General Government at Auckland be authorized to advance to me the sum of One thousand five hundred pounds for that purpose.

I have, &c.,

JAMES MACKAY, Jun., Agent for Native Land Purchases,
Immigration and Public Works Act.

The Hon. the Minister for Public Works,
Wellington.

JAMES MACKAY, Jun., to the AGENT, GENERAL GOVERNMENT, Auckland.

Coromandel and Hauraki.—Forwarding Return of Lands purchased. New Zealand Native Land Agency, Auckland 24th, March, 1873.

SIR,—

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of the 5th instant, requesting me to furnish a return of Native lands purchased by me, or under negotiation for purchase under the 34th section of "The Immigration and Public Works Act, 1870." I now beg to transmit the information required under the following heads, viz.:—

Return No. 1. "Blocks, the purchase of which has been completed;"

Return No. 2. "Blocks for which negotiations are concluded, but deeds not executed."

Return No. 3. "Blocks under negotiation, but price not finally arranged."

Owing to my absence from the Thames, at Whangamata and Tauranga, I did not receive your instructions until the 14th instant, and as it has taken all my time since to compile the returns, I have been unable as yet to make the sketch map of the various blocks as called for by the Hon. Mr. McLean, but hasten to transmit the returns at once, and will furnish a map in the course of a few days.

I have, &c.,

JAMES MACKAY, junr., Agent for Native Land
Purchases, Immigration and Public Works Act.

The Agent, General Government,
Auckland.

Enclosure 1.RETURN No. 1.

Average rate, 2s. 8d. per acre.

I have, &c.,

JAMES MACKAY, jun.
24th March, 1873.

Enclosure 2.RETURN No. 2.

Average Price, 2s. 3<sup>3</sup>/<sub>4</sub>d. per acre.

JAMES MACKAY, jun.
24th March, 1873.

Enclosure 3. Return No. 3.

Claims upon lands taken over by the province of auckland from the general government. Mr. JAMES MACKAY to the HON. the COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Coromandel.—Lands taken over by Province from General Government. Auckland, 17th July, 1875.

SIR,—

Referring to my Memorandum of the 7th instant, on George Grey's letter of the 19th May last, addressed to you on the subject of land purchases, I have the honor to transmit herewith a return showing approximately the value of the property held by the proprietors of saw mills within the District of Hauraki. This information has been principally obtained from the mill-owners themselves, who have given me every facility in their power to complete the return. The totals are cost of erecting fifteen saw mills with working plant, £106,855. Payments to Natives for timber, including in some cases cost of survey of the blocks on which it is growing, £42,045. Value of logs in stock, £64,982. Total value of Mills, working plant, standing forest, and logs in stock, £209,732. The annual average production of timber is valued at £120,750. The number of men employed in these mills is 678. Vessels employed in the carrying trade, 27, manned by 82 men.

These figures are slightly different from those mentioned in my memorandum of the 7th instant, that was, however, my own estimate before the return was completed; the alteration is so small as to be hardly worth noticing.

The more I consider the scheme proposed by George Grey, to give compensation to the mill owners for their rights, the more I feel convinced that it is impracticable and detrimental to the best interests of the country. The goldminer is one of the largest consumers of sawn timber, and his industry would be retarded and suffer loss if the sawmills ceased to supply his demands.

I previously drew attention to the fact that supposing the proprietors of sawmills were bought out in the manner suggested by George Grey, the Colony or Province would derive no equivalent advantage, because the system of granting timber licenses, heretofore pursued by the Provincial Government, gave but small receipts, when compared with the value of the privileges granted. In proof of the correctness of my assertion, I enclose herewith a return compiled by Mr. Tole, the Commissioner of Crown Lands, showing the amount paid for timber licenses over Crown Lands within the Coromandel Peninsula, and the District of Hauraki, during the fifteen years commencing 1st July, 1860, and ending 30th June, 1875. The total is £192 10s.

I have no hesitation in saying that any mill owners would under other circumstances have paid to the natives for the timber cut on the Mahakirau Block alone, four times the total sum shown by Mr. Tole as having been paid to the Crown for licenses over the whole of the blocks specified by him.

I enclose copies of correspondence with the Mercury Bay Saw Mill Company respecting a proposed reduction of the term of years for which they hold the right to cut timber on the Taranoho and Kaimarama Blocks.

It has been stated recently that some of the deeds of grant or leases of timber held by sawmill proprietors confers rights other than those required for the cutting and removal of timber from the forests to their mills. If such privileges have in any case been granted by the native owners, they have not been exercised or desired by the lessees or grantees, and would, I believe, be relinquished at once, thereon application of the Government. I have discussed the question of ordinary agreements and leases on all their bearings with the principal owners of timber residing here, and am convinced they are willing to make favourable terms with the Crown, and merely desire to be confirmed in their claims to Kauri timber, with necessary easements in the shape of roads and water rights, to enable them to convey it to their mills, with the privilege to cut any other timber or firewood required for their own use. If these rights were secured and confirmed to them, they would be perfectly satisfied; and there would not be the slightest danger of any future misunderstanding arising between them and the mining population, who are the only persons liable to have any conflicting interests, as the land on which Kauri grows is unfit for agricultural purposes and settlement.

I have, &c.,

JAMES MACKAY.

The Hon. the Colonial Secretary,

Wellington.

Enclosure 1.

James Mackay.
15th July, 1875.

Enclosure 2. Mr. JAMES MACKAY to the COMMISSIONER of CROWN LANDS, Auckland.

Auckland, 12th July, 1875.
Sir,—

As I am procuring, for the information of the General Government, a return respecting the timber trade of this Province, I have the honor to request that you will be so good as to supply me with a return showing the number of timber licenses issued within the limits of the Coromandel Peninsula and District of Hauraki from the 1st July, 1860, to the 30th June, 1875, showing the block for which such license was issued, and the fees received in respect thereof, with the name of the person in favour of whom it was granted.

I have, &c.,

JAMES MACKAY, Agent General Government.

The Commissioner of Crown Lands, Auckland.

Enclosure 3. The COMMISSIONER of CROWN LANDS, Auckland, to Mr. MACKAY.

Crown Lands Office, Auckland, 13th July, 1875.

Sir,—

In compliance with the request contained in your letter of yesterday's date, I have the honor to enclose a return showing the number of timber licenses issued within the limits of the Coromandel Peninsula and District of Hauraki, from the 1st July, 1860, to the 30th June, 1875, together with the name of the block for which such license was issued, the fees received in respect thereof, and the names of the persons in favour of whom such licenses were issued.

I have, &c.,

D. A. TOLE, Commissioner of Crown Lands.

James Mackay, Jun., Esq., Agent General Government, Auckland.

Sub-Enclosure to Enclosure 3.

RETURN showing the NUMBER of TIMBER LICENSES issued within the Limits of the Coromandel Peninsula and District of Hauraki, from the 1st July, 1860, to the 30th June, 1875, together with the Name of the Block for which such License was issued, the Fees received in respect thereof, and the Names of the Persons in favour of whom such Licenses were issued.

D. A. TOLE, Commissioner of Crown Lands.

Crown Lands Office, Auckland,

13th July, 1875.

Enclosure 4. Mr. JAMES MACKAY to the SECRETARY, MERCURY BAY SAWMILL COMPANY.

Auckland, 5th July, 1875.

Sir,—

Referring to the conversation I had with you some months ago respecting a proposed modification of the conditions of the timber leases held by the Mercury Bay Sawmill Company over the Taranoho and Kaimarama Blocks, in the Mercury Bay District, by reducing the term of the leases from ninety-nine years to twenty-one.

I have the honor to request that you will be so good as to inform me whether the company are willing to make the proposed alteration.

I have, &c.,

JAMES MACKAY, Agent, General Government,

The Secretary, Mercury Bay Sawmill Company, Auckland.

Enclosure 5. The SECRETARY MERCURY BAY SAW MILL COMPANY to Mr. MACKAY.

Custom House Street, Auckland, 13th July, 1875.

Sir,—

In reply to your communication of 5th instant, and conversation held between ourselves, re leases of Kauri held by this Company, I am directed by the Directors of this Company to inform you that they have agreed to recommend to the Shareholders that the lease of the Kaimarama Block be reduced to twenty-one years, and the Taranoho Block to forty years. A meeting of shareholders will shortly be held, the result of which I will inform you of.

I have, &c.,

BENJ. GILMORE, Secretary.

James Mackay, Esq., Agent General Government.

Hauraki—Report of Visit to that District. Native Secretary's Office, Auckland, 5th June, 1857.

Sir,—

I have the honor to report for your Excellency's information the result of my late visit to the Thames and Coromandel Harbour Districts.

Pukorokoro.

- First—After leaving Auckland I proceeded to the Thames, where I had a conference with the Ngatipaoa tribe respecting the purchase of the Piako District. The Ngatipaoa chiefs followed me in their canoes to Pukorokoro, a small river to the west of the Piako, where I found Mr. Drummond Hay and a party of Natives. I held a meeting with the whole of the claimants, who agreed to proceed with Mr. Hay to point out the boundaries of their land, and settle their conflicting claims and differences respecting such portions as were claimed by other tribes. This being completed, Mr. Hay was instructed (a copy of which is herewith enclosed) to furnish a plan of the district about to be ceded, estimated at 140,000 acres, and a date was to be fixed on which all the claimants should be assembled at Auckland to effect a final settlement of that long-pending question.
- Secondly—From Pukorokoro I proceeded up the Thames in the expectation of meeting Taraia, who had left there some days previously; consequently I have not been able to see him in reference to the purchase of some land he offered to the Government in the Coromandel District, near Cape Colville.

Patene Puhata's Offer of Land at Coromandel.

- Thirdly—From the Thames I came back to Waiheke for the chief Puhata, who has offered to give up a space of land containing about four or five square miles for the purpose of gold-digging, which offer may be availed of by the Government, if necessary; although I conceive it would be more prudent to discourage the search for gold until negotiations connected with the purchase are more matured.
- There is at present a general indisposition on the part of the Natives to alienate their lands at Coromandel Harbour, and, with the exception of the unsold portions of Mercury Island and a few small blocks on the main, there is nothing else open for immediate purchase in that district. These places they offer should be purchased as a means of leading to more extensive sales; but this must be done with caution as, if the Natives find an eagerness on the part of the Government to acquire their land, the opposition of the Natives will increase in the same proportion as the eagerness of the Government is manifested. As far as I can ascertain it is not so much a question of price that will weigh with them in this matter as a national feeling which prevails among many of the New Zealand tribes by which they enter into leagues and confederations against the sale of their country. Moreover, at Coromandel they are apprehensive that the discovery of gold in any quantity would lead to such an influx of disorderly Europeans as might annihilate or exterminate them.

Under all the circumstances I did not deem it prudent to press negotiations during my stay there, considering it more advisable to acquire information and disabuse the Natives of some of the fears they entertained, and to lead them to a more favourable consideration of the question.

James Preece.

In furthering this object the Government would be very much aided by securing the services of Mr. Preece, who has been resident in the colony as a missionary for the last twenty-six years, having lived, the greater portion of the time in the Thames District. Mr. Preece is now retired from the mission service. He is thoroughly acquainted with the tribes, and knows the extent and general position of their claims. I would therefore recommend that he should be employed to carry on preliminary negotiations for such lands in the Coromandel District, where he is residing, as the Natives may from time to time be disposed to alienate, and in the meantime, until the work accumulates, that he should receive pay at the rate of One hundred pounds (£100) per annum.

I have, &c.,

DONALD MCLEAN, Native Secretary.

His Excellency the Governor.

Enclosure

Piako.—Instructions to Survey the District. Schooner "Tere," Taupo, 13th May, 1857.

Sir,—

I have held a consultation with Takurua, Hoera, Te Poihipi, and other chiefs at Taupo (Hauraki), respecting a settlement of their Piako claims, and have advised that they should point out to you the external boundaries of their claims so as to prevent any future questions or encroachments by Ngatipaoa, or other tribes on the Ngatipaoa boundary. When the external boundaries are clearly marked off, it does not appear to me that it will be necessary to enter upon a subdivision of their own internal tribal claims, as this can be arrived at with sufficient accuracy for all the purposes of this Department, without incurring the loss of time, delay, and expense of such a subdivision.

When you have completed this duty you will furnish a map of the several large blocks you survey, and of such reserves, if any, beyond a swampy place called which the late Chief Hauauru wished to retain for eel-fishing.

I intended to go on to Piako to see how the work on which you are employed was progressing, but find that it is needless now for me to do so, as you have not yet reached that place.

The Government feel anxious that this long-pending question shall be brought to a speedy and satisfactory termination, as otherwise the time and money expended upon it will amount to more than the land is worth after its acquisition.

I shall be in the vicinity of the Thames and Coromandel Harbour for some weeks, if you have any reference to make to me respecting the work on which you are engaged.

I have, &c.,

DONALD MCLEAN, Native Secretary.

G. Drummond Hay, Esq.

No. 2. Mr. COMMISSIONER ROGAN (Acting for the Chief Commissioner) to Mr. COMMISSIONER HAY.

Hauraki.—Offer of Land for sale. Chief Land Purchase Commissioner's Office, Auckland, 2nd February, 1858.
Sir,—

I have the honor to enclose herewith a copy of a letter from Ngatai, Hoete, and other Natives, offering to give up a block of land situated between Whangamata and Katikati, to enable them to extricate themselves from debt; and am directed by His Excellency to request that you will give your immediate attention to this offer, and at once proceed to ascertain and report to the Government whether the parties offering the land are its acknowledged owners; and whether it is probable they will be able to negotiate with the Government for its transfer, without serious opposition on the part of other claimants.

If it appears to you that this offer can be entertained by the Government, you will be good enough to proceed without delay to look at the land, accompanied by the Natives, and survey or perambulate the boundaries.

I am directed also to request that you will state whether it is your opinion that the Government can safely make any advances on this land.

I have, &c.,

JOHN ROGAN, D. C., For the Chief Commissioner. G. W. Drummond Hay, Esq., District Commissioner and Surveyor, Piako.

P.S.—I have further to inform you that the Hira Kake had addressed a letter to His Excellency, objecting to the sale of the lands offered by Ngatai and Hoete; a copy of which, together with a tracing of the land in question, is enclosed.

JOHN ROGAN, D. C.

Coromandel and Hauraki.—Respecting the purchase of Native Lands. New Zealand Native Land Agency, Auckland, 24th January, 1872.
Sir,—

Referring to the conversation which took place between us on the subject of the purchase and acquisition by the Crown of Native Lands in the Hauraki and Upper Waikato Districts, I have the honor to submit to you the following report as to the blocks it may be deemed advisable to acquire; also as to the plan which I would recommend to be pursued for the accomplishment of that object through my Agency.

In order to arrive at a correct conclusion as to the present state of the lands proposed to be acquired, it will be advisable to place them under three heads, viz.:—

1st. Lands within the proclaimed goldfields at Hauraki and Coromandel, which form the subject of agreements between the Natives and the Crown for gold mining purposes.

2nd. Lands within the Hauraki District, not included in the proclaimed goldfields, and which do not form the subject of agreement between the Native and the Crown for gold mining purposes.

3rd. Lands in the Upper Thames and Upper Waikato Districts held by Hauhau and obstructive Natives, some portions of which have been leased to Europeans for the depasturage of stock.

The lands under the first head are contained in the Cape Colville, Tokatea, Kennedy Bay, Tiki or Ngaurukehu, Waiau and Matawai, Manaia North, Manaia South, Waikawau, Whakatete, Tararu, Karaka, Otunui, Whakairi, Kirikiri, and Puriri Blocks.

1. *Cape Colville Block.

This is of considerable extent; the area of unsold lands may be roughly estimated at 50,000 acres. After deducting the pieces required for Native reserves, the area available for settlement is but limited, the greater proportion of the block being hilly, timbered country—unfit for cultivation. Gold has at various times been discovered in several places within its limits, but no mining claims are at present occupied there. Some pieces of land have been sold to Europeans, but they form but a small proportion to the whole. The kauri timber at Cabbage Bay, Tangiaro, Matamataharakeke, and the northern portion of Kennedy Bay has been sold to Europeans owning saw-mills. I have surveyors employed on the external boundaries of this block at the present time. The title is much disputed.

2 *Tokatea Block.

This is the most valuable portion of the Coromandel Goldfield at present worked. The probable extent is 15,000 acres. This land is leased by the Native owners to the Crown at the annual rental of £500. All the available kauri timber, excepting that situated near Paul's Creek, has been cut by sawmill proprietors. Mr. Gibbon's mill at Kikowhakarere has been recently removed, and that of Mr. Charles Ring is principally employed to drive quartz-crushing machinery. There is no available agricultural land on this block, other than what is in the hands of European settlers, or is required for Native reserves. This block would be difficult to acquire in consequence of its known value. No accurate survey has been made of it.

3 *Kennedy Bay Block.

This block was formerly surveyed at Government expense, and contains about 9,500 acres. No further outlay for surveys will be required, excepting the repayment to me of the sum of £25 expended on some alterations, and a plan which was made, by Mr. Gwynneth, licensed surveyor, in order to meet the requirements of "The Native Lands Act." This block contains sufficient available land for Native reserves; and there is a flat in addition of about 600 acres, formerly leased to Messrs. Cruickshank and Smart, but now abandoned by them, which is suitable for a town site and settlement. The remainder—say, 8,000 acres—is mining country of considerable value, and should, if possible, be acquired at once, as delay will increase the difficulty of purchase. The kauri timber on a portion of this block has been sold to Messrs. Cruickshank and Smart, who own a saw-mill there.

4 *Kapanga Block.

The largest part of this, which adjoins the Tokatea Block, belongs to the Government. The remainder, about 775 acres, was granted to the late Pita Taurua; who is succeeded by a boy of about five years of age. The land is of no value for agricultural purposes. The kauri timber on about 583 acres of it has been leased to Alfred Jerome Cadman, who has a sawmill on the Karaka Stream. There are several quartz reefs within the block, which have not been tested. Gold has been found in small quantities, but there are no claims at present occupied. It would be advisable to purchase this block, as it adjoins Government land; the difficulty, however, appears to be the inability of a minor to dispose of it. The lands south of the Kapanga Block belong to Europeans as far as the Tiki or Ngaurukehu Block.

5 *Tiki or Ngaurukehu Block.

This consists of two pieces of land granted to Natives, and known as the Waiau No. 1, and Motutere; the former contains 1,098 acres, and the latter 240 acres. These are separated by a piece about 600 acres, granted to the late W. B. Moore. There is no land on this block suitable for agricultural purposes; there is some good kauri timber on it, and several gold-mining claims have been and are now successfully worked within its limits. The owners are not inclined to sell their land, and, from the known value of the Waiau No. 1 portion, a large price would in any case be demanded.

6 Waiau and Matawai Block.

This adjoins the Motutere portion of the Tiki and Ngaurukehu Blocks, and may be estimated to contain 1,500 acres of hilly land, all the available kauri timber on which has been cut by the owners of the Waiau Sawmill. Gold has been found in the Matawai Stream, but not in any quantity in the Block. The lands to the southward and to the westward of this piece are the property of the Crown, and it would be desirable to acquire it to consolidate the Government property in that neighbourhood. This block requires to be surveyed.

7 Manaia North Block.

This block belongs to a section of the Ngatimaru tribe. The area of the land not occupied by Natives or required for reserves may be estimated at about 3,000 acres of hilly country. Gold has been found in small quantities within it, but no payable claim has hitherto been discovered. This piece is bounded on the South by the Manaia South Block. This Block requires to be surveyed.

8 Manaia South Block.

This block may be estimated to contain, exclusive of the large reserves required by the Tawera tribe about six or seven thousand acres of hilly land. Gold has been discovered in small quantities in streams on this block, but no payable claims have been discovered. This piece is bounded on the South by the Waikawau Block. This block requires to be surveyed.

9 Waikawau Block.

This may be estimated to contain about 60,000 acres of land, the greater part of which is of broken description. There are a few patches of land available for cultivation on the banks of the numerous streams which intersect it; but these bear but a small proportion to the whole. The best pieces of land for settlement are at Te Puru and Wainui, but these have been either sold to Europeans or are required for Native reserves. Probably not more than 2,000 acres of this block have been granted under the Native Lands Act. The town of Hastings and the Tapu Creek diggings are within it. There is reason to believe that a very large proportion of the land is of an auriferous character. The available kauri timber in the neighbourhood of the Waikawau and Mata streams has been sold to Captain Daldy, who owns a large and valuable saw-mill at Waikawau. The kauri timber at Otuturu has been sold to Hector McKenzie, and that at Waipukapuka to Thomas Kelly. The survey of this block is in a forward state, having been undertaken by Captain Daldy and myself with a view to purchasing the whole block from the Natives, subject to the Government agreements with them respecting gold mining. We are, however, prepared to waive our claims on condition of Captain Daldy receiving a title to the timber heretofore purchased by him, and a piece of 400 acres of land adjacent to the Waikawau saw-mill, and 50 acres at the booms on the Mata stream, and our being repaid the cost of survey and the deposits paid by us to the Natives on various pieces within the block, less the proportional cost of the 450 acres before mentioned. The pieces of 400 and 50 acres respectively required by Captain Daldy to be excluded from the operation of "The Mining District Act, 1871." It is anticipated that no additional Native reserves will be required, as there are considerable holdings at Kereta and Matariki immediately north of this block, which with the pieces already mentioned at Te Puru and Wainui are sufficient for Native requirements in that neighbourhood.

The survey at present in progress is merely of the external boundaries, and some sub-divisional lines will probably have to be cut in consequence of troublesome disputes between the hapus of Ngatitamatera as to internal boundaries. Immediately south of the Waikawau Block is that known as Te Wharau or Wairuaterangi, which has been purchased by the Crown.

10 *Whakatete Block.

This is a triangular-shaped piece of small extent, probably 1,000 acres; the only valuable portion of the frontage of which has been granted to the Native owners. The remainder is very rough, hilly land, and is not approved of by gold miners for its auriferous character. It might be desirable to purchase this land, if the Tararu district is acquired, so as to connect Te Wharau, or Wairuaterangi Block with Tararu. As Te Wharau on the north, and Tararu on the south, have been surveyed, it may be assumed that the cost of survey of this portion will be small, as most of the lines are already defined on the ground.

11 *Tararu Block.

This block consists of two pieces, known as Tararu North and Tararu South, which have been surveyed by the Native owners, the total area of the two being about 3,500 acres. This land is of known auriferous character, and is likely to support a large mining population. The title is not disputed, but the Natives are not disposed to sell it. No reserves are required, the land being of a class unfit for Native or other cultivation. The kauri timber from Tinker's Gully to the source of the Tararu Stream has been sold to the Moanataiari Water Supply Company.

12 *Karaka Block.

This contains all the most valuable claims on the Thames Goldfield, also the Towns of Grahamstown and Shortland. The townships are chiefly private property, and it would not be advisable to interfere with existing arrangements. A large portion of the land, amounting to 1,600 acres, exclusive of townships, has been surveyed under my directions, and the unsurveyed remainder may be estimated at 1,000 acres. The difficulty of purchasing this block cannot be easily estimated, as the owners have been in the habit of receiving about £5,000 per annum for miners rights fees alone. There is no unsold land within this block fit for any purpose other than mining.

13 *Otunui Block.

This is unsurveyed, but may be estimated to contain from 3,000 to 7,000 acres. The land is not suitable for agricultural purposes. Gold has been found on it in small quantities, but no claims are at present occupied, which may be attributed to the want of means of communication by a practicable road, and the absence of any machinery for extracting the gold from the quartz. The Kauri timber on the banks of the Mangakirikiri and Mangarebu Streams has been purchased by Europeans.

14 *Whakairi Block.

This block is under survey by my direction, and is estimated to contain 35,000 acres. There is but a very small proportion of it suitable for settlement. Probably some portion of it is auriferous, but at present the gold miners have but a poor opinion of it in that respect. The kauri timber has been purchased by a company at Auckland, who intend erecting a sawmill at Shortland, which will be a great boon to the Thames Goldfield.

15 *Kirikiri Block.

This block has not been surveyed, but probably contains about 5,000 acres. The land is not fit for agricultural purposes, and is not in favour with the gold miners. Small quantities of gold have been found in the Kirikiri River, but no claims are held within the block. The kauri timber has been sold to Mr. John Gibbons. The large reserve to the westward of the goldfield boundary contains more land than is required by the Native owners for cultivation and settlements. Any surplus would be suitable for European occupation for ordinary agricultural purposes.

16 Te Puriri Block.

The same remarks as made in the previous case (Kirikiri Block) apply to this block, with the exception that gold has been found at Te Puriri in payable quantities, and the kauri timber has not been sold. The land has not been surveyed. The probable area is 10,000 acres.

The lands under the second head are contained in the Whangapoua, Mercury Bay, Tairua, Wharekawa, and Omahu Blocks.

1 Whangapoua Block.

This has nearly all been granted to Natives, under the "Native Lands Act." Gold has been found in two or three places in the neighbourhood of the Waitekuri River, but the workings were abandoned in consequence of the obstructive policy pursued by the Native owners. There is a little land within this area which would be available for settlement, but the greater proportion is hilly, broken country. The kauri timber has been sold to Messrs. Craig and Harris, and has formed the subject of interminable lawsuits between those parties. It is questionable whether much of the Whangapoua Block could be purchased, as it is probable the title to it is complicated by private arrangements between the Native owners and certain Europeans.

2 Mercury Bay Block.

This district is of considerable area. There are probably 40,000 acres of unsold land in it. The extent of land available for settlement is small. Gold has been found in two places, but the workings are now abandoned. Nearly the whole of the land has been granted to the Native owners, under the Native Lands Act, and the available kauri timber has been sold to either the Mercury Bay Saw-Mill Company or the Auckland Saw-Mill Company, who have valid leases or agreements extending over terms of years. I do not anticipate any great difficulty in procuring the freehold of this district. The Government have previously acquired some large blocks there, but which are of but little value for settlement.

3 Tairua Block.

This block probably contains about 20,000 acres of unsold land, mostly of a hilly, broken character, unsuitable for settlement, but which is believed to be auriferous. Alluvial gold has been found in two or three places, and it is reported that a "rush" of miners from the Thames has taken place there during the last few days. The kauri timber has been sold to Messrs. Seccombe and Son, who have a valuable saw-mill on freehold land near the mouth of the river Tairua. I think this block can be purchased from the Natives. I have been requested to get it surveyed, and to apply to the Native Land Court to investigate the title.

4 Wharekawa and Omahu Blocks.

These may be estimated at 40,000 acres of land of rough hilly character. I am not aware of any gold having been found there. I understand that Messrs. Hannaford, Logan, Brissenden, and O'Keefe have advanced moneys to the Natives for the purpose of defraying the expenses of surveying these lands, but the survey has not been undertaken owing to the opposition of some of the Natives. It is probable these blocks can be acquired, as I am informed that the liens registered in the Native Land Court by the above gentlemen can be purchased for a small amount from the holders, and this would give the Government a footing on the land.

The lands under the third head are the Hikutaia, Ohinemuri, Aroha, Wairere, Matamata, and Patatere Blocks.

1 Hikutaia Block.

This has not been surveyed, but probably contains 25,000 acres. There are a few patches in this fit for settlement, irrespective of the requirements for Native reserves. The remainder of the land is of hilly character. I have reason to believe that some portion of it will be found auriferous. The title to this block is much disputed. I have instructions from the principal owners to survey it and get the title investigated by the Native Land Court, but have declined to do so until the telegraph line is completed through it for fear of a dispute arising and causing complications which might militate against the construction of the line. The survey will be commenced as soon as the telegraph line is finished.

2 Ohinemuri Block.

This has not been surveyed; the probable area is 100,000 acres. Of this one-third is fit for settlement, irrespective of requirements for Native reserves. Gold has been found in three or four places within this territory, but I have reason to believe it will be more difficult of access than at the Thames and Coromandel fields. This block can only be acquired by degrees and by very carefully conducted negotiations.

3 Te Aroha Block.

This may be estimated to be of nearly the same extent as the Ohinemuri Block, but contains a larger area of land fit for settlement. The title to this land was disputed between the Thames Natives and the Ngatihaua tribe of Waikato, and after a protracted investigation was awarded to the former by the Native Land Court. I believe some part of it can be acquired easier than the Ohinemuri country. The Government have some land on the Waitoa stream, adjoining the western boundary of Te Aroha Block. Te Aroha is the southern extremity of the lands owned by the Hauraki Natives.

4 Wairere Block.

This is situated on the eastern bank of the River Thames, and extends from the southern extremity of Te Aroha Block to Okauia, and inland to the western boundary of the Tauranga Block. The land is unsurveyed, but the probable area is 35,000 acres, about one-third of which is fit for settlement irrespective of the requirements for Native purposes. The owners are the Ngatihinerangi tribe, who are connected with Ngatiraukawa of Patetere, and the Ngaiterangi of Tauranga. At the time of the sitting of the Native Land Court in Te Aroha case, the principal chiefs engaged me to act as their agent in any future disposition of their land. I have not as yet entered on the question, but believe action might be taken and negotiations brought to a successful termination.

5 Matamata Block.

The land forming this block is chiefly of a level character, some of it is of a swampy nature. The greater part was formerly leased to Josiah Firth, Esq., for the depasturage of stock. He has succeeded in obtaining the fee-simple of some large pieces of it at the southern extremity of this block extending towards Patetere. W. T. Buckland, Esq., holds leases of an extensive tract of country. Nearly the whole of the Matamata Block is of a quality suitable for settlement, though the land is in some places swampy and at others rather dry and exposed to cutting winds.

6 Patetere Block.

This is an extensive tract of country on both sides of the River Waihou or Thames, extending to the Waikato River on the West and to the Tauranga and Rotorua watershed on the East. The land is of fair average quality for settlement, and ought to sustain a large population. This district is owned by the Ngatiraukawa tribe, who have hitherto held aloof from any land transactions with the Crown. I would suggest that if the Government make terms with Mr. Buckland that the land should be purchased in his name. It is the opinion of miners who have visited this district that the auriferous country, which commences on the North at Cape Colville and forms the Coromandel and Hauraki Goldfields, terminates at Horahora at the southern extremity of the Patetere District.

I assume that the area of the country above described is at least 500,000 acres, exclusive of the Tokatea, Kapanga, Tiki or Ngaurukahu, Tararu, and Karaka Blocks; and that the average cost per acre, including surveys, would be from two shillings and sixpence to three shillings per acre, or a total of £75,000. The Tokatea, Kapanga, Tiki or Ngaurukahu, Tararu, and Karaka Blocks may be estimated to contain 22,000 acres, and it would not be an excessive estimate to assume that these can not be purchased at a lower average rate than one pound ten shillings per acre, or say a total of £33,000. Taking into consideration the fact that a large portion of this extensive territory would be purchased from Natives who are hostile to the sale of lands to the Crown, and that much of the land is of known auriferous character, I do not think it would be right to estimate the total cost at less than £108,000, exclusive of agent's commission.

The question of reserves for Native residence, occupation, and cultivation will also require serious attention, and it will probably be found necessary in most instances to make this class of lands inalienable.

After all questions as to boundaries, surveys, and reserves have been arranged, the title to the lands should be investigated by the Native Land Court, and conveyances be procured from the parties found to be interested therein. In cases of very large purchases, it might be found desirable to make the payments by instalments running over a term of years. It would also be beneficial to induce the Natives to invest some of their money in Government annuities. It will be necessary that forms of deeds should be supplied to me, some of which should have provision inserted in them for payment by instalments. I object to the old form of Land Purchase Deed, as the space for description of boundaries, and the signature of the Natives, is too small. I think the deeds should be printed on parchment.

In order to prevent confusion in surveys, and also to obviate the necessity for repeated references to the Inspector of Surveys for information as to previous surveys within the Coromandel and Eastern Hauraki Districts, I would respectfully request that a map or tracing should be furnished to me, showing all Government lands, granted lands, and surveyed lands within the blocks hereinbefore described. The same to contain the area and boundaries, with bearings and distances, where possible, of such lands. No use to be made of such information, except for the Government purchases.

As there are several pieces of land which have been granted to Natives, under "The Native Lands Act," which have not been sold to Europeans; and it may in some cases be found advisable to secure these for the Crown, I would respectfully request that the Native Land Court officials should be instructed to furnish me with a return of all lands in the Coromandel and Eastern Hauraki Districts for which certificates of title have been ordered by the Court, with the names of the grantees in each case. I could then, by referring to the Deeds Registration Office, ascertain the lands which had been disposed of, and those still in the hands of the Natives. Lands within the townships of Kapanga, Hastings, Grahamstown, and Shortland need not be included in this return.

With reference to the vested interests and claims of Europeans to kauri timber, situated within the blocks of land proposed to be purchased, some of which are held under valid leases made subsequent to the issue of certificates of title by the Native Land Court, and others by agreements made previous to the issue of certificates of title for the lands comprised in such agreements, I would beg to recommend that in all cases where the parties are in actual possession of the timber, and do not obstruct the Government in negotiating for the purchase of the lands, that all such agreements, leases, and private interests shall be respected, and the conveyances by the Natives to the Crown shall take notice of and confirm all such reasonable and fair leases, agreements and transactions. I would point, out that the timber trade is of vital interest to the goldfields, and is one of great importance to the Province of Auckland, and very large capital is invested in it; and although the agreements for the acquisition of timber are not in the majority of cases strictly legal or valid; yet many of these so-called illegal agreements have been made by and with the assistance of officers of the Native Department. If the Government acquired the kauri timber, it would only be destroyed by miners and bush fires. At the present time, where the kauri timber is not the property of mill owners, it is a fruitful source of discontent between the miners, Government officers, and the Native proprietors.

I will, at the earliest opportunity, furnish the Government with a sketch map, showing approximately the position of the various blocks of land alluded to in this report, for purposes of reference when any question arises. I must, however, state that I only give such information on the understanding that the Government employ no agent other than myself to conduct the negotiations for the purchase of the lands herein alluded to, as it would be manifestly unjust to me to supply other agents with information acquired by myself for my own business, and which they are not in a position to obtain, or to furnish to the Government.

In conclusion, I beg to state that as the Government have confided this important and responsible business to me, no effort shall be spared on my part to bring the negotiations to a successful termination, and one which will be beneficial to the interests of the Colony, and meet with the approval of the Government.

I have, &c.,

JAMES MACKAY, Junr.

The Hon. the Minister for Public Works, Wellington.

No. 4. The UNDER SECRETARY of PUBLIC WORKS to Mr. JAMES MACKAY, Junr.

Reply of Minister for Public Works. Public Works Office, Wellington, 4th March, 1872.

Sir,—

I have the honor by direction of Mr. Ormond to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 24th January, in which you report your views in reference to the purchase from the Natives of various blocks of land in the Coromandel, Hauraki, and Upper Thames districts.

You have already been authorized by Mr. Ormond to initiate negotiations, and I am now directed to inform you fully on the several points raised in your letter, and to express the hope that in engaging your services, advantages of a most important character—as regards the settlement of the country—will result.

Mr. Ormond has read with much interest the detailed description of the blocks comprised in the three classes into which you have divided them; but not being prepared at present to indicate to which of these blocks your attention should be more immediately directed, he will be obliged if you will report from time to time such of them as you see your way to acquire, giving particulars not only of the probable acreage and cost, but the value of the land as regards its relative position, mining capabilities, timber, or other resources, so that the question of price may be taken into consideration with a full knowledge of all the facts of the case, and the purchase assented to or declined. This consideration will have to be given block by block, because while it is the intention to purchase generally the blocks named in your letter, yet as the total estimate of their cost is stated by you at £108,000, it might not be convenient to purchase the whole within any particular period. With reference, however, to the blocks in the third class, Mr. Ormond will be glad to receive an estimate as soon as possible, as these lands—being suitable for the location of immigrants, and otherwise advantageous for settlement—come more immediately within the scope of and the objects contemplated by the Immigration and Public Works Acts. In thus directing your attention specially to the acquisition of the blocks in the third class, I am directed to assure you that no unnecessary delay shall occur in considering and arriving at a determination on the reports and estimates you submit.

The only remark necessary to make with regard to the order of the acquisition of blocks enumerated in classes 1 and 2, is that in directing your attention to purchases in the Coromandel and Hauraki Districts, it would be advisable to give the preference to those blocks that are known to be auriferous.

It will be necessary that the surveys shall be undertaken under the direction of the Inspector of Surveys, Mr. Heale, who will be instructed to have completed those which you indicate from time to time, and to consult your wishes with a view to employing, whenever practicable, those officers who have the tact of working well in Native districts.

Dr. Pollen will be impressed with funds sufficient to meet the payments you will be called on to make, and Mr. Ormond will consult the Treasury with a view to prevent the delays you anticipate. There are, however, certain requirements of the Treasury which it will not be possible to relax, and you will have therefore to take care that you keep Dr. Pollen advised a reasonable time beforehand of what sums you will require, and that your accounts supported by vouchers for the expenditure of one advance be rendered before requiring a second.

Mr. Ormond cordially endorses your suggestion as to the advantages of making Native reserves for the purposes of residence, occupation, and cultivation where necessary, and to the consent of the Natives being obtained to render them inalienable.

It is desired that as opportunity offers the blocks should be submitted to the Native Land Court for investigation of title; but if, however, cases arise in which you decide to recommend a cession to the Crown as preferable, Mr. Ormond will be glad to receive for consideration a report of the special circumstances which induce you to make such recommendation. The present form of deed being deemed by you defective, you will be good enough to send an amended draft for approval. As regards the mode of payment in the case of large purchases, it may, Mr. Ormond thinks, be advisable to adopt your suggestion of making the payment by instalments over a term of years, and it certainly would be desirable wherever practicable to induce the investment of a portion of the purchase money in colonial securities, or in life annuities, &c., in the Government Annuities Office.

The Inspector of surveys will be instructed to afford you every information in his power as to previous surveys, and to furnish you with any maps or tracings, giving the details you desire. The Chief Judge of the Native Land Court will also be communicated with, in order to your being supplied with particulars relative to the lands for which certificates have been ordered by the Court.

Mr. Ormond is fully aware of the influence which the holders of timber rights and claims might exercise in opposition to the sale of the lands by the Natives and the policy of respecting those claims whether legal or equitable; but it must at the same time be borne in mind that many of the blocks on the Coromandel Peninsula have, apart from their mining value, no other value than that which their timber gives them, the right to which has you state in many cases been alienated and required to be conserved. In estimating the purchase money of all such blocks as have not acquired a value for mining purposes this should be taken into consideration, as the Government will have no option but to avoid interference with these old arrangements wherever it is practicable to do so.

You are requested to furnish the sketch map in your possession showing the relative position of the blocks alluded to in your letter, and Mr. Ormond desires me to state that in entrusting to you the responsible task of effecting these large and important purchases, the Government will certainly not employ any agent whose duties will clash with the arrangements entered into by you for that object.

I am directed in conclusion to express the hope that the successful execution of the duty devolving on you will enable the Government at no distant date to throw open to the enterprise and industry of settlers a portion of country, the development of the resources of which cannot fail materially to promote the prosperity of the colony.

I have, &c.,

JOHN KNOWLES, Under-Secretary.

James Mackay, Esq.

Mr. E. W. PUCKEY to the UNDER-SECRETARY, Native. Department.

Hauraki.—Purchase of foreshore. Native Office, Thames, 21st April, 1873.
Sir,—

I have the honor to forward herewith a detailed statement of the purchase of the Thames foreshore, showing the progress of operations to the present time. This statement shows fully what has been done and what requires to be done. Had time permitted, I intended to attach hereto a statement showing what moneys would be required to complete the purchase at the same rate at which the purchases have hitherto been made.

I have, &c.,

E. W. PUCKEY.

The Under-Secretary, Native Department, Wellington.

Enclosure.Return SHOWING THE PURCHASED AND UNPURCHASED INTERESTS OF NATIVES TO THE FORESHORE IN HAURAKI DISTRICT.

No. 6.Mr. COMMISSIONER HAY to the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

Thames—Reporting on certain Native Claims referred to him. Koupu, 13th June, 1858.
Sir,—

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of letters dated 9th January, 1858, and 2nd February, 1858, delivered to me yesterday on my return from the Piako. In reply to letter bearing date 9th January, containing copies of letters from Te Hoterene and Wharerurutu to the effect that Kohatuanoa should not be sold, I trust the report enclosed in this will be sufficient. In regard to letter dated 2nd February, 1858, enclosing copies of letters from Ngatai and others with sketch of land offered by them—Opukeko Te Papa, on the River Waiho, and from Mataora to Waihi, on the sea coast—I have to observe that, in September or October, 1858, the same block was offered by Ngatai, though the sea coast was not taken in at that time, This offer was made verbally after I had refused to negotiate for a block called Te Mata, near Te Putu, Taraia's settlement. I refused to have anything to do with Te Mata, knowing that Teuriwha tribe and Ngatitamatera were all concerned in it, telling Ngatai at the same time that if he could get the consent of Taraia, Te Auhe, and others, I would attend to it, letting him know also I was aware he would have but a small share, when Te Papa was proposed instead. Knowing that he only owned the actual site of the Pah of Opukeko, and, to the best of my knowledge, not a thousand acres at Te Papa, I again referred Ngatai to the Ngatitamatera, the tribe living on the land, the Whakatohea, and Ngatikoi; I offered to go with him and hear what the Natives would say, but, when I called at his settlement on the Wairoa, he was either going to Auckland, or out of the way. I would strongly recommend the Government not to advance any money on land offered by Ngatai or Hoete, but I suppose, from the time that has elapsed (nearly four months), and from Maori reports, the money has been advanced.

With the exception of the two trifling bits of land owned by Ngatai, not an acre is owned by any of those Natives named in the copies of letters forwarded to me. I refer, of course, to the River Waihou on the present occasion; in fact, amongst the whole of the Ngatipaoa tribe, Hoera and Peneamene, who rank first amongst the heirs of Wiremu Kingi (Te Huru), are the only claimants on this river. Peneamene is claiming conjointly with Paora Te Putu in the block offered by Ngatai and Hoete; there are seven or eight claimants owning ten times as much land, and of equal if not higher rank than himself (Ngatai); besides these a host of minor claims larger than his, though the owners may be called slaves by him. This attempt on the part of Ngatai and Hoete to obtain money under false pretences has done more to stop the sale of land than the united influence of all the Natives who have opposed it in this district.

I had intended to have negotiated for (after obtaining the sanction of the Government) a block nearly five times the size of that offered by Ngatai and Hoete, and I believe that I should have had comparatively little difficulty, large blocks being cheaper from the Native, attention being drawn to the large amount offered, and not to the division of the price by the number of acres. They offer also the advantage of being surveyed for the most part trigonometrically; but the feeling now is so strong that for the present none of the land supposed by the Natives to have been meddled with by Ngatai and Hoete can be got. I shall be able, I believe, to work on the west bank of the river. I enclose a letter from Te Whewheratawaru with respect to land in the Thames Valley.

I have, &c.,

G. C. DRUMMOND HAY, District Commissioner.

Donald McLean, Esq., Chief Commissioner.

No. 7. Mr. COMMISSIONER HAY to the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

Thames.—The Ngatitamatera refuse to cede land on account of money advanced to Ngatai. Koupu, 18th July, 1858.

Sir,—

I have the honor to state for your information that the Ngatitamatera have come to the determination that they will cede no portion of the land on account of money advanced to Ngatai.

Even supposing them to have consented to a survey being made of the block sketched by Ngatai, they would not have recognised the advance made as payment for any portion of the land but that which really belonged to him; and I am confident that he cannot claim more than a thousand acres, and that there would be several other claims as good as his which would have to be silenced by payment in addition to the advance already made. As for Taraia having taken part with the Government, the Ngatitamatera do not recognise any right on his part to authorize advances in money being made on a block which includes almost all their principal claims.

As my latest official information is a letter dated 2nd February, 1858, I, of course, am not acquainted with the nature of the arrangement made with Taraia, who affirms that Ngatai received the whole of the money advanced. A very slight share of responsibility rests on his own side. I have pointed out to him that, as I conceive, in all probability it was mainly through his consent that Ngatai obtained any advance from the Government; and he has desired that I should forward the enclosed letter (dictated by him to me) for His Excellency the Governor's information.

In case a report that Hopa Totohi has offered land on the eastern side of the Cape Colville Range be correct, I recommend that but a small advance be made.

I have, &c.,

G. W. DRUMMOND HAY, District Commissioner.

To the Chief Commissioner, Native Land Purchase Department, Auckland.

No. 8. Mr. COMMISSIONER HAY to the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

Thames.—The Natives prefer to sell their Lands in small Blocks. Koupu, 31st August, 1858.

Sir,—

I have the honor to acknowledge receipt of letters dated 29th and 30th June, 8th, 9th, and 10th July.

In reply to those referring to Riria's claim, I have the honor to state, for the information of the Government, that the land has not been surveyed, nor have I entered into negotiation for it.

A small Piece of land was offered by Unahi (Wi Koka) near Waikaka, but not approved of by me, as I considered this and several other small claims had better be purchased in one block, or not at all.

It is impossible to complete the purchase of small pieces of land under a thousand acres, unless at the rate of 2s. or 3s. per acre, and the Natives would like to sell separately as they think, otherwise, that they do not get the full benefit of their claims. They may consent at the commencement of the negotiation to 16d. or 1s. per acre, but when the sum paid to them does not exceed their very sanguine expectations, disputes arise; and if one Native complains, his friends readily join in his cry. The greatest drawback and source of contention I have met with has been the money advanced on small blocks, the Natives comparing the size of the blocks, and accusing me as the cause of their not obtaining higher prices.

They also exclaim that they never have anything to show for their land after it is sold, as—except in the case of one or two influential men who may retain large sums—the mass of the payment is divided amongst the tribe in trifling sums, which are spent, perhaps, immediately, and in a few months they regret having ceded their land.

The Ngatimaru and Ngatitamatera are the only tribes that can sell blocks of any size in this district, and with them I have to fight my way from claimant to claimant until a good sized block is procured. I speak, of course, of arrangements previous to the sale by Ngatai, as since then there is very little use attempting to purchase.

The Ngatimaru have always been opposed to selling their lands, but their opposition, without being violent, is more determined than ever. There have been visitors from the Waikato amongst them lately, and from what I hear they were sent to try and confirm the Ngatimaru in their system of retaining their lands. I attempted to negotiate with them the other day for land on the West bank near the Aroha, but was told to consider their decision as final; that they would never sell a single acre to the Government south of the mouths of Piako and Waihou. I told them, that, though of course their land was their own, I did not recognise their right to retain land which they do not, nor never will, cultivate, and part of which is debateable land, so that by selling their claims there they would do away with one source of dispute.

I have been for some time collecting a party who are inclined to sell; but I do not wish their lands to be offered until the old land claims in this river have been settled.

I have delayed several purchases until Mr. Dillon Bell arrived, as they were all connected with the old land claims.

In negotiating with the Natives, I attempt to point out to them the most advantageous and substantial form that may be given to payments they may receive; for instance, by suggesting a flour-mill, and pointing out a site. I have succeeded in obtaining a small block of 4,000 acres or thereabouts; there has been a dispute about it, but it is not one that will interfere with the sale, and will be settled by Te Kopara immediately he returns to the Piako.

I have been doing all I can to get up to the Ngatihiaua boundary, as the border land belongs to a hapu, who were anxious to sell when the Hangawera Block was sold, and who are willing to sell now. The King party are, of course, using every exertion to retain all Native lands, and I am inclined to believe Tioriori does all in his power to persuade Natives from selling. If the Government look upon the money advanced to Ngatai as a premium for the cession of such land as may hereafter be obtained, well and good; otherwise his share would not be £50.

These advances also contributed towards placing me in a false position with the Natives. They look upon offering land to me as an unnecessary step, only causing delay in the payment of what money may be advanced; they are also more inclined to believe the statements made by Natives whom I may have had occasion to thwart or oppose in any way. The Government cannot expect me to succeed in purchasing land, especially in a disaffected district, if the Natives see that the power of recommending the proper persons to receive payment is taken out of my hands. A Native presenting himself at the Native Department to ask for an advance is a very different being when he returns to have his land surveyed, or, having been disappointed in getting money, to give as much trouble as he can. The Natives talk sometimes as if it were a personal favour letting me survey.

The Ngatimaru have desired me to state to the Government that, as they put in a claim for their land at Waiheke, and received intimation from the Government to the effect that care would be taken to give them due warning when due payment was to be made for that island, they look to the Government for payment, as their claims seem to have been overlooked. This, and one or two other points on which they are sore, tend to strengthen their disposition to retain their land.

My time is fully taken up by disputes and complaints that I am obliged to listen to, as I cannot get away from them.

The extract from my diary I forward to-morrow, as the vessel is to start, and I have not time to complete it.

I have, &c.,

G. W. DRUMMOND HAY, District Commissioner.

Donald McLean, Esq., Chief Commissioner.

No. 9. The CHIEF COMMISSIONER to Mr. COMMISSIONER HAY.

Thames.—To avoid purchasing small and disconnected Blocks: Native Land Purchase Office, Auckland, 20th September, 1858.

Sir,—

With reference to your letter of the 31st August last, reporting negotiations for the acquisition of fresh blocks of land in your district, I have the honor, by direction of His Excellency the Governor, to request that you will complete the survey and purchase of the blocks on which you made advances in Auckland, at the time the Piako Block was paid for; which blocks should be, as far as possible, finally settled before entering into negotiations for fresh purchases.

It is not the wish of the Government to acquire land in small blocks; on the contrary, such purchases should be carefully avoided, excepting in cases when they are likely to lead to the sale of large tracts of country.

I am further directed to inform you that His Excellency objects to the purchase of isolated blocks detached from the land already acquired, unless such acquisitions are made with a view of connecting several purchases in a district into one large block, that may be eventually available for European settlement on an extended scale.

I have, &c.,

DONALD MCLEAN, Chief Commissioner.

G. W. Drummond Hay, District Commissioner.

No. 10. Mr. COMMISSIONER G. W. D. HAY to the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

Thames.—Respecting Land Offers. Te Kerepehi, 29th October, 1859.

Sir,—

I have the honor to state for the information of the Government, that I reached Wai Aro, Te Moananui's Settlement, on the 2nd instant. Te Moananui and his party have offered to cede their land on the west bank of the Waitoa. I can form no idea of the extent until I have seen the Ngati-werewere, at Pakarao, who own the adjoining land. I consider it highly advisable that the Government should avail themselves of this offer, as the sale of land in that part of the country will inevitably lead to other purchases. Te Moananui, who took the most active part in stopping the sale of land in the Waihou, on account of the advance made to Ngatae, is now ready to sell. Te Hira Kake will withdraw his opposition, and the Natives residing in the Waihou have only been deterred from selling by their fear of the Ngatitamatera.

Amongst the Ngatimaru there are a good many who are anxious to sell their claims, but they are opposed by the others, who maintain that no individual claims shall be sold without the consent of the whole tribe; not that the tribe have any right to the land, but because such sale may compel them eventually to sell the adjoining claims.

Under the present system of opposition to sale of land, especially amongst the Ngatimaru, I would recommend the acquisition of all claims offered to the Government, especially with river frontages to the Waihou.

As long as the claim is not too small, the adjoining claims would soon be offered for sale, and I think in a very short time a frontage of from ten to fifteen miles would be acquired on the west bank of the Waihou, with an average depth of two miles. There is not the slightest possibility of any large block being offered for sale near the mouth of the Waihou, and those Natives who are now willing to sell their claims, would in all probability make the strongest opposition were land offered for sale there, at any future time, unless their right to sell is recognized.

The Ngatitamatera are to meet in the Waihou, about the middle of December, when they will enter into negotiations for land in that part of the country. In the Waihou, much time necessarily elapses before anything can be settled finally about the land, the claimants living so far apart; and in the present instance, the sale of land having been altogether put a stop to by general consent, they must all re-assemble to remove the restriction.

I expect some of the Ngatipaoa in a few days, when I hope I may be enabled to take further steps towards consolidating the Piako Block.

Taraia has again spoken of some land he wishes to cede on the east bank of the Wairoa. I have arranged to go there with him, on my return to Auckland.

I have, &c.,

GEO. W. DRUMMOND HAY, District Commissioner, Thames.

The Chief Commissioner, Auckland.

Mr. COMMISSIONER HAY to the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

Thames.—General Report as to the State of the Land-purchasing Operations in his District.

THE land for thirty-five miles south of the mouths of the Waihou and Piako Rivers, bounded on the West by the wooded range between the Piako and the Waikato, on the East by the coast line between Tairua and Katikati (Tauranga) is the only portion of the district at present available for land purchase. The land lying to the south of this tract of country is in the hands of tribes who are thoroughly opposed to the sale of the land.

The above-mentioned boundaries give an approximate area of Six hundred thousand (600,000) acres as the extent over which purchases may be effected. The total acreage of land over which the Native title has been extinguished, including land under negotiation, and land offered, but for which negotiations have not yet commenced, is One hundred and eight thousand five hundred (108,500) acres.

One third of the area to be deducted as not available, such as the wooded ranges, and part of the swamps, leaves available land 400,000 acres.

Out of this quantity, the Native title would be extinguished over 72,300 acres, inclusive of land already purchased, as soon as negotiations are recommenced.

16,000 acres of land were bought and finally paid for during the year ending June, 1860.

9,000 acres were surveyed during the same year; as the rest of the land purchased adjoined land already surveyed, there was data enough to ascertain the area. The average price was 1s. 10d. per acre. The land is of fair average quality; and, by purchasing blocks in different parts of the district, the peculiar distribution of the claims of different tribes renders the cession of the intervening land a certainty.

14,000 acres are under negotiation; the sum of £320 has been paid on this land; when the final payments are made, the average price will be 1s. 6d. per acre. Several contiguous blocks have been offered, amounting in all to 40,000 acres. No negotiations have been as yet commenced, but there is reason to believe that this land will be acquired at the rate of 1s. per acre.

The land within the boundaries already mentioned is owned and occupied by five distinct tribes, who hold the land from their ancestors by right of conquest. There are also numerous remnants of the original possessors of the soil scattered throughout the district, and occupying a subordinate position with reference to the other tribes.

One tribe alone utterly refuses to part with their land. Their claims are not extensive, but are scattered throughout the district. The objections raised by the other tribes to the sale of the land are merely questions of price; they not finding the price in some instances an adequate compensation for what they consider the greatest sacrifice they can make, namely, the total surrender of their land.

This district having been the battle-field of numerous tribes for a period of about seven hundred years, every spot of ground is more or less associated in the minds of the Natives with their ancestry. Not a name but recalls vividly to the Native mind some part of his own family history, and however trivial it may appear to anyone else, it is in the eyes of a Native almost sacrilege to part with land which is to him a family record.

The five distinct tribes occupying the district—their constant feuds, with various success, during a long course of years; their inter-marriages, and the lines of collateral descent resulting therefrom; the debateable land on the boundary lines between the lands of tribes; the decline of the Maori feudal system; the growing jealousy between the tribes holding the land and the descendants of the original owners of the soil, who have been in the position of vassals, but who now, under the effects of British rule, attempt to resume rights which they forfeited generations ago—all these different causes tend to create a complication of title which increases every day, and to render all investigations unusually intricate and tedious.

The system of giving Crown grants for Native reserves has not been as yet introduced in this district, the small blocks of land so called having been reserved by the Natives, and are held under Native title.

I have, &c.,

GEORGE W. DRUMMOND HAY, District
Commissioner, Thames and Piako.

All details will be found in the General Report.

Enclosure. GENERAL REPORT ON LAND PURCHASING OPERATIONS IN THE THAMES AND PIAKO DISTRICT.

The only part of this district at present available for land purchase is a tract of land extending from the mouths of the Waihou and Piako, 35 miles in a southerly direction, bounded on the west by the wooded range between Waikato and Piako, on the east by the coast line between Tairua and Tauranga.

The land to the south of this tract is in the hands of tribes who are thoroughly opposed to the sale of land.

The boundaries already mentioned contain an approximate area of 600,000 acres, which will represent the extent over which purchases may be effected.

Of this, the total acreage of land over which the Native title has been extinguished, land still under negotiation, and land offered, but for which negotiations have not yet been commenced, is 108,500 acres.

One-third of the area to be deducted as not available, such as the wooded ranges and part of the swamps, leaves available land 400,000 acres.

Out of this quantity, as soon as negotiations are recommenced, the title would be extinguished over available land, inclusive of blocks already purchased, to the extent of 72,300 acres.

The tribes who own this land are Ngatipaoa, Ngatitamatera, Ngatiwhanaunga, Ngatimaru, and Ngatikaraua.

The negotiations for land purchase have been hitherto confined almost entirely to Ngatipaoa and Ngatitamatera.

The last land offered to the Government belongs to Ngatiwhanaunga and Ngatikaraua.

Ngatimaru alone utterly refuse to part with their land. Their claims are not extensive, but are scattered throughout the district.

With regard to the other tribes, the only objections raised by them are mere questions of price, as they do not find the price in some instances an adequate compensation for what they look upon as the greatest sacrifice they can make, namely, total surrender of their land.

The tribes in this district in former years were constantly at feud with each other; this, combined with their subsequent intermarriages, has rendered the title in many instances almost hopelessly intricate. The few scattered remnants of the original owners of the soil, who have till of late years been in the position of serfs, now frequently attempt to reassert their right to the land, in defiance of the chiefs' right of conquest; and as they have to be referred to concerning boundaries, and when the title is obscure, it requires considerable caution to avoid exciting the jealousy of the chiefs, while conciliating the vassals.

The numerous small claims into which the land is sub-divided, and which frequently have to be treated for separately; the irregular boundaries, which bring the land straggling into each other, often entailing the necessity of dealing with two tribes at once, a proceeding always hazardous, and not unfrequently fatal to the success of negotiation: all tend to increase the difficulties, render the negotiations unusually tedious. The title to land in this district is becoming more complicated every year; in some cases the Natives are in perfect ignorance of the real state of their title, until it is investigated as connected with land purchasing operations.

The Natives still evince the same disposition to sell, induced in many instances by the dread of their land passing away after their death into the hands of other Natives who are but slightly, if at all, connected with them. This is the case with the block offered by Ngatawa Pahau, where there are no direct heirs, and where the owners are dying off rapidly.

With reference to any difficulties that exist in the district with regard to any particular block, that of longest standing is a claim made by Ngatipango to some land included in the western boundary of the Piako Block at Kawau-tohe-roa and Tirohanga. The claim was not made until long after all negotiations were concluded, and though the relatives who made the claim were close at hand, and repeatedly sent for during the time that the boundaries were being determined, they neither made the slightest protest, nor did they comply in any way with the invitations sent to them to be present. The claim most certainly was not a valid one; the strongest point in it was vague title by descent in the female line. The alteration it would have made in the boundary was immaterial, but it was opposed firmly, as it was evidently one of the first attempts of the Anti-land-selling League to interfere in land purchase. The Ngatipango have not entirely given up their point; the question was left to be settled between themselves and Ngatipaoa who sold the land.

In carrying out instructions to consolidate the purchases on the Piako, the great difficulty consists in the Native Reserve known as Te Tikou, where the bones of several tribes are buried. The objections on the part of the Natives to the sale of this reserve have been removed, but the District Commissioner having been detached to Taranaki in August, 1860, and no operations having been carried on since in the district, the negotiation was never completed.

The determination expressed by the Natives to confine all sales of land to the west bank of the Piako has been cancelled; the land at the fork of the Waitoa and Piako having been ceded, and a block purchased on the east bank of the Piako, which connects the Piako with the Waihou land. It will be found of the utmost advantage in a district constituted as this is, to push purchases wherever it is practicable, so as to cross the country from river to river, or from the river to the coast line. It will be seen eventually that by this means, the acquisition of the land between Piako and Waihou, Waitoa and Waihou, Waihou and the sea coast, will be greatly facilitated.

The land on the upper Waitoa, which is for the most part excellent land, and to the sale of which all the Natives concerned objected at one time most strongly, has been opened up, and when land purchasing operations are recommenced, the land between the Waitoa and Waihou will be ceded. The difficulties connected with land purchase on the Waitoa were caused by Paora Te Putu's opposition, arising partly from a wish not to sell land in that part of the country, and partly from jealousy that he had not taken the initiative. Paora Te Putu having died, and his successor not being in the hands of those who had great influence over him, will render the negotiations for land far simpler.

Taraia also threw many difficulties in the way, at the same time that he pretended to advocate land purchase, but as all his opposition was grounded on Paora Te Putu's objections, he will now side with Te Moana Nui entirely.

The District Commissioner having been ordered away suddenly in August, 1860, the Natives connected with the sale of a block of land on the east bank of the Waitoa took advantage of his absence to refuse to sign the deed, on the score that the payment was not sufficient. The objection was raised by a section of the tribe who owned a very small portion of the block. Arrangements have since been made with the principal claimants amongst them to cede the whole of their lands on the Waitoa. This will remove the objection referred to, as the Natives who refuse the price of a hundred acres at one shilling or two shillings per acre will make no difficulty about selling a thousand acres at the same rate. Where there are a great number of claimants, the payment, except in the cases of a few fortunate individuals, who, by the death of nearly all their relations, have become the proprietors of the land of nearly a whole hapu; excepting in cases such as these, the payment is subdivided into such small sums that the Maori, deriving very slight tangible benefit, rarely any of lasting effect, and not being able to look forward to the future advantages to be derived from having the wild lands occupied, is sure to become more or less dissatisfied with the sale of land. It is not unfrequently the case that the Natives with the smallest claim will upset a negotiation; they are always the most troublesome.

Again, however small the extent of a Native's claim, before the land is alienated he is always accustomed to view the whole tract as his, as far as occupying spots here and there for plantations, pig-runs, and fisheries; not that he claims a right over the slightest portion that does not belong to him by inheritance, but he is well aware that, unless from some cause or other he is a marked man, he will always obtain permission from the different proprietors amongst his own tribe. The lands owned by the different hapus or sections are quite distinct in the title, and frequently there are distinct subdivisions again in one hapu or section. Of course, through marriage individuals may become possessed of collateral claims in several hapus. If a hapu, or section of a tribe, wish to cede their land, they will rarely meet with any decided opposition from the tribe, unless the land of such hapu be situated in the very heart of land not yet ceded to the Government, or as part of the system pursued by the land-league to put a stop to sale of land. Any portion of a hapu wishing to sell their land are never interfered with, where their land adjoins a block already ceded.

In no instance in the district has anything approaching to what is termed tribal rights been attempted, except as immediately connected with the opposition of the land league, and then on one occasion only; in this case also the strongest plea used by the opposition was that it was a very small block to be ceded in the midst of lands not yet offered even to the Government. Setting aside the apparent indifference of the Native to his land being occupied temporarily, or any other property that cannot be removed without his knowledge being used by others, they, of course, having first obtained permission to do so, there is perhaps no race in the world more alive to, or more tenacious in asserting, their proprietary rights, and more ready to resent the interference of the tribe, unless it be to support him, than the Maori.

The land on the Upper Waihou will, from its constantly having been occupied by Whakatohea and Ngatikoi, be found more difficult to treat for than other parts of the district. The two above-mentioned tribes, descendants of the original owners of most of the land on both banks of the Waihou, were dispossessed by the Ngatitamatera and Ngatimaru, and left for many years in occupation as vassals, paying the tribute usual amongst Natives in such cases. Their attempts of late years to ignore their relative position with regard to the conquering tribes have led, and will continue to lead, to disputes that require great caution, as well as a thorough local knowledge of the Natives, their genealogy, and the boundaries, of the land, in order to adjust them when caused by negotiations for land purchases.

NOTE.—This feeling is caused mainly, of course, from the old Maori custom of chief and slave dying out under the effects of British rule; but it also was strengthened by the land being sold previous to land purchases having been made; and for some time after they had commenced, the Maori never realized the parting with his land for ever. Wrested from him for a time by a stronger tribe, he always looked forward to some future day when he might be reinstated; and there is no doubt that this is one of the causes of the disputes arising out of old land claims.

The disputes about a belt of land between the west bank of the Waihou and Te Awaiti arise from this cause; in some few instances the boundaries in the forest are lost, the men who could have given information on the subject having died. Te Hira Kake's dispute about Te Rangiora, and his subsequent refusal to sell land, arose through Ngatipaoa having included a considerable extent of Ngatitamatera land in the block ceded by them for money paid in about 1854.

A section of the same tribe known as Te Urikaraka, amongst whom Ngatai, Wiremu Hoete, and Te Ruinga took a leading part, having obtained an advance of £600 for a tract of land in which Ngatai alone had any claim, and that an inconsiderable one, were the means of putting a stop to all land purchasing operations in the Waihou for a time.

With the exception of three chiefs, the tribe of Ngatipaoa have no interest whatever in any land on the Waihou. After a year or more had elapsed, the Waihou land was again opened for land purchase by employing Tanumeha Te Moananui's influence; and there is no doubt that, with proper care in conducting the negotiations, the Government could acquire as much land in this district as might be desirable. There will be some opposition on the part of Hoterene Taipari and others to the sale of the block offered by Ngatawa Pahau and Te Kapihana, on the east bank of the Waihou. Ngatawa is supported, and his undoubted title to the land recognised, by Ngatiwhanauha of Wharekawa and Waiau, who, as well as Ngatikaraua, propose ceding a large tract contiguous to the block offered by Ngatawa. Te Hoterene's objections are that some land of his adjoins that offered by Ngatawa, and adds the usual cry of the Land League that the land shall not be sold. Te Hoterene has attached himself for the last three years to the Maori party, and is a strong partizan of the Land League, endeavouring thereby to regain his waning influence as a chief.

Te Kapihana, Ngatawa Pahau, and their party have no direct heirs, the hapu is dying out rapidly, and the Natives concerned in the opposition, hope to establish some claim to the land, when the present owners are extinct.

Amongst the Natives who stand up for the Land League, and insist upon its being carried out in this district, there are two classes; the large land owners, who have not, and will not for the present at any rate, cede one acre; and the tribes termed Manene by the Natives. These are tribes or sections of tribes, who, either owning land in some part of the country where they do not choose to reside, or having no distinct title to any land whatever, obtain permission from other tribes to occupy their land; and having done so for some few generations, are naturally anxious to put a stop to land purchase, lest the tribe on whose lands they are residing should be induced to resume occupation of the land on which the Manene had obtained permission to stop.

The Manene were not exactly looked upon as vassals, but when the tribe owning the soil was a powerful one, the position of the Manene was, in point of fact, very little better than that of a vassal.

In all cases, however, the one expected and received from the other some sort of feudal service. Instances of the Manene acquiring any title to the land on which he had been residing are extremely rare; and it would only be after many inter-marriages, and a long course of years, that the stranger's claim would be entertained at all; inheritance to land was the only thing he could not share in with the tribe he had been received into, unless, having distinguished himself in battle, he was adopted by one of the chiefs owning the land. At all times, however, his burial ground would be sacred, but his right to these spots only lasted while the bones lay there; the hahunga once performed, the pure eaten, his right vanished.

Where the tribe owning the soil diminished in numbers, and incorporated the strangers amongst them for mutual safety under the general name of the whole tribe, the case was modified, but the rule was adhered to in all its principal points; the first fruits of land allotted to the new section of the tribe were looked for, and received by the others, and it was only when the Maori feudal system began to die out that the complication of title commenced, which is fast tending to render all investigation almost hopeless. The chiefs find their influence a thing that has past, unless exerted for mischief; the Manene, and the conquered tribes, ignore the position they have held with regard to the hereditary owners of the soil and the conquering tribes; the one assuming a right they never possessed; the others, quietly reassuming the position they forfeited some three or four hundred years ago, ask why their rights are not recognized. With these conflicting influences, and the information concerning titles and boundaries, all oral of course, being lost from time to time through deaths, it is evident that no time should be lost in ascertaining the titles and fixing the boundaries, before the complication increases.

A very short time suffices to create most important changes with regard to the title to the land. A Native, the sole survivor of hapu, is anxious to sell; he has no heirs, his connections are all equally distantly related to him; if he dies before his offer is taken into consideration, or before negotiations are commenced, the one claimant to be treated with becomes multiplied into ten or twenty, all equally interested in the land, and each claiming the whole of it. If the land had been sold before his death, these numerous claimants would have received a very small portion of the payment, if any, from him; nor would they have thought of urging their claims; they would receive the payment as acknowledgement of common descent from some distant ancestor, and not as a right. The only other dispute out of which claims may arise hereafter, is that which took place concerning two or three small blocks on the Piako, near the mouth of that river. One of the blocks is known as Kohatuanoa. This land was offered by Keha and Ngatipehi, and a sum of money paid to them as an advance on the land, in 1854. It appears that this money was shared by Keha and his own party, Ngakkpa Mahirewera, of Ngatiwhanaunga and Hori Pokai Te Ruinga, since dead, who received the lion's share. When the title was investigated in 1856-57, the sale was opposed by Te Aperialihama Wharerurutu and Ngatimaru. Keha was unable to make out any better title than that he inherited from his ancestor Waitaha, who was dispossessed by Ngatimaru and driven away, and that he had lived on the land in question for many years.

After Ngatimaru had driven Waitaha away, a section of the tribe were allowed to remain in occupation, paying tribute. Intermarriages took place between them and their conquerors; the chiefs taking the vassals' women as wives. From one of these intermarriages Wharerurutu is descended; and Keha,—disowning his own former position as a vassal,—maintained that Wharerurutu could not, on that account, inherit; descent in the female line not being considered a good title.

Na te wahine i hapai ke atu tana maro.

Keha's plea would have held good had it not been for the position his ancestors were placed in as vassals to Ngatimaru; in fact, he himself was in the same position, and it is only some thirty years since he withdrew with his party to a small piece of land that they own at Pukorokoro, and attached himself to Hori Pokai's party.

Wharerurutu and Keha were told that the matter would not be proceeded with for the time being.

Subsequently, Ngakapa—thinking that, as had received a part of the money, the opposition of Ngatimaru was a slight to himself—insisted on ceding land for what he had received; he offered to do so, either at the Native settlement, at Te Kerepehi on the Piako, or at Kawaeranga. Niwha Kitahi, and Ngatiwhanaunga were prepared to support him unless Ngatimaru withdrew their opposition to the sale of Kohatuanoa. Feeling convinced that Wharerurutu's opposition was well founded, and that keha's title was not at all clear, and not wishing to entail any disturbance between Ngatiwhanaunga and Ngatimaru, it was recommended that Ngakapa should, under the circumstances, be allowed to repay the money received by him to the Government. This advance made to Keha was eventually of service, as the investigations to which it gave rise were the means of elucidating information of importance with reference to title and boundary of other blocks. Hori Pokai never gave any land for the money he received, Keha having most likely paid him the money as one whose influence would assist him. The money that fell to the share of Keha and his party, it was proposed should be considered as payment for their land at Pukorokoro, but they own no other land than that they reside on.

Keha is dead, and Paraone, Karamaina, and Te Moanaroa still assert that they have ceded Kohatuanoa with a good title.

The assurances given to the Natives of the district, when negotiations were commenced in 1856, were as follows:—

That no land would be purchased without ample notice being given, so as to afford every one who wished an opportunity of asserting his claim, and of protesting against the sale if there were good grounds for doing so; that on no account whatever would villages or homesteads be included in any purchase, without the consent of the occupants, and then only if provision could be made elsewhere; that no offer would be entertained if it appeared that the Natives offering the land had not reserved a sufficient quantity for their own purposes.

This last assurance was made to meet the possible objection in the case of a hapu wishing to sell their land, that they would sell all they had, and fall back on the land of the other hapos for purposes of cultivation. At the same time the Natives were told distinctly that if any Natives, however few, could prove a sound title to land which they wished to sell, the offer would be entertained; and that if opposed by the tribe on no better grounds than that the land should not be sold, such opposition would carry no weight with it; also, in the case of the whole tribe being concerned in the offer, some few individuals alone demurring, their title would be thoroughly investigated, and their rights respected, however much the tribe might insist otherwise.

They were also told that while the rights of the chiefs holding land, as the conquerors, would be always carried out where there was no injustice in doing so, the interests of the Natives in an inferior position would be strictly looked after.

There is no doubt that the gradual opening up of the district is to be attributed to the strict observance in all cases of the foregoing promises. In a district constituted as this is, where there is a strong opposition on the part of some Natives to the cession of any land whatever, without referring in detail to the different grounds for such opposition, it is desirable and necessary to encourage and support all those who wish to cede land with a good title, and to form them into a party that will have sufficient weight and influence to carry their point without entailing serious disputes. If this were not done, the opposition would often intimidate a small body of Natives who were exercising a right they undoubtedly possessed. This refers particularly to the case of hapos or sections of tribes having dwindled away, and being tyrannized over by the rest of the tribe, when desirous of selling their land.

This plan has been carried out as far as possible in the district, and has contributed greatly, and will continue to do so, to the acquisition of land in this district. As yet the Native disturbance has not affected the land-purchasing operations in this district as far as the Natives are concerned; and there is no occasion to surmise as to what would be the result of further hostilities.

The land finally bought and paid for in the year ending June, 1860, amounted to 16,000 acres.

The land surveyed during the same year amounted to 9,000 acres. The rest of the land purchased adjoining land already surveyed there were data enough for obtaining the area; the average price was 1s. 10d. per acre.

The land itself is of fair average value, and a most important point has been gained by purchasing in different parts of the district; the cession by the Natives of the greater part of the land between such purchases being a certainty. The land under negotiation contains 14,000 acres. The sum of £320 has been advanced on this land; when the final payments are made, the land will have an average cost of 1s. 6d. per acre.

40,000 acres have been offered in several contiguous blocks. No negotiations have as yet been commenced, but there is reason to believe that this land will be acquired at the rate of 1s. per acre.

From the nature of the district, the manner in which the tribes are scattered throughout it, the complication consequent on five distinct tribes having fought against each other with various success all through the district, their inter-marriages, the lines of collateral descent resulting therefrom, the intricate nature of the title, even in a single section of a tribe, the conflicting influences of the conquerors and conquered, chiefs and vassals, all these require, in order to ensure success in the negotiation of land purchases, that the District Commissioner should devote himself entirely to the necessary investigation of title and boundary. This will always entail, as it already has done, frequent visits to the different settlements before the Natives can be assembled, and every exertion is often needed to ensure the presence of a chief, or chiefs, who may act an important part in the cession, yet have but meagre expectation personally as to the payment. Two or more large meetings are requisite under the most favourable circumstances to conclude a negotiation for land.

The Natives have idle time at certain seasons of the year; and these favourable opportunities must be taken advantage of to assemble the large meetings, otherwise an incurable grievance would be established by making the sale of land entail neglect of their agricultural pursuits.

During the months that the Natives are occupied in putting in their crops, the settlements can be visited, and all information collected from the different hapus, and the land belonging to hapus treated for separately, as is often requisite.

From this it will be seen that the District Commissioner cannot at the same time negotiate purchase of land and survey boundaries without sacrificing one duty to the other.

In general the different blocks purchased so ensure the cession of the adjacent land that a survey is hardly requisite until a large tract be acquired, the boundaries being always so defined and roughly marked off as to be readily recognized when it is desirable to make a regular survey.

G. W. DRUMMOND HAY,

District Commissioner,

Thames and Piako.

Auckland,

4th July, 1861.

No. 12. Mr. JAMES MACKAY to the UNDER SECRETARY, Native Department.

Respectiug Land Purchases in Thames District, &c. Auckland, 4th July, 1876.

SIR,—

I have the honor to enclose herewith a return of land purchase transactions, conducted through my agency, from 1st July, 1875, to 30th June, 1876.

Owing to delays at Wellington, caused by my being summoned to appear before several Parliamentary Committees, and subsequently from detention there in arranging with the Government respecting land purchases, I was unable to enter into any negotiations between the 1st July and the 31st December, 1875. Since that time I have devoted the whole of my available time to arranging questions about the Piako, Waihou East and West, Waitoa, Te Aroha, and Waiharakeke Blocks, and in directing the surveys and settling disputes about the internal divisions of those blocks.

The survey of the Piako Block involved the arranging and laying off on the ground of the eastern boundary of the Waikato confiscated lands from Pukorokoro, on the shores of the Hauraki Gulf, to Pukemoremore, near Cambridge, which has proved to be a most difficult task in consequence of the continued interruption of the Surveyors by disaffected Natives living at the Moerangi and Tauhei settlements, near the edge of the Whitekahu (so-called Piako) Swamp. I am, however, happy to say that this line has been completed throughout.

As the lands suitable for settlement, and which are so urgently required by the population of the Thames District, are, with the exception of Oninemuri, all included within the blocks previously mentioned, I have deemed it advisable to let other purchases, which were nearer completion, stand over for the present, in order to meet, as speedily as possible, the wishes of those persons who are anxious to become permanent settlers.

I have, &c.,

JAMES MACKAY.

The Under Secretary, Native Department, Wellington.

No. 13.T. HEALE, Esq., Government Surveyor, to the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

Piako.—Survey of Hangawera Block. Auckland, August 13th, 1855.
SIR,—

I have the honor to inform you that, in obedience to your instructions, dated Waipa, July 9th, I proceeded from thence to Kitikitiro, to obtain a party of the Ngatihaua Natives, and point out and mark the boundaries of the land I was directed to survey at Piako.

The unreasonable demands of the Natives delayed me there several days, but on Monday, the 16th, I was enabled to start with five men, to whom I agreed to pay five shillings per day each; a sixth subsequently added himself to the party.

On Thursday we arrived at Hangawera, and proceeded immediately to perambulate the land. For the purpose of survey I considered it sufficient to chain the front or east boundary, it being in the plain, and the principal point in the back boundary on the mountain being satisfactorily fixed by bearings.

The block contains about 4,000 acres, and is situated on the eastern slope of the Hangawera Mountain. It is bounded at the back or west by straight lines from points on the spur of the mountain, all which have been carefully marked and correctly fixed on the plan. These lines cross several steep gullies, which are thickly wooded higher up.

The southern boundary is the Stream Mangahaumia; the west boundary meeting the river immediately above a rau-wiri, or eel-weir; the east boundary runs in a crooked line along the undulating land, about 1½ mile from the River Piako, across several deep swamps and streams, to a ridge 730 links to the north-west of the River Huruhuru; and the northern boundary is a straight line from thence to the northern extremity of the west boundary, on a lofty hill on the north side of the gully of the Huruhuru.

The quality of the land is, on the whole, pretty good, the loam part being level, with a good though light soil, covered with fern and small manuka, which has been everywhere burnt; nearer the hill it is sandy and poor. But the greatest defect is the want of wood, of which there is absolutely none; and without the land between it and the River Piako, the block is, of course, unacceptable and worthless.

The latter block, however, is that which Pita has, in the letter I conveyed to you, offered to sell to the Government, and accordingly I have roughly ascertained its dimensions, and delineated it on the plan. It abuts on the Ruihauriki, which the Natives assert to be Webster's southern boundary, and up to which the land has been surveyed. It contains a small portion of forest (a few acres in a gully at its western extremity), and is of very good quality.

I have, &c.,

THEOPHILUS HEALE.

Donald McLean, Esq., Chief Commissioner.

The CHIEF COMMISSIONER to the Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Piako.—Respecting purchase of Hangawera Block. Land Purchase Department, Auckland, August 16th, 1855.

SIR,—

Captain Heale, who has been employed to survey the block of land offered for sale by the Ngatihaua tribe, has completed this service, and the Native claimants are now in town to conclude the purchase. They have already been paid One hundred pounds on account of it, and a further sum of Two hundred pounds will complete the transaction. Captain Heale reports the land to be of fair average quality. The area of the block is 4,000 acres. The price is rather high, but it is of great importance that the Ngatihaua, who are large owners of land in the Waikato and elsewhere, should be induced to sell by giving them a good price in the present instance, as this is their first treaty for the cession of land to the Crown.

I have therefore the honor to apply for His Excellency's authority to pay the sum above alluded to.

I have, &c.,

DONALD MCLEAN, Principal Commissioner.

The Honorable the Colonial Secretary.

Approved.—R. H. W. August 20th, 1856.

No. 15. Mr. COMMISSIONER HAY to the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

Piako—Reporting as to his Proceedings. Auckland, 21st October, 1857.

SIR,—

I have the honor to state or your information, with regard to the land on the Piako, as follows:—

On the 21st May last the Ngatipaoa and myself reached Maukoro. After three or four days' talk, I commenced work. The Natives, one and all, denied ever having consented to sell the river frontage, which, by the way, is scarcely available till you reach Maukoro, stating also that on several occasions they had made their determination not to part with their eel swamps on the river frontage. I found it would be a mere waste of time to press the matter, so I proceeded with the survey. The piece of land called Tikou, for which money was paid to Takupu, was claimed by Te Matete, who told me that he had already objected to this purchase when in Auckland. Commencing at the northern end of the survey, and following the eastern boundary southwards, the first reserve made by the Natives consists of about forty acres, commencing at Te Paeroa, and ending at Rerepangongo, including a burial ground.

Further on, at Te Ratohua, a reserve was made by Tipa, but subsequently he told me to include it in the survey.

At Pouriri Creek, the reserve by Te Matete and others begins, extending to where the eastern boundary meets the Piako at Te Areiriri, and amounting to three thousand (3,000) acres, of which one-third, perhaps, is available for Native cultivation.

With regard to Webster's purchase, all that I could do amounted to nothing, as I had no names to go by with regard to boundaries, and a long time has elapsed since the purchase, moreover, the Ngatirauhea—who, as vassals of the Ngatipaoa, at the time of the purchase by Webster, did not then dare to say anything—have now, from the decline of the influence of the chiefs, come forward and denied the sale of the frontage from Maukoro to Angapunga (stated to have been purchased by Webster), and declare his eastern boundary to be that laid down in the accompanying plan. I have also shown in this plan what they state to have been his western or back boundary. In consequence of the facts above stated, and from the frontage to the river having been supposed to be twice its actual length, the purchase made by Mr. Webster turns out to be only about 6,000 acres. I have worked up to the Waikato boundary, from Te Pakohae to Te Pahua. There remains at the northern end of the block about 2,000 or more acres, which, if purchased, would work up to the Ngatimaru boundary. This has been offered to me by the Natives, as well as the small reserve made by the Ngatirongo at Te Paeroa, but as yet I have not seen all those concerned in it.

At the Southern extremity there remains from four to five thousand acres (4,000 to 5,000 acres) of desirable land, which, if purchased, would work up to the Waikato and Ngatihaua boundary and extinguish the Ngatipaoa claims on the Piako, with the exception of a small piece South of Te Riu o Hauraki, belonging to Hoera, and which he refused to have included in the survey. The land about the Waikuku and Pouriri Creeks, and from Te Maire to Mangahuna, is excellent; it is also good on the Mangawhara; the fern ranges I found, generally speaking, to be a better description of soil than usual. The fact of old burying grounds being scattered about from Te Pukeiti westwards to Te Weiti Creek has prevented the Natives from selling the four or five thousand (4,000 or 5,000) acres I have already spoken of at present, as any new negotiations, until the bones have been collected and removed, would bring down too many claimants to suit the purpose of the actual owners of the land.

The land offered by Keha near the Kerepehi, and for which he had received money, I deemed advisable to leave alone, on account of strong opposition on the part of Wharerututu (Te Aperahama) and others.

In the Thames, I surveyed the land sold as Hotungaio and Hotukiwi. Two Natives, Tukukino and Wiremu, of the Whakatohea, had been deputed by the Ngatipaoa to mark off the boundaries—as, in point of fact those of the Ngatipaoa, who claimed the land, knew but very little about it beyond having heard one or two of the names.

Hahaupounamu I did not survey, owing to a disputed boundary, and the Natives did not choose to attend to settle the question; the objection was raised by Te Maupu (Taeapa).

The land offered by Te Harapa, and for which he has received money, I left alone till the weather was more favourable. Koupu is hardly worth surveying, unless the land offered me at the back be purchased; though only a very small block of some three or four hundred acres, still it is good land; and, in my opinion, desirable that it should be purchased. I arrived in Auckland about the middle of August last.

I have, &c.,

G. W. DRUMMOND HAY, Commissioner and Surveyor, Thames District.

The Chief Commissioner, Native Land Purchase Department.

No. 16. MR. COMMISSIONER HAY to the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

Piako.—Reporting difficulties attending the Settlement of Claims. Auckland, 11th November, 1857.
SIR,—

I should wish to call the attention of the Government to the following facts, from which have arisen the delay and difficulty in settling the Piako question.

They have refused the sum offered yesterday (£50) because they did not consider it sufficient; and also because they maintain that some payment ought to be made by the Government on account of Webster's purchase. With regard to this purchase, they have been most consistent in asserting that though their names were signed together in token of assent, and their evidence before the Commissioner's Court went to prove that the purchase was a bonâ fide one, still they were induced to act thus from the promises and representations of Webster, and that at that time they hardly knew the importance of the steps they were taking. I may observe that the sum promised by Webster was five times the amount paid by him; it is needless to state that the promise was not kept.

In parting with the Piako Block it must be borne in mind that in doing so the Ngatipaoa Natives almost extinguished their claim in that district, and consequently lose their influence for which money even for larger amount than that offered to them would be no remuneration, as on no point do they feel so strongly as on this.

The principal mover amongst those who will not come to terms is Te Wi, son of Te Hoehoe, and by right of descent the feudal chieftain of the residents on the land; he feels that if he sells the land, his vassals will be independent of him, his influence diminished, and himself lowered in rank. I think the Government would do well to look at this purchase as a matter of policy not at so much per acre. I would add also that the Natives feel painfully that having in 1854 given £550 in advance on their land, we appear to be driving them into a corner to force our own price upon them for land which they value more highly on account of its being their entire claim in that district.

If the Governor would authorize me giving as high as £1000 I would make the best terms I could with them.

I have, &c.,

G. W. DRUMMOND HAY, Commissioner and Surveyor, Thames District.

Donald McLean, Esq., Chief Commissioner.

No. 17. Mr. COMMISSIONER HAY to CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

Piako—Reporting on Surveys and Negotiations. Auckland, 18th December, 1857.

SIR,—

I have the honor of forwarding for your information the following report of my surveys and purchases on the Piako and Thames; attached to this report is a copy of my diary from the time I left Auckland until my return. On my arrival at Maukoro, on the Piako, I found the residents on the block (Ngatirauhea, formerly vassals of the Ngatipaoa) prepared to assert their right, not only to sell land on their own account, but to retain all land belonging to them that had been sold to Webster without their consent, and without their sharing in the payment. The Natives dispute a good deal amongst themselves, one of the bones of contention being the frontage to the River Piako. In almost all the receipts for instalments on land on the Piako the River Piako is named as the eastern boundary, but now they one and all denied and ridiculed the idea of their ever having sold the land right down to the river, especially while the old claim had been so long unsettled (meaning Webster's). I found that my insisting on the fulfilment of their agreement with regard to boundaries would, as far as the River Piako was concerned, be mere waste of time. I accordingly proceeded with the survey. On referring to the plan, it will be seen that there are two small reserves north of the Waikaka; these were unavoidable at the time, as opposition often makes a Native more obstinate. (I have since purchased the adjoining land, and with it the reserves.) At Pouriuri all the land east of the surveyor's line was reserved by the Natives on account of burial places, concerning the removal of which they could not agree, and also in order to retain sufficient for the resident Natives (Ngatirauhea) to occupy. I had one continued discussion with the Natives with regard to Webster's claims, but they were always most consistent in ignoring entirely the boundaries as laid down in any documents to which I had access. From all that I have seen, I am inclined to think that the Natives are in the right, at any rate far more so than the European, in this instance. The land included in Webster's claim that was retained by them south of Pouriuri amounts to about three thousand acres (3,000 acres); out of this I have since purchased and paid for finally about twelve hundred acres (1,200 acres); the river frontage in the block surveyed begins where the surveyor's line meets the river beyond Te Areiriri. The last mentioned purchase brings the frontage nearly two miles further north. Another reserve at the south-west end between Hangawera and Te Pukeiti, and extending towards Waikato, was also made on account of burial grounds that the Natives could arrive at no understanding about. This reserve contains about 3,000 acres. At the creek called Te Weiti, about 2,000 or 3,000 acres have been reserved. This part of the district having been the debateable ground between Ngatipaoa and Waikato, the burial grounds are more plentiful than elsewhere; however, the chief objection to sell these consecrated spots, is the number of claimants who would rise up, not because they had any right to the land, but: because they were distantly related to some of the bones. I shall however in all probability purchase all the land during the summer; and with the exception of a small reserve at Maukoro for the Ngatirauhea, thoroughly extinguish the Ngatipaoa claim in that part of the country. From Te Toke to Te Pahua, on the western boundary, the land is purchased right up to the Waikato boundary. For further information I refer you to the plan.

All the land north of the boundary of the block in question, has been purchased by me since the survey. This land extends on the west to the Waikato boundary, on the north to the Ngatimaru boundary, and on the east to the river Piako, taking in the two small reserves at Waikaka. I do not find the Natives either anxious to sell, or thoroughly averse to doing so. I do not know exactly what the feeling is amongst the Ngatihaua, but I look forward to having as much work as I can get through. It will be borne in mind that my district is not one with only one or two large tribes; but that the valley of the Thames, and Piako especially, and the neighbourhood, has been the battle field of some six or seven tribes for ten generations, consequently the claims of different tribes become so mixed up and intricate that it requires a great deal more time and careful enquiry than ordinary purchases, and for the same reason the land is subdivided into smaller blocks. It is my opinion that where the Government has an opportunity of extinguishing the Native title satisfactorily, where that title is intricate and involves two or more tribes, it should be done however small the block.

For further particulars I refer you to my letter and enclosure of the 15th instant.

I have, &c.,

G. W. DRUMMOND HAY, District Commissioner.

To the Chief Commissioner, Native Land Purchase Department.

Piako.—Offers of Land should be accepted. Piako, 30th November, 1859.

SIR,—

In forwarding the enclosed sketch of the different blocks, the negotiation for which I submit for the sanction of His Excellency the Governor, together with the requisition for the sums necessary to bring the negotiations to a successful issue, I have the honor to remark, as follows, for the consideration of His Excellency.

Without reference to the difficulties which always arise from the different claimants opposing each other, there is a general feeling prevalent amongst the Maoris that the sale of land is anything but a profitable transaction for them, and this has greatly increased since some Europeans have leased or attempted to lease runs in this district.

There is also much to contend with from the indirect influence of the Ngaruawahia (Maori King) party.

The system of handing over the land to be held in trust by the Ngaruawahia Runanga has obtained greatly of late in my district. In one or two instances I have succeeded in preventing a tract of land from being handed over. As matters are at present, once the land is in the hands of the Ngaruawahia party, there is not the slightest probability of purchasing.

I would call the attention of the Government to the necessity of acquiring all the land they can in this district as soon as possible. Every offer of land with a good title increases the probability of further purchases, if accepted, whereas, if refused on account of small extent, such land may never be offered again, and may perhaps interfere with the successful negotiation for purchase of the adjacent land when offered for sale at some future time.

I do not advocate the purchase of every small patch of land that a Native may wish to sell, but as I have frequently had occasion to state, there are many portions of this district that must be offered in small blocks.

Waitoa River.

Should the Government approve of the land offered on the west bank of the Waitoa, I anticipate several offers of small blocks on the east bank of that stream, which will lead, I have every reason to believe, to the purchase of upwards of Twenty thousand acres, between the Waitoa and Waihou.

I consider it highly conducive to a speedy and successful negotiation that the purchase money should be forthcoming, when the tribe or claimants, owning a piece of land, have pointed out the boundaries to the District Commissioner; for instance, could the purchase-money have been paid a few days ago for two of the blocks shown on the sketch, the deeds would have been signed and forwarded without further negotiation; and, though, in these two instances, I do not anticipate any fresh difficulties from the delay, yet in some cases it might seriously interfere with the negotiation.

The whole of the upper Waitoa land is excellent and well timbered on the banks of the stream.

The only difficulty I anticipate is that of Paora Te Putu refusing to cede his claim. This, however, will only diminish the size of the block on the west bank.

With reference to the consolidation of the Piako Block, the absence of one of the claimants has alone interfered with the settlement of the Mangakahika and Mangahoumia Block; a small portion will remain for which a separate deed can be drawn out.

I would strongly recommend the Government not to press the cession of the Maukoro Reserve at present; there is a highly eligible site for a township a little to the north of the Pa of Maukoro; and any attempt to force a removal of the Natives, at present would be fatal to other purchases in the vicinity which are highly desirable. Out of the Seven hundred acres forming the Maukoro Reserve, I can at any time obtain the cession of Four hundred acres, when, I believe, the Natives would move of their own free will in about a year, but I have purposely kept back the offer of the Four hundred acres until the other purchases are effected, amongst the rest, the 8,000 acres, or the greater part of it, lying between Hangawera and the Mangawera stream.

I have, &c.,

GEO. W. DRUMMOND HAY, District Commissioner,
Thames.

The Chief Commissioner, Auckland.

No. 19. The Hon. the NATIVE MINISTER to Mr. H. T. KEMP. Memorandum for Mr. Kemp.

Piako:—Unsettled Payments.

YOU are aware, that in the Thames and on the Piako there have been standing over unsettled for several years the payments upon certain blocks of land, for which advances were made from time to time to the Natives. The Government, as well as the Natives, are anxious that these outstanding claims should be met and settled on the most equitable terms; and as I find from Mr. Puckey, the Native agent at the Thames, who has been directed to enquire into the details connected with the several blocks alluded to, that they are now for the most part in a fit state to be dealt with, I have the honor to request that you will, without delay, place yourself in communication with Mr. Puckey, and endeavour, as soon as possible, with the assistance of the Native chiefs and other claimants, finally to dispose of this question. Funds for the extinguishment of the Native title to these blocks will be available as soon as you shall report that these claims have been adjusted, and the time and place appointed for the payment being made.

Auckland,

28th June, 1872.

DONALD. MCLEAN.

Mr. H. T. KEMP to the Hon. the NATIVE MINISTER.

Piako.—The same. Auckland, 7th August, 1872.

SIR,—

Agreeably with your instructions, careful inquiry has been made into the several outstanding claims on the, Waitoa and Piako Blocks. The result has been that, in order to meet the different claims, to give general satisfaction, and to make the awards fair and reasonable to the Government and to the Natives, the sum of One thousand pounds has been fixed to cover all claims connected there with. Enclosed herewith is the schedule submitted for your approval, as well as a requisition for the amount trequired.

I have, &c.,

H. T. KEMP.

The Hon. the Native Minister.

Enclosure 1. E. W. PUCKEY to the Civil COMMISSIONER, Auckland.

Native Office, Thames, 13th July, 1872.

SIR,—

I have the honor to enclose herewith schedule of proposed payments to complete outstanding purchases—Piako and Waitoa Blocks—a balance of £713, according to Mr. Mackay's arrangements (excepting recent advances to Ema Te Aouru of £50, and to H. Tipa of £20). W. H. Taipari and myself have gone fully into the claims not considered by Mr. Mackay, and we think a payment of £40 to Wata Hangata Hiri Haua, Matini Potara, and Rakena Raukuru, fair and reasonable to extinguish' their interests. The Ngatimaru have a claim, and we propose to extinguish it by a payment of £150 also to give the Ngatipaoa an additional payment of £97, thus bringing the entire amount to be paid, inclusive of advances above referred to, £1,000.

The schedule will explain these amounts more fully.

I have, &c.,

E. W. PUCKEY.

The Civil Commissioner, Auckland.

Enclosure 2. SCHEDULE of PROPOSED PAYMENTS, PIAKO and WAITOA BLOCKS.

Mr. E. W. PUCKEY to the Hon. the, NATIVE MINISTER.

Piako.—Payment of Ngatipaoa claims. Native Office. Thames, 15th December, 1872.

SIR,—

I have the honor to inform you that on the 26th ultimo I went to Taupo, accompanied by W. H. Taipari and Mr. E. H. power, for the purpose of making the final payment to the Natiyes on account of the long outstanding land purchases at Piako and Waitoa. As there were a considerable number of claimants and, interested parties it was necessary to make special terms with a vessel to convey us thither and bring us back. I accordingly engaged the p.s. "Enterprise No. 2"—a steamer plying between this, and Auckland—at a cost of six pounds. We reached Taupo in the evening, and our errand having been explained and preparation made for commencing business first thing in they morning, we retired to a new house, which Haora, had built for the occasion. We then had a private meeting with the resident Natives, and went fully into the question of the claims, and everything having, been satisfactorily adjusted Haora, in the early morning, sent off a messenger to Whakatiwal to fetch Hoera to Whareponga, whose presence at the final extinction of their, claims to these lands, and especially the Waitoa Block, both he and I considered advisable. About, 9 o' clock the, morning we assembled in the Court house, and the proceedings commenced by W. H. Taipari reading the list of claimants and the pieces of land claimed by them. This was the more requisite as Tarapipipi had raised an objection to the claims of Te Poea te Otatu and Horata Potene, on the ground that all either had a right to was an eel-weir. Upon going into the question, however, in both cases the objection was withdrawn. There was no great difficulty experienced in dealing with any claim excepting as regards Motauihihi—a piece of land contained within the Waitoa Block. When the amount arranged to be paid for this land was named, the claimants—Hone Te Koti, Wini Kerei Ropata to Aarahai, Hota Poka, and Riki Poka—refused to sell unless they got £400. They offered to sell half of the land for £200, but—as I considered £200 already too high for a piece of land consisting of from one-third to one-half of deep swamp, and the total area of it being probably about 2,000 acres—after discussing the matter for nearly a day and a night, with Taipari's concurrence, I cut Motauihihi out of the block. The only advance on this land was a sum of £15 paid to Weherua, a man since dead, and who did not appear to, have any claim to the land whatsoever.

The claim of Horata Potene was, by her desire, dealt with as though it was Tipa's, she claiming the land through him, and having no special or separate claim.

As it is possible some question may hereafter arise as to the claim of Irihia te Kauwae to Waitoa, and the manner in which it was disposed of, I may state that I have all along steadfastly refused to recognise any unsupported claim, and made it a point from the first to consult Haora Tipa with reference to claims brought forward to these lands. So with the claim of Rihia which has been all along ignored by Haora. It appears that this claim was derived from some remote Tapuna who formally owned or cultivated the land before it was taken by the Ngatipaoa, and the occupants driven off asutu; for the killing of Te Apa o te Rongi. I brought up this claim repeatedly, but Haora as steadfastly refused to recognize it, and also at the Taupo meetin g Rihia, who appeared conscientiously to believe in the fairness of his claim, brought it forward himself at my desire, but without being able to prove it to our satisfaction; indeed, had we dealt with it separately, it would have complicated matters as we should have had Haora against us. A few days after our return, however, Haorar Tipa came to theThames, and as I felt that the claim of; Rihia might, hereafter crop up at an inconvenient time, I suggested to Haora that a small payment had better be made to Rihia through him as principal seller of this land. This he agreed to, and Rihia accepted £10 in extinction of his claim, promising that he would not hereafter make any claim whatever. All kinds of fictitious claims have since our return from Taupo been trumped up, but referring the pseudo claimants to Tipa has completely shut them up, and in, order to test the validity of any claim which may hereafter be made it will be only necessary to refer such claimant to Tipa.

I found it necessary to give Tarapipipi £25, he haying some indirect claims on the Mohonui Block not previously dealt with; but this payment should be regarded more in the light of a politic stroke than as the satisfaction of a claim; also as he had some time ago made claim for a further payment on account: of the Piako Block, and as it was in his power to place—for a time at least—insuperable obstacles in the way of the settlement of these long-existing land claims, both on the Piako and Waitoa, I agreed to abandon the purchase of a block of land called Katihiha, on the opposite side of the Piako to Mohonui, on which an advance of £80 had been made to him; he foregoing any claim he might still have to the other blocks purchased. Adjoining this land and included within the same survey is a piece called Whataiti. On this land an advance of £40 was made some years ago by Mr. Whitaker, then Superintendent, of Auckland, to Haora Tipa, This purchase we also agreed to forego, lessening by so doing some considerable additional payments for Waitoa, which' Haora was expecting I append to this report a schedule of the blocks of land purchased by the Government at Piako which together with the sketch plan herewith, will afford considerable facilities for understanding what, from the very meagre information in the possession of the Government, has hitherto been a very complicated question.

Before having brought this report to a close, I should have stated that last week I visited Ohine muri and obtained Moananui's signature to the Waitoa deed, and that I also completed the purchase of the Waemaro Block, on which Hone te Kuti admitted an advance of £65 to have been made. I have also kept in hand a sum of £10 to be paid to Penetito for claims in the Piako. This closes all the purchases. A claim by Rota te Whituti for £35 I have ignored, as he appropriated that amount in the purchase of a portion of the Whitoa Block, which I had to abandon. This is shown on the plan.

I have, &c.,

E. W. PUCKEY.

The Hon. the Native Minister Wellington.

Enclosure.SCHEDULE of BLOCKS PURCHASED by the GOVERNMENT.—PIAKO and WAITOA RIVERS.

Ramarama Purchase completed. Onewhero, Waikato, 27th December, 1852.

SIR,—

I have the honor to report to you that, in accordance with the instructions contained in the Hon. the Colonial Secretary's blank cover No.—, dated the 7th December, I have marked and settled the boundaries of the Ramarama purchase with the original Native sellers and the owners of the adjoining land, according to the enclosed plan, taken by magnetic bearings, with estimated distances; and that this block, containing about 18,000 acres, is now ready for the Assistant-Surveyor to proceed with the survey.

These boundaries are strictly in accordance with the description given by Jabez Bunting at the date of the purchase in 1844.

Tapu on Road.

I have been requested by the inhabitants of this district, both Europeans and Natives, to represent to His Excellency the Lieutenant-Governor the great inconvenience they experience from the tapu placed on the old road to Waikato, and the threatened shutting-up of the present very important pathway, which has been made by the private enterprise of a few individual Natives who are not disposed to allow it to be made available by the public; and to express their hopes that His Excellency would cause one of the survey lines to be cut, of sufficient width to be made available as a path to the river, as everything of the sort attempted on other except Crown land is subject to be closed in a similar manner at the caprice of the Native owners of the ground.

The eastern boundary line of this block is a shorter cut across the ranges and a more direct route into the interior than any other which I have yet seen.

I have, &c.,

JOHN G. JOHNSON, Interpreter.

The Native Secretary, &c.

No. 2. Mr. INTERPRETER JOHNSON to the NATIVE SECRETARY.

Ramarama Block. Native Secretary's Office, 4th April, 1853.

SIR,—

I have the honor to inform you that I proceeded to Slippery Creek to point out the boundaries of the Ramarama Block to the Contract Surveyor, on the 18th ult., as directed in the Hon. the Colonial Secretary's minute, 53/510. On arriving at the spot, I found the surveyor, Mr. Hogan, who had preceded me, returning to town, news having reached him that the Pensioner force, of which he is a member, had been called out to the annual drill. Pending his return from town (whither he had proceeded to obtain leave of absence), I complied with the Surveyor-General's request, and held several interviews with original sellers of the Pukekohe Block, and also with the claimant Isaac, the result of which I have communicated to the Surveyor-General.

On the 26th I rejoined the Contract Surveyor who had returned from town, and traversed the boundary in company with him through the bush, by compass, when it was practicable, and pointed it out from the neighbouring heights when it was not so. On the 30th and 31st ultimo we completed the side bordering on the Waikato River and Mangatawhiri Creek, and arrived in Auckland on the 2nd instant.

The new road between the Mangatawhiri Creek at Pokeno and Ramarama is about half way through, and will unite with the road from Slippery Creek in fourteen days.

I have, &c.,

JOHN G. JOHNSON, Interpreter.

The Native Secretary, &c., &c.,
Auckland.

Respecting Te Puni, Paraheka, and Te Roto. Watapaka, 19th April, 1853.

SIR,—

I have the honor to inform you that, in accordance with the arrangement entered into with the Surveyor-General in Auckland, I went on the 7th instant to the Slippery Creek to meet Epiha for the purpose of settling with him the boundary of Te Puni, purchased from Ngatiteata, which he disputes, but, that chief not appearing by the 9th instant, I took the opportunity of visiting Mohi, who was in the neighbourhood, and, having been joined in the meantime by Mr. Ormsby, the Contract Surveyor, we proceeded to the place and defined and settled finally the boundaries of the Paraheka and Roto purchases with the Natives of Patumahoe, the adjoining district.

Those two blocks are estimated to contain about 7,000 acres, and are for the most part available for agriculture. The Puni is the tract of land abutting on the Roto, and extending to the River Waikato; and I thought it so desirable to get the boundaries of this place also settled (so that a definite line could be drawn on this side to the Waikato between the Crown and Native lands) that I returned on the 12th instant to Pukaki and Mangere to persuade Epiha to keep his word and accompany me to the Puni for that purpose.

To this Epiha would have complied had he not been compelled to accompany Te Whero Whero to Waikato, where some important affairs amongst themselves required his presence; he however deputed a young man named Pera (one of the owners of the Puni) to go with me; this, Pera was preparing to do when the arrival of a summons from the Resident Magistrate at Auckland for him to appear as witness in a civil case between two Europeans, on the 21st instant, prevented him.

Tuakau Reserve.

The negotiations, together with the stormy state of the weather, prevented me recrossing the Manukau till the 17th instant, and I am now going (according to the Surveyor-General's directions) to point out the boundaries of the Tuakau Reserve and Ramarama to Mr. Ormsby, and intend on my return to call at Pukaki for Pera and settle the boundary of the Puni, if possible, before my return, unless sooner directed by yourself to come back.

The rainy weather and flooded state of the creeks so retard our movements that I am unable to inform you as to the date of my probable absence.

I have, &c.,

JOHN G. JOHNSON, Interpreter.

The Native Secretary, &c.

Ramarama.—Its Boundaries defined. Native Secretary's Office, 30th April, 1853.
SIR,—

I have the honor to inform you that, in accordance with the intention expressed in my letter, dated the 19th instant, I proceeded to the Waikato and perambulated the boundaries of the Ramarama purchase with Mr. Ormsby, the Contract Surveyor, and returned to Pukaki on the 28th instant.

Te Puni.

The outstanding claimants against the Puni, who were then to have accompanied me to that place, being in town, I returned, and have since seen them here. They state their willingness to settle the boundaries and outstanding claim on that place, so soon as a Government officer is sent to accompany them to the spot.

I have, &c.,

JOHN G. JOHNSON, Interpreter.

Native Secretary, &c., &c., Auckland.

Mr. COMMISSIONER JOHNSON to the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

Waikato.—Reporting on his mission. Land Commissioner's Office, Auckland, 6th October, 1854.
SIR,—

I have the honor to inform you that I have returned from Waikato, whither I had proceeded to endeavour to arrange for the blocks, which have been partially negotiated on that river, in accordance with your letter of the 26th August last.

In obedience to your request, I not only carried the goodwill and advice of our ally Te Whero-where with me, but also a young chief named Seth, a relation of his, and an influential body of Natives from Pukaki and Ihumatao, being mostly composed of the sellers of the land; but, notwithstanding these measures, I regret to state that I was unable to obtain possession of any part, or finally to complete any of the purchases on the river. The difficulties are of two distinct natures, being 1st, those attending the claims of different tribes to the same piece of land; and 2nd, the obstructions opposed by a confederated body of chiefs in Waikato, who have laid a tapu preventing the sale of the country within certain boundaries. The lands partially purchased at Wairere and the Koheroa are encumbered with the former difficulty, and the other purchases are within the line of the country tapued by the Waikato chiefs. On arriving at Tuakau, the sale of the Wairere by Waata Kukutai was first discussed, and I should say from what transpired that Waata had no claim over the land. Tomo of Ngatipo, Paul of the Ngatikahu, and Pikiho of the Pokeno tribe, were admitted to be the rightful owners, but I could not get them to join in a sale. The Pokeno tribe offered to sell their claims, but the limited extent, and large expectations of the sellers, did not warrant me in making a purchase subject to a conflicting claim by the Ngatipo. Nini, one of the chiefs of Ngatitipa, was present; he stated that he regretted very much that Waata should have sold land belonging to Ngatipo, and recommended that the money be returned. This, of course, I did not feel justified in accepting, in case it might furnish a dangerous precedent; but I informed him that Waata must explain his conduct to yourself.

The Koheroa was next examined, and the claims of Ihaia and party who sold to the Government seemed so well supported, that I fully anticipated the completion of this purchase, and we accordingly proceeded to the ground and traversed the boundaries and marked the extreme northern end, which is a narrow neck of land. The Koheroa is a peninsula in the swamps which form the beds of the Mangatawhiri and Whangamarino tributaries of the Waikato, and might contain about Eight thousand acres of dry land. In addition to the former instalment, I offered the parties concerned a further sum of Three hundred pounds, and although they expressed dissatisfaction at the smallness of this amount, and stated their determination of endeavouring to procure your sanction to giving them a larger sum, I have no doubt but that they will accept it.

The counter claim of the chief Atua of Ngatipo, however, presents an obstacle even to the adjustment of this claim, and the Ngatitamaoho must, by promising to admit Te Atua's party in the final payment, procure his withdrawal of his demands (if they cannot do so without), before I should feel inclined to recommend the payment of any more money on this account. From all I have been able to learn, Te Atua's claims are not well grounded, and I believe that they were, at one time considered finally extinguished by the sale of the Koheroa to Mr. Marshall, and the only reason for admitting his claim at all appears to be that the purchase may turn out not to have been finally completed by Marshall.

All the other purchases named in the margin

Mataheka, Rangitoea, Parekakariki

are encumbered with the second class of difficulties, viz.: the tapu of the country by the Waikato chiefs in which the said lands are situated; the sellers to the Government have all valid claims, more or less but they are to blame, inasmuch as they knew at the time of sale that they were unable to give possession of the land. The whole of the south bank of the Waikato from Taupo and the north bank, from its confluence with the Whangamarino and up that river to its source, is placed under a tapu. Our party were followed by the Waikato tribes, to the number of one hundred and fifty men, and were absolutely prevented crossing the aforesaid boundaries. Their arms were left at Mere Mere, and as I had good reason to believe that our proceeding to take possession of the lands would have ended seriously, I at once desisted from the attempt.

That this movement is nothing new, and has not been brought about by the late transactions of this department, you will perceive by an extract of a report which I had the honor to make to the Government in June 1853, enclosed herewith, but I would not conceal the fact that this confederation is gradually assuming a more extended influence and a bolder demeanour. The Anti-European feeling they profess to have, I am inclined to think, is not real, but merely put on to increase their number, as that plea always gets the adhesion of discontented individuals of every tribe, the true cause of the movement being the following: Nga tangata o waho, or the Natives of Manukau, Te Whero-where, Katipa, Wetere, Moses, Isaac, Aihopene, Poharama, and their respective tribes, all lived originally in Waikato, or had possessions there. After the settlement of Auckland commenced, they gradually frequented less and less the Waikato, and have now permanently settled in the neighbourhood of the town, after selling the districts round Waitemata and Manukau, and as the Waikato chiefs assert, did not give them a fair share of the payment which their joint origin entitled them to receive. Nga tangata o waho, or the men living at the sea, in contra-distinction to those residing up the river, have not all their claims in Waikato in one block, or in one district, but they are scattered over the length and breadth of the river banks, and the Waikato chiefs, independently of the sacred feeling with which they view their native stream, are also afraid that if they allow Auckland Natives to sell their claims, they will also sell those of the Waikato chiefs with them, in the same manner as is alleged has been done with the Waikatos' property in the region of Auckland.

They also see that to separate the claims of those who wish to sell, from those of the party who wish to retain their land, is a task which they cannot carry out, and their claims are so intermixed that they could hardly do so even with the assistance of Europeans; and the only alternative they have of securing their rights is to prevent the Natives living near Auckland selling any land at all in the Waikato.

A bitter quarrel is gradually rising between these two parties, and, unless carefully guarded against, may end in an appeal to arms. I would recommend that no further attempt be made to obtain possession of the lands in question through the influence of the parties who have sold, but that fresh negotiations be entered into with the Waikato chiefs at Waikato, as anything emanating from Auckland will not be listened to for a moment, and the parties who have now sold and failed to give possession can be excluded from the new arrangement. The Waikato chiefs do not value so much the lands which have been partially sold, but giving them up involves a principle which will decide the right of the men of the coast to Waerenga, a valuable tract of country between the Waikato and the Thames. After our public meeting, which was rather noisy, I had several friendly interviews with the opposition, and learnt from them that, if an officer was stationed in the Waikato to negotiate for land, a satisfactory adjustment might be come to, and that, if the proposals of sale originated with themselves, they would not be so averse. They also informed me that they did not wish to prevent the sales at Whaingaroa and the West Coast but merely those, in the central parts of Waikato and along the river banks.

I have, &c.,

JOHN GRANT JOHNSON, District Commissioner.

Donald McLean, Esq.,
Principal Land Commissioner, &c.

Extract from Report, dated 14th June, 1853.

"Having performed the foregoing part of my instructions, I next proceeded up the Waikato with Haimona Paetae and others to mark the boundaries of the land lately sold by him and the chief Wetere, known as Mataheka; on arrival there, we found that a feast had just taken place at Whangamarino, at which a large number of the Waikato natives were present, under their chief Te Wharepu, and fierce discussions have occurred relative to the dispute among them about Waerenga, a larger tract of country extending from the Waikare lake to the Thames.

The chiefs had at this meeting unanimously agreed to lay a tapu on this district, extending from the Mangatawhiri on the west to the frith of the Thames for the purpose of preventing any individual members of the tribes selling any portion of this country as they think that individual members make unjust claims to lands for the purpose of obtaining them for sale. They assembled to meet us to the number of two or three hundred men, and appeared very firm to their purpose so much so, that I think any attempt at present to acquire this tract would not be attended with success, and only tend to foment their quarrels among themselves, which are now assuming a serious aspect."

No. 6. Mr. COMMISSIONER JOHNSON to the CHIEF LAND COMMISSIONER.

Tirikohua.—Respecting the Survey of that Blocks. Auckland, 18th June, 1855.
SIR,—

I have the honor to report that I have returned from Waikato, where I had gone to quiet the opposition raised by some Natives to the survey of the Tirikohua Block, which was finally purchased by Mr. Ligar, through my agency, in the year 1853.

Two parties of Natives have now arisen, claiming compensation for having been overlooked in the payment made in 1853, although they both were represented at the final meeting by their relatives respectively, by whose joint hands the money was actually received, after having been paid in the manner they wished.

Haimona, of Tuhi Mata, and Ruka, a Native of Waikato, claiming one portion of the block about the centre; and Pikiho, the eastern side next Pokeno. The latter party having expressed themselves ready to come to any decision the former agreed to, my negotiations were carried on with them.

Several schemes were suggested and sought to be worked out, by which a sum of money could be obtained without the bad precedent of having to pay for the land in question for the third time. At length, on Thursday evening, while on the spot, an arrangement was made by which the Natives generally who sold the land agreed to give up a small portion—about 200 or 300 acres adjoining; and in lieu of which £30 was to be paid to Haimona and £30 to Pikiho.

Assuming that these arrangements would be definitely carried out, the surveyor was cutting the lines and the survey actively progressing on Friday, when I left the spot on my return homewards. That evening we slept at Tuhimata (Haimona's place), when, to my astonishment, this man pretended not to understand that any arrangement had been come to the previous evening, and said that without a further sum he could not satisfy the claims of his friend Ruka. That even this should not be an obstacle to the final settlement of this vexatious question, I gave in a further sum of £30 for Ruka, making in all a sum of £100, an equal amount to the share of their hapu at the former purchase; and after much discussion this point was finally carried, and I congratulated myself on the matter being settled.

I was, however, followed by Haimona on the road home, when a further sum of £50 was demanded, accompanied with a threat of molesting the survey party and sending them back to town.

Having no guarantee that this demand, if conceded, would not be treated in the same way, I decided on telling these Natives that the fairest terms had been offered them, and that if they committed any act of violence the law would be carried out. One of these Natives, named Piripi Toaika, is involved in inextricable pecuniary difficulties, and as a last resource of obtaining money is endeavouring to procure these sums by intimidation; and as having been the agent appointed to transact the sale formerly, his conduct is particularly base in this latter transaction.

Having done all in my power, I would recommend no farther concession, but that a firm passive resistance be made to these unrighteous demands for money on the part of the Natives, quite out of proportion to any amount they would have been entitled to at the former division had they been present, or else the Government must be prepared to see similar claims set up over the whole of the outlying blocks in the province.

I would now finally suggest that a kind letter be written to Haimona, requesting him, conjointly with Ruka and Pikiho, to come to town and endeavour to settle their differences with Mr. McLean; and that, with a view to impress the Native mind with an idea of the possible result of any outrage on the survey party, I would recommend a firm letter being sent out by the hands of a policeman to Piripi Toaika, warning him that if any of the former sellers are so base and dishonorable as to molest the survey party, the law will be carried out against them. In the meantime the survey is rapidly going forward, and I hope that the declaration of the Natives will turn out to be mere threats, as I have good reason to believe they are.

I have, &c.,

JOHN GRANT JOHNSON, District Land Commissioner.

Donald McLean, Esq., Chief Commissioner.

No. 7.W. N. SEARANCKE, Esq., Government
Surveyor, to the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

Ramarama.—Reporting on disputed Boundary of that Block. Auckland, 6th July, 1857.

SIR,—

In obedience to the instructions contained in your letter of the 27th ultimo, respecting the disputed boundary of the Ramarama Block, I have the honor to report that, when the Ramarama Block was purchased, Mr. Interpreter Meurant was sent, and, in company with the Native resident at Pokeno and Ihumatao, traversed the boundary, marking trees at intervals of about a mile. The boundary line as cut by Mr. Ormsby, and afterwards extended by Mr. Montgomery, is in accordance with these marks. Previously, however, to their cutting this line Mr. District Commissioner Johnson was sent by the Surveyor-General (1853) to arrange a dispute at the north extremity of this boundary; the arrangement then made by Mr. District Commissioner Johnson with the Natives appears to be very indefinite, they, the Natives, asserting that the extension of the boundary 3° East extended only to the range, then carried along the range till it reached the boundary as first arranged, and not by any means influencing that portion of the block south of the Kumi Kumi.

Mr. Johnson, on the other hand, appears to have assumed that the 3° extension to the East for which he paid the Natives Ten pounds (£10), extended the whole length of the boundary from Taurangaihi to Mangatawhiri Creek, as he does not mention any names on this boundary as amended, or made any defined marks and as his boundary (if allowed by the Natives to be extended the whole length) would include their settlement and plantations, and upwards of three thousand (3,000) acres of land, I am compelled to come to the conclusion that he must have misunderstood the Natives, the more so that they show the boundary marks of Mr. District Commissioner Johnson's extension East to its junction with the original boundary at the Kumi Kumi. I therefore proposed that the boundary should be taken and amended as per accompanying sketch, so as to prevent any future disputes on the subject. They acceded to this, demanding the sum of Three hundred pounds (£300), which was afterwards reduced to Two hundred pounds (£200); and this sum I have the honor to recommend should be paid to them. The extent of the land gained is about fourteen hundred (1400) acres, including the frontage to the road (Mangatawhiri) for nearly eight miles, explained in accompanying sketch.

I have, &c.,

WILLIAM N. SEARANCE, Government Surveyor.

Donald McLean, Esq., Chief Commissioner, Auckland.

No. 8.W. N. SEARANCE, Esq., to the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

Ramarama.—Reporting Settlement of disputed Boundary. Mangatawhiri, 25th July, 1857.

SIR,—

In compliance with your instructions of the 23rd ultimo, on which I had the honor to report, and instructions since received from the Hon. the Colonial Treasurer, together with the sum of Two hundred pounds (£200), I have the honor to report as follows:—That on my former visit, the Pokeno Natives, owners of the land on the Ramarama boundary, agreed to accept of Two hundred pounds (£200) as full payment for the land (marked on plan). There were some natives absent whose consent at the time I was unable to obtain. They have on my reopening the negotiation thrown difficulties in my way, which I have succeeded in overcoming by payment of the sum of Two hundred pounds (£200), and a further sum promised of Ten pounds (£10) on my return to Auckland. I trust that, though I have exceeded the sum previously agreed upon, the excess of Ten pounds (£10) will be excused, considering the importance of having a proper settlement of this boundary, by which the frontage to the Mangatawhiri road is secured. I have the honor to forward the deed and sketch of the boundary as arranged by me.

I have, &c.,

WILLIAM N. SEARANOKE.

Donald McLean, Esq., Chief Commissioner, Auckland.

No. 9. The CHIEF COMMISSIONER to the Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Mangatawhiri.—Respecting Purchase of Lands and Roads at Ramarama. Land Commissioner's Office, Auckland, 10th August, 1857.

SIR,—

I have the honor herewith to transmit for record in your office the original deed, with translation, for a piece of land, in extension of the formerly-purchased Ramarama Block, situated near Mangatawhiri in the Waikato District, including a portion of the public road leading from Auckland to Rangiawhia, and acquired from the Natives for the sum of Two Hundred and Ten pounds (£210); a receipt for Two hundred pound (£200) of which sum is borne upon the back of the deed.

Having already referred to the causes which led Mr. Searancke to exceed the sum allowed for this purpose, I have now the honor to request a receipt for the deed in the usual form.

I have, &c.,

THOMAS H. SMITH, For Chief Commissioner.

The Hon. the Colonial Secretary.

No. 10. Mr. COMMISSIONER ROGAN to the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

Mangatawhiri.—Right-of-way, &c., on Great South Road purchased. Auckland, 16th May, 1857.

SIR,—

I have the honor to enclose herewith a receipt for two pounds, which has been paid to Hami of Pokeno, near Mangatawhiri, for a right of road and a small strip of land, situated on the Great South Road from Auckland to Mangatawhiri.

I have, &c.,

JOHN ROGAN, District Commissioner.

Donald McLean, Esq., Chief Commissioner.

No. 11. The RESIDENT MAGISTRATE, Waipa, to the Hon. the NATIVE MINISTER.

Waikato.—Native Lands being sold or leased to Europeans. Whatawhata, 22nd May, 1865.
SIR,—

I have the honor to report for your information that a large number of the Natives in my district are leasing and selling land to Europeans without the least reference to the Government whatever.

A block of valuable land has been bought at Tamahere by an officer of the Militia Regiment at Hamilton, and Mr. G. G. has leased an adjacent block at a ridiculously low rental. His son, I believe, was the surveyor of that district, and being instructed to make a reserve for the Natives, reserved the block I refer to, and immediately leased it. I cannot refrain from saying that if this indiscriminate sale and lease is permitted, it must end in the utter ruin of the Maoris.

I saw, accidentally, a letter from William Thompson to Raihi, appointing the latter his agent for the sale or lease of the land I referred to as purchased.

I have written to Mr. Fenton on the subject, but as yet have received no answer. A curious case has recently come under my notice. Two Natives, playing at cards, decided that certain quantities of land should be the stake. Accordingly one Native lost some 600 acres, but as his only possession consisted in a block allotted to the Militia the winner asked for a summons for the value of the land he had thus won! I quote this as one of many similar cases.

I have, &c.,

R. C. MAINWARING, R.M.

The Hon. the Native Minister.

No. 1. The Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY to the CHIEF PROTECTOR.

Instructions for Mr. E. Meurant. Colonial Secretary's Office, Auckland, 6th November, 1841.
SIR,—

It being determined to send Edward Meurant to the chiefs of the Waikato tribe to treat with them relative to the purchase of a piece of land which they offer to sell to Her Majesty's Government on the banks of the Waipa, I have it in command from His Excellency the Governor to request that you will instruct that gentleman to proceed on Monday, the 8th November, to visit Waikato, Waipa, Whaingaroa, Aotea, Kawhia, and Mokau.

On his arrival at the place of his destination, he will have an interview with the chiefs of each of these places, and read to them the enclosed letter from the Governor. He will then examine the land which they are anxious to sell, making them clearly understand that the Governor wishes to preserve them in the undisturbed possession of their dwellings, cultivations, and such other portions of their land as they may wish to retain for their own use.

He will make himself acquainted with the names of the chiefs who have the right to sell the land, the extent of land they are willing to part with, and the price at which they value it. He will then appoint a day for the chiefs to assemble at Ngaruawahia, the place proposed by Te Wherowhero, to meet an officer of Her Majesty's Governments to treat finally for the possession of the land.

In the course of his communications with the chiefs he will use every endeavor to assure them of the good faith of the Government, and of the determination of the Governor to use no unfair means to deprive them of their lands. He will be as expeditious as possible in accomplishing the object of his journey, and on his return make a report to the Government, through you, of the success of his measures.

Should he find the chiefs willing to undertake to clear a road between Kawhia and Taranaki, he will express the Governor's wish that it should be done, and ascertain the amount of payment they will require for their work.

I have, &c.,

JAS. STUART FREEMAN, Chief Clerk (for the Colonial Secretary).

The Chief Protector of Aborigines.

No. 2.Mr. COMMISSIONER ROGAN to the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

Karioi.—Reporting completion of the Survey of that Block. Whaingaroa, 9th August, 1855.
SIR,—

I have the honor to inform you that the survey of Karioi, the land offered to the Government by the chief Hoani Papita and the Native owners in this district, is completed, and I have ascertained its area to be about twelve thousand (12,000) acres, exclusive of a Native reserve containing about six hundred (600) acres.

The Natives decided on retaining the whole of the water frontage, from the entrance of the harbour inland to the proposed township, and following Mr. Ligar's boundary for about two miles, which comprises nearly the whole of the available land in this block. The land southward of the Native reserve is rendered unavailable owing to a great number of ridges and ravines running from the top of the mountain to the sea, and the land on the opposite side of the mountain, towards the inland boundary, is formed in a similar manner. After due consideration, I offered the Natives a sum of Four hundred and seventy-five pounds (£475), One hundred pounds (£100) having been paid by you to the Native Kereopa by way of instalment on land within the present survey, known as the Hutiwai. They have unanimously declined this offer, and requested me to refer the question for your consideration.

I therefore respectfully request that you will favour me with a reply to this letter, in order that I may inform the Natives of your decision as to whether a sum in addition to that already offered will be given them.

I have, &c.,

JOHN ROGAN, District Commissioner.

Donald McLean, Esq., Principal Commissioner, Auckland.

No. 3.The CHIEF COMMISSIONER to Mr.

OMMISSIONER ROGAN.

Karioi.—Approving of Price offered for the Block. Land Purchase Department, Auckland, 17th August, 1855.
SIR,—

I have the pleasure to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 9th instant, reporting that you have completed the survey of Karioi, and find its area to be about 12,000 acres, for which you have offered the Natives a sum of Four hundred and seventy-five pounds (£475), in addition to a sum of One hundred pounds (£100) previously paid on account of a portion of that land at Hutiwai. I consider the offer you have made is very judicious, and you may acquaint the Natives that they must consider it as conclusive.

I have, &c.,

DONALD MCLEAN.

John Rogan, Esq., District Commissioner.

No. 4. Mr. COMMISSIONER ROGAN to the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

Hauraki.—Reporting on its purchase. Whaingaroa, 13th October, 1855.
SIR,—

I have the honor to submit to you, for the information of His Excellency the Governor, the following report on the Hauraki purchase.

Hauraki is situated in the Whaingaroa Harbour, and affords anchorage for vessels of moderate size off several points of the land as far inland as the entrance to Waitetuna River. It has altogether about six miles of water frontage, the greater part of which, however, is approachable only by boat at high water. It contains nine hundred acres (900) more or less, including one Native reserve about sixteen acres.

The features of the land are a number of low undulating ridges of hills, running from the centre towards the water's edge, with occasional flat valleys intervening; the whole of which is covered with fern, manuka scrub, and light bush, and the soil appears to be of superior quality.

The chief Potatau has received the sum of Fifty pounds (£50) on 25th July, 1854, as a first payment for the same.

The principal claimants residing in the district are two parties who dispute each other's right to 200 acres. With a view to settle the difference between these people, I proposed that they should meet and discuss the question in the presence of the resident missionary, to which they agreed; but the Ngatimahanga claimants only attended, who demanded Fifty pounds (£50) for their portion of the payment. I offered them Ten pounds (£10), which was refused.

The Ngatitainu claimants, relatives of Te Wherowhero, who are, in my opinion, the real owners of the land in dispute, expressed to me their intention of visiting Auckland soon, for the purpose of arranging with you for their claims.

The enclosed sketch plan will explain more distinctly the boundaries of the land referred to.

I have, &c.,

JOHN ROGAN, District Commissioner.

Donald McLean, Esq., Principal Commissioner, Auckland.

No. 5. Mr. COMMISSIONER ROGAN to the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

Tawatahi and Oioroa.—Reporting on those Blocks. Whaingaroa, 15th November, 1855.
SIR,—

I have the honor to submit to you, for the information of His Excellency the Governor, the following report on land in the district, the exterior boundaries of which have been traversed.

Tawatahi Block, situated on the north side of Whaingaroa Harbour, having water frontage to each side of Tawatahi Creek for more than two miles, which is navigable by boat at high water. It is more than six miles in length, and averages more than a mile in breadth. It contains about Four thousand acres (4,000), and there are about Fifteen hundred acres (1,500) of fern land near the harbour, very fertile, although of an undulating character. The remaining part of the block is forest and unavailable for practical purposes, owing to the hilly nature of the land.

An instalment of One hundred pounds has been paid by you to the Native Renata, on the 4th August, 1854.

I have made no proposal to the Natives for the final settlement of this block, as it is the wish of the chief Takerei, and some of his followers, to arrange with you on your return from Auckland.

Oioroa Block, situated on the north side of Aotea Harbour, containing about 1,300 acres, the whole of which, except about two hundred acres of fern land, consists of sand hills. An instalment of One hundred pounds (£100) has been paid to Kewene and Te Aho for this and other land.

The Natives wished me to consider this land equivalent to the amount paid; but I declined concluding any arrangement with them until you were made acquainted with the character of the land.

I have, &c.,

JOHN ROGAN, District Commissioner.

Donald McLean, Esq., Principal Commissioner, Auckland.

Mr. COMMISSIONER ROGAN to the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

General Report.—Forwarding a Return of Lands Surveyed in his District. Whaingaroa, 16th November, 1855.
SIR,—

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 22nd ult, and to enclose herewith a list of the different blocks of land surveyed in this district, with the amount of instalments paid on each, and the probable sum required to complete those purchases.

The negotiation for the Karioi and Ruapuke Blocks is completed, and the Natives residing in the interior, whose claims are in a measure distinct from the resident owners, are waiting a reply from you, to know whether their claims will be entertained in Auckland before treating with me.

There are several small blocks of land, commanding good positions, near Whaingaroa and Aotea, which have been offered to the Government, but no payments have been made on them, and the survey is not yet executed.

It appears to me desirable that this land should be purchased without delay, as the settlers are increasing in number, and giving a high value to land easy of access.

I am of opinion that the negotiation for this land will be unsuccessful, unless a higher rate per acre be authorized than that limited by your letter of the 14th July last.

I have, &c.,

JOHN ROGAN, District Commissioner.

D. McLean, Esq., Chief Commissioner.

Enclosure.LAND SURVEYED in the DISTRICT of WHAINGAROA on which INSTALMENTS have been PAID.

Mr. COMMISSIONER ROGAN to the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

THE Natives in the vicinity of Whaingaroa are improving rapidly in industry, having extended their cultivation last season considerably beyond any previous year. One mill is now finished, the sole property of the Natives, and preparations are being made for another to be completed during the winter. There are several small wooden houses being built for the purpose of establishing Native stores. The feeling of these Natives with reference to the sales of land to the Government is unanimous, and when the existing arrangements with them are concluded, the Government will have purchased nearly 100,000 acres. That they are friendly disposed towards the Government and the settlers may be gathered from the fact that they are anxious for a Resident Magistrate to be placed in the district, for the purpose of settling according to British law any differences which may arise between them and the Europeans.

West Coast.

The Natives occupying the land between Whaingaroa and Waikato are inclined to dispose of a portion of that district, and it is probable, as soon as the land question at Whaingaroa is finally arranged, they will offer for sale land in detached blocks amounting to 100,000 acres. The land in that district is of an inferior description, owing to the very undulating nature of the country. I am of opinion that it may be purchased at a rate of not less than 1s. 6d. per acre.

Aotea and Kawhia.

The Natives in Aotea are divided on the subject of the land question, and the majority of the people at Kawhia and Waikawau are strenuously opposed to the sale of all lands in that district, except a small portion situated on the sea-coast, on which an instalment has been paid by Mr. McLean. Beyond their unwillingness to dispose of land, I am not aware that they are in any way unfriendly towards the Government.

Waipa.

I am not in a position to state whether the tribes in the interior, between the Waikato and Mokau Rivers, are willing to cede their lands, or that they are friendly disposed towards the Government, as my duties have as yet confined me to the survey and negotiation of land along the sea-coast.

J. ROGAN.

March 29th, 1856.

No. 8.Mr. COMMISSIONER ROGAN to the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

Whaingaroa and Kawhia.—Forwarding Deeds of Sale of certain Lands. Auckland, 15th September, 1857.
SIR,—

I have the honor to enclose herewith deeds of sale and conveyance of several blocks of land situated near Kawhia and Whaingaroa, as marked in the margin,

KAWHIA.—Harihari, 10th August, 1857, £200; 4th July, 1854, £200.

WHAINGAROA.—Part of the Mata, 20th August, 1857, £20; Whakatau, 24th August, 1857, £20; previously, £20; part of the Mata, 4th September, 1857, £5; previously, £107.

which have been executed by the Native owners during my recent journey from New Plymouth to Auckland.

I have, &c.,

JOHN ROGAN, District Commissioner.

Donald McLean, Esq., Chief Commissioner, Auckland.

No. 9.The Hon. the NATIVE MINISTER to Mr. COMMISSIONER ROGAN.

Waitetuna and Waipa.—To negotiate for Purchase of Claims. Native Office, Auckland, February, 1863.
SIR,—

It is the wish of the Government that you should proceed to Raglan as early as possible, in accordance with the promise made to Wiremu Nera, for the purpose of proceeding with the negotiation for the purchase of his claims over the block of land between Waitetuna and Waipa.

You are yourself so familiar with the circumstances under which Nera's original offer of this land was made, and have been in fact so frequently engaged personally in the negotiation, which commenced in 1858, that it is unnecessary for me to give any particulars of the case for your guidance. You are also aware of the general views which the Government entertain on the subject of Nera's proposal, but in a matter of such consequence it may be more satisfactory to yourself that these views should be distinctly stated.

The block now offered by Nera is substantially the same as that offered by him in 1858 and 1859, the offer not being then entertained in consequence of conflicting proprietary claims. At that time the King party raised the same opposition as they still make to the sale of the land and the construction of the roads; but if it had not been for the objections of a number of natives who were part owners, it is probable that the opposition of the former would have been disregarded, as Nera strongly urged that it should be.

I believe there is no doubt that Nera and his followers are the principal owners, and there can hardly be a good reason why the Crown should not acquire their rights. The great importance of such an acquisition, in a political point of view, added to the value of the land itself, whenever a perfect title to the whole can be got, would justify a high price being given. Nera would feel that the acceptance of his offer was a great moral support to the position he has invariably held; that he is, of right, entitled to dispose of his land without reference to the opposition of the King party, which really rests upon their determination generally to permit no more sales of land in the Waikato country. The Government would stand in his stead as part, or rather principal owner of the territory, and would succeed to all his rights over it. Claims of opposing proprietors would be occasionally brought up, and the survey of the boundaries undertaken whenever the Government should judge it safe to do so.

The general opposition of the King party on other grounds than proprietorship could hardly prevail in the long run against the right of the Crown as principal proprietor, and when the Raglan road reaches Waitetuna (the point beyond which the Kingites have declared it is not to go) those whose rights as proprietors still remained unpurchased might be induced to agree to the road being completed, on account of the joint ownership, even if they continued to withhold their assent to the full cession of the territory.

You will therefore see that if a clear and complete title cannot even now be made out to your satisfaction by Nera and his people, and that if proprietary rights exist in other Natives, who continued to be opposed to the sale, the Government are still willing to acquire his claims provided that you are satisfied that those claims do comprise a valid right of ownership over the land offered, or, at any rate, a large portion of it.

In addition to the opposition which formerly existed from Natives whom the then Government recognized as part owners, you are aware, of opposition to the cession of this territory having been made from the first and persisted in till now by the adherents of the Maori King. A letter was received within the last few days by the Governor, purporting to come from Matutaera's Runanga, and warning the Government against paying any money for the land. It is not the intention of the Governor to take any notice of warnings based merely on the proceedings of the Native King to prevent any sale of land whatever, but when so much notice has been given to the Government, from which it may possibly be inferred that a proprietary right is asserted, it will be your duty to be especially careful to make full enquiry before entering into any actual agreement with Nera. It is in order that you may have every facility for making this enquiry on the spot that you are now to go to Whaingaroa.

I have, &c.,

F. D. BELL.

John Rogan, Esq., J.P., &c., Auckland.

No. 1. Mr. COMMISSIONER ROGAN to the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

Aotea.—Survey of Ruapuke completed. Whaingaroa, 23rd August, 1855.
SIR,—

I have the honor to inform you that a survey of a portion of land, amounting to about 6,000 acres, which was offered for sale by the chief Wiremu Nera and some of the Aotea Natives, has been executed, and I have offered a sum of Three hundred pounds (£300) in payment for the land, which the Natives have unanimously declined. They wish me to state that the lowest sum they are disposed to take for this land is Seven hundred pounds (£700).

As I have no authority for paying such amount for land, the greater part of which is of an inferior description, I have agreed with the Natives to refer the question for your consideration.

I have, &c.,

JOHN ROGAN,, District Commissioner.

Donald McLean, Esq., Principal Commissioner, Auckland.

No. 2.Mr. COMMISSIONER ROGAN to the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

Aotea.—Ruapuke Absentees not to be paid separately. Whaingaroa, 24th August, 1855.
SIR,—

With reference to your letter of the 3rd instant informing me that a Native named Te Tana, of the Ngatimahanga tribe, requests that payment for portions of land—namely, Te Waimaori, Aotea, Ruapuke, Rahinui, and Te Hutuwai—should be made in Auckland, I have the honor to state in reply that a portion of the land alluded to is included in a survey of 6,000 acres recently made, and the resident Natives request that no payment may be made to absentees, as these claims will be satisfied out of a sum of Seven hundred pounds (£700), should you consent to the payment of the same.

I have, &c.,

JOHN ROGAN, District Commissioner.

Donald McLean, Esq., Principal Commissioner, Auckland.

No. 3.The CHIEF COMMISSIONER to Mr. COMMISSIONER ROGAN.

Ruapuke.—To report more fully as to the price fixed for this Block. Land Purchase Department,Auckland, September 12th, 1855.
SIR,—

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 24th ultimo, in reference to Te Tana's claim, and to the payment demanded by the Natives for the block on which that claim is included. In reference to the first point, as to a payment being made to Te Tana at Auckland, I am adverse to such a course, if it can be avoided, as I consider it preferable that the Natives should, in all instances, be paid publicly in the district where the land is situated, and this course should not be deviated from, except in particular cases, when there would be justice in adopting a different course. In every case the Natives of the district should sanction the making of the payment elsewhere.

With reference to the second point, the price demanded by the Natives, I must trust very much to your own discretion, having due regard to the public interests, as to whether you should exceed the amount to which you were limited by the instructions issued to you at Waipa. I should be glad to have your own opinion, for the information of the Governor, more fully on this subject before proceeding further in the matter.

I have, &c.,

DONALD MCLEAN, Principal Commissioner.

J. Rogan, Esq., District Commissioner.

No. 4.Mr. COMMISSIONER ROGAN to the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

Aotea.—Offer for Ruapuke Block accepted. Whaingaroa, 8th October, 1855.

SIR,—

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 12th ultimo, in reference to Te Tana's claim, and the demand made by the Natives for the block of land near Aotea, and to state in reply, for the information of His Excellency the Governor, that the Natives have recently agreed to accept the sum of Three hundred pounds (£300), previously offered for the land reported in my letter of the 23rd August last. I have, therefore, to request instructions as to whether I should pay the above mentioned sum to the Native claimants from the money in my possession belonging to the New Zealand Government.

I have, &c.,

JOHN ROGAN, District Commissioner.

Donald McLean, Esq., Principal Commissioner, Auckland.

No. 5.Mr. COMMISSIONER ROGAN to the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

Aotea.—Survey of Te Mata Reserve. Whaingaroa, 8th October, 1855.

SIR,—

I have the honor to acquaint you, for the information of His Excellency the Governor, that a sketch survey of a portion of land, situated within the Native Reserve, called the Mata in this district has been made, which contains about Four hundred and fifty acres (450).

Payments of Thirty-five pounds (£35), and Seventy-two pounds (£72) have been made to the Native claimants for this purchase on the 6th and 31st May, 1854. The land is of good quality, having a Native track leading through it from the harbour, capable of forming a road by deviating slightly inland.

There are a few acres of fern land which are in the occupation of a settler, having been purchased by him from the Government, and the remaining part is forest. I am requested by Te Waka, the principal claimant, to make application to you for a sum in addition to that already paid. At the same time I informed him there was no probability of your acceding to his application.

I have, &c.,

JOHN ROGAN, District Commissioner.

Donald McLean, Esq., Principal Commissioner, Auckland.

No. 6.Mr. COMMISSIONER ROGAN to the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

Aotea.—Forwarding Deed of Sale for Ruapuke Block. Whaingaroa, 4th February, 1856.

SIR,—

I have the honor to enclose herewith a deed of sale for land situated near Aotea, which was executed by the Ngatinaho and Ngatimahanga Natives, and for which the sum of Two hundred and ninety pounds (£290) was paid on the 2nd instant. An instalment of Ten pounds (£10) having been paid by you to the Native Hemi Matene on the 14th April, 1854.

With reference to Te Tana's claim mentioned in your letter of the 3rd August last, the Natives have set apart Ten pounds (£10) in satisfaction thereof to be deposited with the Native Hakopa of the Ngatimahanga tribe, who is Te Tana's representative, which amount will be forwarded to Auckland for his acceptance.

I have, &c.,

JOHN ROGAN, District Commissioner.

Donald McLean, Esq., Chief Commissioner, Auckland.

No. 7.Mr. COMMISSIONER ROGAN to the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

Aotea.—Has concluded the Purchase of Te Mata, Native Reserve. Auckland, 18th June, 1858.

SIR,—

Referring to a correspondence between the Land Purchase Officer, and the Ngatimahanga Natives (58,435), wherein an arrangement has been entered into with Te Waka for the purchase of the remaining portion of the Mata Reserve for the sum of One hundred pounds (£100), I have the honor to state, for the information of His Excellency the Governor, that I proceeded by appointment to Waiuku on the 13th instant, and paid over the above-named amount to Te Waka, when the Deed of Cession was executed (which is enclosed herewith), together with a description of boundaries; and I am not aware of any objection to the proclamation of this land in the usual manner, as the Native title has been extinguished.

I have, &c.,

JOHN ROGAN, District Commissioner.

Donald McLean, Esq., Chief Land Purchase Commissioner, Auckland.

No. 8. WAIPA CHIEFS to the GOVERNOR-IN-CHIEF, SIR GEORGE GREY, K.C.B.

Kawhia.—Offering to Sell certain Lands. Rangiawhia, 8th March, 1849.

TO THE GOVERNOR,—

Salutations to you! Great is my love to you. Myself and Hoani Papita are going to you about Kawhia. On our arrival we will go immediately on board ship to sell Kawhia. Potatau (Te Wherowhero) will be with us. With Potatau will be the true words. This is correct, because we have spoken to you about Kawhia, Waiharakeke we wish you to see (the place). That is all. You purchase our land, Nuitona's, mine, and Anatipa Takarei's. That is all I have to say to you. We are on our way.

HOANI PAPITA, TAREI POKURU.

No. 9. The Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY to the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

Kawhia.—Land Surveys to be Discontinued. Colonial Secretary's Office, Auckland, 6th March, 1856.

SIR,—

As great excitement seems to exist amongst the Natives at Kawhia, relative to the Government purchasing and surveying land in that district, I am directed by His Excellency the Governor to request you will be good enough to withdraw all surveys being carried on under your department from that district.

I have, &c.,

W. GISBORNE, (for the Colonial Secretary).

Mr. Commissioner McLean, Land Purchase Department.

No. 10. Chiefs TE WHEROWHERO and TE KANAWA to the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

Kawhia.—Offering for Sale certain undisputed Lands. Kawhia, 7th July, 1856.

FRIEND MR. MCLEAN!

I will inform you—that is, the Governor and yourself—what blocks of land are free from contending claims—namely, the lands having an undisputed title, which we are now desirous of selling to you. Let those lands which are disputed be excluded; let them be settled by the survey.

Commencing at Pohonui, the boundary runs to Whatitiri-ka-papa; thence to Marutaha, to Parori, Waipara, Huka, Wharawharanui, Te Rete, Pakarikari, Hetai, Hawaiki, Te Okiokinga, Tokitangohia, Pukekohai, Kohemaru, Opohoi, Waitete, Tahurikotua, thence to Oraka, Tikowiwi, Mataora, Te Komiti; and meeting again at Wharawharanui. These are the lands which are free from conflicting claims. We therefore request that you will give us the payment for these lands.

KIHIRINI KANAWA.

POTATAU WHEROWHERO.

No. 11. Mr. COMMISSIONER ROGAN to the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

Kawhia.—Description of the purchased Block called Harihari. Auckland, 23rd January, 1857.

SIR,—

I have the honor to enclose a sketch plan of land situated on the West Coast, between Kawhia and Marakopa, called the Harihari Block. The boundaries of this land were perambulated by me in company with the principal Native owners in February last. A sum of Two hundred pounds (£200) was paid by you to the chief Hone Pumipi and others on account on the 4th February, 1854, which amount is included in the Return to the House of Representatives dated 4th July, 1856.

The land within the block near the coast line is covered with high fern and a light bush, with a small quantity of forest in the valleys; the extent of this description of land may be stated at one thousand (1,000) acres, which may be considered adapted for a little run.

The inland portion of the block is an inferior description of land, being of a very rugged character, and covered with dense forest.

It will be seen on reference to the original deed or receipt for Two hundred pounds (£200) already alluded to that an arrangement was made with the Natives by which they were to receive Three hundred pounds (£300) additional after the land should be examined by a surveyor, but the quantity of land which the Natives represented to have sold to the Government, on the execution of that document, was much in excess of the actual quantity, which is nearly 4,000 acres.

An arrangement may now be made with the Natives for the final alienation of their claims to this land for Two hundred pounds (£200), which, in addition to the first payment, will be at the rate of 2s. per acre.

I have, &c.,

JOHN ROGAN, District Commissioner.

Donald McLean, Esq., 0Chief Commissioner, Auckland.

No. 12. DONALD MCLEAN, Esq., to the Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY, Auckland.

Mokau.—Report of visit to purchase land. Mokau, March 27th, 1850.

SIR,—

I have the honor to report to you, for the information of His Excellency the Governor-in-Chief, that I have visited this district at the request of Ta Kerei and other chiefs, who are anxious to dispose of a tract of land north of the Mokau River, including the Awakino, and extending some miles in a northerly direction towards Waikawao.

2nd. Yesterday I had a meeting of the Mokau Natives, and I was glad to observe that they are making considerable improvement under the tuition of the Wesleyan missionary stationed at this place, and that they generally express a desire for the settlement of Europeans among them.

3rd. As yet no offers have been made to dispose of the land on the banks of the Mokau, which would be most valuable, from having a good navigable river for vessels of 40 and 50 tons, with abundance of coal, limestone; timber, and flax, which is made into tolerable rope at the Mission Station, together with several flats of rich land well adapted for agriculture.

4th. It is probable, however, as the Natives are gradually becoming sensible of the advantages of having Europeans among them, that they will, in the course of the present negotiations, be induced to sell such portions of the Mokau as they do not require for their own present or future wants.

5th. To-morrow I intend proceeding with Ta Kerei and a party of Natives up the Awakino River to examine the interior, and ascertain, when looking over the country, whether limestone and coal can be easily procured there.

6th. During the present visit I shall use my best endeavours to countenance and encourage the friendly disposition of the Natives, and make such arrangements with the chiefs as will secure and facilitate the acquisition of the district, when His Excellency may feel disposed to authorize me to do so.

I have, &c.,

DONALD MCLEAN, Inspector of Police.

The Hon. the Colonial Secretary, &c., Auckland.

Mokau.—Transmitting reply from Civil Secretary. Taranaki, September 19th, 1852.

SIR,—

In reference to Mr. McLean's letter to the Civil Secretary of the 9th ultimo, upon the subject of the offer made by the Natives of Mokau to dispose of a block of land in that district, a copy of which letter was enclosed in Mr. McLean's letter to you of the 10th of August, I have now the honor to forward, for the information of His Excellency the Lieutenant-Governor, a copy of the Civil Secretary's reply.

Survey of boundaries being made.

I have to report at the same time that a surveyor is now at Mokau engaged in examining the boundaries of the land offered, and that it is my intention to proceed thither, in company with the Commissioner of Crown Lands, the moment that my presence in this settlement can be dispensed with for a few days without detriment to the public service.

I have, &c.,

G. S. COOPER.

The Hon. the Colonial Secretary, &c., Auckland.

EnclosureThe CIVIL SECRETARY, Wellington, to Mr. COMMISSIONER McLEAN.

Mokau.—Report on this District to be supplied. Civil Secretary's Office, Wellington, 23rd August, 1852.
SIR,—

I am directed by His Excellency the Governor-in-Chief to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 9th instant, reporting that the Native chiefs at Mokau have expressed themselves desirous of selling certain land situated in that district to the Government; and, in reply, I am to inform you that before His Excellency can convey to you his sanction for purchasing the lands in question, it will be necessary for you to report their extent, capabilities, &c., and the price for which they can be procured.

This report should be furnished after you have examined the Mokau District, and a copy of it should be forwarded to His Excellency the Lieutenant-Governor of New Ulster, in whose Province Taranaki is situated.

I have, &c.,

ALFRED DOMETT, Civil Secretary.

Donald MacLean, Esq., Commissioner for Extinguishing Native Titles to Land.

G. SIESON COOPER, Esq., New Plymouth, to the Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Mokau.—Enclosing Copy of Report on the Mokau Land. Taranaki, 31st October, 1852.
SIR,—

Adverting to my letter No. 9, of the 19th September last, enclosing a copy of the Civil Secretary's letter to Mr. McLean, of the 23rd of August, directing that officer to report upon the offer of land made by the Natives of Mokau, I have now the honor to forward to you the copy of the report which, in obedience to the instructions of the Governor-in-Chief, I have addressed to the Civil Secretary at Wellington.

The enclosed report is so comprehensive that I do not think it necessary to state anything further in this letter in reference to it, excepting that the letter from Taonui, which I received yesterday from Mr. W. Halse, to whom it had been referred by His Excellency the Lieutenant-Governor, shows that the statement of Ngataua (see paragraph 5 of the enclosed letter) was untrue; for although the places named by Taonui are not at Mokau, still his letter proves his wish to sell land, and this fully accounts for Ngataua's refusal to allow me to go up the river.

I have, &c.,

G. S. COOPER.

The Hon. the Colonial Secretary, &c., &c., &c., Auckland.

GEORGE SISSON COOPER, Esq., to the CIVIL SECRETARY, Wellington.

Mokau.—Reporting his Visit to that District. Taranaki, October 24, 1852.

SIR,—

In reference to your letter of the 23rd August, addressed to Mr. McLean, directing him to examine and report upon the land offered to Government by the chiefs of the Mokau District, I have the honor to state that, in the absence of that officer, I felt it to be my duty to furnish the report required by His Excellency the Governor-in-Chief, and I accordingly left this settlement upon the 1st instant in company with the Commissioner of Crown Lands, of whose advice and assistance I deemed it proper to avail myself.

Two Blocks Offered.

2. Upon arriving at Mokau and conferring with the Natives there, I found that the land offered in that direction consisted of two different blocks, the one on the north bank of the Mokau River, the principal chiefs by whom the offer was made being Te Watihi (Peketahi) and his brother Te Weitini; the second block, lying to the north of the above, with the river Awakino running through it. This block is offered by Takerei alone, to whom the conduct of the negotiation has been entirely given up. The enclosed sketch will explain the position of the land more clearly.

Mokau Block.

3. With regard to the Mokau Block, I beg to report that it consists of a piece of land of about two miles square, extending along the banks of the river to a stream called Manga-uira. The offer of this block, however, is subject to several reserves made by the Ngatipehi hapu, headed by the chiefs Ngataua, or Te Kaka, and Te Waru, the former of whom retains a piece of land called Te Kauri, consisting of about 30 acres, with a frontage of nearly a quarter of a mile to the river, and including almost the only available spot for commercial purposes, whilst Te Waru reserves 300 acres of the best cultivable land in the block lying at the corner of the northern and western boundaries. A large tongue formed by a bend of the river is also excepted on account of being an ancient burial ground; and two other small reserves, one of them comprising the greater part of the land now occupied as a mission station. In addition to the above, one of the sellers also claims the timber growing on a considerable piece of land, though he stated his readiness to let the land go, after his trees shall have been cleared off.

4. His Excellency will perceive from what I have stated above that the whole extent of land offered on the Mokau will not greatly exceed 2,500 acres; and that, deducting the reserves, a balance of about 2,000 acres remains. Of this quantity not more than 500 acres would be of any use to Europeans, and that in the least accessible portion of the block, the remaining land being very much broken and thickly wooded.

Too limited in extent.

5. I therefore at once told the Natives that I could not listen to the offer of such a small block, but that the boundary must be moved up the river to a creek called Mangaharakeke, about twenty-five miles inland, which was the spot pointed out by Mr. McLean on a former visit. I found that they were quite prepared for this, and they replied that the offer they had made comprised all the land they had a right to sell individually; and that the land inland of Mahgauria belonged principally to the Natives living in the interior, who were fully represented by Ngataua, and whose determination was not to give up any more land until the piece offered was disposed of and settled. Finding that they adhered to this determination, and as they positively refused to allow me to go up the river to see the chiefs in the interior, I at once broke off the negotiations, telling them, as they had made the offer in order to bring Europeans there, and as the Europeans had already plenty of infinitely superior land on which to go, that, until they sold a block which would offer some inducement for settlers to go amongst them, the Government would not listen to their proposals. I stated, however, at the same time that they need not consider my refusal as final until I should have received the answer of the Governor-in-Chief.

Evil Advisers.

6. The Natives have been induced to adopt this course partly from the advice of chiefs in the southern portion of the island, amongst whose names that of Rawiri Kingi (Puaha) was most frequently mentioned; but their conduct has been principally guided by the advice of a Mr. Hopkins, who trades with a small vessel from Mokau, where he has a house. This person told them that they were wrong to sell their lands, using the usual argument that they would become slaves to the Europeans, &c., and, finding that they were still determined to sell, he told them only to let the land go in small blocks, as they would thereby obtain a much larger payment for it; and he induced them, under threats of leaving the place altogether, to reserve for him about fifteen acres, at the Kauri, of the best land for commercial purposes, including a portion of the river bank where loaded vessels can lie alongside and discharge their cargoes as at a wharf. I received all this information from the Natives privately, but cannot see how at present any proceedings could be taken against this man, although the mischief he is doing is very great, and his presence is a nuisance to the resident missionary, because he is under the protection of the chief Ngataua, and he possesses considerable influence with all the Natives on the river; so that it would, I fear, be impossible to induce any Native to give such evidence against him as would support an information under the Native Land Purchase Ordinance.

Awakino Block.

7. With reference to the block offered by Takerei, I beg to report that no obstacles exist in respect to it. Still the same opposition was made by a majority of the Natives to my proposal to extend the boundary inland, and the result of the conference was the same as at Mokau. The quantity of land comprised in this block is about 16,000 acres, but it is, as will be seen from the sketch, a mere strip along the sea-coast, and the land is very broken and hilly, thickly covered with wood, and extremely difficult—in many cases impossible—of access. The reserves asked for were very small, and were in all cases left entirely to my discretion.

8. I took care to explain to Takerei that the acceptance of his offer would depend in a great measure upon the purchase of the land at Mokau, and that if Peketahi's party persisted in refusing to increase their block, it was most probable that His Excellency would refuse his offer, especially as there was a difficulty about extending the boundary so as to include the available land on the banks of the Awakino. Ta Kerei seemed greatly disappointed at this, as he has for years been extremely anxious to have Europeans settled in his district, and has spared no exertion in endeavouring to obtain the consent of the Natives to my proposals.

9. With regard to the question of price, I made no proposal whatever with respect to the Mokau Block, telling the Natives that when they offered a piece of land worth having it would then be time enough to talk about the price. With regard, however, to the Awakino Block, I think that, should His Excellency deem it advisable to continue the negotiations, it could be obtained for a sum of Five to Seven hundred pounds, paid in three or four annual instalments, but I thought the better course was not to press the question too much at that time, to, avoid in any way leading the Natives to calculate upon the land being purchased by the Government.

Instructions requested.

10. Having stated the above circumstances for the information of the Governor-in-Chief, I have now the honor to request that I may be favored with His Excellency's instructions as to whether I should continue negotiations for the blocks at present offered, or whether the extension of the boundaries inland should be made a sine quá non; also as to whether, in the event of Takerei consenting to extend his boundary to a distance corresponding with the Manga Harakeke stream, His Excellency would approve of my re-opening the negotiation without reference to a purchase at Mokau.

Recognition of Takerei's Services desirable.

11. Should His Excellency decide upon refusing these offers altogether, perhaps I may be allowed to suggest that it would have a good effect if some token of consideration were given to Takerei, as that chief has exerted himself to the extent of his interest and eloquence to obtain the consent of the Natives to a sale, and the disappointment to him will be very great indeed; and from his influence in the Ngatimaniapoto tribe, and the interest which they possess with the Natives in this district, from the fact of having conquered them and once occupied their lands, I fear that seriously to offend him would have a prejudicial effect upon the purchase of lands in this immediate neighbourhood, whilst the acquisition of any considerable block from Ngatimaniapoto, would in all probability affect the question very favourably.

12. I have only to add that on leaving the Natives I promised them that no time should be lost in informing them of His Excellency's decision upon their offers so soon as I should receive instructions from Wellington. I therefore beg most respectfully to request that I may be favoured with a reply to this letter as soon as possible.

I have, &c.,

G. S. COOPER.

The Civil Secretary, &c., &c., &c., Wellington.

G. S. COOPER, Esq., New Plymouth, to the Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Mokau.—Respecting Offer of Land. Land Purchase Department, Taranaki, 13th December, 1852. SIR,—

Adverting to my letter of the 31st of October last upon the subject of the offer of land made by the Natives of Mokau, I have now the honor to forward for the information of His Excellency the Lieutenant-Governor the copy of a letter from the Civil Secretary conveying to me the instructions of the Governor-in-Chief upon the subject; and I at the same time forward the copy of the letter which, in obedience to those instructions, I have addressed to the chief Ta Kerei.

I have, &c.,

G. S. COOPER.

The Hon. the Colonial Secretary, &c., Auckland.

Enclosure 1. The CIVIL SECRETARY to G. S. COOPER, Esq., J.P., New Plymouth.

Mokau.—Instructions as to the Purchase of Land. Civil Secretary's Office, Wellington, 29th November, 1852.
SIR,—

Your report of the 24th October last on the block of land offered for sale by the chiefs of the Mokau District having been laid before the Governor-in-Chief, I am directed by His Excellency to inform you that it is not desirable that anything further should be done in this matter until the Natives are all agreed to dispose of the extent of country required by Government—the tract now offered being almost valueless—unless a considerable portion on both sides of the Mokau were added: thereto.

This course, it is considered, may be adopted without injustice to the Natives who have offered their land for sale, because all that was promised was that the district should be examined and reported on; which has been done. You, will, however, be good enough to write a letter on the part of George Grey signifying His Excellency's approval of Ta Kerei's exertion to obtain land for Government, and his friendly co-operation with yourself.

That chief has also been appointed a Native Assessor, and the Resident Magistrate has been instructed to make him a small present.

I have, &c.,

ALFRED DOMETT, Colonial Secretary.

G. S. Cooper, Esq., J.P., &c., New Plymouth.

Enclosure 2. G. S. COOPER, Esq., to the Chief WAITARA TA KEREI, Mokau.

Mokau.—Offer of Land too Limited. Ngamotu, 14th December, 1852.
MY FRIEND TA KEREI,—

The Southern mail has arrived and has been opened. It contained a letter from Governor Grey to me upon the subject of your offer, i.e., the piece of land offered by you all for the Europeans. You see the Governor's reply has proved to be as I told you—the offer is too small—Europeans would never think of going upon so small a piece of land. You had better therefore agree, the whole of you, men, women, and children, from the North, the South, and the interior—all the people—to extend the boundary to the parallel of Mangaharakeke, as fixed by Mr. McLean. Both sides of Mokau must be given up at one time, and then I will go down to Mokau and conclude the arrangements, that a town may be built at that place, that it may be cultivated by Europeans, so that the land may be improved; and that we all and our children may dwell together, and that we may grow and increase in wealth and strength as one people, and that our children may climb together to the summit of wordly prosperity.

My friend, this is another word of the Governor's for you. He is much pleased with your exertions to obtain a piece of land for his children, and with your friendly co-operation with me on my visit to Mokau. He has, therefore, been pleased to appoint you to be an Assessor for that district, to cause good to grow and increase, and to encourage just dealings; and, on the other hand, to put a stop to the quarrels and crimes and mischievous acts of ignorant men, and of the young men of the district. That is all.

From your sincere friend,

G. S. COOPER.

No. 16. The CHIEF COMMISSIONER to Mr. COMMISSIONER COOPER.

Auakino.—Informing him of the purchase of land from Takerei. Mokau, 29th March, 1854.
SIR,—

I have the honor to acquaint you that the land offered for sale by Takerei has been purchased for a sum of Five hundred pounds, and another payment of Thirty Pounds to be made to the Ngatirarua tribe residing at Nelson.

These payments include the whole amount that the Natives are to receive for this purchase; the boundaries of which commence south at Purapura, thence along the sea coast in a northerly direction to Herekomako, and inland to the Manganui River till it crosses the Awakino, and thence along a boundary line that strikes the line running inland from Purapura. Any applications by Natives at New Plymouth, either for payment or reserves within the above purchase, you should not in any way recognise.

The best course, therefore, will be for you to refer them to Takerei or myself, stating, as your opinion, that nothing further can be paid, as the whole of the amount has been given to Natives here, who object to any other payment being made, particularly to the New Plymouth Natives.

I am aware that several applications will be made to you in reference to this land, therefore I take the earliest opportunity of communicating with you on the subject.

A copy of the Deed of Sale is being prepared by Mr. Rogan, which I hope may be finished, that it may be sent to you by this day's mail-carrier.

I have, &c.,

DONALD MCLEAN, Land Commissioner.

George S. Cooper, Esq., J.P., New Plymouth.

No. 17. The CHIEF COMMISSIONER to the Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Awakino.—Forwarding deed and translation. Land Commissioner's Office, Kawhia, Province of Auckland, 1st April, 1854.

SIR,—

I have the honor to report to you, for the information of His Excellency the Officer administering the Government, that I concluded the purchase of a tract of land on the 28th ultimo, at Awakino, near Mokau, for which the Native claimants have been paid a sum of Five hundred pounds. I am in hopes that the purchase of this land from an influential branch of the Waikato tribe will tend to the acquisition of a large extent of country extending inland from Awakino towards the Waipa district. In order to facilitate the acquisition of this land, I have instructed Mr. Rogan, who surveyed the external boundaries and reserves in this purchase, to carry out the survey, and, to a certain extent, the negotiations for such further tracts as the Natives may offer for sale in that neighbourhood; and from Mr. Rogan's knowledge of the Native character and language, besides being an active surveyor, I feel certain that he will render material assistance in effecting this object: but, of course, his employment can only be regarded as of a temporary nature until I am further instructed by His Excellency the Officer administering the Government.

I herewith enclose a copy of the instructions to Mr. Rogan.

The Deed of Sale and translation are herewith transmitted.

In addition to the sum of Five hundred pounds, which was the lowest sum for which the land could be procured, a further payment of Thirty pounds has to be made to the Ngatirarua tribe, at Nelson, who also have claims to the lands purchased.

Hoping that the arrangements made in reference to this purchase will meet with His Excellency's approval,

I have, &c.,

DONALD MCLEAN, Land Commissioner.

The Hon. the Colonial Secretary, Auckland.

No. 18. The CHIEF COMMISSIONER to Mr. COMMISSIONER H. T. KEMP.

Mokau Block.—Its Purchase sanctioned. Chief Land Purchase Commissioner's Office, Auckland, 20th October, 1858.

SIR,—

With reference to your letter (No. 31) of the 4th instant, relative to the price of the Mokau Block, containing by survey 7,225 acres, I have the honor, by direction of the Governor, to inform you that His Excellency has been pleased to authorize you to complete the purchase for the sum named by you, Two hundred and forty pounds (£240), which amount the Sub-Treasurer at Russell has been instructed to advance to you.

I have, &c.,

DONALD MCLEAN, Chief Commissioner.

H. T. Kemp, Esq., J.P., District Commissioner, Bay of Islands.

Bay of Plenty.—Edward Shortland's Communication. Protector's Office, Auckland, 17th May, 1843.

SIR,—

Edward Shortland, of this Department, having written to me on the subject of the anxiety expressed by the Natives of his District for the completion of the purchase of certain portions of land which have been some time under offer to Her Majesty's Government, I do myself the honor to bring the subjoined extract from Mr. Shortland's communication under the notice of His Excellency the Officer Administering the Government, requesting you will have the goodness to convey to me His Excellency's opinion of the proposition recommended therein:—

His Remarks on Purchasing Land there.

"The principal chiefs of that district have already addressed several letters to His Excellency on the subject, and are beginning to feel disappointed at receiving only promises. They have lately made a formal peace with the Ngatihaua, formerly their bitter enemy, so that lands to which persons in both tribes have a claim can now be disposed of with the mutual consent of the parties interested, and without risk of strife."

Deposit recommended.

In case His Excellency does not deem it expedient to purchase these lands, at present, I would beg leave to suggest that a small deposit be paid thereon, in order that some assurance may be given that Europeans will hereafter settle amongst them. This people are well aware of the advantages to be derived from that source; and this feeling appears to be their strongest motive for relinquishing their old habits of violence, and yielding to us to compose their animosities.

I take the liberty to recommend that the following payments be authorized, viz.:—

Do. do. Te Awe do.

Do. do. Te Hau do.

As a deposit on lands offered by them to Her Majesty.

I have, &c.,

THOMAS S. FORSAITH (for Chief Protector).

The Hon. the Colonial Secretary.

Bay of Plenty.—Report of Visit to Maketu, &c. Auckland, 7th September, 1844.

SIR,—

I have the honor to inform you that, on Monday, 5th August, I left Otumoetai, and having passed one day at Maungatapu, reached Maketu on the 6th.

I had never found Tupaia disposed to say much relative to Ngatiwhakaue; but Taipari appeared very anxious to re-establish a peace, and proposed to conduct any of their chiefs who would consent, to Otumoetai, to visit Tupaia; in fact, any natives of Ngatiwhakaue, not immediately connected with Tohi's party, now pass between Rotorua and Maungatapu with impunity, and a small body of missionary natives from Rotorua have, with the consent of Taipari, settled themselves at Kaituna, on the river which runs past Maketu.

At Maketu I found the principal obstacles to peace were Te Amohau and Tohi; the former on account of Motiti, the latter on account of his son, Ngakai, lost at Katikati.

Te Mokorou and Te Awaitaia, chiefs of Waikato, had already visited Rotorua, and had returned. They were met by Korokai, Pongo, Hikairo, Te Pukuatua, and the most influential chiefs of that country, except Te Amohau and Tohi; when it was agreed that Ngatiwhakaue should not meddle with Motiti, as long as Waikato and Ngatihaua remained quiet. Te Amohau and Tohi have expressed to me their assent to this.

Purchase of site for Government Officer.

I was now desired by Tohi to enter into another question of more moment to him, namely, respecting the purchase of the piece of land (about 200 acres) surrounding my house, regarding which I first wrote to you on the 17th May, 1843.

On receiving your reply, I made Tohi acquainted with its nature; but subsequently, and on the point of my leaving Maketu, an old chief named Te Koata offered some opposition, and I refused to proceed farther in the matter till I could ascertain the justice of his claim. This I reported to you verbally.

While Mr. Symonds resided at Maketu, he was constantly urged by the Natives to settle the purchase. A survey of the ground was taken, and the plan sent to Auckland.

On seeing me, Tohi and his party expressed much dissatisfaction at having been left so long without any European. Te Koata's friends, who were jealous of the importance he derived from an officer of the Government residing with him, threw out that I would never return, and that the house had been built in Vain; they therefore, in jest, named it "Whare-tu-noa," literally the "Folly."

I immediately wrote a note to Te Koata, desiring him to meet me at Rotorua, in order that he might state his claim openly.

At Maketu the question was discussed by Te Pukuatua, Te Amohau, and Pongo, in presence of nearly the whole pah; and as their right to the lands they hold at Maketu is of the same nature as Tohi's, they ridiculed Te Koata's claim.

On my reaching Rotorua a large meeting assembled. Te Koata came forward with much reluctance and made his claim, at the same time assuring Tohi that he had no desire for any part of the payment, but that the young men had urged him to claim a horse.

This meeting was conducted very pacifically; the pedigrees on both sides were traced, from which it appeared that either had a right by descent to lands near Maketu.

Tohi's party contended that their original right ceased eight generations back, when the land was conquered by Ngatihaua, under Rangiwiri, by whom their fathers were driven back to Rotorua, and that the land now belonged to those by whose means it had been re-conquered and divided, and that each man had a right to his own division.

Te Koata then tried to show that the land had never been absolutely abandoned by his ancestors, whose right had, consequently, never been extinguished. At the termination of the meeting Tohi made a speech, in which he stated that he was the person whose duty it was to persist in hostility to Tauranga, but that he remained quiet in consideration of his promise that he would do so, so long as an officer of the Government was stationed at Maketu; that the land was for this officer to reside on, and that they never could be sure that they would not be deserted until the land was paid for.

This payment will be made shortly.

† Mr. Shortland is an excellent linguist, a good medical man, and extremely kind to the Natives; therefore he had much influence with them. He will return to Matamata immediately.—R. FITZROY.— 14th September, 1844.

"When the payment arrives," said he, "I will invite all the children of the Arawa" (meaning the whole tribe)" to come and see their riches; after which you will return them to me. Sirs, I have one thing more to say: I give my consent to go to Waikoriri in the summer to make peace with Tupaia."

Having some apprehension that Tupaia might not be willing to meet Tohi, I told him it would be necessary for me first to ascertain his sentiments, and that, if he consented, I would wish Hikairo, Mr. Chapman (the missionary clergyman), &c., to go also, and that I would request Mr. Brown (Archdeacon, appointed by the Bishop) to accompany the Tauranga Natives.

Tohi replied that I need not distrust his motives; that, if I was apprehensive of the result, he would say no more on the subject, but stay quietly at Maketu.

On reaching Matamata, I repeated to Pohepohe, Tipihoa, and the rest what had been said at Rotorua. The former expressed his satisfaction, and assured me that Waikato (meaning the tribe of Waikato) would not be the first to interfere with Motiti, promising to go to Tauranga to talk over the matter with Tupaia.

The payment agreed on for the land first offered for sale was one mare, one filly a year and a half old, and one blanket. Subsequently two pieces of land, about twenty acres, were added as a payment for a saddle and two bridles; and another small spot, about a quarter of an acre, as a payment for things stolen from my house during Mr. Symond's absence at Rotorua.

I have the honor to enclose Tohi's letter to His Excellency.

In conclusion, I would request that you represent to the Governor the expediency of consenting to this purchase, as thereby all farther illfeeling and discussion on the subject will be quieted, and the influence of the Government officer stationed there augmented.

Mr. Chapman has expressed an intention of residing part of the year at Maketu, and I look forward with much anxiety to the execution of his design as a step likely to facilitate the establishment of a friendly intercourse between Ngatiwhakau and Ngatihaua.

I left Matamata on the 27th ultimo, and arrived at Auckland on the 2nd of this month.

I have, &c.,

EDWARD SHORTLAND,† Protector of Aborigines.

George Clarke. Esq., Chief Protector, &c.,

Auckland, 26th August, 1864.

WE, whose names are hereunto subscribed, have received from Henry T. Clarke, on this 26th day of August, 1864, the sum of £1,000. This money is to rest upon one piece of land at Tauranga. The commencement of the boundary is at Ngahuria Whare to the north of Katikati, following round the outside boundary line of all the Ngaiterangi claims. The boundary from the south is from Te Puna; thence running to the forest right across to one outside boundary line. The road to Waikato is within this piece of land now made sacred by this money to the Government:

Hohepa Hikutaia, Wiremu Parera, x his mark, Wiremu Patene,
Tomika te Mutu, Te Patu, Turere, x his mark, Pikake, Hamiora
Tu, Raniera te Hiahia.

The persons who witnessed the writing of the names and the giving of the money— E. W. PUCKEY, Interpreter. JAMES FULLOON, Interpreter.

Tauranga,—Moananui's Claims to Land at Katikati.

MESSRS. H. T. Clarke and J. Mackay, jun., were the arbitrators appointed in this case, the former on behalf of the tribe Ngaiterangi, the latter on the part of Te Moananui and his people, of the tribe Ngaititamatera.

The investigation and decision of this case occupied five days. The whole of the parties concerned behaved in a most orderly and praiseworthy manner throughout. Te Moananui was the spokesman on the one side and Hohepa Hikutaia and Te Harawira the speakers on the other.

Decision of the Arbitrators.

- 1. That Te Moananui claims the block of land commencing on the sea coast at Te Kahakaha, thence to the upper end of the Opeope Swamp, thence by the edge of that swamp to Teroa on the inner side of the Katikati Harbour, thence by the coast to Motukouru, thence inland to the summit of Tohureo, thence to the summit of Te Aroha Range, thence along that range in a northerly direction to a point inland from Te Kahakaha, thence to the point of commencement on the sea coast. He also claims a small piece situated on the inner side of Katikati Head, extending from Tuaeheka to Opotoki, known as Paparahangi Block.
- 2. That Ranganui and Waitaha were the original owners of the Tauranga District. That Te Moananui is descended from Ranganui, and that his title is not disputed in that respect, and that Ngaiterangi admit his title by inheritance.

- 3. That Ngaiterangi came from Hakuranui, south of Maketu, and fought with the various branches of the Ranganui and Waitaha tribes, and then located themselves at Tauranga.
- 4. That Ngaiterangi proper have no claims by right of inheritance to lands in the District of Tauranga, but they have their claims on right of conquest only.
- 5. That Ngaiterangi frequently fought against the ancestors of Te Moananui; that on some occasions the former were victorious, and on others the latter were the conquerors. That Ngaiterangi occupied Katikati on several occasions. That in despite of these conflicts and occupations Te Moananui was personally in possession of the land now claimed by him immediately antecedent to Hongi Hika's invasion of Tauranga.
- 6. That Te Moananui left the land now claimed by him just before Hongi's invasion, and that neither he (Moananui) or Ngaiterangi have ever permanently resided on it since that date. That since Hongi's invasion Ngaiterangi have exercised certain rights of ownership over the land in question. That Te Moananui has also exercised similar rights, but not to the same extent.

Recommended that the block of land described in clause No. 1, with the exception of the piece laying between Te Kahakaha and Ngakuriawhaare, should be surveyed and valued, and that the amount of the purchase money should be equally divided between Ngaiterangi and Ngatitamatera.

HENRY T. CLARKE, Civil Commissioner,
Tauranga, JAMES MACKAY, jun., Civil Commissioner, Hauraki, Arbitrators.
27th December, 1864.

It having been pointed out that there are some burial grounds within the block, it has been agreed to reserve these from sale.

28th December, 1864.
JAMES MACKAY, jun.,

No. 5. Copy of a Letter from Mr. MACKAY to the Hon. J. C. RICHMOND.

Tauranga.—Purchase of Te Puna and Katikati Blocks. Civil Commissioner's Office, Tauranga, 22nd November, 1866.
SIR,—

I have the honor to inform you that, in accordance with instructions received from Mr. Whitaker, agent for the General Government, I left Auckland for this place on the 26th October, with the intention of completing the negotiations for the purchase of Te Puna and Katikati Blocks, which had been partially arranged by Mr. Commissioner Clarke and myself in July last.

On my arrival the Natives received notice to meet at Motuhua. Having heard that the tribe Pirirakau had recently taken possession of the instruments belonging to some surveyors engaged in laying off confiscated lands near the Wairoa, I deemed it advisable to send a special notice to that tribe in case they might be afraid to attend in consequence of their unlawful proceedings. I enclose copy of the same herewith.

On the 31st October I went to Motuhua, accompanied by Mr. Commissioner Clarke. We here found Hori Tupaea, Te Moananui, Wharaki, Maungapuhata, Wi Parera, Wi Patene, Enoka te Whanake, Hohepa Hikutaia, Raniera te Hiahia, Te Kuka, Te Patu, Turere, and all the other influential men of the various hapus of Ngaiterangi.

On the 1st November the question about the survey of confiscated lands was mooted. The Natives were informed that all the Government required was the 50,000 acres agreed on at the time His Excellency the Governor last visited this district; that I had inquired as to the quantity actually surveyed, and found that between the rivers Waimapo and Wairoa, and including Captain Heale's survey of Otumoetai West, there were 40,800 acres; and between the rivers Wairoa and Te Puna, 14,200 acres, or a total area of 55,000 acres, being 5,000 in excess of the quantity arranged.

I then proposed to give back the 5,000 acres, and to make the Ruangarara Stream and Te Puna River the inland boundary of the last-named block, and leave those of the Waimapu and East Wairoa as surveyed, to include 38,000 acres.

After some discussion my suggestion was unanimously assented to. Maungapohatu, the old and principal chief of the Pirirakau, consented on behalf of that hapu, and was exceedingly pleased at a reserve of 300 acres being made for himself and people at Epeha and Waikaraka.

Some friendly Natives, who had lost considerable pieces of land within the 50,000 acre block, applied for reserves, and they were promised that their cases should be inquired into.

The Pirirakau people did not attend at the meeting, and did not answer my notice of the 27th October. I therefore wrote them another letter, copy whereof is enclosed.

The day and The next were occupied in negotiating with the Ngaiterangi hapus for their claims to Te Puna and Katikati Blocks.

The Ngaiterangi would not wait for payment for the above-mentioned lands until a survey could be made and the area ascertained, in accordance with the original understanding, but agreed to take £6,700 for their claims to the land in question, exclusive of the deposit of £1,000 previously paid; 6,000 acres of good agricultural land were also to be reserved for them within the block. The deed of conveyance was signed by the principal men, names as per margin, on behalf of the tribe. I gave them a guarantee for the money.

Te Moananui, Hori Tupaea, Hamuera Tu, Te Kupu te Umehau, Te Patu, Turere, Timi, Harawira, Hohepa Hikutaia, Te Kuka te Mea, Hori Ngatai, Wiremu Parera, Tahere, Enoka Make, Te Whathera, Rotoehu, Mangapohatu, Tomika te Mutu, Tarai Wiripo, Te Puru, Rangiwhaka.

Mr. Clarke and myself returned to Te Papa that afternoon, leaving a message that if the Pirirakau arrived at Motuhua we would return on the 5th instant.

On the 5th Mr. Clarke found it necessary for him to proceed to Maketu, and I went back to Motuhua. On arriving there I found a letter from the Pirirakau awaiting me, as per copy enclosed. I then wrote an answer to it, stating my intention of visiting them. They replied as per copy of letter annexed.

On the morning of the 6th instant, accompanied by Te Kuka (Native Assessor), Ruka, Ruato, and Hohepa, Native police, I proceeded to the Pirirakau settlement at Waiwhatawhata, on the edge of the forest between the Ruangarara and Te Puna. We there found Rawiri Tataa, Kepa Ringatu, Pene Taka, Te Kahukoti, and about twenty-five Natives of the Pirirakau and Ngaiterangi hapus.

A Native named Pukutoia stood up and welcomed us to the settlement, and asked me to state what I had come for.

I then stated that the Ngaiterangi tribe had sold all the land between the Puna and Katikati for £6,700, and 6,000 acres of reserves. That Maungapohatu, their chief, had assented to the sale, and although they (the Pirirakau) had quarreled with Ngaiterangi about the land when they were last at Te Papa, they had better come to an amicable arrangement with them. The Ngaiterangi said that Maungapohatu, Hori Tupaea, and Moananui were the persons who had claims within the block between Te Puna and Waipapa, while the bulk of the Pirirakau had none. If they had any claim to make, they could receive a share of the purchase money and a reserve of land.

With respect to the confiscated lands, the Governor and Ngaiterangi had arranged that 50,000 acres should be retained by the Government for the rebellion of the various hapus of the tribe. I found that the surveyors had exceeded that limit by 5,000 acres, and it had been arranged with the Ngaiterangi that as there was quite that quantity surveyed to the south-westward of the Ruangarara Stream, that that portion should be surrendered, and the boundary should be a line drawn from Te Puna to Te Ruangarara. That the land to the seaward side of this was for the Crown, and that inland for the Maoris, and reserves would be made within it for friendly Natives and others, including a piece of 300 acres for Maungapohatu and themselves. It was now plain which land was to be retained for the rebellion, and what was to remain in the hands of the Natives, and there need be no further bad feeling about it. They (Pirirakau) had lost very little land, although they had been in rebellion from the first, and they had better consent to the arrangement made by the remainder of the tribe. They all lived on the shores of one harbor (Tauranga), and were one people; let them be united in the matter. It is true that at the meeting at Te Papa they quarrelled with Ngaiterangi; but such disagreements were frequent, and it was generally understood among Natives that if a thing was done openly and publicly, face to face, in the heat of argument, that it was not a cause for serious quarrel; they had therefore better make it up, and unite themselves with the Ngaiterangi.

Rawiri Tataa, a chief of Te Pirirakau, then stood up: "Mr. Mackay, I have heard your word. From the Wairoa to Waipapa belongs to me. I will not give it up. You shall have no land from me for my participation in rebellion, and none for your money. I have been in the war at Taranaki and at Waikato, and will give up none here. I have not made peace with you, and do not mean to do so. I do not admit the right of the Ngaiterangi to give up my land, even though I have been in rebellion. I will not give any land to the Governor, either for my rebellion or for your money. Let Ngaiterangi have your money, but I will not let you have my land. It is true that Hori Tupaea has a claim over our bodies, but he has not to our land." (The speaker here pointed to the ground, and said, "Hori Tupaea has no right to that." He then raised his hand and placed it on the upper part of his forehead, and said, "Hori Tupaea has a right to this.")

I said, "Now you have been in rebellion and you refuse to give up any land. This is wrong, Ngaiterangi have lost a great deal of land. The tribes of Waikato, the East Coast, and of Taranaki, have also lost large quantities of their lands. Why should you object to give up some land for your offence? Who has told you to obstruct the surveys and to refuse to give up the land taken by the Governor? You had better put aside all bad feeling; you will get all this land we are now on, right back to the inland boundary. You can get Crown grants for it. I consider the arrangements made with the Ngaiterangi to be a very fair one, and much to your advantage; they have lost much more land than you have. As to your having lost land at Waikato, where is it?" (Rawiri Tataa answered at Kaitotehe, Ashwell's mission station at Taupiri.) I said "that is wrong, that land was sold when I was a boy. You are not Waikato, you belong to Tauranga; your connection with the Waikato tribes is very small, and you are much nearer allied to Ngaiterangi than to them."

Rawiri Tataa then said, "You shall have no land either for the rebellion or for your money. If you want the land go to Tawhiao and William Thompson, if they consent to your having it, well. It is true Maungapohatu has a claim over the land between Te Wairoa and Waipapa, so have Ngaiterangi over part of it, but we will not give it up. William Thompson has given orders to stop the surveyors, and the whole affair is in the hands of Thompson and the Governor. The Government shall not have the land between Te Wairoa and Waipapa; and if the surveyors come to survey we will take away their chains and instruments the same as we have done before. We do not wish to steal the surveyors' instruments, we are willing to give you those already taken if you send for them, but we will not carry them to Te Papa."

I replied, as far as William Thompson's claims are concerned I understand he has three pieces situated at Omohoroa, Purakanui, and Huharua; these are all to be reserved. I did not admit the right of William Thompson to interfere in the affair of the Tauranga District. As far as the Governor was concerned I knew he had taken 50,000 acres of land for military settlement; and, I also knew that he intended to retain it. That as to William Thompson and the Governor having to arrange the question I knew nothing of that. I considered that I was quite as well acquainted with the views of the Governor and the Government, as William Thompson, and they might take my word as binding the Government. I tried in every way to persuade them to come to an amicable arrangement.

Ratima indulged in a speech full of paimarireism, and fierce invectives against the Government. He said that the day would yet come when the Maoris would regain possession of the country. The God had protected them so far. When the Europeans first commenced the war at Waikato, they said all the Natives would be exterminated in the time it took to boil a kettle of water. They were still in the country and we could not conquer them. If they trusted in their God they would yet regain their former Sovereignty of Canaan.

Pene Taka made a violent speech. He would not give up any land and would obstruct the survey. He would fight against the Ngaiterangi; he considered them to be worse than the Government.

Te Kuka, Native assessor, then advised the Pirirakau to make up their quarrel with Ngaiterangi, that the boundary of the land for the rebellion had been fixed by the whole of Ngaiterangi,—that a deed of conveyance had been executed of all the land between Te Puna and Ngakuriawhoare. It was of no use disputing further. If they wanted the land, they must take it away from the Government. As to the money, Ngaiterangi would take it. If the Pirirakau were friendly, they would get some of it through Maungapohatu; but if they were not, and were not pleased, they might try to take the money by force,—that the Puna was in the hands of the Government.

Pukutoia advised the Pirirakau to consent to the proposals made to them, it would be better than quarrelling.

Te Kepa Ringatu refused to give up any land; he said before at Te Papa, if the survey was attempted, blood would be shed; and if the survey was commenced, blood would be shed.

Te Kahukoti Rota and others spoke in the same manner as the previous speakers. Several of them admitted their relationship to Ngaiterangi, but they were King's men, and would not be dictated to by Queenites. They said as to leaving the land to them instead of to the Ruangarara, even if it was given to them under Crown grants, we would take it away in a year or two.

I said the Pirirakau could not be allowed to oppose the whole of their own tri[unclear: b]e, (the Ngaiterangi,) and the Government would not permit them to obstruct, threaten, or kill the surveyors. As to the boundary of the confiscated lands, I intended to cut a line from the Ruangarara to Te Puna, and would bring the surveyors and a party of soldiers to protect them, and would do it at once. They would not be molested so long as they remain quiet in their own settlements, but any armed party coming to the surveyors would be fired upon at once. They had, therefore, better reconsider the question and arrange it amicably by giving up all claim to the 50,000 acres of confiscated land. And as to the purchased block they could take a share of the purchase money through Maungapohatu, who represented their interest.

All these remarks were treated with the utmost contempt; one man, Parata, when I went into a whare, told me, in a sneering manner, that he supposed I would come sneaking behind the soldiers out of danger. If I would only come ahead of the survey party, they would capture me and chop me to pieces (poroporo rawa). I replied, "E pai ana (it is well), we will see about that."

Te Kuka again endeavoured to persuade them to settle the question quietly, but without the slightest success. Several threats were made against surveyors; and against the Ngaiterangi.

I again warned them, that the result of any attack on the survey party would be sure to be severely punished, and, moreover, they would then lose all the rest of their lands.

Rawiri Tataa then said, "You had better go and talk to William Thompson." I replied, "I am quite willing to go and see him; will you accompany me now? If you will, we can walk over the hill at once." Rawiri answered, "I will not go with you, you can go by your own road that you came (by sea). You cannot go this way."

Finding these people were not amenable to reason, I left their settlement, and we proceeded to Motuhua. I remained there for the night.

On the morning of the 7th, in returning towards Te Papa, I met Enoke Whanake, Hohepa Hikutai, Wirimu Patene, Hori Ngatai, Ramera Te Hiahia, and other chiefs and people of the tribe Ngaiterangi. I informed them of my proceedings with the Pirirakau, and of my intention to cut the boundary line, and take out a surveyor, with a party of men to protect them.

They all consented that my plan was right, but asked me to allow them one day to go and talk to the Pirirakau and endeavour to persuade them to enter into the arrangements made by the whole tribe. I willingly consented to this proposition, but at the same time stated that, if the Pirirakau persisted in their threats to obstruct the survey, I would take out the surveyor and the soldiers and the line should be cut. They replied, "If the Pirirakau will not give in, we will assist you in cutting the line."

I next proceeded to Te Papa, and, after consulting with Mr. C. C. Clarke, went to Colonel Hamilton, and asked him if he could furnish me with 200 men if required to protect the survey party.

On the 8th the above-named chiefs and others started from Otumoetai. I accompanied them so far as Te Wairoa, thence I went with Hohepa Hikutaia to inspect the road to the summit to the Rangituanui Hill, and to fix on a site for an encampment, if it was found necessary to protect the survey party. We found all we required, and returned to the Wairoa.

The Ngaiterangi chiefs came back about 4 p.m., and report that the Pirirakau had agreed not to interfere with the survey themselves, but said another tribe would probably do so.

This appeared anything but satisfactory, so I therefore wrote to Colonel Hamilton, asking him to send out 200 men next day.

Mr. Turner, surveyor, was also requested to come and cut the line. I also arranged with Mr. Warbrick to accompany the force as interpreter. I wrote a letter to the Pirirakau (copy enclosed).

A party of 200 men of Her Majesty's 12th Regiment, under command of Captain Markon, arrived at the Native settlement at Te Papaowharia, at 5.30 a.m., on the 9th instant. They crossed the river in boats, and marched to the summit of the Rangituanui Hill, where they encamped at 9 a.m.

In the afternoon I proceeded with Mr. Turner, his men, and a party of soldiers, and commenced the line; the Ngaiterangi chiefs and men, as per margin, Chiefs: Hohepa Hikutaia, Wiremu Patene, Wiremu Parera, Enoke Make, Te Whanake, Hamiora Tu, Ramira Te Hiahia, Hori Ngatai, Wiremu Te Mawwai, Ngamanu, Maihi Haki, Hamiora Tangiawa, Wanakore Mangapohatu, Ruka Te Makoe. Men: Ranata Toriri Peito, Tomo Matini Tarere, Hamiora Te Paki, Rerekaipuke, Taupe Haki, Renata Tarere, Hirini Kiokio Kaka, Ruato.

accompanying us.

We met with no opposition. The Pirirakau had a Paimariri flag flying at Waiwhatawhata; two Natives came to the camp with a letter, and informed me that it was not a fighting flag, but only a Paimariri one. Believing they had only come to spy, I told them, "that so long as they remained quiet in their settlements they would not be molested in any way. I did not care about their flags, and they had better leave the camp forthwith."

On the 10th it rained so hard that we could not work, and therefore remained in camp all day.

The 11th was Sunday. Wanokore, the son of the chief Maungapohatu, who was employed by me to collect intelligence, came into camp and reported that several men of the disaffected Ngatiporou were at Te Reretukahia, and were coming to oppose the survey. Two spies I had sent into the Waiwhatawhata settlement, under pretext of purchasing potatoes, brought me a letter from Rawiri Tata, in which he stated he had returned from Waikato, and Te Rahihi was his companion, who would visit me next day.

I considered this a pretext to delay the survey until they were provided with reinforcements.

I also heard that Te Kepa Ringatu had gone to Hakaraia, of the Arawa, for assistance.

Not knowing what number of Natives might be present to oppose us next day, we signalled to the reserve of 120 men at the Wairoa to march up, so that a larger party could be spared to protect the surveyors.

The Ngaiterangi chiefs having requested to be armed, twelve of them were provided with rifles which had been procured from Lieutenant-Colonel Harrington.

A Native spy named Taupe was detained by Sergeant Greenop, of the 12th Regiment, at the small camp guarding the Wairoa landing place. Mr Warbrick, who had been sent there on duty, communicated this to me by letter. I rode down from our camp with Hohepa Hikutaia that evening, and being satisfied that the Native in question was a spy, I handed him over to Mr. Warbrick and the Native police for safe custody until next morning. We returned to camp at midnight.

On Monday, the 12th instant, we started at 6 a.m. with a party of 150 men, and twelve armed Natives, and continued our line from Te Puhiakapu Hill to Te Puna. After this we cut a line from that hill to the Ruangarara Stream. I found, to have taken the line straight and include the proper quantity of 9,000 acres, we would have had to cut through some thick bush, and would have interfered with the cultivations adjacent to Waiwhatawhata. I therefore made three angles in the line, which excluded 800 or 900 acres. Mr. Turner and his men worked very well indeed, and by 7 p.m. we reached the bank of the Ruangarara Stream. We returned to camp at 8 p.m.

The whole of the officers and men engaged in this heavy day's work entered into it with zeal and energy, and everything that could be done to afford protection against attack or surprise was ably planned and carried out by Captain Markon and those acting under him.

Intelligence reached me this day that the Twelve Apostles of Ngatiporou had arrived at Te Waiwhatawhata, and other rebel Natives were expected at once.

On the 13th, 100 men, under the command of Captain O'Shaughnessy, were sent out to protect Mr. Turner while chaining a portion of the line which was left unchained the previous evening. Finding no opposition, and no appearance of the Natives, we returned to Te Papa. The forces passed through two friendly settlements at Pukekonui and Te Papaowharia, and not the slightest affront was given to any Native, or was there any instance of the slightest misconduct. The management of the whole of the military arrangements was admirable, and reflects great credit on the officer commanding here, and those under him. I wrote to Colonel Hamilton, thanking him for the assistance rendered, and stated that the services of the troops were not further required.

Mr. Commissioner Clarke was unfortunately confined to his bed by illness, and thus prevented from accompanying the expedition, but every step taken was after due consultation with him, and there was no difference in our opinions as to the course to be pursued.

I was engaged with Mr. Clarke and the Ngaiterangi Natives on the 14th, 15th and 16th November, in arranging about reserves to be made for Natives within the 50,000 acre block. News was brought in that the Twelve Apostles, being unable to attack the survey party on the 12th instant, intended to murder the surveyors between the Waimapu and Wairoa: I sent a message warning them to return to Te Papa until other arrangements could be made,

On Saturday, the 17th, I proceeded to the Wairoa with Enoka te Whanake and Hori Ngatai to inspect some land required for reserves in that neighbourhood. The Natives here reported that some of the Twelve Apostles had been prowling about on and near the footpaths leading to Waiwhatawhata, armed.

On the 18th I returned to Te Papa, where I found the Honorable Colonel Haultain, Minister for Colonial Defence, had arrived. I at once reported myself to him.

On the 19th I recommended to the Honorable Colonel Haultain that 100 men should be sent out to form posts to protect the surveyors engaged between the Waimapu and the Wairoa Rivers. I also wrote to him on the 20th respecting a report, brought in by the chief Te Moananui Whariki, that fifty men of the Ngatiporou, Ngatipoua and Ngatitamatera.

of Mataora, were coming to Waiwhatawhata via Te Rereatukahia. I have the honor to enclose copy of my letter, and of Colonel Haultain's answer thereto.

Colonel Haultain having made arrangements for 100 men of the 1st Regiment of Waikato Militia to proceed to Te Wairoa to protect the surveyors, I rode out to Omanawa on the 21st with Captain Hunter of that corps, and fixed on a position for their encampment.

On the 22nd, 100 men of the 1st Waikato Regiment, under command of Captain Mair, marched out to Omanawa, and encamped there. It is not, perhaps, in my province, but it is worthy of mention that of the first 100 men warned for this duty about thirty claimed their discharge, and refused to go. Mr. Warbeck has been appointed to accompany this force as interpreter for the present, so as to prevent any misunderstanding with the friendly Natives.

News has been brought in to day that this party have not been molested in any way. It is to be hoped that the action which has been taken in this matter will prevent any further trouble, and that the surveyors will be able to complete their work in peace and security.

I am happy to inform the Government that I believe the majority of the tribe Ngaiterangi to be loyally inclined, and they are perfectly contented with the arrangements entered into for the purchase of the Puna and Katikati Blocks, and also with the settlement of the boundaries of the lands confiscated to the Crown.

I consider the fact of twelve of the principal chiefs having taken up arms during the survey is a sufficient proof that they will adhere to all the agreements entered into, and the effect politically on the rebel Natives at the Thames and elsewhere, who are inclined to support the Pirirakau in their opposition to the Government, will be beneficial.

I have, &c.,

JAMES MACKAY, Jun., Civil Commissioner.

The Hon. J. C. Richmond.

P.S.—Hakaraia, of the Arawa, refused to send any reinforcements on the application of Te Kepa Ringatu. He stated that as the land had been given by Ngaiterangi, for their participation in the rebellion, and had not been forcibly taken by the Government, against their will, he would not interfere.

J. M

MEMORANDUM by His HONOR the SUPERINTENDENT, Napier, on LAND PURCHASES by Messrs. DAVIS and MITCHELL.

Bay of Plenty.—Respecting Land Purchases at Bay of Plenty and Taupo.

THE attached report from Messrs. Mitchell and C. O. Davis, of the result of their negotiations to the date of their letter, for the acquisition of the Taupo and Rotorua lands for the Government, is submitted for the consideration of the Government. The reply made by me to Messrs. Mitchell and Davis was to the effect that I was satisfied with the progress made—that they had better refer for authority in the case of each block, when they could state definitely the terms on which such block could be acquired—but that as regards the interests of the private parties referred to, the Government could not recognize any claim. Since then Messrs. Mitchell and Davis have made agreements for several blocks, comprising about 250,000 acres, and are still continuing their work. At present they are engaged upon the Patetere country. The Native Minister will observe that no definite arrangements have been made with Messrs. Mitchell and Davis as to the remuneration, but I led them to understand they would receive similar remuneration to what they would have received from the parties who employed them before the Government.

J. D. ORMOND (for the Hon. the Native Minister).

Enclosure. Report of land purchase at taupo and bay of plenty.

Taupo, 14th July, 1873.

SIR,—

We have the honor to transmit for your information, a statement of our proceedings in the Arawa country, during the last week in June and the early part of the present month, on the subject of leasing and selling the surplus lands of the Natives to Government.

It may not be out of place to remark here that the tribes of Rotorua, Maketu, and other localities, have for years past been endeavouring to encourage European settlement, but in consequence of the repeated failures of the Native Lands Court, in relation to their titles, the continuous exertions of these tribes with respect to the utilization of their lands have hitherto ended only in vexatious disappointment. A general feeling of despondency therefore prevailed, occasioned by the non-settlement of the land question, which you will be glad to learn was almost everywhere dispelled when the purport of our mission became known; the Natives cordially invited us to hold conferences with them at their various settlements, the result of which was in every instance an expression of confidence in the means now devised, viz., of treating directly with the Government for their lands as being well calculated to solve the difficulties which stand in the way of an amicable termination to their land disputes.

It is not too much to say that, in a political point of view, the project now proposed of treating for the waste lands of the Rotorua and Taupo Districts is eminently important, as it will in the event of success, secure to the Government the command of a tract of country comprising several millions of acres through which our main arteries of communication of roads and telegraphs pass north and south, and the acquisition of which by sale and by lease, we may hopefully expect will cement the bond of union between the races, and tend very materially to establish our authority over a central belt of the North Island hitherto made the theatre only of various contending influences. The project too, morally and socially, will be of vital consequence to the Native owners of these lands, inasmuch as the settlement of the vexatious tribal boundary disputes will leave them free to devote their time and energies to help forward the work of education, initiate social reform, and increase their domestic comfort, while their yearly income derivable from rents should be so expended as to stimulate and encourage habits of Industry, and improve in various other ways the present low condition of these interesting tribes.

True, the claims are difficult of solution, heightened extremely by the tribal jealousies of long standing,—difficulties which for years past have not been surmounted by various tried agencies. Notwithstanding these and other impediments, which need not be named here, we consider that the present unostentatious mode of procedure, and patient personal shifting, on the ground, of the points in dispute will eventuate in the complete solution of these land entanglements and their settlement upon a satisfactory basis.

Having made these explanatory remarks, we proceed to particularize our operations up to the present date. Our visits and meetings with the various sections of the Arawas took place in the following order:—

- 1873—June 26, at Ohinemutu, meeting with the chiefs Ngahuruhuru, Pererika, and tribe.
- " 27, at Parekarangi, meeting with Te Manihera and Ngatiwahiao tribe.
- " 28, at Horo Horo, meeting with Te Honiani and Ngatituara tribe.
- " 30, with Ngatiwhakaue, at Ohinemutu.
- July 1, at Tarawera Lake, meeting with Te Kepa te Hurinui, and Tuhourangi tribe.
- " 2, at Kaiteriria, meeting with Hohepa, Tiria, and Ngatitu tribe.
- " 3, at Oahuru, Paeroa, meeting with Takerei and Ngatiwhaoa tribe.
- " 4, at Mangakara, meeting with Ihaia and Ngatitahu tribe.
- " 5, at Orakei Korake, meeting with Mateho, Te Tuiri, and Ngatitahu tribe.
- " 7, at Oruanui, meeting with Hohepa Tamamutu and Ngatiterangiita tribe.
- " 9, at Tapuwaeharuru, meeting with Poihipi Tukairangi and Ngatirauhoto tribe.
- " 10, at Tapuwaeharuru, meeting with Paponui and Ngatiwairangi tribe.
- " 11, at Tapuwaeharuru, meeting with Ihakara Ngatikikopiri tribe.
- " 14, general meeting, Tauhara grantees and others.

We were everywhere well received, the Natives paying marked attention to the enunciation of the Government proposals. They expressed their entire approval of the scheme generally, and their readiness to enter into negotiations for the lease, and in some instances the sale, of their lands.

The country submitted to us for lease, and which we conditionally accepted until, terms would be mutually agreed upon, extends from the Rotorua to Taupo, and from Te Whaiti and Runanga to Patetere and the Waotu. It comprises the following blocks, viz.:—Puhorua and Mangorewa, Parekarangi, 70,000 to 80,000 acres, first nine years £200, second nine £250; third nine £300; Horo Horo, Ratoreka, Paeroa, Tarawera Valley; Kaingaroa North, Te Whaiti, Heruiwi, Kaingaroa No. 1 (St. George's), the Tauhara's three blocks—Tauhara Middle, thirty years, first ten years at £100, second at £200, third at £300; Rangatira, Whangamata, Te Tatna, Kaimanawa, Whakamaru West, Tokoroa, Patetere, Te Waotu.

Of these we have already recommended the acceptance of Parekarangi and Tauhara Middle (by telegraph), at the terms stated, and have received authority to close for the former.

The purchases already agreed to are as follows:—

A block surrounding the township of Tapuwaeharuru, in Tauhara Middle, estimated to contain 10,000 to 12,000 acres; price with costs. Original negotiations began on Mr. Mitchell's account, afterwards Messrs. Watt Brothers, of Napier, who agreed to give as high as 2s. per acre, to include all costs. This includes several small purchases, one recognised by Natives (Mr. Park's), others not recognised.

A block of 1,300 acres, fronting Mohaka River, on the Taharua Stream near Patehe; negotiated for on behalf of Mr. Wm. Buckland, of Auckland; price agreed upon being £810, Mr. Buckland to pay cost of survey.

A block of 11,000 acres in Tauhara South, agreed to be sold by Native owners for £630; negotiated for on behalf of Mr. Wm. Buckland, of Auckland, but who abandoned the idea on learning the inalienation of the block.

A block of 10,000 acres in the Oruanui Block; price £600; purchased by Mr. Wm. Buckland, of Auckland.

We should now also inform you that considerable sums of money have been expended by capitalists in these districts, in the hope that quiet possession would result therefrom. Some of those have abandoned their projects; others still contemplate getting possession when possible. The following gentlemen are interested:—Mr. Joldwynn, of Otago; Messrs. Clayton, of Marlborough; Messrs. Wilson and Innes, of Waikato; Messrs. Smith and Corbett, of Auckland; M. C. Robinson and H. C. Young, of Canterbury; E. Moorhouse, of Napier; and M. E. Miller also represents a number of southern interests.

In conclusion, we beg to state that our immediate movements will be directed to the settlement of Tauhara, Parekarangi, and other runs, but we shall be glad to be instructed as to our future course of action, if you deem it necessary.

Thanking you for your prompt attention to our suggestions, and for your approval of what has been already initiated,

We have &c.,

C. O., DAVIS, HENEY MITCHELL.

The Hon. J. D. Ormond, Napier.

Memorandum on report of messes, Davis and Mitchell by the under native secretary.

Bay of Plenty. 9th August, 1873.

I have read with much attention Messrs. Davis and Mitchell's report attached. I quite agree in every word they have said in respect to the difficulty which surrounds dealings in Arawa lands. It is the noisy disputes, extreme jealousy, and pertinacity of the different hapis which have in a great measure rendered the Native Lands Act inoperative.

It is satisfactory to see these gentlemen are fully alive to the difficulties which beset them, and it is hoped that this knowledge will be judiciously applied and prevent any serious complications.

The blocks of land that will require careful management are—

- Puhirua and Mangorewa.—This belongs chiefly to the Ngatirangiwehi and Ngatikereru hapis. The land on the north side of Mangarewa as far as Te Rerenga is, claimed by Ngatirangiwehi and Ngatikereru, but disputed by Ngaitamarawaho, of Tauranga, and Tapuika; of Maketu.
- Horohoro.—Is claimed by Ngatituara and a section of Ngatiwhakaue, but disputed by Tohourangi.
- Ratoreka and Paeroa.—Is claimed by Ngatitu and Ngahuruhuru, of the Ngatiwhakaue, with whom are allied the Ngatitahuna, at Orakeikorako (over certain portions). This again is disputed by the Tohourangi.
- Kaingaroa North; Te Whaiti, and Heruini.—Claimed principally by the Ngatimanawa but I believe Ngatirangitahi profess to have considerable interests in these lands.
- Te Tohoroa, Patetere, Te Waotu.—Are claimed by the various hapis of Ngatiraukawa.

H. T. CLARKE.

No. 7. Messrs. MITCHELL and DAVIES to the UNDER-SECRETARY, Native Department.

Bay of Plenty.—Land Purchase Negotiations. Lake Taupo, 10th July, 1870.
SIR,—

Since our last report we have had some difficulties to encounter in our land operations, which at times threatened to bring about a collapse. Some of the Arawa chiefs, acting under the advice, of the Hawke's Bay Natives and their pakeha friends, whose opposition to the present Government is well known, have, by petitions to the Assembly, by numerous letters and telegrams, and by various other means, endeavoured to stay our land proceedings in the Arawa country. The various petitions and other communications forwarded by the Arawa generally, have been notable only for the gross misrepresentations they contained, and in these demonstrations they have all well borne out the ancient proverb accorded to them by the universal voice of the Maori tribes, "Te Arawa Mangai Nui"

—" The big-mouthed Arawa." Added to the wanton troublesomeness of these Arawa tribes, their cupidity has been excited, and their known character of dishonesty encouraged by private individuals, who persistently endeavour to lease and buy Maori lands within our district, although they well know that it is impossible, under the circumstances, to obtain a legal title, and by foolishly bargaining with unscrupulous Arawas, they are but wasting time and money; and no doubt, at some future period, when driven to their wit's end, they will fall back as their predecessors have done, on the Government for compensation, with what show of justice remains to be seen. We have pleasure in stating, however, that notwithstanding the violence of the opposition and the various obstacles referred to with which we have had to contend, land matters at present throughout the whole of our district, as far as our operations are concerned, are standing upon a most satisfactory basis; and now that the Arawas have discovered that we unflinchingly adhere to the principles of truth and justice, and that their threats are either treated with indifference or met by sound arguments, their feelings have become somewhat mollified, and they profess to be desirous of aiding the Government scheme, which, indeed, does not surprise us, as they are sufficiently intelligent to see that such a course will be advantageous to themselves.

Although we looked upon the great meeting held in March last at Maketu as the outcome of ungovernable cupidity on the part of the leading chiefs who advocated that movement, still it was a satisfactory, mode of laying bare the utter baselessness on which extortionate demands were made, and evidencing before an impartial tribunal of both races the complete groundlessness of their accumulated grievances.

It will be remembered perhaps that we intimated in our last general report the probability of our success in respect to purchasing the block of land at Maketu, known as Te Puke, in which case our operations would be extended to Maketu flats, known as Te Papanui, Paengaroa, &c. We have to state that the proposed line of action we then ventured to suggest was carried out by us. We treated with the Waitaha and Tapuika tribes, to whom it was fully known the land really belongs; and although the "toa" element raised its crest, our determined indifference towards the "toa" on the grounds of justice so thoroughly convinced them of the untenableness of their position and the fictitiousness of their claims, that they agreed to confine their demands to a few hundred acres of worthless sandy soil near the sea coast, which includes Te Tumu, the famous battle ground, where the Ngaiterangi were worsted. Having succeeded in obtaining the assent and signatures of the resident Natives at Maketu of the Waitaha and Tapuika tribes, we proceeded to Auckland and Coromandel peninsula, where a number of the same tribes resided, whose signatures were obtained to our deeds, and who warmly repudiated any claim whatever to the lands of their ancestors made by the "toa," stating that the Ngatiwhakaue and others, claiming as "toa;" put forward these fictitious claims for the purpose of extorting money, taking advantage of the ignorance of the pakehas as regards these Maori questions. With these sayings and other arguments of our own, showing the fallacies of the "toa" claims, the whole element suddenly collapsed, and" we were told by them to go on with the ancestral claimants, but that as an act of grace they, the "toa," hoped riot to be overlooked.

After the settlement, as far as could be accomplished, of Te Puke, Te Papanui and Paengaroa Blocks referred to above, we proceeded to Rotorua, and held an open conference with all the tribes in that locality in relation to the purchase of 20,000 acres of wooded land, known as Te Rotohokahoka Block, and after a careful investigation as to the nature of the multitudinous claims, we paid as deposits the sum of £500 thereon; subsequently we held a series of meetings at Te Wairoa with Tuhourangi on the Rotohokahoka purchase, and on the leases of Paeroa, Tumunui, Rotomahana, and other places. We succeeded in arguing down the opposition of the body of Tuhourangi chiefs who call themselves the "Putaiiki," and of obtaining their consent to the purchase of Rotohokahoka, and to the leases in question. The chiefs of Tuhourangi, Te Rangiheuea, and others whose claims to the Koutu Block at Ohinemutu, on which the Armed Constabulary, in command of Sub-Inspector Gascoigne, are at present located, agreed to lease their interest in the block, and we accordingly paid to them a deposit, securing at the same time their signatures to our deed. At the same meeting the most violent opposition was raised by all present to the claims of Henare Te Pukuatua as regards Matakana lands, Tumunui, Kapanga, and other places on which lands it was suggested the advance made to Henare by the Government of £250 should rest. Some of Henare's own relatives, who were present, suggested that he should give to Government as an equivalent lands at Maketu, if he had any there, which they said was questionable. All our attempts to settle the above money question having signally failed, we moved on to Ohinemutu, where we held meeting after meeting on the subject of the Koutu lease; but in consequence of the hostile attitude assumed by the chief Temuera Te Amohau and his adherents, we deemed it wise to relinquish for the time being further actual negotiations. It should be stated, however, that immediately after some of the party broke away from Temuera, sanctioning the lease by affixing their signatures thereto, and taking a small deposit. Among those who signed were Henare Te Pukuatua, his wife Nataria, Paratomeo, Te Puke, Te Wharekino, Te Upokotareoa, Pahiriko, and Te Poroa. Others of the Ngatiwhakaue expressed their desire to sign the deed, but, their demands being objectionable on the score of exorbitancy, we refused to entertain their propositions. The question of the Parekarangi lease having been mooted at the same time, a general meeting was convened on the subject, the result of which was the obtaining of a number of signatures to our lease, and the payment of £15 deposit to parties, who had previously opposed the transaction.

Prior to the matters detailed above, it is necessary to remark that we paid a visit to the Arawa chiefs residing at Ohiwa, with whom originated the idea of leasing the Koutou block to the Government; they also sanctioned the sale of the Puke Block, Te Papanui, and other places at Maketu, and those connected with either Waitaha or Tapuika received small payments in extinguishment of their claims. We also obtained here the signatures necessary to complete the title to the military award blocks of Ngatikereru, Ngatirangiteaorere, and Ngatiuenukopako." The subject of the Mangorewa lands claimed by the Ngatirangiwehi tribe, was also a subject of discussion, as to whether any portion should be sold or leased to Government. It transpired that the members of the tribe generally had signed a paper transferring all power and authority to their chief Mita Hikairo, of the Native Lands Court Office, Auckland, who was to act on his own judgment as far as these lands are concerned. We sought an interview with Hikairo on the occasion of our visit to Auckland in October, 1874, and he gave us to understand that until he obtained Crown grants for the lands in question, he would not be inclined to treat either with Government or private parties. He however withdrew all opposition to the purchase of the Rotohokahoka Block in which he was known to have an interest. In connection with the subject of Rotohokahoka we may add that, in consequence of our action relative to the purchase of that block, the Ngatiraukawa tribe, professing to have claims thereon, convened a meeting at Te Whetu, to which it was deemed advisable to send Mr. Young, who reported that about 170 Natives were present, some of whom were delegates from the Hauhau country, and, after three days' discussion, the Hauhau party concluded by remarking that the block of land in question must be settled by the Rotorua Natives, and by those of the Te Whetu party who had interest in the soil, and that it was a mistake to summon them (the Hauhaus) from a long distance to take part in a matter with which they had really nothing whatever to do. It should be stated that Arekatera te Puni, with whom, originated the offer of the Rotohokahoka Block to Government for sale, and to whom a deposit of £150 was paid, and whose business it was to be present at the meeting referred to, to argue down the opposition, failed from fear or some other cause to appear, but Te Kepa te Marama, a chief of the Ngatiuenukopako tribe, who also received a deposit of £150 on the block, manfully withstood the hostile attitude, assumed by the Ngatiraukawa in relation to the Rotohokahoka, and told them in direct terms that the Government should have the land, and that he should accompany the surveyor, and that his interests would be unceasing until the final settlement of the purchase. Te Kepa's determined standing had, Mr. Young is of opinion, the desired effect upon the opponents, and we are glad to record that some of the opposition party are now anxious to assist in the survey.

At Whakatane, we met the chiefs Rangitukehu and Tiopira, with whom we held a lengthy conference regarding lands at Rangitaiki, previously leased to Government. We arranged to convene a large meeting at their settlement Kokohinau, for the purpose of bringing together the various conflicting elements, in the hope of satisfactorily settling all the differences on the spot. At the request of Rangitukehu, the meeting has been delayed until August next. The Whakatane tribes were anxious to deal with us for the sale of certain lands claimed by them; but these lands being outside the boundary lines of our district, we referred them to Mr. Wilson. At Te Awa-a-te Atua, numerous meetings were held with Wiremu Kepa te Rangipuawhe, Te Wikiriwhi Te Tuahu, Arama Karaka, and other influential chiefs, together with their people. The subjects put before the meetings were the leases of Kaingaroa and Rerewhakaitu, and it was agreed that a day should be fixed by consent of Government for the investigation of title, to insure the validity of leases. It was also proposed to sell to Government the Military Award Block at Matata, claimed by the Tuhourangi, containing upwards of 4,000 acres.

Next in order is our visit to Taupo, where we were met by the chiefs Topia Turoa, Matuahū, Te Heuheu, and Paurini, accompanied by all the surrounding tribes. After a series of preliminary meetings were held at Tapuaeharuru, on the leases and purchases generally, local gatherings took place at Omatangi, Opepe, and Runanga, where were offered some of the signatures of the grantees of Runanga No. 2, and Tauhara middle. We arranged also a lease of Runanga No. 1, from certain counter claimants, and completed the title of the Taharua Block. Discussions relative to the Tatua leases, east and west, Mohaka; Oruanui, and Parekarangi, we were unable to complete, being suddenly summoned by the Under-Secretary to meet the Hon. Native Minister at Maketu. Thither we proceeded, and were present at daily meetings held by Donald MacLean and the main hapus of the district, for the purpose of enquiring into the nature and extent of the Arawa grievances, which we are inclined to think were of the most delusive character, and brought forward with the pure desire of extorting Government money, which to the credit of Donald MacLean be it recorded, they utterly failed in obtaining. In justice to the Arawas generally, it becomes necessary to draw the line of demarkation between the two prominent sections, namely, the "anti-leasing and selling" party, and those who sell and lease. Of the former the great leading personage is Te Pokiha Taranui, more commonly called Fox, a man of indomitable pride, with "very small intellect, which is, as we found almost always devoted to self; but he makes up for mental deficiency by the adoption of schemes, irrespective of argument and reason. He carries with him a small section of the Ngatipikiao tribe, named Ngatitekakenga, who are known to possess but small influence, and but very little land. The Ngatipikiao, who are with the Government in the land scheme, comprise a large majority under the old and influential chiefs, Te Puehu Taihorangi, Te Mapu, Rota Rangihoro, Te Matangi, Pita te Taretoroa, Wi Kepa, Hira, Rirituku, Eruini te Tikao, Mita Tahoka, Hona te Hauita and others. With this large section of the Ngatipikiao range the Waitaha, Tapuika, Ngatipakenga, Ngatimoko, Ngatituara, Ngatirangitihi, Ngatihinewai, Te Patuwai and others. In fact the real landholders generally throughout the Arawa country favour both selling and leasing, and it is found that the opposing party as a rule have little or no land to sell or lease. Consequently the genuine owners of the soil viewed the acts and interference of the clamorous anti-sellers with extreme bitterness. We ought, perhaps, to say that the conclusions we have arrived at with respect to the points mooted in this report are based upon unbiassed observations, we having full opportunity of ascertaining from time to time of judging as to the position of things, and the bearing of men, chiefs and people, on the land question, and we have always found it better never to swerve from what we consider right, and to set our faces against the system of bribes. By this simple adherence to principle, we are certain that the Government have been saved many thousands of pounds, and an abiding lesson has been taught to these Arawa tribes that truth and honesty are more potent than all the low scheming they have endeavoured to bring to their aid in their land negotiations.

During our present visit to Taupo, meetings have been held at various places regarding the Mohaka Block of 47,000 acres, which was partly settled before Donald MacLean at Napier, one of us being present, Te Tatua, Tauhara North, Parekarangi, and Oranui. The tone of feeling with regard to all of these places was in favour of Government, and although Henare Matua and other Hawke's Bay celebrities sent their written epistles and oral messages to Taupo Natives, stirring them up to oppose any attempt on the part of Government to secure lands in this district by purchase or lease, the machinations of the Napier chiefs proved unsuccessful, and their gratuitous opinions treated with profound indifference.

We have felt it our duty to encourage, as much as possible, the desire of the Taupo tribes to educate their children, and we have impressed upon them the advisableness and necessity of setting aside for school purposes a portion of the money received from us for their lands." There is one matter to which we would call attention, namely, the transference of the proposed school buildings to Tokanu, it being a much more central position, and being near the settlement of the parents and guardians, and would be more likely to receive support, and in consequence insure success. We have not had an opportunity of conferring with Mr. Commissioner Locke on the subject, but as he intends to visit Taupo shortly, we shall then be enabled to place before him our views. It may be observed, likewise, that the Hauhau element being strong in the neighbourhood of Tokanu, the benefits arising from the education of the young would be acknowledged, and the Hauhaus would be stimulated to send their children also.

By this mail we transmit some of the completed deeds.

We have, &c.,

C. O. DAVIS, HENRY MITCHELL.

Under Secretary, Native Department, Land Purchase Branch.

Messrs. C. O. DAVIS and HENRY MITCHELL, Rotorua, to the UNDER SECRETARY, Native Department, Wellington.

Bay of Plenty.—Reporting, land transactions in Arawa District. Rotorua, 24th April, 1876.

SIR,—

We have the honor to transmit, for your information, the following remarks relative to land matters in our district, in the hope that some points requiring elucidation may be made clear to you. And although this report may be considered diffusive to you, being well versed in Maori feelings and opinions, yet the points mooted may not be superfluous or devoid of interest.

By way of explanation, we may observe that, prior to the decision of Government relative to purchasing and leasing lands in the Arawa country, extensive runs were taken by Messrs. Tetley, Seymour, Beaumont, Cox, Grace, Young, and others; but, prior to our services being secured on behalf of the Government, we had become the agents of Messrs. Millar, Buckland, and others, to secure in the whole of the Arawa District every available block of land by lease, &c., at high rates, considerably in advance of those we subsequently paid on behalf of Government.

The Arawa country, as a whole, has been cried down as a "desert of pumice;" and those who profess to have great knowledge of soils, and their adaptation to grasses, speak loudly against the run-holders for taking up so dreary a country, and some of the local newspapers have criticised the action of Government for "wasting," as they say, "money on such deserts." It never, has been proved, however, that these poor looking pumice soils will not grow grasses, for the simple reason that no attempt has been made to try their capabilities. Some persons indeed, in their fool-hardiness, ploughed up certain places at Taupo and scattered grass seed, forgetting at the time that the plough-share should not, have touched the soil, as it did not require to be made more porous by ploughing, but more compressed by rollers. One thing is certain, that in many localities where no plough-share has been introduced, fine clover and various other English grasses have embedded themselves in the pumice soil, and on some of the despised runs sheep are thriving remarkably well, the run-holders sending yearly their wool to the Napier market. The late William Buckland, whose practical knowledge in agricultural pursuits was most extensive, often expressed his conviction that the very worst looking pumice land of Taupo would be productive of English grasses some day, should the work be entrusted to competent and skilful persons.

In relation to Maori feelings with regard to land matters in the Arawa country, we may state that long before the origin of the famous land league of the Waikatos, which led to their election of the Maori King, the Arawa tribes came to the unanimous decision that no lands "should be alienated to either Government or private individuals; but that their country would be opened for lease, a determination they seem to have adhered to, with little or no variation, up to the year 1872. The wonder therefore is that we succeeded in buying Otamarakau, 28,000 acres; Kaikokopu, 17,000; Paengawa, 25,000; Te Puke, 30,000; and Te Rotohokahoka, 20,000, in the Maketu and, Rotorua Districts, all of which are known to be suitable for special settlement.

Up to the year 1871 the various attempts made by the Judges of the Native Lands Court to investigate the titles of land at Maketu and Rotorua signally failed, and the proceedings of the Arawas were of so violent a character as to preclude the possibility of farther action being taken in their country, a circumstance which induced the authorities to transfer from Maketu and Rotorua to Tauranga the sitting of the Lands Court, in the hope that the spirit of turbulence in regard to the Arawa land matters would be subdued; but even here, to prevent the outbreak of hostilities, Donald McLean was compelled to order the closing of the Court, and the withdrawal from the district of all surveyors.

From the year 1866 up to 1872, various private individuals from both the North and Middle Islands, anxious to obtain runs in the Arawa country, treated directly with the Natives, and paid large deposits to the professed owners, contrary to law, so determined were they to gain possession, if possible, of the land in question, notwithstanding the oft-repeated assertion that the whole of the country is a "silent, barren desert." In some instances sheep were placed on runs, but were driven hither and thither by antagonistic Maori claimants; and when any attempt was made to survey the lands, the surveyors were at once expelled by the Natives, and more recently, when De Thierry, Dalton, O'Mera, Fitzgerald, and other Auckland speculators, ventured to commence surveys at Rotorua and Taupo, hostile Natives appeared in armed force, and, to prevent the shedding of blood, the military authorities were obliged to interfere, unarm the Maoris, and warn the surveyors to move off. By this judicious interference of the military in 1873, the belligerent Natives were quelled and peace restored to the district.

The leading chiefs of the Arawas, having discovered that no settlement of land was likely to be effected by the lawfully constituted Court, and dreading that the Maori heartburning, keenly felt by the Hawke's Bay Natives in consequence of their entanglement by runholders, mortgages, &c., would extend itself to the Arawa country, forwarded petitions, to Government in 1871 and 1872, praying that some system be adopted by which the long-pending vexed question of Arawa titles to land might be settled; and when land agents were authorized by Government to buy and lease Arawa territory, the tribes unanimously declared that this decision of our rulers was the granting of the Arawa request for the adoption of some suitable land system to meet the urgent wishes of the Arawa tribes: hence the cordial and extreme friendly welcome experienced by the land agents on the occasion of their first visit to Taupo Runanga, Paewa, Parekarangi, Te Wairoa, Maketu, Te Awa-o-te-Atua, Kokohinau, Fort Galatea, and other Native settlements; and up to the present time it may be said, with all truthfulness, that little or no opposition rules throughout the district, except that of the old land league and certain chiefs who have little or no land to sell.

The spirit of rivalry among the Arawa tribes from the earliest times seems to have been based upon what they designate mana—i.e., influence, power, authority, superstition, dread, &c. In all our negotiations throughout the Arawa country this mana protrudes itself, but the two dominant parties now assuming to hold this power are the Ngatiwhakaue and Tuhourangi tribes. It has been our practice from the first to ignore the mana, because it professes to be perfectly distinct from the ownership of the soil, and moreover the assumed mana by these dominant tribes is repudiated by the genuine owners of the soil. It does seem strange indeed that in these times, when Maori rule is almost annihilated by European usages, that any chiefs or tribes in the Arawa country should be found to assert their mana and to base their pretensions on it, and this seems doubly strange when we take into consideration the fact that all the leading chiefs of the Arawa are receiving Government salaries, by which act they have to all intents and purposes virtually abandoned the Maori notions of authority. To retain their ancient rights of mana and to draw their Government salaries is perfectly incompatible, and to attempt usurpation by claiming to have mana now, when the great majority of the people repudiate their assumption, is equally absurd. We do not go into the basis of this mana, as to how it comes to pass that one tribe should possess it and not another; but, as far as we have been able to glean information, the mana question has arisen from the practice of the more powerful domineering over the weak; the power arising from birth, intellect, and other fortuitous circumstances. It will be seen by the above remarks that it would be quite out of place for us, as land agents, to recognize the mana of chiefs or tribes; and accordingly we have steadily adhered to our first determination—namely, to treat only with the recognized owners of the soil. The attitude assumed by us in this respect has induced the chiefs and tribes claiming mana to deluge the Government with letters and telegrams, in the hope that they would be able to extort money on the ground of this Maori mana, forfeited long ago, and fully ignored by all parties. It may be remarked here that, when Christianity was introduced into New Zealand, all Maori slaves were emancipated, and every individual Maori was looked upon as the owner of his land, the chiefs having, been disrobed of their mana power. The repeated endeavours of the Arawa chiefs and tribes to base upon this mana their claim for compensation in regard to Maori lands is simply the reiterated cry, "Give, give;" and they assure themselves that nothing is lost by making the demand. This has been our experience in dealing with this mana question. But, should the adherents of this undefined, Maori mana continue to exert their clamour the matter may readily enough be set at rest by a series of Native meetings, aided by Government, as these simple tribunals will be the only effectual mode of settling this purely Maori supremacy.

Another subject which has given rise to fierce argumentation among the Arawas themselves, and harassed us perpetually, is that of the toa, or, braves, and the singularity of the question, and the extent of its ramifications throughout the district and far beyond it, is as troublesome as it is remarkable. The simple and advisable course would be to ignore the claims of the toa, not being based on Maori custom, and on the ground of its having been repudiated by the Native Lands Court in a full and lengthened sitting, under the able inquiry of that excellent Maori scholar, Judge Smith. But the Arawas, as a people, do not argue but resort to declamation, a course which intimidates the weak, who are generally right, and strengthens the position of the more powerful, who are almost always wrong. The demands made by the braves proper are based upon the supposed military services achieved by them on their own behalf and on behalf of certain tribes acknowledged to be, owners of the Maketu soil, which military services were carried out long antecedent to the colonization of New Zealand, and on this ground alone the assumption of these braves should have been repudiated, especially when a large number of the so called braves who performed the military services are owners of the soil; but though they have alienated the land to Government, they also demand compensation as braves: thus, by Maori scheming and mere braggardism, they hope to secure double payments from Government, one for the soil itself, and the other for military services on their own behalf. There are four sets of braves; those with whom the attacks upon the common enemy originated, those who risked their lives by personal daring, those who lost most relatives in the fight, and the great crowd who rushed to take loot, and otherwise help the army when the foe was routed. It should be stated that many of the braves who have no interest in Maketu soil, but are residing thereon, have abundantly compensated themselves long ago by taking possession of certain lands there which they cultivated and still retain. To eject this class of claimants from the lands now in their occupation, would probably bring about local disturbances; but to grant them other privileges, is most unjust to all other outside tribes who assisted in the tribal wars. As, however, the toa question has been recognized, the greatest care and prudence are required to set the matter at rest, as it still agitates the whole Arawa community at Maketu and Rotorua, and since the recognition numbers of claimants from distant parts have started up from their concealment demanding compensation on account of the old Maori fights.

The peculiarity of the Arawa country, in relation to its wonderful terraces, its geysers and numerous mineral springs, is attracting numbers of visitors year by year from Europe, America, Australia, North and South Islands of New Zealand; and owing to this large concourse of persons during the summer months, and the benefits derived by invalids from various mineral baths, said to contain sulphur, arsenic, naphtha, alum, iron and other chemicals, many private speculators have leased and bought plots of land unlawfully, anticipating that the district will ere long become populous, in consequence of its multitudinous springs and other advantages. That such a country should become the property of the Crown, and that strenuous efforts be put forth to secure so desirable an object, will scarcely be questioned by any man of reflection, although it is considered fashionable by newspaper writers to deplore the action of Government in its attempt to secure this valuable public domain, and to cry the country down as a "silent barren desert," broken only by its lakes—Taupo, Rotorua Tikitapu, Rotokakahi, Okareka, Okataina, Tarawera, Rerewhakaitu, Rotomahana, Rotoma, Rotoehu Rotoiti, and others.

The acquisition of these lands by lease, politically considered, is, without doubt, of paramount consequence, the country being intersected by roads and telegraph lines, accessible by coach and horse, and forming the area between the great centres of population in the North Island—namely, Wellington, Auckland, and Napier. Nor should the great importance of establishing permanent peaceful relations with the large Maori population of this district be overlooked, as it will tend materially to intimidate the action of less friendly Maori communities, and raise the confidence of New Zealand colonists.

Viewing the leasing of these lands by the Government from a commercial standpoint, the rentals being extremely low, there are good grounds for believing that the Government will be gainers; nor should it be imagined that these lands will be untenanted for any time after they are thrown open by Government for selection: as, for instance, Runanga No. 1 and No. 2, well wooded and watered, having areas of respectively of 45,000 and 42,000 acres, are applied for by runholders; also Tatua East and West, containing 30,000 or 40,000 acres; Parekarangi, of 80,000; and a firm from Auckland desires a long lease of Tawhatirahi or Otuhounga, of 19,000 acres, for the purpose of procuring sulphur. Paeroa, of 100,000 acres, and other blocks, might be enumerated; but the above will suffice to show the eagerness of the public to secure the runs in the Arawa country, which have been so often proclaimed by newspaper writers and political partizans as "silent barren deserts."

While writing on this subject, it should be stated that all the Native owners interested in runs generally are exceedingly desirous to see them in the occupation of settlers placed thereon by Government; and we may add that, the titles being clear, immediate possession can be given.

In reference to this point, many leading chiefs from time to time have made requests to us by letter and otherwise that the various runs in these localities, on which they have received public money, should be as speedily as possible covered with stock; and some of the tribes interested are petitioning the General Assembly to expedite their earnest wishes in this respect, a course that will tend to the advancement of the country, the union of rival chieftains, and the unanimous confidence of the Arawa people in the land scheme of the present Government in the Bay of Plenty and its inland districts.

We have, &c.,

C. O. DAVIS. HENRY MITCHELL.

The Under Secretary, Native Department, Wellington.

SUMMARY of TRANSACTIONS in ARAWA DISTRICTS, LAND PURCHASE DEPARTMENT PURCHASES;

NOTE.—The foregoing twenty-two blocks contain 217,000 acres, of which sixteen blocks are completed; area, 70 000 acres; average price, 1s. 10½d. per acre. The remaining six blocks are undergoing adjustment of Native claims, in order that satisfactory and final payments of the balances of the consideration moneys be made, and the area of these six is about 147,000 acres; average price, 2s. per acre, ranging from 10d. to 4s. per acre.

Leases.

The leases comprise sixteen blocks, containing 980,000 acres, six blocks of which, containing 235,000 acres, are completed, at an average annual rental for the first seven years of ¼d. per acre in Taupo, and 1d per acre in the Bay of Plenty.

In Rotorua District chiefly, ten blocks remain to be completed, containing 750,000 acres, at an annual rental of ½d per acre.

Mr. C.O. DAVIS to the UNDER SECRETARY, Native Department, Wellington.

Bay of Plenty.—Report of Land Purchases. Ohinemutu, 16th June, 1876.
SIR,—

I have the honor to transmit, for your information, the accompanying report relative to our operations in these districts, from the 1st July, 1875, to 31st May, 1876.

The monetary department of our business having, at the commencement of our work, at my request, solely devolved on Mr. Mitchell, he is forwarding to you the necessary report on that subject.

As the report forwarded to you in April last bears on many points omitted in the enclosed paper, and in order that a continuous narrative of our operations be as palpable as possible, may I ask the favour of your attaching the April report to the one now forwarded, which will enable you to comprehend the various phases of our somewhat lengthened land negotiations in the Bay of Plenty and Lake Districts.

I have, &c.,

C. O. DAVIS.

H. T. Clarke, Esq., Under-Secretary, Wellington.

Ohinemutu, 15th June, 1876.

SIR,—

In accordance with your telegram of the 23rd ultimo, requesting us to furnish a full report of all land purchase transactions in the district since the 1st of July last, we have the honor to record herein all points bearing on the subject named in your communication.

As some of our documentary statements were transmitted to you early in July last, it may very considerably help you to understand our negotiations if citations be made from papers previously written; although some of the matters quoted may date anterior to that mentioned in your instructions.

It may not be necessary to particularize our business in the way of Maori meetings and other preliminaries transacted by us during the first few days of July, but we will extract portions of the report alluded to in a previous paragraph. Under date 10th July we remark:—"We have had some difficulties to encounter in our land-purchase operations, "which at times threatened to bring about a collapse. Some of the Arawa chiefs, acting under the advice of Hawke's Bay tribes and their pakeha friends, whose opposition to the present Government is well known, have, by petitions to the Assembly, by numerous letters and telegrams, and by various other means, endeavoured to stay our land proceedings in the Arawa country. The various petitions and other communications forwarded by the Arawas generally have been notable only for their gross misrepresentations.

"Added to the wonted troublesomeness of these Arawa tribes, their cupidity has been excited and their known character of dishonesty encouraged by private individuals, who persistently endeavour to lease and buy Maori lands within our district; although they well know that it is impossible under the circumstances to obtain a legal title; and that by foolishly bargaining with the unscrupulous Arawa they are but wasting time and money; and no doubt, at some future period, when driven to their wits' ends they will fall back, as their predecessors have done, on the Government for compensation, with what show of justice remains to be seen. We have pleasure in stating, however, that; notwithstanding the violence of the opposition, and the various obstacles referred to with which we have had to contend, land matters at present throughout the whole of our district, as far as our operations are concerned, are standing upon a most satisfactory basis; and now that the Arawas have discovered that we unflinchingly adhere to the principles of truth and justice, and that their threats are either treated with indifference, or met by sound argument, their feelings have become somewhat mollified, and they now profess to be desirous of aiding the Government scheme, which indeed does not surprise us, as they are sufficiently intelligent to see that such a course will be advantageous to themselves."

It will be remembered, perhaps, that we intimated in our last general report the probability of our success in respect to purchasing the block of land at Maketu known as Te Puke in which case our operations would be extended to the Maketu flats, known as Te Papanui, Paengaroa, &c. We have to state that the proposed line of action we then ventured to suggest was carried out by us. We treated with the Waitaha and Tapuika tribes, to whom it is fully known these lands really belong; and, although the toa element raised its crest, our determined indifference towards the braves, on the grounds of justice, so thoroughly convinced them of the untenableness of their position, and the fictitiousness of their claims, that they agreed to confine their demands to a few hundred acres of worthless sandy soil near the sea coast, including Te Tumu, the famous battle ground where Ngaitehahi were worsted. On procuring the signatures of the Waitaha and Tapuika tribes to our deeds, they warmly repudiated any claim whatever by the toa, stating that the Ngatiwhakaue and others claiming as toa put forward their fictitious demands for the purpose of extorting money, and taking advantage of the ignorance of Europeans as regards these Maori questions. With the above sayings and other arguments of our own showing the fallacies of the toa claims, the whole of the element suddenly collapsed, and we were told by the Ngatiwhakaue to go on with the ancestral claimants, but that, as an act of grace, they hoped we would not overlook them.

In justice to the braves generally, it becomes necessary to draw a line of demarcation between the two prominent sections—namely, the anti-leasing and anti-selling party, and those who have treated with us for the alienation of their lands. Of the former, the great leading personage is Te Pokiha Taranui, more commonly known as Fox, a man of indomitable pride. He carries with only a small section of the Ngatipikiao tribe named Te Ngatikakinga, who are known to possess but small influence and very little land.

The Ngatipikiao tribe, who are with the Government in the land scheme, comprise the large majority under the old chiefs Te Puehu, Te Mapu, Rotorangihoro, Te Matangi, Pita Te Wharetoroa, and others. With this large section of Ngatipikiao range the tribes of Waitaha, Tapuika, Ngatipukenga, Ngatimoko, and many others. In fact; the real landholders generally throughout the Arawa country favour both selling and leasing their tribal lands; and it is found that the opposing party, as a rule, have little or no land either to sell or lease; consequently the genuine owners of the soil view the acts and clamours of the anti-sellers with extreme bitterness.

Throughout the Taupo District, we may say that the tone of feeling is in favour of Government; and, although Henare Matua and other Hawke's Bay celebrities have sent their written and oral messages to the Taupo Natives, stirring them up to oppose any attempt on the part of the Crown to secure land in this district by purchase or lease, the machinations of the Napier chiefs have been unsuccessful, and their gratuitous opinions treated with profound indifference.

During the month in which the foregoing extracts were written we visited Tokanu, and held a series of meetings with some of the resident chiefs relative to the main trunk road from Taupo to Whanganui and site for Native village school, which propositions were received approvingly by the principal chiefs present. On this occasion complaints were made to us in relation to the interference of Tareha and other Hawke's Bay chiefs with respect to the Mohaka Block, sold by the Taupo Natives to the Government, and declared to be their property exclusively, although the points mooted here were publicly discussed at a Native meeting held previously at Napier, when a sum of money on the Mohaka Block was paid to Tareha by request of deputations sent to Napier by the Taupo Natives. At the same time a portion of the block in question, claimed by the great chief Renata Kawepo, was excluded from the sale, by which arrangement all Maori difficulties relative to the Mohaka purchase were removed.

In July also we completed the deeds of Tauhara Middle lease, Runanga No. 2 lease, and Tauhara Block purchase, transmitting the same to Wellington.

In the month of August the following conveyances were forwarded to the Under Secretary at Wellington, namely—Te Puke, Paengaroa, Kaikokopu, and Waitahanui Blocks, estimated at over 100,000 acres.

A series of meetings with the chiefs Poihipi Tukairangi, Hohepa Tamamutu, Hitiri te Paerata, Takerei, Ruha te Parangitungetu, Te Reweti Waikato, Te Papanui, Te Heu Heu, Hauraki, and others, regarding land claims on the west shores of Lake Taupo, Te Tatua on Waikato, Paeroa, Kaingaroa, and other places; and we succeeded in obtaining the necessary signatures to complete the conveyance of Tauhara North.

Early in September we proceeded to Ohinemutu, where we met numerous deputations of Ngatiwhakaue, Ngatituarua, Ngatiraukawa, Ngatitahu, Ngatiwhaoa, Ngatiwahiao, and others, who expressed their general approval of the system adopted by us in relation to the land transactions throughout the district, and pleaded the necessity of settling the land titles by ourselves and local committees, as suggested by us when our land negotiations on behalf of the Crown were first initiated.

In this month likewise we completed and posted deeds of Tauhara Middle purchase, Tauhara North purchase, and Oruanui lease, accompanied by explanatory memoranda. ALSO in this month was held the great Taupo meeting relative to certain territory on the western shores of Lake Taupo, disputed on the one side by the Hau-Hau element, under the chiefs Hauraki, Te Tuhi, and others, and on the other by the friendly Natives under Te Heu Heu, Paurini, and Hohepa Tamamutu. Major Scannel was chosen president of the meeting, and the assessors who aided in the deliberations were Te Kepa te Rangipuawhe and Arekatera te Pnni. The evidence taken was most voluminous; the inquiry extended over fifteen days. The whole of the testimony adduced at this local Court was forwarded to the Hon. the Native Minister for his information.

In November a meeting of the Ngatimanawa and other tribes was held in respect to boundaries of the Kaingaroa previously leased conditionally to Government; also an energetic discussion regarding the building of a Maori village school-house, Ngatimanawa having presented as an endowment fortytwo acres of land, and proposed to collect the sum of £50 in aid of the building fund. Subsequently a meeting was convened at Wairoa for the purpose of inquiring in respect to multitudinous claimants of the Paeroa lease and Kaingaroa generally. The meeting was largely, attended by the Tuhourangi, under the leading men, Te Kepa te Rangipuawhe, Waretini, Aporo te Rangikaniwhaniwha, Hohua te Manihera, Pauroa Takahurioakanui, and others. There were representatives also of the Ngatiwhaoa present, Ngatitahu and Ngatitaru. No decision was arrived at regarding surveys and the inquiry into Maori titles of land, in consequence of the opposition pertinaciously adhered to by the Tuhourangi.

In December a meeting with the Ngatirangitihi tribe was held at Te Awa-o-te-Atua relative to land matters generally and the question of survey. Result on the whole satisfactory.

At Maketu a meeting was held relative to the Puke, Rangiuuru, Papanui, and Paengaroa Blocks, the various owners having expressed a desire to close without delay the land transactions between themselves and the Government.

At the request of Mr. Brabant, Inspector of Native Schools, a meeting was held in the carved house, Tamatekapua, at Rotorua, the land agents being present with the resident tribes, the business being the collection of money in aid of the Ohinemutu school fund, to which the chiefs agreed. Next in order is a conference with Ngatitahu and Ngatiwhaoa respecting the leases already initiated of Tumunui, Rotoreka, Kapenga, and Paeroa. A communication regarding these block was, in consequence, transmitted to the Government.

During the month of January the surveys of the Heruiwi and Puke Blocks were initiated and continued till nearly the end of February, when a local disturbance, caused by armed Natives in respect to the Puke Block, induced us, after two days' patient investigation in the Maketu Court House, before Mr. R. M. Hamlin, regarding the various points in dispute by the belligerents, to withdraw temporarily the survey party; but the surveys of the leased blocks, named Heruiwi and Pukahunui, were continued and ultimately completed.

Relative to a local land dispute at Taupo of about twenty-five years' standing, between the Ngatitahu and the Ngatitama, Mr. Young was deputed by the Hon. the Native Minister to inquire into and settle if possible the long-pending difficulty, and after various conferences with the disputants the matter was referred to a meeting convened at Paeroa for final settlement, at which place it was arranged, Mr. Young being present, that two of the contending claimants on the Ngatitama side should be allowed to remain in peaceful possession of the disputed territory named Tutukau. Thus terminated this vehement disputation of many years' standing, which periodically threatened to decimate by war the contending tribes, and thereby involve a tribal or general rise to arms in the Arawa country.

In the month of March, Petera te Rangihiroa and other members of the Ngatihineuru tribe entered into a compact with Hawke's Bay Natives to repudiate the leases previously agreed to by themselves and Government; and in order to recall Petera te Rangihiroa and his adherents to a sense of their just duty, Mr. Young was instructed to meet the dissentients at Runanga, where, after considerable speechifying, Petera evaded the subject, which compelled us to instruct both Captain Lloyd and John McGregor to complete as speedily as possible the necessary surveys.

The great event affecting our numerous negotiations in the Bay of Plenty and Lake Districts was a large gathering at Paeroa, twenty-five miles from Ohinemutu. We being engaged with G. S. Cooper, Esq., and having other matters of consequence requiring our, immediate attention, we were represented at the important Paeroa meeting by Mr. Young, who took the notes of the proceedings and replied to various questions mooted by the different speakers regarding certain points respecting land estimated to be of considerable consequence by the Maoris, and published by the Bay of Plenty Times and by the Waka Maori, which we append here:—

"The originators of the meeting, Ngatitahu and Ngatiwhiaoa, opened the proceedings by reading a paper to the assembled tribes, numbering in all about 600 persons, consisting of Ngatiwhiaoa, Ngatitahu, Ngatimanawa, Te Urewera, Ngatihineuru, Ngatitutewha, Ngatituwharetoa, Ngatiwhakaue, Ngatirangitihi, Ngatininewai, Ngatiraukawa, Ngatituara, and Tuhourangi, under the leadership of its Putaiki or Council of Twelve. The land policy of the Government was keenly argued before one of its representatives, and notwithstanding the audacity of Tuhourangi in proclaiming itself the sole dictator of the proceedings, its Pretentious assumptions, were at once repudiated by the confederate tribes in the following terms:—'Who has constituted you an authority to dictate to us as to what we shall do respecting our land matters? We refuse to acknowledge your pretensions in any way, and here let your interference in our land matters cease.'

"Notwithstanding the fierce opposition to all general measures in the district by the Tuhourangis, the twelve confederate tribes declared for the Government, affirming their determination to keep inviolable all their bargains, and to facilitate in every possible way the settlement of the lands in the Arawa country; adding, with emphatic outspokenness, the land agents of the Government have acted throughout the negotiations in an open straightforward manner. After four days' continuous discussion, the meeting was brought to a conclusion, the anti-selling Tuhourangi tribe retiring completely crestfallen to its home at the Wairoa, threatening to convene another monster meeting to defend itself, which meeting is still in abeyance."

In the month of April, various matters of minor importance commanded our attention, and we deemed it advisable to transmit to you a general report, which, in order to connect a continuous narrative of our operations, should be embodied here, but unfortunately the copy of the report in question has been mislaid, owing to which act of carelessness, allow us to refer you to the original already in your hands.

In May we proceeded to Whakatane, Kokohinau, Te Teko, Te Umuhika, and Te Matata; at the latter place we held a series of meetings with Ngatirangitihi on land affairs, and procured the necessary signatures to the final lease of Tawhitinui and Otuhangu, known as lots Nos. 31 and 39, Parish of Matata.

At a Native settlement named Te Umuhika, six miles from Te Awa-o-te-Atua, upwards of 300 persons presented themselves, the occasion being what the Natives term "he hui," or gathering. We took advantage of this tribal meeting, in which the Ngatiawa, Te Uriwera, and the Arawas were largely represented, and placed before the assembled throng the long-pending dispute regarding the ownership of certain lands in the Pokohu Block, at Rangitaiki, leased by us previously. After explanatory speeches by us, and selecting nine or ten of the most intelligent Native chiefs and assessors to serve as a jury, the various points in dispute were submitted to the multitude, allowing each tribe to conduct its own business as it seemed fit. No attempt on our part was made to interfere with the discussions, nor impediment placed in the way of any person who desired to speak; and after the subjects, one by one, were thoroughly exhausted, and the audience had no further desire to continue the examination, we withdrew with our ten jurymen to settle the decision, refraining to give any opinion till after the chiefs and assessors had concluded their remarks, and to our surprise and great satisfaction the views held by the jury of ten coincided precisely with those held by ourselves; and we found that the opinions held by ourselves and the jurymen on the disputed points were endorsed by the large audience generally. This mode of investigating title to Maori land has called forth the plaudits of the tribes in the Bay of Plenty and Lake Districts, the leading chiefs having expressed their entire confidence in the course adopted by us in this respect; and it would seem, from various communications received, that the result is bringing about almost universal satisfaction. The owners of the Puke Block, the survey of which engendered hostile feeling and a rise to arms, desire that an investigation regarding Te Puke, similar to that held at the Umuhika, should be accorded by the Government, as will be seen by the following document transmitted by the Waitaha tribes to the Hon. the Native Minister:—

[Translation.] To Sir DONALD McLEAN.

Te Awahou, Rotorua, 6th June, 1876.
Father, Salutations!—

This is a prayer by us, the tribe of Waitaha, to you regarding our land, Te Puke, that there may be an inquiry, a similar investigation to that held by C. O. Davis at Te Umuhika. That inquiry was most excellent and very clear; let the same mode of inquiry be introduced into our district. We do not approve of the Native Lands Court, nor do we approve of the investigation which took place at Horo Horo; but our wish is that the inquiry be clear on the side of the Pakeha, and clear on the side of the Maori, so that the confused state of things in which our land is involved may be managed. Do you signify your approval that C. O. Davis be the director of this mode of inquiry. Sufficient.

By the whole of the committed of Waitaha.

Na Hoani Ngahao. Na Hirini Haimona. Na Ngapea. Na Te Whetu. Na Ratana Tekapaiwaho. Na Hotene Terata. Na Ereatara
Taramada. Na Hakaria Tipene. The following is extracted from a paper drawn up by Pererika Ngahuruhuru on the same subject:—

[Translation.]

The tribes that met at Whakatane on the 9th of May, 1876, were the Nagatiawa the Ngatipukeko, the Patuai, the Urewera, and the Arawa, where discussion commenced regarding the Pokohu [a block of land leased by Government at Rangitaiki]. The person who introduced this subject was Ranagi Tukehu, whose thoughts were directed towards advances made to some tribes on the Pokohu and other places. The object of this elderly man in bringing forward this subject was to express his disapprobation with respect to money paid to certain tribes.

The Taweras called a meeting at Te Umuhika for the purpose of subscribing moneys for a flourmill, and there, on the 17th of May, 1876, an inquiry commenced [on land matters]. A proposal was made to Tukehu, relative to the selection of a committee to sit during the investigation [of the Pokohu land], to which he agreed.

The following are the names of the persons chosen:—

- Ko Pererika Ngahuruhuru,
- Ko te Warihi Whakaahua,
- Ko Niheta Mokonuierangi,
- Ko te Mapu Takaanewa,
- Ko Rota Rangihoro,
- Ko Hori Karaka,
- Ko Paora Patu,
- Ko Hona te Hauiti,
- Ko te Meihana,
- Ko Rawiri,

together with the Land Agents of the Government.

The inquiry lasted two days and two nights, and then the committee withdrew to consider its decision in relation to the money advances on which were based the grounds of Tukehu's complaint. The judgment of the committee was, that the moneys had been advanced to the right parties on the lands owned by them [i.e., within the Pokohu Block]. Tukehu was found to be wrong, but right with respect to certain localities which were his own. "Now, O friends! the advances made by Government on those lands as to right have been fully established." There were 300 persons present.

NA PERERIKANGAHURUHURU.

Subsequently to the meetings held at the Umuhika, we visited the Tawhitinui, Whakarewa, and Waitahanui Natives in relation to the marking out of certain reserves previously agreed to.

On the occasion of our arrival at Maketu, the acknowledged owners of the lands there lately purchased by us earnestly urged the necessity of paying to them the balances due; but having no special instructions to that effect, we recommended them to exercise patience, the Government being engaged in matters of far more importance just now.

In order to elucidate somewhat the extent of our land transactions within the Bay of Plenty and Lake Districts, we may enumerate the lands to which titles have been settled, and the final deeds transmitted to yourself. They comprise the following:—

The blocks all but completed are,—

Negotiations regarding the following blocks have been initiated, and advances paid thereon, but their settlement is more remote:—

It will be observed that no reference is made to monetary matters in this paper, that part of our work having been, at my request, intrusted, from the commencement of our negotiations, solely to Mr. Mitchell, who will transmit to you his report, containing the whole of the information required on this subject.

In conclusion, it may be remarked that, throughout the Bay of Plenty and Lake Districts at the present juncture, the utmost confidence in the Government scheme with respect to land purchases and leases is expressed by the tribes generally.

I have, &c.,

C. O. DAVIS.

H. T. Clarke, Esq., Under Secretary.

H. WARDELL, Esq., R.M., Turanga, to the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

Poverty Bay.—Transmitting Deed of Sale for Land purchased. Resident Magistrate's Court, Turanga, 2nd February, 1857.

SIR,—

I have the honor to forward you herewith the deed of sale to the Crown of about fifty-seven acres of land in this locality drawn up and signed in accordance with the instructions contained in your letter of the 6th December last.

Kahutia is universally admitted by the Natives here to be the only person having power to dispose of the land in question. The deed, however, is signed by himself, his brother (Manahi), his daughters (Katarina and Riperata), and their husbands (Petera and Mikaere), and, at his request, the name of his adopted grandson (Ranga Te Rangi) was added by Petera. I am not aware that the name of any one belonging to his family is wanting. The names of Hone Hira, his wife (Paraire) Hemi Kepa, and others of less importance are to the deed.

I have not affixed any measurements to the plan, but, as I furnished them to you on the plan accompanying my letter of the 27th of November last, they can be added in your office, if required.

I am happy to report that very little difficulty has been experienced in obtaining the signatures to this deed.

I have, &c.,

HERBERT WARDELL, Resident Magistrate.

The Chief Commissioner, Land Purchase Department, Auckland.

Memorandum.

This purchase has been concluded in accordance with instructions and form of deed furnished to Mr. Wardell from this office for his guidance.

I submit that this transaction may be brought under His Excellency's notice for approval.

Donald McLean.
11th March, 1857.

Memorandum

RECOMMENDED that His Excellency approve the transaction.

C. W. RICHMOND.

11th March, 1857.

Memorandum.

APPROVED.—T. G. B.—
12th March, 1857.

No. 2. MEETING held in COURT HOUSE, NAPIER, 29th November, 1873.

Patutahi.—Relative to the Division of the Block.

Present—D. McLean and Chiefs Tareha, Ihaka Whanga, Hamana Tiakiwai, Te Muera.

Mr. McLean to Ihaka: I do not think you were present when I spoke to the Napier Natives relative to the partition of the Patutahi Block between the Government, Ngatiporou, and Ngatikahungunu; it was then stated that the land had not been surveyed. Since then it has been done, and the Ngatiporou share has been decided. Ngatiporou have disposed of their share to Government for £5,000; what remains is between you, Ngatikahungunu, and Government. At the meeting at Waiohiki I offered to give the Heretaunga Natives money instead of land, which they refused. They would wait until the survey was completed. Tareha is now present as the representative of the Napier Natives. Since then the Commission has sat at Poverty Bay, to decide claims to confiscated land which was to be returned to the resident Natives of Poverty Bay, who were frequently remonstrated with, and warned not to take up arms against the pakeha; notwithstanding which they persisted in their defiant attitude, and now it is hopeless to expect this Patutahi block of land will ever be returned to them.

Mr. McLean to Hamana: This is a word to you about Hapimana's demand to me at Wellington for land to be returned; this cannot be acceded to, especially when demanded as a right in an angry manner; not one acre will be obtained by such an attitudes. Those people persisted in their evil course, and the result was they lost both men and land. Waikato and Tarahaki acted in the same manner, and suffered accordingly. It is no wish of mine that the people should be the sufferers by their folly, and I hope they will not be so in future; you know I am using my best endeavours to initiate a better state of affairs.

Tareha: I support a portion of what you said. In the first place, the Natives were looked down upon by the generality of Europeans, who said our skins and thoughts were both dark, and not clear like theirs. It was you who first recognized our position, and made it your duty to assist them to the utmost of your power. It was through your exertions that we were represented in Parliament; myself and Karaitiana have both been returned for this district, and I was under the impression that you ought to be supported by those whom you had raised to that position. While I was a member I gave you my hearty support, and we always discussed Maori questions. I resigned my seat of my own free will. When the former Government were defeated, and you took office, I said to you that you were to be careful how you followed the example of the former Government, which slew the people and took the land. After you took office the fight at Taupo took place, where the people were punished for their crimes, but the land was not taken as it was in Waikato and other places. What you say, that nothing would be gained by a defiant demand for land to be returned, is good, and we will talk the matter over quietly.

Mr. McLean: I spoke to Hamana that he might understand that nothing was to be gained by "bounce:" the land referred to was taken by former Governments. I have not been instrumental in taking land. The Taupo and Ureweras, with whom we fought, were not deprived of any land. Natives have been punished for their faults. Tareha, although you have retired from Parliament, your suggestions have been attended to; you should still, as a chief, endeavour to act for the general good and welfare of the Maori people. You and I have always worked together, and done what we thought best for the benefit of both races.

Tareha: A word about what you said to us about Turanga when in Wellington. There were three of us of this place and Wikiriwhi, and you said one portion was to be for the Ngatiporou, one portion for Ngatikahungunu, and one portion for the Government. Since then reports state that Ngatiporou were to have all the land.

Mr. McLean: No; they had their share—no more.

Tareha: When we held our meeting at Waiohiki this was explained to us, and you offered us money for our portion, to which we said, No. We understood that it was the land we were to have, so let yours remain with you. You proposed to return the land to the Poverty Bay Natives. I said, Return your share if you wish to do so; give us ours. You said, "Wait until the survey is completed;" and we have done so.

Mr. McLean: The survey has only very lately been completed. I proposed to return lands beyond certain boundaries. Those have been returned by the Commission.

Tareha: Now that the survey is complete, we find that Ngatiporou, who are Poverty Bay Natives, and Mokena, are disposing of the land, and we think we might as well do the same.

Ihaka Whanga: Let the talk be short. I appear here as the representative of the Wairoa portion of the Ngatikahungunu, who have sent me to receive the money for their share of Patutahi. I said I would go in a straightforward way to Tareha, and then go with him to meet the Europeans. I have now come for the money. There is one question I want to ask: Do Ngatiporou receive both money and land?

Mr. McLean: No; but while the arrangements were pending, they said the land was to be set apart for school purposes. After this they decided to receive money instead of the land, and to have a certain portion set apart for school purposes. They have lately paid about £267, a balance of Patutahi money, for school purposes. You are mistaken in supposing they received both money and land. Was Ihaka. Ngarangione with your people?

Ihaka Whanga: No. He belongs to Turanga, and went with Ngatiporou. Let him look to them for his money.

Tareha: The best plan will be to divide the money, one portion for Ihaka and them commencing from Wairoa to Table Cape, and the other portion for us Napier Natives.

Ihaka Whanga: With respect to the payment of this money, I would suggest that you write to Mr. Burton to come and fetch the money and pay the natives, as I cannot divide the money. You, Mr. McLean, have the list.

Mr. McLean read list of numbers of different hapus who were engaged in fighting at Poverty Bay. Ihaka: Let the money for each individual be explained clearly.

Hamana: Your remarks to me about what was said by Hapimana to you in Wellington are good. My idea is, that when he made that demand, it was not done intentionally in an obnoxious manner. It was not right to suppose that that land would be returned. It is gone for good. When Mr. Locke reached the Wairoa, we knew that the land question was to be settled. We were told to trace our claims by ancestry, at which I and other soldiers complained about our wasted labour in fighting against the Hau Haus. Hapimana got all his people, who were chiefly Hau Haus, inserted in the deeds; while only four of us, Ihaka, Maraki, Paora, and myself, were nominally inserted in the deeds.

Mr. McLean: The land is vested really in you, the chiefs. The names of the Hau Haus are inserted, but you hold that land for their benefit. There is one question which ought to be settled, that is, the boundary between you and the Urewera it ought to be done, if possible, this summer. I have appointed Tareha, who is related to both parties, on behalf of the Government, to adjust the matter.

Temuera: What acreage are the people to have?

Mr. McLean: If Ngatiporou had received land, they would have received 10,000 acres. Your people would have received the same

Ihaka: Mr. Burton proposed the chief should have a larger portion than others: but we objected, and said that all should be equal

Mr. McLean read off list. Ihaka's party, 319 men; Heretaunga party, 223 men; Ihaka's party to receive £2,942 15s. 6d.—each man at rate of £9 4s. 6d.

The same day Mr. McLean left Napier, and arrived at Poverty Bay on the 30th. The next day a number of Natives assembled in the Court House, and met him there. One of the requests brought forward was for leave for the Hau Haus now living at Torere to return to their old friends. As, however, it appeared that some had come away without permission, they were ordered to return at once.

The following is the report of the meeting:—

The Hon. the Native Minister had an interview with the Turanga Natives in the Court House, Gisborne, on Monday last. Mokena, Ropata, Henare Potae, Ihaka Whanga, and others were also present. Mr. McLean having invited them to state their grievances, the following interesting proceedings took place.

Paora Kati: We have nothing particular to say; we come here to listen to you.

Matenga Tote: We wish the Hau Haus of the Aitanga a Mahaki, that are in Wiremu Kingi's charge at Opotiki, returned to us.

Wi Haronga: Te Aitanga a Mahaki welcome you here. If you intend to return land to them and Rongowhakaata, and to give them the power of administering their own affairs, it is well. Let chiefs from other places cease from administering our affairs; no matter though they may be Hau Haus, let them give expression to their sentiments. Perhaps some one here will have something further to say on the subject.

Mr. McLean: Will you explain what you mean by your reference to chiefs from other districts administering your affairs?

Wi Haronga: I refer to Henare Potae, Meiha Ropata, Mokena Kohere, and Paora Te Apatu.

Wi Pere: Salutations! I have just returned from Wellington, where I went to see if I could make arrangements for getting some of our lands returned to us. I saw Mr. McLean, who said Return and stay quietly; a new law is being made which would simplify and adjust all such matters." After my return, I conferred with Mr. Locke, on his arrival here, and was satisfied with the arrangements that were made about the land. There are two or three matters which I wish settled: Give us back our burial-grounds at Patutahi, at Wahanui, and at Kaikaitaratahi. Secondly, Let the Hau Haus of Te Aitanga a Mahaki, who are in Wiremu Kingi's charge at Opotiki, be returned to us. And, thirdly, We should also participate in the Patutahi money, and receive £5,000.

Panapa. Waihope: Salutations! I second what Wi Pere says respecting the restoration of the burial-grounds. Secondly, We wish the Hau Haus at Opotiki to be returned to us; some of their number have already returned and are among us, as Mr. Locke knows; let us also receive money for Patutahi.

Pita Te Huhu: [Karakia, incantation.] I approve of your administration, Mr. McLean. I approve of what Wi Pere said about the restoration of the burial grounds; let that be done I wish the Hau Haus at Opotiki returned, and some of the money for Patutahi.

Hoani Ruru: The land belonging to Rongowhakaata was taken by the Government for the crimes of all the Hau Haus of Turanga, and but a small portion of that belonging to Te Aitanga a Mahaki; Ngaitahupo did not lose any land, Paora Te Apatu and others had made application for the adjudication of lands within the "rohe potae;" Rongowhakaata did not, as their land had all been taken. I wish you to give me back a portion. Do you carefully consider this matter.

Paora Kati: If you have any complaint to bring forward, do so now. You are wrong in objecting to Ropata, Henare, and Mokena, for it is through their administration that we have benefited. Money is now asked for Patutahi. If I receive any of the Patutahi money, I shall not go there; if I do not receive some, I will not go there. I wish for some of the Patutahi money. Raharuhi's Crown grants, twelve in number, have not been properly conveyed by him to his relatives, consequently they revert to the whole tribe. Raharuhi signed a document drawn up by the Natives, but the lawyers say it is of no use. I asked Mr. Skipworth to prepare a document conveying his (Rararuhi's) interests in the different blocks to me; he said, Taihoa. I also saw Captain Porter, but he did not arrive till Rararuhi's death, when it was too late. I was very pouri about these Crown grants, and could not sleep.

Wi Pere: Patutahi was taken and divided amongst Ngatiporou, Ngatikahungunu, and the Government. Those tribes said they would give the land back to us as an act of grace (tohu rangatira); this has not been done, for the land has been divided amongst themselves, therefore we do not want their interference with our affairs.

Paora Parau: You see the remnant of Turanga and Rongowhakaatu before you; some perhaps were too lazy to come, while others may have been ashamed or afraid of you. Let the request for the burial-places be granted, and let the Hau Haus under Wiremu Kingi's charge be returned to us. With respect to people from other places coming to administer affairs amongst us, let them attend to the affairs of their own settlements.

Mr. McLean, in reply, said: You, the people of Turanga, have not hitherto shown yourselves capable of managing your own affairs, although you talk largely of your powers. You could not do it even when your old chiefs of authority were alive; and you have always evinced a fickleness and a desire for change, without considering the consequences which would follow. When the Hauhau doctrine came among you, you readily adopted it, and you were completely led away; now you express your jealousy because other chiefs are desired to come here. If you refer to the Ngatiporou chiefs, I tell you they have a right to come here at any time, and will do so whenever requested. I have asked them to come here, and will do so again when I consider it necessary. You have no chiefs to whom any attention is paid; and the old proverb holds good, "Turanga tangata rite;" or, Chiefs and all are of equal standing at Turanga. The land question has been already satisfactorily settled by the Commission which has recently sat here, and I, am not prepared, to make any further concessions either in land or money, as you may consider yourselves liberally treated. I told some of you lately in Wellington, when you spoke to me on the subject of your lands here and at Wairoa, that you would not have met with so much consideration had you assumed a defiant attitude; and I tell you so again. I have always warned you that you will get your grievances redressed and claims recognized more readily by bringing them before the Government in a friendly and proper spirit, than by adopting an opposite course, by which you would gain nothing. No attempts at unfair exaction on your part will be to your advantage, however much you may at times be led to think they are. Some of you have asked for the return of the Hauhaus residing with William King at Opotiki; and I hear that Wi Pere has advised them to come away stealthily. If such means are employed, you cannot expect me to assent to your wishes. Had a frank request been made for their return, and security offered for their good behaviour, the Government might have entertained the application; as it is, they will not be permitted to return. In reference to certain burial-grounds you have asked for, that at Patutahi, which is in the possession of the Government, will be reserved for you; with regard to the others, I can make no promise. You are living in the midst of an increasing and prosperous community of Europeans, by whose example you should profit. I hope you will learn from them their habits of industry which you see they possess, and which you will find will be much more beneficial to you than fruitless agitations. You should bear in mind that Europeans are an increasing people and that it will be greatly to your advantage to avoid unnecessary contentions, and to dwell with them on peaceable and friendly terms.

Wi Pere: The charge against me is unfounded; there is some one here from Wiremu Kingi's place; we are going there to have the matter cleared up. When Te Muhunga was taken, it was arranged with Mr. Atkinson that he was to have 5,000 acres, with the understanding that we were to have the balance, if any: on survey, it was found to contain 5,390 acres; the balance he refused to return. You are not to blame for this.

Mr. McLean here read from notes that, according to the wording of the agreement, it was 5,000 acres, more or less.

Wi Pere: If it was over, it was to be returned; if under, it was to be made up.

The Hon. Mokena Kohere: Friend Wi Haronga, I rise to answer your objections about us chiefs from distant parts having the administration and management of your lands at Turanga. This is my word to you. You had the opportunity of dealing with your lands, but you threw it away. You have had your lands given to you; my hands are clean; take your land.

Meiha Ropata: Wi Haronga, there is one mistake you make with regard to us chiefs from other districts administering matters connected with your lands at Turanga. If the Government had seen any fault in our administration, they would have told us to cease; it is not for you to dictate to us. In 1865 the troubles commenced here, and they have existed ever since, and we, chiefs from other districts, have done our best to prevent matters being worse with you, and we have succeeded to a certain extent; if it had been left entirely to the people of Turanga, you would never have succeeded in anything for your benefit; if the troubles of this place had ended we should have ceased to visit you.

Ihaka Whanga: I do not agree with what Wi Haronga has said about us strangers having the management and making arrangements about land at Turanga. It has been plainly seen that Wi Haronga and his people have not been able to manage their own affairs properly, or the troubles would not have come on them. If Wi Haronga is competent to administer affairs among his people, why did he not prevent these troubles? When Kereopa came here with his mischief, you were eager to support his cause, and that was the commencement of your downfall. We (the Government) have rescued you from those evils. We have given you your land and taken some for the misdeeds of your Hau Haus; and what land has been given to you you have either sold, mortgaged, or disposed of in some other way; and now you are dissatisfied; you should be glad to welcome a state of peace, and show a good feeling towards the Government.

Wi Haronga: I am found fault with and blamed for not exerting my influence in restraining my people; if they had listened to my advice they would now be in different circumstances; they are easily led away, and when Henare Matua came here they followed him. I was sorry, but was not listened to; the blame of all is thrown upon me. Let my words be proved by each hapu looking after its own affairs; it would then be seen how such were administered, and they would each become responsible for their own conduct.

Henare Potae: What you have said, Wi Haronga, about our coming to Turanga and taking the management of your lands is correct, but we have never come among you yet without being first asked to do so. The Government saw that you were unable to manage matters by yourselves, and they asked us to assist you. However, in future you can conduct your own affairs yourselves, and we shall then see whether you are capable of administering for yourselves.

Anaru Matete: Salutations to you, Mr. McLean! May you live long! I did not go to Wellington with Henare Matua with any intention of doing wrong, but to try and get a hearing from you about my troubles. One of my troubles was that I had been cursed by Paora Kati, and I did not feel satisfied until I had seen you, for you to tell me that I was safe (or not). You told me when you were last in Turanga that I was to remain quiet. I have at last made up my mind to tell you that my lands have all been leased by the Government Natives; my relatives have participated in those leases, and none of them have handed to me any moneys accruing from these rents. I am agreeable to lose the greater portion of my lands for joining the Hauhaus, but I think I am entitled to a portion of land besides what has been given up to the Government. I do not ask for a portion of land that has been sold or confiscated; all I ask for is a portion of the land that is leased.

Mr. McLean: I think you and Paora Kati had better meet and settle matters between you; also your relative Tamihana, who is not present.

Wi Pere: It was proposed that a committee of twelve should be appointed to adjust the surveys, which were a constant cause of irritation. Ropata was named as one of the committee.

Mr. McLean: There will be no cause for such complaints under the new law enacted by the Government, which will remedy all such; and no lands will be brought before the Court for adjudication that are of a questionable nature. (The Native Minister here read the names of several Hauhaus who had been sent to Opotiki, some of whom had returned to Turanga, and some had died.)

The meeting then broke up.

Captain PORTER, Land Purchase Officer, to the UNDER SECRETARY, NATIVE DEPARTMENT.

East Coast.—Land Negotiations. Militia Office, Gisborne, 3rd June, 1875.
SIR,—

In compliance with instructions, I have the honor to furnish a general monthly report relative to lands offered to and under negotiation for Government within my district. My report this month will be necessarily brief, as the transactions are few, and I have hardly initiated the system.

You are already aware of the opposition of Ngatiporou tribes to the introduction of the Government land purchase policy into their territory, and of the reasons which have led to this spirit of opposition. I have now to proceed cautiously to remove this feeling of antipathy, and it is not my intention to solicit the cession of lands, but to explain the equitable wishes of Government upon the subject, and so let the Natives themselves offer blocks.

During my visit up the coast I saw the leading chiefs, and read the Government Circular relative to the method of dealing, at which they expressed satisfaction.

Lands under offer, and in reference to which initiative steps have been taken, are as follows:—

Te Rotokautuku (Oil Springs, Waipiro).—This block has passed the Court at Waipiro, and contains about 5,500 acres. There are 427 owners entered in the memorial of ownership. The block is a good one, and suitable for any purpose. I have negotiated a lease under provisions of "The Lands Act, 1873," for twenty-one years, and obtained, before leaving Waipiro, 150 signatures. This block was first negotiated for by Government for the purpose of developing its oil resources. I report further on this block under separate cover.

Te Ahi o te Atua (Oil Spring).—This land has also passed the Waipiro Court, and its area is about 2,700 acres (am unable to give exact area, as maps are not back from Waipiro). There are in the memorial of ownership 426 names. I have not yet arranged anything about terms for this block, but they will be somewhat similar to those of Rotokautuku. The land itself would only be fit for grazing, should payable oil not be found upon it.

Te Poro Ika Moana (Oil Spring).—This is about the same area as Te Ahi o te Atua, but of little use for anything else than to bore for oil, and I think hardly worth negotiating as a lease, but might be worth purchasing after it passes the Court.

Hikurangi.—I attach hereto a copy of an offer to lease a piece of country situated this side of that mountain. The offer is a bona fide one, and I have informed the Natives that I will go up in July and visit the land, and at the same time make some arrangement as to terms. In conjunction with this block it is my intention to endeavour to get the whole of the country lying between the forks of the Tapuairoa and Mata Rivers, which are the head waters of the Waiapu. The back line would take in Hikurangi and the adjacent mountains. The tableland is very considerable, and suitable for agricultural or pastoral purposes. It will, however, be necessary to arrange with some private parties, T. Fox and F. Campbell, to forego some preliminary agreements entered into by them with some of the owners of small portions. By setting aside some portion as a reserve for the Natives, I think it possible to arrange the purchase of the whole.

Kawakadwa.—The Natives offer to lease a block of land situated between this place and Hick's Bay, but as it is included within a lately proclaimed boundary prohibiting sales or leases, I have deemed it prudent to defer action for the present.

Potiki Rua (near Cape Runaway).—Natives attending at the Waipiro Court offered this block to lease, but from inquiry I find it will be necessary to consult with Te Whanau-a-Panui tribe, as it is a border country.

This completes the number of pieces under negotiation by me, and you will perceive the general desire is to lease, upon which subject I have to ask the views of the Government in a separate letter.

I have, &c.,

T. W. PORTER, Land Purchase Agent.

The Under Secretary (Land Purchase Department), Native Office, Wellington.

Enclosure.[TRANSLATION.]

Hikurangi. Te Rere-a-tahu, 9th May, 1875.

To Captain Porter and Meiha Ropata,—

Friends, greeting. Herewith we forward the boundaries of our land for your information, which land we are willing to lease to the Government—that is, if the arrangements for so doing are satisfactory. This is a bona fide offer of ours to you: do you let it to them, and carry out the arrangements in accordance with our agreement to lease,—that is, so that our interests and the interests of those leasing the land will be protected.

Now, we consider that you can make satisfactory arrangements respecting the price for the land,—that is, the rent per acre.

We now ask you to make us an advance of £500 on that land.

Aporo Tamarere, And seven others.

We also agree that that land should be surveyed.

Here follow the boundaries.

No. 4. Mr. J. A. WILSON, Land Purchase Officer, to the Hon. the NATIVE MINISTER.

East Coast and Bay of Plenty.—Land Transactions. Land Purchase Office, Gisborne, 10th June, 1875.
SIR,—

I have the honor to report, as Land Purchase Officer for the East Coast and Bay of Plenty Districts, that, during the financial year now about to close, an unusual amount of business has been done, and that the following transactions have taken place.

- Former Negotiations Completed.—I would refer to negotiations of the previous year that have been completed in this. Motu and Waikohu Matawai Blocks come under this head. The former is a lease of 68,482 acres; term, fifty years. The latter is a lease for 43,479 acres; term, twenty-five years. These blocks have finally passed the Native Lands Court, and have been awarded to the Natives with whom I had dealt. The Natives, two only excepted, have ratified the preliminary agreements under which they received advances in previous years. The deed for Motu is at Wellington, and that for Waikohu Matawai will be there before the end of this month. The rent for these blocks, as shown in my returns, will, I think, be considered moderate. The average rent on the nearer block is £3 9s. 9d. per 1,000 acres per annum. The average rent on Motu, which is more remote, is £2 17s. 1d. per 1,000 acres per annum.
- Purchases of Country Lands made this Year.—During the period under report I have made extensive purchases of lands at reasonable rates in the district extending from Poverty Bay to Tokomaru and the Watershed of Upper Waiapu. Although these purchases are in many blocks, yet they may be classified according to price in manner following:—

On these lands I have advanced moneys, in various sums, to the extent of £2,166, being about 3<sup>d</sup>. per acre. These lands are of the same character and quality as the numerous sheep runs that fringe the coast line from Poverty Bay to Tokomaru,—hilly but good, and well adapted to sheep; some of this country is open, some covered with scrub, and some with light bush. There is, however, but little valuable timber on the ground, which is to be regretted, as the whole is suited to settlement in its agricultural and pastoral forms. The surveys, so far as they have progressed, show that the area of this fine country has not been over estimated, the natural outlets to which are at Gisborne and Tolaga Bay.

Leases of Country Lands made this Year.—I have also to report that, in addition to the above-mentioned 160,000 acres of purchased lands, I have leased 133,000 acres for forty years, surveys in progress, and 98,000 acres for thirty years, surveys in progress: making a total of 231,000 acres leased this year. The annual rent on these lands is uniform, amounting as nearly as possible to £1,500, which is rather less than £6 10s. per 1,000 acres per annum. In all cases, the advances are to be recouped out of the rent, the payment for which will not commence until the Government shall have received a title through the Court. The character and quality of the leased lands is hardly as even as that of the purchased; some of the leased land is well situated and very superior, and some is more remote and rugged. The leased and purchased lands adjoin each other, so as in one case to form a block of 247,000 acres, extending from within six miles of Gisborne to the Ngatiporou boundary in Upper Waiapu, and from the upper branches of Waipaoa or Turanga River to the back line of Mr. Arthur's run, on the coast at Tokomaru. The natural outlets to these lands are at Tokomaru, Tolaga, Gisborne, and Wairoa. In every agreement to lease, there is a covenant by which the Natives bind themselves not to sell the freehold during the term of lease to any person other than the Government. Advances on these leases to the extent of £1,808 have been rendered necessary by the keen competition of certain influential Europeans in this district, who, regardless of the prior claims and moneys advanced by the Government, and of warnings received to that effect, have made advances also, and have obtained authorized surveys on lands negotiated and surveyed by the Government. I do not, however, propose to occupy your valuable time on these and other unjustifiable encroachments on the public domain, having already reported to you fully on all such cases in my letters Nos. 51–75, 53–75, 48–75.

- 4. Purchases of Town Lands made this Year.—I have to report that I have purchased the township site at Tolaga Bay, the same being situated at the entrance to Uawa River, and is in fact the only ground available for the purpose. The European portion of the village at Tologa has always been upon this land. The site is not extensive, being little over 400 acres, the title-deed to 252 acres of which is now in the hands of the Government at Wellington. I regret that the balance of this valuable land (properly called Mangarara No. 2) appears for the present to be classed in the category of lands unjustifiably interfered with by Europeans, vide my letter No. 48–75. In this, however, as in similar cases, I have applied for the statutory protection afforded by the 42nd clause of "The Immigration and Public Works Act Amendment Act, 1871."

The money paid on the township site at Tologa amounts, on the portion to which the title is secure, i.e. on the

- 5. Purchases and Leases of former Years still Incomplete.—The area of lands coming under this head is 132,000 acres; the number of blocks four, one of them being in Poverty Bay and three in the Bay of Plenty. The amount of money advanced in each case is £90, £20, £10, and nil: total, £120. This sum is amply secured in the interests on which it has been advanced.

It would be too much to expect to escape opposition in a district where the land is good, and where it may not have been advisable to apply the restrictive clauses of the Immigration and Public Works Acts. As a matter of fact, I have experienced an opposition from European owners than which nothing could be more strenuous, partaking sometimes even of a personal character. Yet I have given no cause for such behaviour, for, excepting in the case of Puhatikotiko, the township site near the oil springs, ten miles inland of Ormond, I have not interfered with prior negotiations by Europeans. It is to be remarked, however, that embarrassments of the nature referred to have been mostly experienced by me among persons whose position and circumstances should have been a protection to the interests of the Government. When I came into this district to purchase land, the whole country at the back of the sheep runs on the coast was a terra incognita, as far as the Natives and myself were concerned. In some cases a human foot had scarcely ever passed over it, while in other localities no human being had seen the land for many generations. The only road was the coast road, and a few tracks, mostly sheep tracks, running a short distance inland. As the acquaintance, therefore, of the Natives of the present generation with its tribal boundaries was almost entirely of a traditionary kind, and as business could not be conducted satisfactorily on either side without data of a more certain nature to go upon, I deemed it necessary to explore this unknown district, in order to define the boundaries and areas, and to ascertain the quality and topographical character of the country. This exploration, though conducted in the summer season, proved to be a no less arduous undertaking than James Alexander, in his last work on New Zealand, had predicted it would be. The service was ably performed by Captain Simpson, and the expense attending his explorations, amounting in all to £278 13s. 3d., has, I believe, been amply repaid to Government by the information gained, and the security and facilities afforded to the transactions of this department, no advances of importance being allowed by me until the character of the country had been ascertained.

Sir, before concluding this report, I beg most respectfully to thank you for the discretionary powers entrusted to me during the period in which these negotiations have been in progress, as I feel sure that these powers have contributed largely as an element of success to the extensive transactions and engagements that have been carried out by me on behalf of the Government during the year that is now about to expire.

I have, &c.,

J.A. WILSON, Land Purchase Commissioner.

The Hon. D. McLean, K.C.M.G.,
Native Minister, Wellington.

Captian PORTER, Gisborne, to the UNDER-SECRETARY, Native Department.

Poverty Bay.—Blocks awaiting investigation in Native Lands Court, &c. Gisborne, 5th June, 1876.

SIR,—

I have the honor to furnish the following report of my land-purchase transactions for the year ended the 31st May, 1876:—

By reference to the schedule attached hereto, it will be seen that a total area of 324,011 acres is under offer and negotiation: 142,622 acres is shown in course of completion and prices fixed, and 181,389 acres under offer, but for which negotiations have been deferred, pending the investigation of the several titles by the Native Lands Court, and for which prices have not yet been arranged. The Waitahaia and Aorangi Wai Blocks, representing a total of 59,252 acres have passed the Court during the last month, and were in each case adjudged to the hapus and persons with whom I had dealt in my preliminary negotiations. The deeds of conveyance for these blocks have been signed, and with the exception of a few signatures required from grantees at a distance, are now complete. The authority for survey of the other blocks has been issued by Mr. Baker, Deputy Inspector of Surveys, and at the next sittings of the Lands Court I trust to be able to report a very large area of land passing through on Government account.

In my negotiations for the past year, I have found it necessary to depart in one or two instances from the generally existing systems of land purchase throughout the island, and I take the liberty of pointing out their disadvantages. The first is the payment of advance, or earnest money, on lands before the title to them has been adjudged by the Native Lands Court. I found that in almost every case there were two parties, claimants and counter-claimants, and the onus of deciding the right of one or other of these fell to the Purchase Officer, a responsibility that he should not incur at the risk of wrongfully paying away Government money, which, apart from other reasons, determined me to ask the Government to allow of my, discontinuing payments of this nature within my district, and which request was willingly approved by you.

The next subject is that of surveys. I have instituted the system of throwing the onus of this upon the Natives, by arranging with them the price per acre, less the cost of survey. I have found this a very good precaution, as, knowing they have to pay, the Natives are careful not to cause delays, or to lead over wrong boundaries, as is often the case in surveys of Native lands to which the title is disputed, and further, the Government incur no risk of loss.

The obtaining of signatures, in accordance with the provisions of the Native Lands Act, within my district, entails a great deal of unnecessary expense to Government, and delay in completion of transactions. I particularly refer to the necessity of having an interpreter authorized by the Act, and the presence of a Resident Magistrate. I find this is a most unpleasant feature of my duty, as, however anxious to complete deeds of purchase, I am wholly dependent upon these officers, as in several instances I missed favourable opportunities owing to the inability to obtain one or other of them. I have seriously considered the disadvantages Government work under in comparison with the private speculator: Government under the present system are compelled to employ two officers to carry out their purchases, namely, Purchase Officer and interpreter, whereas the private speculator has only to employ the interpreter, who invariably acts as negotiator also. This is obviously prejudicial to Government interests, and gives an unfair advantage to private dealers; and it would be only right that Purchase Officers, where qualified, should be allowed to act as interpreter in conjunction with the Resident Magistrate, as required by the Act.

In concluding, I may remark that, with the exception of these few remediable difficulties in connection with the service, I have much pleasure in reporting that all my dealings with the Natives have been most satisfactory, and have not met with any obstruction or opposition; on the contrary, I have received valuable assistance from the leading chiefs of the tribe, who unanimously express themselves satisfied at the working of the policy.

I have, &c.,

T. W. PORTER, Land Purchase Officer.

The Under Secretary,
Native Office (Land Purchase Branch), Wellington.

I.—PURCHASES IN COURSE OF COMPLETION.

II.—BLOCKS UNDER OFFER, BUT FOR WHICH NEGOTIATIONS HAVE BEEN DEFERRED PENDING INVESTIGATION OF TITLES BY NATIVE LANDS COURT.

[NOTE.—For continuation of these Reports on the Extinguishment of Native Title in the North Island, see Appendix to Journals, 1862, 01., pp. 163–384.—ED.]

Schedule

Official Documents in Reference to Native Reserves.No. 1.The CHIEF PROTECTOR to the Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Native Encampment at Mataharehare (St. George's Bay). Protector's Office, Auckland, 27th July, 1841.
SIR,—

The Thames Natives on visiting Auckland have universally taken up their abode on the west side of Mr. Cooper's allotment. I have invariably pointed out the east side of Mechanics' Bay as the place proposed by His Excellency the Governor as a reserve for them. They decidedly object to the situation, and have begged permission to encamp near my residence. I have the honour to request that this information be laid before His Excellency, for an approval of the desired change.

I have, &c.,

George Clarke, Protector of Aborigines.

The Hon. the Colonial Secretary.

No. 2.[Extract from New Zealand Gazette.]

Notice.—Respecting Occupiers of Native Reserves. Colonial Secretary's Office, Auckland, 10th September, 1841.

Notice is hereby given that all persons who have built houses upon or occupy any public reserve, or any reserve of the Natives, are required to leave and yield up possession of the same within one month from the date hereof, unless licensed to remain for a longer period by the Police Magistrate; and that, in the event of their neglecting or refusing so to do, the Police Magistrate has instructions to eject them from the ground they so occupy. And all persons are warned not to clear, fence, cultivate, or build in or upon any portion of the belt of reserved land surrounding the town.

By His Excellency's command.

WILLOUGHBY SHORTLAND.

No. 3. The CHIEF PROTECTOR to Mr. Protector HALSWELL.

Respecting Management of Native Reserves. H.M. Brig "Victoria," Port Nicholson, 28th September, 1841.
SIR,—

In reference to the disposal of Native reserves for the benefit of the aborigines, I am directed by His Excellency the Governor to convey to you the following information, for your guidance and instruction.

His Excellency has appointed a Committee to decide on the acceptance of tenders for Native reserves, to be composed of the Chief Magistrate, the Protector of Aborigines, and the Crown Prosecutor, for the Southern District. The tenders will be opened in the presence of the Committee, and the majority will decide on those to which the preference should be given. All public notices will be issued under the sanction of this Committee, and the number and description of the allotments to be let must therein be set forth. No allotment must be offered for competition the possession of which is disputed by the Natives; and the period for which leases may be granted is not to exceed seven years. Ten per cent of the annual rent must be paid by the lessee as a fine previous to possession being granted, and the rent paid every six months.

Until further instructions shall be forwarded to you, you will strictly confine the appropriation of the funds realized from the reserves to the following purposes, viz.: The education and religious instruction of the Natives, included under which head is the enclosing with a respectable fence of paling the ground on which the Native churches are erected at Te Aro and Pipitea; the better fitting up of the above churches for the accommodation of the Natives who meet for public worship, to the number of two or three hundred, and a small salary to the person who may be recommended to His Excellency as a Native teacher; the appropriation of a portion of the funds for a dispensary, medical advice, and other assistance for the sick, for a Native schoolmaster, and for carrying on a school for Native children.

The Protector of Aborigines will report to His Excellency the proceedings of the Committee by the earliest opportunity.

I have, &c.,

GEORGE CLARKE, Chief Protector of Aborigines.

E. S. Halswell, Esq., Protector of Aborigines.

No. 4. The CHIEF PROTECTOR to the Hon. the # OLONIAL SECRETARY.

Auckland.—Native Encampment in Cooper's Bay. Protector's Office, 13th January, 1842.
SIR,—

AS the Natives of the Thames are in the habit of locating themselves in Cooper's Bay when they visit the town, on allotments already purchased by private individuals, I do myself the honour to propose to His Excellency the Governor that the Allotment No. 89, in that bay, which has not yet been sold, be reserved for the benefit of the aborigines for the following purposes, viz.: First, as a location for the Thames Natives visiting His Excellency the Governor; secondly, for a site on which may be erected a Native church and schoolhouse to which may be attached a cemetery; and, thirdly, that the remaining portion of the allotment be leased, to realize a fund for the support of a Native school.

I have, &c.,

GEORGE CLARKE, Chief Protector.

The Hon. the Colonial Secretary.

No. 5. Mr. Protector HALSWELL, Wellington, to the Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Selection of Native Reserves. Wellington, 11th April, 1842.
SIR,—

I have the honour to inform you that I attended at the office of the Company's surveyor on the 7th instant, the day appointed for the selection of lands recently surveyed in the Districts of Manawatu, Horowhenua, and in this neighbourhood, and, with the information derived from a personal inspection of the country and from other sources, I was enabled to select for the Natives, according to the order of choice, a portion of the reserves which remained unchosen of the preliminary country sections.

The lands chosen are 300 acres on the Porirua, 200 in the Ohariu valley (a good country in the neighbourhood of Port Nicholson to the eastward), 300 acres on the Manawatu River, and 3,400 acres on the Horowhenua. I have still 3,100 acres to choose for the Natives in the preliminary sections.

In making these selections for the Natives I have carefully attended, as far as possible, to their own wishes, collected from some Natives inhabiting the different districts, and from others who have visited me in this place. My attention has been particularly directed to their own clearings, and I have secured for them as much water-frontage as possible, and more than they can all probability ever occupy.

It was their particular wish to live on the land in the neighbourhood of Horowhenua, a considerable lake lying between the Manawatu and Otaki Rivers, some twelve miles inland. I have accordingly obtained so much of the country round this water as has been already surveyed. It is a remarkably fine tract of land, heavily timbered in places, much of it cleared by the Natives, and containing several pas. Such portions as would not be required by the Natives could be very advantageously let to Europeans. I am preparing maps of the country, which will be transmitted to His Excellency by the very first opportunity.

Generally speaking, the Natives in all directions, and the settlers, are upon good terms. Nevertheless there are continually trifling misunderstandings between them, but which, by prompt attention, have been always adjusted with satisfaction to both parties.

The wants of the Natives, real and imaginary, are numerous, and their applications to me incessant: some of these are met, and some I resist. I have, however, the satisfaction to know that I have gained their confidence, which has always been the first object of my ambition here.

I have, &c.,

EDMUND HALSWELL, Protector of Aborigines, Southern District.

The Hon. the Colonial Secretary.

Native Reserve in Cooper's Bay. Colonial Secretary's Office, Auckland, 4th February, 1842.
SIR,—

I have had the honour to receive and lay before the Governor your letter of the 13th ultimo, reporting that the Natives at the Thames are in the habit of locating themselves at Cooper's Bay when they visit the town, on allotments already purchased by private individuals, and proposing that Allotment No. 89 in that bay, which has not yet been sold, be reserved for the benefit of the aborigines for the following purposes, namely: First, as a location for them whilst on a visit to the Governor; secondly, as a site for a Native church, schoolhouse, and cemetery; thirdly, as a means of support of a Native school, the funds for which may be realized by leasing the remaining portion of the allotment.

Suggestion approved.

Your proposition having been referred to the Surveyor-General, and his report being favourable, I have to inform you that His Excellency the Governor has been pleased to approve of your suggestion, and that that officer has been instructed on the subject. You will accordingly take early steps to carry into effect His Excellency's wishes on this head, and acquaint the Natives of the place assigned to them.

I have, &c.,

WILLOUGHBY SHORTLAND, Colonial Secretary.

The Chief Protector of Aborigines.

No. 7. Mr. Commissioner HALSWELL to the Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Reports the Leasing of Barrett's Hotel. Office of the Commissioner for the Management of Native Reserves, Wellington, 19th April, 1842.
SIR,—

I have the honour to inform you that I have, with the concurrence of Mr. Hanson and Mr. Murphy, this day executed a lease for seven years of the house and premises known by the name of Barrett's Hotel, being part of a Native reserve, to Mr. Richard Barrett, at the annual rental of £54 5s., the rent to commence from the 24th day of June next, with a restrictive clause not to underlease or transfer without a written consent. The present tenant is to pay one year's back rent.

I have, &c.,

EDMUND HALSWELL, Commissioner for Native Reserves.

The Hon. the Colonial Secretary.

Mr. Commissioner HALSWELL to the Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Respecting the Native Reserves. Office for the Management of Native Reserves, Wellington, 5th July, 1842.
SIR,—

I have the honour to forward you herewith, in a tin case, a chart of the Company's surveys in the Manawatu and Horowhenua country, showing the reserves which I have chosen for the Natives in those districts.

As I have already reported, I have made those selections from personal inspections of the land, and according to the express desire of the Natives in some instances; and in the absence of such expressed wish, always considering the relative value of the land, I have taken special care to secure for them their own cultivations and pas.

I receive from time to time applications from various persons to rent the reserves already set apart for the benefit of the Natives in this port and the neighbourhood, but the short term of lease has been at once objected to by the applicants, and has prevented my obtaining any tenants for the land.

The Natives continue to cultivate their own reserves, and are spreading their plantations in various directions. They are generally adopting the European mode of cultivation, and are very anxious to obtain such seeds and plants from the settlers as they have not yet met with. They are moreover very much disposed to imitate the white population in the fashion of their houses as well as gardens.

I have permitted in some instances respectable parties to cut wood on the reserves, on condition of their leaving for the Natives one-eighth of the sawn timber for their future use and benefit. I have reverted to this plan in order to protect as much as possible the timber on the reserves, for it is otherwise impossible in the present state of the colony to prevent depredations from being committed.

I have, &c.,

EDMUND HALSWELL, Commissioner for the Management of Native Affairs.

The Hon. the Colonial Secretary.

Governor's Minute.

I will not admit of Native residences which do not appear to have been originally sold being reserved for the use of the aborigines. They must nevertheless be retained in their possession, and the Native reserves be selected independently. Where pas have been indisputably sold I have no objection to their being selected as reserves: indeed, on the contrary, I earnestly wish it to be done.

23rd July, 1842.
W. H.

No. 9. The Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY to the CHIEF PROTECTOR.

Respecting the Reserves of the New Zealand Company. Colonial Secretary's Office, Auckland, 26th July, 1842.
SIR,—

In the formation of the settlements at Port Nicholson, Nelson, and New Plymouth, the New Zealand Company reserved one-eleventh of their town, suburban, and country allotments, for the benefit of the Natives, chiefly with a view to their preservation, civilization, and social advancement. Her Majesty's Government has also directed that, as often as any sale shall be effected in the colony of lands acquired by purchase from the aborigines, there must be carried to the credit of the department of the Protector of Aborigines a sum amounting to not less than 15 nor more than 20 per cent on the purchase-money, to constitute a fund for defraying the expenses of that department, and any other charges that may be recommended by the Protector and approved by the Executive Government for promoting the health, civilization, education, and spiritual care of the aborigines.

With a view to the most efficient administration of this property for the benefit of the Native race, it appears desirable that all the reserves so made, or to be made, by the New Zealand Company, and any moneys which may prove from time to time to be disposable out of funds so to be set apart, after defraying the expenses of your establishment, should be vested in one set of trustees possessing the confidence of Government and the New Zealand Company. I am therefore commanded by the Governor to acquaint you that His Excellency proposes, when the reserves made by the Company shall have become legally vested in the Crown, to submit to the Legislative Council a Bill for vesting them, and the surplus fund from time to time to arise from land sales, in three trustees—namely, the Bishop, Chief Justice, and Chief Protector of Aborigines for the time being—to be applied by them in the establishment of schools for the education of Youth among the aborigines, and in furtherance of such other measures as may be most conducive to the spiritual care of the Native race, and to their advancement in the scale of social and political existence.

It is intended to provide that the funds arising from the Company's reserves shall be expended in the promotion of these objects in the settlements and districts from which they may respectively arise. Such an application of these funds under a board of management so constituted will, His Excellency has reason to believe, meet with general approval.

Until these objects can be carried into effect under the authority of a legislative enactment, the Governor requests that you will avail yourself of the opportunity afforded by your periodical visits to the Company's settlements to direct from time to time the disposal of any funds that may have arisen from the reserves, and to collect any information respecting them that may be desirable with reference to the proposed enactments. The gentlemen who have hitherto had the management of the reserves at Port Nicholson will be directed to give up the trust into your hands; and they will, His Excellency feels assured, give you all the assistance and information in their power, with a view to its efficient execution.

I have, &c.,

WILLOUGHBY SHORTLAND.

George Clarke, Esq., Chief Protector.

No. 10. The CHIEF PROTECTOR to the Hon the COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Wellington.—Appointment of Trustee, for Native Reserves. Protector's Office, 15th August, 1842.

SIR,—

I do myself the honour to acknowledge your letter of the 26th ultimo, appointing me as one of the trustees for the management of funds realized by the sale of Crown lands, and Native reserves as provided by the New Zealand Land Company, which trust I accept, and shall exert myself to promote Her Most Gracious Majesty's and the New Zealand Land Company's philanthropic plans for the aborigines of this country.

I have, &c.,

GEORGE CLARKE, Chief Protector.

The Hon. the Colonial Secretary.

No. 11. The NEW ZEALAND COMPANY'S AGENT, New Plymouth, to Colonel WAKEFIELD.

Respecting, Management of Native Reserves. New Plymouth, 22nd January, 1844.

SIR,—

The outrage committed by the Natives on Mr. Cooke's property suggests the necessity of applying to Her Majesty's Government not only for a military force sufficient to enable the Magistrates to keep the peace in this district, but for a judicious management of the Native reserves.

More than a twelvemonth has now elapsed since, at the request of the Bishop of New Zealand, I consented to act as deputy to Mr. St. Hill, agent for the trustees, in letting and superintending the Native property in Taranaki. Of course the service was to be performed gratuitously, and in no way to interfere with my duties as Company's agent. It appeared probable that the Company's interests and the operations of the settlers might be forwarded by my acting in the capacity above mentioned. I immediately let several Native sections on advantageous terms to respectable tenants; but, the Bishop having been misinformed that I had leased sections to Europeans which the Natives occupied or wished to occupy themselves, his Lordship wrote me an official letter, dated 5th April, 1843, requesting me to abstain from acting on behalf of the Native reserves in any ostensible manner, and stating also his desire that, in the matter of letting of their land, "the wishes of the Natives might in all cases be consulted." In my reply I set the Bishop right as to the fact of my not having let land against the wishes of the Natives. At the same time, I resolved not to interfere at all in the management of the Native reserves, perceiving that such interference might lead me into difficulty, and place me in a position improper for the Company's agent. In a letter dated 27th June, 1843, I signified this determination to the Bishop; and since that period I am not aware that any care has been taken of the Native property in Taranaki by any person, be he trustee, commissioner, or agent. In his letter of the 5th April, the Bishop informed me that "he had as yet received no other authority than the official letter of the late Governor, and that all agreements entered into by him, or agents under his authority, must be subject to the provisions of an Ordinance in Council hereafter to be enacted." I believe nothing has been done to cure the defect in the Bishop's powers, which is of itself sufficient to stop advantageous leasing of the reserves. I beg to refer you to my monthly report for November, 1843, wherein I mention the Bishop's expressed determination that the Native reserves should not be occupied by the aborigines, but be let for their benefit, and my protest against their occupation of other lands than their reserves; and I now request you to notice the apparent inconsistency of the Bishop's present plan with that adopted by him in his instructions to me of the 5th of April last, to the effect that the wishes of the Natives were always to be consulted as to the letting or occupation of their reserves.

As I have some reason to suspect that an incorrect representation of the value of the Native reserves in this settlement may be made to Her Majesty's Government, I should be much obliged by your assuring the Court of Directors—(1) That the Native reserves in the Taranaki. Block are amply sufficient, if judiciously managed, both for the support of the now resident Native population, although recently their numbers have been much increased by returned slaves, and for the establishment and maintenance of schools, hospitals, &c.; (2) that the Native property has been neglected in a manner quite sufficient to account for its present unproductiveness; (3) that to the want of a proper management, and the interference of some officer qualified and duly authorized by Government to explain their real condition to the Natives, are mainly to be attributed such disturbances as have recently occurred at Mr. Cooke's.

I have, &c.,

J. T. WICKSTEED, Resident Agent for New Plymouth.

Colonel William Wakefield.

No. 12. The CHIEF PROTECTOR to the Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Native Reserve recommended. Protector's Office, Auckland, 22nd March, 1844.
SIR,—

The Natives about Auckland are receiving deposits upon their lands with the expectation that His Excellency the Governor will ultimately sanction the sale of them. I have the honour to request that you will at your earliest convenience lay the subject of reserving to the Natives a tract of their own land under His Excellency's consideration, making such tract inalienable either to the Crown or to private individuals. The tract of country I would recommend to be immediately reserved in the belt of land belonging to the Ngatiwhatua Tribe lying between Tamaki and Auckland, having a frontage to Waitemata north, and also to Manukau south.

I have, &c.,

GEORGE CLARKE, Chief Protector.

The Hon. the Colonial Secretary.

No. 13. The CHIEF PROTECTOR to the Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Wellington—Deficiency of Native Reserves. Protector's Office, Auckland, 27th March, 1844.
SIR,—

On referring to the New Zealand's Company's plan of the Town of Wellington and to the adjacent country sections, I observe that, instead of one-eleventh being reserved for Natives, as agreed upon by the directors of the New Zealand Company, there is not a twentieth reserved for them. I have the honour therefore to submit to you; for the consideration of His Excellency, that the deficiency should be supplied. As however it might be inconvenient for the Company's agent to make up the deficiency from the district already located, I submit that it should be made up from the new districts about being opened to emigrants for selection.

I have, &c.,

GEORGE CLARKE, Chief Protector.

The Hon. the Colonial Secretary.

No. 14. The CHIEF PROTECTOR to the Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Selection of Land for Patuone. Protector's Office, Auckland, 22nd November, 1844.

SIR,—

At the special request of the chief Patuone, I have the honour to, inquire when it may be convenient to point out the piece of land promised him by His Excellency the Governor, on the north side of the Waitemata, as a residence for that chief during the time he wishes to spend at Auckland. Patuone is waiting in Auckland to accompany the surveyor, as per arrangement with His Excellency, to select an eligible situation for himself.

I have, &c.,

GEORGE CLARKE, Chief Protector.

The Hon. the Colonial Secretary.

No. 15 Mr. SUB-PROTECTOR EDWARD Shortland to the CHIEF PROTECTOR.

Thames.—Land reserved from Sale sufficiently large. Maketu, 27th January, 1845.

SIR,—

In answer to your letter, dated 26th November, 1844, desiring me to visit the chiefs Taraia, Te Awe, Hou, and others in the District of Hauraki, in order to ascertain what reserves they intend to make for themselves in their contemplated sales of land to Europeans, I have the honour to inform you that I reached Tararu on the 9th of January, when I found that the whole Native population had proceeded to Auckland to settle a dispute relating to the sale of land at Waiheke. At Opita, however, I found some Natives who were able to point out to me the land proposed for sale, which is situated chiefly on the west bank of the river, commencing a few miles above, Opita, and extending several miles south towards the Aroha Mountain. A very small piece was pointed out as offered for sale on the east bank of the river.

As in your letter you merely directed my attention to the inquiry whether sufficient reserves for the present and prospective wants have been made by the Natives, your knowledge of the district will, with this, information, satisfy you that they have amply provided for themselves by retaining the choicest and most extensive lands on the river. But there appears to me to be another question of equal importance to be determined, which is, whether the persons who offer this large extent of land for sale are in themselves competent to give the purchaser such a title as will insure undisturbed possession. This inquiry would, however, necessarily occupy some time.

I have, &c.,

EDWARD SHORTLAND.

The Chief Protector of Aborigines, &c.

THE question of the cultivated lands reserved to the Natives of Port Nicholson and its vicinity is one of some difficulty.

The Government were pledged by an arrangement concluded with the Natives by Governor Fitzroy to secure to them all the pas, burial-places, and grounds actually in cultivation by the Natives: the limits of the pas to be the grounds fenced in around the Native houses or huts, including the ground in cultivation or occupation around the adjoining Native houses or huts without the fence; and the cultivations being those tracts of land which are now used by the Natives for vegetable productions, or which had been so used by any aboriginal natives of New Zealand since the establishment of the colony. This description was very vague; and, as the lands intended to be included in it were not at that time defined, it has now become almost impossible to tell whether many portions of land now in cultivation by the Natives, or which were formerly so, have been occupied by the Natives since the date of this arrangement with Governor Fitzroy, in which case they will of course have no title to them, or whether—though now retaining marks of having been under cultivation—they had ceased to be cultivated before the formation of the colony, in which case also they would be excluded from the class of lands contemplated by Governor Fitzroy. In short, it has become almost impossible to tell what lands were included in this agreement.

The Government have made an attempt to remedy this evil by directing that a survey should be made by Government officers of all portions of land which they regarded as being secured to the Natives by Governor Fitzroy's arrangement. This survey is probably very nearly completed; the amount of land included in it is estimated at about 380 acres, and in this quantity are, I believe, included all lands claimed by the Natives. These lands consist principally of cultivated grounds scattered in small patches of a few acres throughout sections owned by European proprietors, whose farms are in many instances rendered comparatively valueless by the isolated patches of cultivations which are dotted throughout them. As might be anticipated from the looseness of the original agreements and from the circumstance above stated, the settlers in many instances contend that the lands regarded by the Government surveyors as included within Governor Fitzroy's arrangement ought to be excluded from it.

The manner in which the Native reserves have been administered in Port Nicholson has somewhat contributed to increase the evils. I will point out presently in general terms the evils which I believe to have resulted from the mode in which lands were in the first instance reserved for the Natives; but, in addition to these general evils, the following ones peculiar to Port Nicholson will be found to exist: The Company's lands in that district were to a great extent sold to absentee proprietors, and to the present day are only to a very limited extent occupied by Europeans. At the first settlement of Port Nicholson by Europeans the Natives continued as before to cultivate where, and in each position to exactly what extent, they pleased. Those persons who were charged with the administration of the Native reserves were probably from this cause led to believe that as the Natives rarely occupied their reserves they did not require them for the purpose of cultivation or of residence. In this view they resolved to appropriate them for the purpose of raising a future revenue for the Natives, and they let some of the best of the reserves on very long leases to Europeans, who forthwith began to clear and make substantial improvements on them, and in some instances to sublet them. Hence, when, from the spread of European population over the country, the settlers began to require lands which they had purchased, and which were occupied by Natives, the Government found it impossible to put the Natives in possession of their reserves, without which they had no means of subsistence, unless they got rid of the tenants to whom they had been leased, by paying them enormous sums as compensation; and the Natives, having no other lands to go upon, sturdily retained possession of the spots they had occupied. This state of things produced the most serious evils, led to constant and violent disputes between the Europeans and Natives, prevented the progress of the settlement, and afforded a constant ground of dispute between two races of people who could most materially assist each other, and who have positively no other ground whatever of jealousy or difference between them.

The mode by which I have hitherto endeavoured to get rid of this difficulty has been as follows: To ascertain exactly what lands the Natives are entitled to. If they are in possession of lands the bonâ fide property of settlers, as there have been no reserves at my disposals which the Natives could be placed, I have purchased, at the expense of the Government, lands for them, selected by themselves, and of such extent and quality as to render them good and obedient citizens by giving them a valuable and permanent interest in the prosperity of the country; and, having made over these lands to them, I required them to surrender to Europeans the properties to which they were justly entitled.

I proposed in the same manner, in dealing with the question of the other Native cultivations required by Europeans, to inquire in all instances whether the Natives had sufficient lands for their wants, exclusive of those required by the Europeans: if they had, I would encourage them to sell to the Europeans at a moderate price those portions of their cultivations which interfered with the operations of the European settler, and I believe the Natives would in almost every instance gladly accede to an arrangement of this kind.

If the Natives had not sufficient land for their wants exclusive of that portion of their cultivations which may be required by the settler. I would recommend that the settler or Company should be required to pay the Government such sums as Colonel McCleverty may think proper, and that he should thereupon recommend the Government to purchase for the Natives some portions of land selected by themselves. And it would be essential that every exchange of this kind should be one which is rather advantageous to the Natives than otherwise, not only for the purpose of securing their immediate and cheerful acquiescence in the exchange, but with a view to secure, together with their comfort, their attachment to the form of government under which they live. Such an arrangement can be only carried out by an immediate expenditure for the purchase of the requisite lands on the part of the Government. If such an expenditure were never to be refunded I should feel justified in incurring it. A settlement of this vexatious question, by restoring tranquillity and the confidence of the Natives, will save a large military and naval expenditure, and will extensively promote an internal production and commerce: but the fact is, besides producing these advantages, the expense incurred may very soon be refunded to the Government from the sale of some of the Native reserves. It may be said, in fact, that the Native reserves are at present in a great measure unavailable to the Native population, either from their being leased to Europeans, from their ineligible position, or from the soil not being adapted to the mode of husbandry at present pursued by the Natives. In lieu, therefore, of these at present unavailable reserves, the Government is about to put them in possession of lands adapted to their wants—in other words, to exchange certain lands for reserves which will consequently not be needed for the future wants of the Native population and will ultimately form a source from whence the Government may reimburse itself for the expenditure at present incurred. I have only to add that much will depend in the settlement of this difficult question upon judicious management: it would be better in the first instance only to deal with those cases in which lands under cultivation by Natives, or claimed by them under Governor Fitzroy's agreement, are required by European settlers. By thus dealing with individual cases upon their own merits, and only taking cases from time to time as the Europeans require the land, there will be much less probability of creating any combination amongst the Natives, or extortionate demands from them. But what at once should be settled is, what lands are included in Governor Fitzroy's arrangement: these should at once be defined and surveyed, and the question having been thus once arranged, no fresh claims should ever hereafter be entertained.

Wairau District.

With regard to the purchase of the Wairau District from the Natives, it appears unnecessary to make any lengthened observations. As Colonel McCleverty will soon make himself master of more information on this subject than is possessed by any other man, it may be sufficient to say, generally, that a very great benefit will be conferred upon the colony by the prompt and immediate settlement of this question.

It will be desirable, before entering into any negotiation upon the subject, to ascertain the exact number of Natives at present inhabiting the district, the extent of land they have under cultivation, and whether any portion of the Ngatitua Tribe are likely to remove from Porirua to that district, and then take the necessary precaution for securing to the Native inhabitants blocks of land in continued localities of sufficient extent to provide for the wants of the probable Native population.

I think it proper to observe, generally, that the system of Native reserves, as laid down by the New Zealand Company, although an admirable means of providing for the future wants of the aborigines, is in some respects insufficient for their present wants, and ill adapted to their existing notions. It will be found necessary in all instances to secure to the Natives, in addition to any reserves made for them by the New Zealand Company, their cultivations as well as convenient blocks of land for the purpose of future cultivation in such localities as they may select themselves.

Many chiefs feel a great repugnance to go upon lands belonging to other persons, if their reserves should be selected in such situations; in other instances Natives belonging to a weaker tribe are afraid to venture upon lands belonging to others if their reserves may be selected there; and they naturally generally feel under all circumstances the greatest repugnance to quit their villages and cultivated lands, many of which have been cleared at a large expense of time and labour: indeed, I am satisfied that it will be in many instances impossible to induce them to do this, except at a considerable sacrifice of life.

I therefore earnestly recommend Colonel McCleverty in no single instance to sanction the purchase of any large district of land without seeing that the cultivated grounds and portions of land in the vicinity of them for future cultivations are reserved to the Natives. The judicious exercise of his discretion on this subject will do more towards preserving the future tranquillity of the country than any other precautionary measure with which I am acquainted.

Nelson District.

In reference to the objection raised by the New Zealand Company to the grant of land which has been offered to them in the Nelson District—viz., that it excepts any portions of land within any of the lands described in the grant to which private claimants or any claimant may have already proved or may hereafter prove that they or any of them had a valid claim prior to the purchase of the New Zealand Company—I think that Colonel McCleverty should ascertain what claims have already been preferred to such portions of these lands. These claims should be allowed or disallowed, and the exceptions complained of should be limited to such claims as may upon inquiry be found to be valid and just; that the inquiry should strictly be confined to such claims as have already been preferred.

I do not think that claims which might now be made after a large body of European settlers have been for so many years in possession of the land should be allowed to operate for their detriment. If such claimants should show that they are entitled to the consideration of the Government I think that compensation should be given them in the shape of grants to land in other localities, or in such other form as might be found most convenient.

Another general observation which I would make is that in all instances where it is arranged that certain portions of land are to be assigned to particular bodies of Natives Colonel McCleverty should see that they are furnished with accurate plans and descriptions of the boundaries of these tracts of land, and that when those are handed over to them they should sign a receipt stating that their claims to land have all been satisfied, even in cases of disputed boundaries between different tribes of Natives. It would be a wise measure of precaution to recommend the Natives to allow the Government to settle disputed boundaries, and to issue to the claimants confirmatory grants to their lands, so that no dispute regarding their title might hereafter arise.

I have found the Natives generally desirous of receiving such descriptive grants from the Government, and, as all these grants could be registered in the Survey Office, the Native population might thus gradually be brought in a great measure to register their claims to land, and to feel that the holding a positive grant from the Crown was the best guarantee and title they could obtain. The Government would be enabled to ascertain the portions of country to which the Natives had valid claims and those portions which might be regarded as lands belonging to the Crown.

I have only further to add that Colonel McCleverty will find that about seventy claims to land in the Middle Island have been made and gazetted, but have never yet been investigated. It is a matter of great importance that these claims should be heard and reported on with as little delay as possible, and if no objection should exist to Colonel McCleverty hearing and report on all of these claims he will render a great service to the Government by so doing: if, however, he should see any objection to his adopting this course, and will report the same to me, I will lose no time in despatching the Surveyor-General to the South, for the purpose of hearing such claims as Colonel McCleverty may not think fit to dispose of.

I have, &c.,

G. GREY.

14th September, 1846.

No. 17. Lieut.-Colonel McCLEVERTY to His Excellency Governor GREY.

Respecting the Settlement of the Native Reserve at Te Aro. Wellington, 17th February, 1847.
SIR,—

I have to report to your Excellency that I have been engaged lately in endeavouring to arrange the Port Nicholson question of Native cultivations; but I am apprehensive, from a conversation I had with Colonel Wakefield on the 4th of this month, that any arrangement with respect to the removal of Natives from cultivations on country sections belonging to Europeans will not be final as to the difficulties attendant on the question of the Port Nicholson grant.

From that conversation, I understood that Colonel Wakefield would not advise the acceptance of a grant unless the Natives at Te Aro are either obliged, or their acquiescence purchased, to relinquish their pa at the head of the bay, which occupies the site of the intended Customhouse, and two town sections purchased by settlers. I therefore conceive it will be necessary to ascertain at once all the objections on the part of Colonel Wakefield to the grant under Mr. Spain's award, in order to obtain their removal, if possible, with the acquiescence of the Natives: to no other course can I give my assistance without a willing concession by them, and, should that be obtained, the sum required to purchase it would far exceed that which I could recommend to your Excellency.

I have, &c.,

W. MCCLEVERTY, Lieut.-Colonel.

His Excellency Governor Grey.

Copy of a DESPATCH from Governor Grey to the Right Hon. Earl Grey.

Wellington.—Transmitting Report of Commissioner McCleverty on Conflicting Claims to Land of Europeans and Natives. Government House, Auckland, 21st April, 1847.
MY LORD,—

I have the honour to transmit a report on the subject of conflicting claims of Europeans and Natives to certain portions of land, which I received upon the 8th instant from Lieut. Colonel McCleverty, who was sent out by Her Majesty's Government for the purpose of adjusting these land claims. The following is a summary of the most important subjects and recommendations contained in that officer's report. Lieut.-Colonel McCleverty estimates the number of Natives inhabiting the Harbour of Port Nicholson as 633, including women and children; whilst the quantity of land they have under cultivation amounts to 639 acres, which is estimated to be not more than sufficient for their wants, reference being had to their imperfect mode of agriculture: 528 acres of the above quantity of land are on sections which have been sold by the New Zealand Company to Europeans. The Native cultivations upon sections claimed by Europeans are generally in small patches of a very irregular form. They thus decrease the value of the farm of the European, as he would find it more difficult and expensive to cultivate his land, especially to fence his irregular boundary. The Europeans and Natives equally consider themselves entitled to these cultivations; they form a subject of frequent dispute, which it is most desirable to adjust. This, however, can only be done by procuring for the Native land which is equally suitable for his purposes with that which he gives up; and it must here be borne in mind that the present cultivations of the Natives have been chosen by them as being on good land, and of a suitable aspect, and in situations easy of access from their places of abode.

Lieut.-Colonel McCleverty calculates that at least twelve sections of land, of a hundred acres each, would be required to compensate the Natives for the land it is desirable they should give up. But, to make an arrangement which would be a permanent one, he remarks that a larger extent of land would have to be provided, because the Natives do not understand the rotation of crops, and therefore wear out their land in three or four years, and are then obliged to occupy new land.

Lieut.-Colonel McCleverty also remarks that, the Port Nicholson District not belonging to the Government, they have no land there applicable to the contemplated purpose, and that this renders it nearly impossible to put the Natives in possession of the land requisite to effect an equitable exchange, without purchasing it from Europeans. The Government has already been compelled to purchase two sections of land for the purpose of meeting the wants of the Natives, at an average price of £375 for each section. Assuming, therefore, that in order to obtain the land required from the Natives it was only necessary to purchase two-thirds of the quantity named by Lieut.-Colonel McCleverty (viz., eight sections), the sum of about £3,000 would have to be at once provided for this purpose. It however also appears, from Lieut.-Colonel McCleverty's report, that it may be probably found impracticable to purchase the required land, for but few of the resident settlers will sell their land, and much of the land belongs to absentees, whose agents are generally only empowered to let land, rarely to sell it.

Lieut.-Colonel McCleverty proposes the following partial remedies for the difficulties above detailed:—1. He recommends that a portion of the Town Belt, which was estimated originally to contain 800 acres, but which, he thinks, really contains about a thousand acres, should be given in exchange to the Natives for such of their cultivations on European settlers' sections as they may be disposed to exchange in this manner.

I believe that many of the inhabitants of Port Nicholson object to such exchanges being made, on the ground that they bought their town land on the understanding that the Town Belt was to be reserved for the use of the inhabitants of the town for the purposes of health, recreation, and the like; and that the Town Belt also separated the country lands from the town, and thus secured as it were a certain value to the town land, by preventing the town from being extended beyond certain limits. For these and similar reasons they think that any diversion of the Town Belt from the purposes originally contemplated will be a breach of contract, and will injure the value of their town property. I feel great regret at being compelled to act contrary to wishes urged on such reasonable grounds; but the answer to the above objections appears to be that the Commissioner appointed to inquire into the land claims disallowed the original Port Nicholson purchase, and, whilst thus not admitting the rights claimed by the purchasers, he at the same time gave the Natives certain rights, which must be respected; and that the necessity of the case also compels me to approve of this recommendation; which is indeed in conformity with my original instructions to Lieut.-Colonel McCleverty.

As, however, the surrender of patches of the Town Belt to the Natives will only suffice to procure a very small portion of the Native cultivations claimed by Europeans, Lieut.-Colonel McCleverty makes the following further recommendation, viz., that; as many of the settlers' sections which have been cultivated by the Natives have been cleared by them to a valuable extent, an average value per acre, for the benefit accruing from this clearing, should be paid to the Government by the settlers, or the New Zealand Company, on the European claimant being put in possession of the Native cultivations; the money thus obtained being intended to form a fund for the purchase of the additional land required by the Natives. In as far as the settlers are concerned, I could not, now that I am fully acquainted with the circumstances of the country, recommend the adoption of such an arrangement. I find that the settlers regard the number of years during which they have been kept out of possession of the portions of sections occupied by the Natives as a loss which is by no means compensated for by their having this land now given to them cleared; and I am now apprehensive, from discussions which have recently arisen, that they might on such terms refuse to receive their sections from the Company, and thus one object contemplated in the attempt to arrange this question of Native cultivation, viz., to enable the Company to fulfil their engagements with the settlers, would be defeated. The other question raised in Lieut.-Colonel McCleverty's report, viz., whether the New Zealand Company should be required to pay for the cultivations obtained from the Natives and given up to their settlers, is a question which can be arranged between the Government and the New Zealand Company when Lieut.-Colonel McCleverty's final report is received.

Another point raised by Lieut.-Colonel McCleverty is that the sections allotted to their purchasers by the New Zealand Company contain, instead of 100 acres, generally from 110 to 120 each, and sometimes as many as 130 acres. In this case, I think that the Crown has no right to interfere with the surplus, because Mr. Commissioner Spain's award was that a certain district containing so many sections should be granted to the Company, but that all Native cultivations should be excluded from the grant. I think, therefore, that the grant to the Company, although estimated to contain so many acres, had reference really to a certain district, containing so many sections, the exterior boundary-lines of which were the boundary-lines of the district. The question raised by Lieut.-Colonel McCleverty appears, therefore, to be rather a question between the Company and their settlers than between the Government and the Company.

Upon the whole there appears to be nothing contained in the enclosed report from Lieut.-Colonel McCleverty which should induce me, until I have been made acquainted with the pleasure of Her Majesty's Government on this subject, in any way to modify the instructions which I issued to that officer upon the 14th

September last, a copy of which I transmitted to your Lordship's predecessor in my Despatch No. 89, of the same date.

I have, &c.,

G. GREY.

The Right Hon. Earl Grey.

REPORT ON PORT NICHOLSON CULTIVATIONS.

Report of Lieut.-Colonel McCleverty on the Wellington Native Reserves. Wellington.

SIR,—

According to your Excellency's wish, I will endeavour to describe some of the principal difficulties attendant on the settlement of the question of cultivations, occupied by Natives, on sections purchased by settlers from the New Zealand Company in the Port Nicholson District.

I am not prepared to assert that the whole of the lands now under cultivation by Natives were so at the date of Captain Fitzroy's arrangement, viz., January 29th, 1844, or had been so cultivated by them since the establishment of the colony, though at that immediate date discontinued. It would be a task nearly amounting to an impossibility to ascertain what was not included in the above arrangement and is now in cultivation, if such do exist, of which I have little doubt, for the parties from whom evidence can be obtained are so self-interested on one side or the other that the evidence would be most contradictory. It must be remembered that in many cases the sections are the property of absentees, and are let to industrious persons of the working and labouring classes, at a low or often a peppercorn rent, to encourage the clearing of the land, and these would gladly include in these nominally free leases those portions that have been cleared by the Natives, thus saving an expense to themselves and engaging the ready concurrence of the interested landlord.

The Natives, I have little doubt, have encroached, though I think to no great extent. The quantity of land now in cultivation, or which bears recent marks of it—taken in proportion to the Native population, viz., 639 acres to 633 people, children included (or one acre each), their mode of cultivation, their usual habits and wants—is not so disproportionate, nor more than was required by them at the time of the arrival of the first settlers, and from this I infer that the encroachments are of no great amount; but these even might have been prevented, by the issue of plans on which boundaries were defined, the originals to have been kept in a register or other office and copies given to the Natives.

From inquiry amongst some of the settlers (English) of the labouring classes, and who have Natives on land in their vicinity, from which they are anxious that they should be removed, and which is corroborated by others who have an opportunity of judging, the aborigines, from their mode of cultivation, require more land for their individual support than an equal number of Europeans.

The Natives have at present about 528 acres cleared on sections of European settlers, and which either now are and were under cultivation, or were so in the interval between the settlement of the colony and Captain Fitzroy's arrangement, according to the statements of the aborigines. To induce them willingly to relinquish these cultivations, to the greater portion of which they now lay a just claim, it will be necessary to obtain for them an equivalent in land, not in equal quantity, but in blocks of land which would contain a number of acres at least equal in quantity and quality to what they relinquish, and in situations equally easy of access from their places of abode: all this is most difficult to attain.

In considering the question of these lands I must confine myself to their present wants and modes of cultivation: a deviation from the latter must be a work of time and gradual improvement in civilization in the Native race, to obviate their wants as to the quantity of land required.

If the Natives do not obtain land in the immediate vicinity of Port Nicholson, many say—and there may be no great cause to doubt them—that they will migrate to Taranaki, thus increasing the difficulty attached to the settlement of New Plymouth, which it would be better to avoid. The Natives resident at Port Nicholson are all of the Ngatiawa Tribe, with a small exception of the Ngatiruanui, amalgamated with the former at Te Aro: they have the choice between Port Nicholson and Taranaki, from whence they emigrated in 1834, consequent on their conquest by the Waikatos. These are the only places on the Northern Island whereon they can locate, and by a migration to Taranaki we get rid of a difficulty at one place with some show of injustice on our part, only to expose ourselves to one equally troublesome at the other. A question may fairly be asked, "Should we be acting with good faith to those who have been to some extent faithful and vigilant allies to us in the late rebellion in not settling the land question here and obliging them to seek lands at a distance?" thus alienating them from us and increasing our difficulties elsewhere by that alienation.

I now return to their cultivations in Port Nicholson, supposing no emigration to Taranaki takes place, as well as the quantity of land available for cultivation in the Native reserves according to Mr. Fitzgerald's report, and the population of each pa in the district, as near as it can be obtained. The roads now being completed towards Porirua and the Upper Hutt may remove some part of these difficulties, more particularly as an outlay of money of no great amount expended in purchasing the claims of English settlers on Native reserves (about £175) would place at disposal a block of land of 300 acres, in three contiguous sections, nearly the whole of which is available for Native cultivation. These sections, Nos. 7, 8, and 9, are Native reserves, and the road to Porirua passes through the block, dividing it into two equal portions.

Population of the Harbour of Port Nicholson.

Cultivations at Port Nicholson, and Quantity available on Native Reserves, for the above population.

Cultivations at Port Nicholson, exclusive of the above.

One of the greatest difficulties arises from the imperfect mode of Native cultivation: not understanding a succession of crops, they wear out their land in three or four years, and sometimes less, and are then obliged to seek for and clear land elsewhere: hence many of their cultivations are now worn out and unfit for their uses, but they are unwilling to relinquish them without having others; and I should fear the same results for a few years, unless lands more than sufficient for their present use were procured. Land may hereafter, within a short period, increase in value in this neighbourhood, but it will gradually fall below its present price. It will be found that, under the protective influence of peace, the extension of civilization and agricultural knowledge, the gradual development of their own power, and the resources of the land, the Natives will be enabled in most, nay, they are already able in some cases, to undersell the European agriculturist. The Maoris will prefer working, as an union, for their own tribe, for lower wages, and in adaptation of their notions, rather than for the English farmer, whose hire of English labour being exorbitantly high, he will be unable as an agriculturist to compete with his Native neighbour. The cultivators are mostly on settlers' sections, and in the immediate neighbourhood of Port. Nicholson, in patches scattered throughout. One block or patch consists of portions on two sections (Nos. 28 and 29) in the Karori District, one in the Ohiro (No. 10), one in the Upper Kaiwharawhara (No. 1), and a small portion of the Town Belt, comprising in all 101 acres. In the Karori District, where there is no Native reserve, there are also thirty-one acres on settlers' sections; and in the adjoining district, Ohiro, there are four reserves, containing thirty acres of available land, and 158 acres on settlers' lands, of which 109 acres are in one block. There is another block of 100 acres, with slight intervals cultivated by the Pipitea, Ngauranga, and Waiwhetu Natives, also on settlers' sections in the Harbour District.

The Natives almost invariably choose land on hilly situations having an eastern aspect: thus in many cases sections would not be available to them under their present system of cultivation, and therefore, where a western aspect predominates, more than half the section would be valueless. It must be borne in mind that all the present cultivations are composed of good land, suitable, from aspect, &c., for their wants, and chosen on that account.

The reserves, consisting of 3,800 acres; and a block of 500 acres, have an average proportion of 1,530 acres of cultivable land, according to the Government Surveyor's report. It has been said that the surveyor appointed by the Company reported that about 1,800 might be so included. Assuming the higher number, this quantity is insufficient for the wants of those in the immediate neighbourhood of Wellington (exclusive of Tiakiwai), amounting to 633 inhabitants, added to those scattered in smaller settlements on the shore, at Ohiro, Waiariki, Oteranga, Ohariu, &c.; many of these reserves are at too great a distance.

Supposing that even half of each section on an average were good land, but that it is hilly, having equal portions of aspect west and east, it follows that one-fourth only will be considered valuable by the Native until he learns a better mode of cultivation, to be acquired in time. In many cases a section of a hundred acres of good land will only yield the Native fifty available for his cultivation. Generally speaking, at the very least, to compensate for the 580 acres now under cultivation by the Natives on settlers' sections, twelve sections of a hundred acres would be required in exchange. The Natives occupying the eastern would not prevent the European from tilling the western faces of the hills. But a difficulty again arises in the separation of the section, as to the irregular outline of the boundary, and which is at present so strongly illustrated. Take the cultivations in the Karori and Ohiro districts, and they will be found, nearly without exception, with an eastern aspect; also at Kaiwhara; the same again towards Pitone, where they occupy the flat land on the tops of the hills; the absence of cultivations on the Lowry Bay side of the bay, extending to the hills on the left bank of the River Hutt, and which have a westerly aspect.

There is another difficulty: to obtain blocks of land in suitable situations within a reasonable distance of the town. The Natives naturally complain that, if they give up their cultivations in the immediate vicinity of the town for others situated at a greater distance, the expense of time and labour to reach the port with their produce will be greater. At a cursory glance at the map it will be seen that the land within a reasonable distance of the town is altogether in the hands of Europeans, rendering it nearly impossible to put the Natives in possession of land without a purchase from the white people near the town or public roads, or on the very few Native reserves which may be equally well situated.

Most sections allotted to Europeans contain from 110 to 120 acres each, even in some cases 130, though the land order is only for 100, and is thus accounted for in the Crown grant to the Company; and in few cases do the Native cultivations exceed on any one section twenty acres: the general average may be five. The difficulty might to a certain extent be got rid of by confining the settler to his 100-acre section and giving the Natives the excess above it; but such an award would hardly be equitable to the European cultivator, to take advantage of the liberality of the New Zealand Company. As the clearings of the Natives, from their irregular form, would render the farm of less value to the English farmer, he would have more difficulty in tillage and an increased expense in fencing the boundary. Yet the absentee, provided he could obtain his 100 acres in one block, could not complain of being confined to his just claim of purchase, particularly when not removed from the locality of his choice.

Absenteeism is a perplexity. In many cases there is no ostensible agent. The absent owner may repudiate the sale if the agent is not properly accredited with full powers of attorney to sell. In general the only power granted is to lease, in many cases for a peppercorn rent, at a definite period a small pecuniary rent, which is gradually increased. If land becomes of increased value, from local causes or arrangements by the Home Government, those whose agents have sold may repudiate the sale unless an additional sum is paid. And during the lapse of time and different references the land may be cleared for the settler, he may be willing to pay an equitable sum for the portion cleared, but the Native will be driven to seek land elsewhere, and increasing that feeling of distrust which at the present moment is on the decrease generally.

In some cases property is held in common between individuals of different pas at distances from each other. For instance, the Natives at Pipitea have cultivations on the Hutt, near the bridge, in partnership with some of the Waiwhetu Natives, and also near Te Aro, with some of that portion of the tribe at Te Aro.

Some portions of the Town Belt, in patches amounting in all to about sixty-two acres, are under cultivation by Natives of the Pipitea, Kumutoto, and Te Aro Pas, in which they have been guaranteed by Captain Fitzroy's arrangement; and, with the great difficulty to obtain land in good situations, I would respectfully suggest that more of the Town Belt should be so relinquished to them, to an amount not exceeding (exclusive of that before guaranteed) 150 acres, furnishing them with plans to check future encroachments. They will also receive copies of plans of their town reserves whereon they have cultivations, and which might also be guaranteed to them as cultivations, in conjunction with these portions of the Town Belt; the originals of these plans, certified to by an officer of the Survey Department, with the signatures of the accepting parties and Government officers or others as witnesses, to be retained in the Survey Office; and I propose the same attention to plans, and duplicates of the same, with respect to the country cultivations of the Port Nicholson Natives, and to recommend the same in all future purchases from the Natives.

In recommending a portion of the Town Belt (in the whole said to contain 800 acres, but which, on measurement, I believe will contain upwards of 1,000 acres) to be given to the Natives in exchange for other lands required for the settlers, which have been purchased by them from the New Zealand Company, I merely recommend an extension of the occupancy which they hold under Captain Fitzroy's arrangement of the 29th January, 1844, and in the belief that the Town Belt is to be considered as waste land and belonging to the Crown. In this I have been guided by the grant to the New Zealand Company of the Port Nicholson district and the description thereto, in which no allusion is made to the Town Belt or unsurveyed lands within the limits of that grant. The area is 209,372 acres within the boundaries, part of which only, namely, 71,900 acres, are surveyed by and granted to the Company, accepted by that body, and acknowledged hitherto as part of 1,300,000 acres granted by Lord Stanley in liquidation of expenditure, &c.

An objection is raised by the principal agent of the company, not to the quantity granted within the boundaries of the Port Nicholson District, but as to its distribution in favour of certain bodies of Natives on settlers' sections and the Town Belt; the 71,900 acres are defined, viz., 70,800 acres of country sections of 100 acres each, and 1,100 town sections of one acre each, and in which the Town Belt is not included. I conceive the balance, viz., 137,472, includes the Town Belt and other unsurveyed lands as waste and pertaining to the Crown; more particularly as Lord Stanley, in a letter dated November, 1842 (vide Report of the Committee, 1844), declined to submit for confirmation the Ordinance to provide for the Establishment and Regulation of Municipal Corporations, objecting to certain clauses—amongst others, to the 7th, which excepts all " Crown reserves, Native reserves, and allotments sold or intended to be sold to private persons, and marked accordingly," from the land to be vested in the Municipal Corporation, which extends to a diameter of fourteen or radius of seven miles, and therefore might include an area of 154 square miles nearly.

The vested interest of a Municipal Corporation in all portions of the above 137,472 acres, included within a radius of seven miles of the Town of Wellington, would include the Town Belt; and this, I conceive, is not intended by Her Majesty's Government. I therefore recommend the appliance of part of the Town Belt, as waste land, to a purpose that may remove a part of the difficulties attendant on the settlement of Port Nicholson, now for so many years a desideratum.

Many of the settlers' sections that have been cultivated by the Natives have been cleared to a valuable extent. I would suggest that an average value per acre should be paid by the settler or Company on being put in possession by Government of these portions.

I have, &c.,

W. A. MCCLEVERTY, Lieut.-Colonel.

No. 19.FINAL REPORT on the PORT NICHOLSON DISTRICT.

Wellington, 20th November, 1847.

SIR,—

I have the honour to transmit to your Excellency four forms, completed. The two first—A and B—are in compliance with your wishes, expressed to the following effect, in your letter dated the 21st October, 1847: "But the object he [the principal agent of the New Zealand Company] has in view would, I apprehend, be better attained by stating what are the portions of the area comprised within the whole block claimed by the Company which cannot be granted, but must remain excepted or reserved either for the Natives, or for public services, or because some dispute is involved as to the right European ownership of them..... It will be necessary that an accurate list of all lands which, for any of the reasons I have stated, cannot be included in the grant should be drawn up and recorded." The last two forms—C and D—serve to elucidate the cause of lands in unsurveyed districts, and on the Town Belt, being extended in quantity to the Natives beyond what they originally possessed.

Form A exhibits the lands excepted and reserved to the Town of Wellington and Town Belt, arranged in columns under the heads and purposes to which the lands are to be applied and reserved. Form B exhibits the lands excepted and reserved within the block of the Port Nicholson District exclusive of those enumerated in Form A, but similarly arranged; the boundaries of those on unsurveyed lands are stated on the reverse side of it.

Form C shows the total quantity, where and how situated, of lands under cultivation belonging to the Natives of Port Nicholson previous to the arrangement under which the various portions as shown in Form D are disposed of. Form D shows the quantity of land on settlers' sections in fifty-four distinct patches. These are relinquished with the exception of 109½ acres on sections 7, 8, and 9, Harbour District, as shown by the note. By the deeds in the Government Survey Office, the Natives relinquish all cultivations on settlers' sections, with the above 109½ acres, as shown in Form B, column 5. Certain pas are reserved. I would remark that the 576 acres cultivated by the Natives of the Harbour of Port Nicholson and of Ohariu, on settlers' sections alone, are scattered over fifty-four separate cultivations, of most irregular form and various sizes, as shown in Form D.

The Natives of Ngauranga positively refused to give up on any account the cultivations and gardens around the Port, amounting to 109½ acres, on sections 7, 8, and 9.....

The four large blocks at Orongorongo, Parangarau, Te Korokoro, and Ohariu, are all on unsurveyed land, and may appear large in extent, but in reality they possess little land available for cultivation, particularly those at Orongorongo and Parangarau; nearly one-half of the former is not within the area of the block of the Port Nicholson Grant, being east of the Turakirai Range. On the block at Parangarau and Wainuiomata the Pitone Natives have eel-ponds, extensive cultivations, and other vegetable productions; both this and the block at Orongorongo are used as fishing stations. The block at Te Korokoro is near the Pitone Pa, the Natives of which have one or more cultivations in the centre of it, and of irregular shape. The block at Ohariu comprises 121 acres on nineteen different scattered irregular-shaped gardens, already in use. The boundaries of that block are defined....

More than 1,300 acres of the Town Belt still remain for public purposes. The Natives originally had sixty-two acres under cultivation at the time of the arrangement in January, 1844, and with Governor Grey's sanction now increased to 219 acres, it has much assisted in the removal of other difficulties.

There are several smaller settlements on the coast between Cape Terawhiti and Ohariu, and from thence up to Te Arataua, such as Waiariki, Otuongo, Ohau, Te Kaniru, Opau, and Pipinui: with the exception of Ohariu, none of these pas, small in population, have cultivations on settlers' sections; they are wholly on unsurveyed land, and I would suggest, as the large block unsurveyed, which comprises these lands, has not been allotted to settlers as stated in the heading of Form B, that the New Zealand Company should appoint a surveyor in co-operation with one on the part of Government to survey and define the present cultivations, as well as the convenient blocks of lands, for the purpose of future cultivations in such localities as the Natives may select themselves.....

W. A. McCLEVERTY.

His Excellency Lieutenant-Governor Eyre.

His Excellency Lieutenant-Governor EYRE to Lieut. Colonel McCLEVERTY.

Crown Grant to be issued subject to Native Reserves. Government House, Wellington, 2nd December, 1847.
SIR,—

I have the honour to inform you that Colonel Wakefield has signified his intention to me of accepting, on behalf of the New Zealand Company, a Crown grant for that portion of the Port Nicholson claim which is comprised within the limits of the surveyed lands, subject to the exceptions and reservations marked in Schedules A and B of the returns forwarded as enclosures to your report. There is one alteration, however, to which on behalf of the Crown I have consented, viz., the withdrawal of No. 2 from the exceptions enumerated in Schedule A. This being an acre in the town upon which the Company have buildings, and have expended a considerable sum, Colonel Wakefield is anxious to retain it on their behalf. There is also a settlers' section at Ngauranga, out of which a Native cultivation of about 23½ acres is included among the reservations specified in the schedules: this Colonel Wakefield thinks he can arrange the purchase of with the Native owners, and I have consented to his doing so, under your sanction. It must, however, be returned among the exceptions until the adjustment is completed.

Having received from Colonel Wakefield duly-certified copies of the maps constructed from the Company's surveys, I should feel obliged by your directing a careful examination and comparison to be instituted between them and the maps used in completing the schedules. If corresponding, I shall feel obliged by your affording the Crown Solicitor the necessary information to enable him to prepare the Crown grant, and I will refer him to you for the purpose.

I cannot close this despatch without congratulating you upon the successful issue to which by your exertions you have brought this most difficult question, and thanking you for the zealous, able, and persevering manner in which the important duty confided to you has been discharged—a feeling which I am happy to say is fully participated in by the New Zealand Company's principal agent, who, in the latter part of a letter accepting the grant as offered to him, says: "I cannot conclude this communication without the expression of my full approbation of the manner in which Colonel McCleverty has overcome in this instance the difficulties of the mission with which he is intrusted."

E. J. EYRE.

Lieut.-Colonel McCleverty.

Memorandum by Commissioner McCleverty.

THE Crown grants for Port Nicholson and Porirua give absolutely 209,000 and 68,000 acres to the New Zealand Company. Boundaries on the land side are undefined, except as an irregularly-dotted line. The plans and correspondence show that the whole areas of the blocks were not intended to be vested in the Company, the Native title not being extinguished to certain portions of the blocks. The original Crown grants, with the plans attached, are in the possession of Mr. Kelham.

W. A. MCCLEVERTY.
29th December, 1855.

No. 21. The Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY to the NATIVE RESERVE COMMISSIONERS.

Condition upon which Native Reserves can be let or sold. Colonial Secretary's Office, Wellington, 6th October, 1848

GENTLEMEN,—

Frequent applications having been made by Natives to let or sell lands which have been set apart for them, and are in their possession, on the ground that some of these are not required for their own use, and that others are not suitable, whilst by parting with them they may obtain the means of buying lands better adapted to their wants, I am instructed by His Excellency the Lieutenant-Governor to inform you that the Government are willing to accede to their wishes and allow of their either letting or selling lands which are in their possession, subject to the following conditions: First, that the Government is satisfied that the land proposed to be parted with is not necessary for themselves; secondly, that the arrangements or terms to be made are such as meet the approval of Government; thirdly, that all money received for lands sold shall be paid to the Government and reinvested in such lands elsewhere as the Natives may desire to have, instead of those sold; fourthly, that leases be made for short periods only, and due security given for punctual payments of the rents, which maybe received by the Natives themselves.

The Government being anxious to facilitate exchanges of land or other arrangements with regard to land, likely to be really advantageous to the Natives, His Excellency will feel obliged by your undertaking the general superintendence and direction of any such transactions upon the principles laid down in the foregoing conditions.

The Lieutenant-Governor would suggest that, where Natives wish to sell or let their lands, they should communicate with the Native Secretary, whose duty it would be to ascertain what lands they wish to part with, upon what terms, and the names of the parties desirous of taking them; also the locality, quantity, and cost of the lands (if any) they wish to purchase elsewhere. These particulars should then be laid before the Board in writing, and they can then advise whether the application should be sanctioned, and, if so, whether the terms of the proposed arrangement are considered equitable and just. This having been decided, it would probably be better to give public notice in the Gazette, especially in cases of sale, that the lands were open for disposal; and it might even be more desirable to permit them to be sold by public auction, taking the offer already made, if approved by the Board, as the minimum or upset price. His Excellency, however, desires to add that perhaps the Board would be good enough to consider the whole question and make such suggestions as they think would form useful regulations.

I have, &c.,

ALFRED DOMETT, Colonial Secretary.

The Board of Management for Native Reserves,
Wellington.

Waipa.—Site for Native School required at Otawhao. 27th July, 1849.
FRIEND TE WHEROWHERO,—

Salutations I have seen Mr. Morgan; he has expressed a wish to me that you should give up to him a piece of land at the back of the Mission-station at Otawhao, as a site and a residence for the new school for the education of the Maori youth.

Boundaries.

These are the boundaries of the place: The tapued piece of land lying to the southward of Mr. Morgan's house, bounded on the North by, the land already in his possession; going down from thence to the bridge over the Mangakoi, where the river then becomes the boundary; running alone the bank in a southerly direction until it reaches the swamp, when it turns and goes along the edge of the swamp, passing outside the old houses of your children, Warena and Kopua, and extending a little further, when the boundary turns to the westward, leaving inside of it the deserted houses of Te Katea, where it again joins Mr. Morgan's land. That is the extent of it.

Now, my friend, with you rests the consent for the alienation of these places. It is not as if it were a farm for the Europeans that you are asked to give, but it is a site for a school for teaching your children, that they may grow up as educated people. Therefore I say to you, Let your answer to this request be liberal. The decision rests with you. You are the man who holds the authority over that place. You told me that that tribe was yours.

From me, from your friend,

G. GREY, Governor-in-Chief.

Respecting the Land granted for a School at Otawhao. Surveyor-General's Office, 13th May, 1850.
SIR,—

In the course of my visit to the interior, I was led to understand that it was His Excellency's intention to confirm a grant of land which the Natives might feel disposed to make for the endowment of schools, or for general mission purposes at Otawhao, the Church Mission-station under the charge of the Rev. Mr. Morgan.

Survey made.

To further such an intention, if such should exist, I made a survey of a certain block of land marked out by the Natives, and of which the enclosed tracing is a copy, and have since received a deed of grant, also enclosed, from Mr. Morgan, in which the Natives transfer all their claims over the entire block, as coloured red, to the Government, containing, exclusive of reserves for roads, 153 acres 2 roods 38 perches, with the object of having the same reconvened to the Missionary Society.

His Excellency will perceive that the 153 acres 2 roods 38 perches includes all the Mission buildings and the land attached which has been fenced in, the same being distinguished by a yellow line: Occupied by Mission buildings and fenced in, coloured yellow, 30 acres 1 rood 20 perches; added thereto, 123 acres 2 roods 18 perches: total, 153 acres 3 roods 38 perches.

The deed sets forth that the consideration is partly for cattle and money (paid on a former occasion by the Church Mission Society) and partly as a free gift, and, although not distinguished in that document, yet I understand the said payments to relate to the 30 acres 1 rood 20 perches.

In addition to the 153 acres 2 roods 38 perches there are two small portions which the Rev. Mr. Morgan is very desirous of obtaining, in order to improve the shape of the block, and to render it more complete and entire. The first is the site of an old pa called Awamutu, situated on the west side of the station on the banks of the River Mangaohoi, containing 2 acres 2 roods, and another on the outside of the west boundary-line from D to E, containing five acres. The owners of these portions would not consent to give them up unless £2 10s. was paid for the first, and £3 for the second, which sums Mr. Morgan was precluded by law from giving, and he is anxious that some arrangement for their acquisition may be made by the Government.

I have, &c.,

C. W. W. LIGAR, Surveyor-General.

The Hon. the Colonial Secretary.

Governor's Minute.

Dr. Sinclair.

THE original piece purchased by the Mission can be granted to the Church Mission. The remaining portion must be granted to the Bishop in the usual manner in trust for schools. The sums demanded by the Natives for the additional portions of land may be paid by the Government, and an additional grant then given for these pieces. I am much obliged to the Surveyor-General for the trouble he has taken to facilitate the objects in view.

G. GREY.
16th May.

No. 24. T. H. Smith, Esq., to His Excellency Sir George Grey, Governor-in-Chief.

Rotoiti.—Site offered by Natives for a Hospital. Rotorua, 15th July, 1850.

SIR,—

I have the honour to inform your Excellency that, at the request of the chiefs of the Ngatipikiao Tribe, I was present at a meeting held by them at Wharetata, on the Rotoiti Lake, on the 10th instant, for the purpose of determining the boundaries of a block of land they wish to offer to the Government as a site and endowment for a hospital to be established in the vicinity of the Rotoiti Hot Springs.

The unfavourable state of the weather prevented my being present until the conclusion of the meeting, when many of the parties interested had left; but I have every reason to believe that they were unanimous in deciding upon the boundaries described in their letter to your Excellency, and very desirous to give up the land if it should prove a means of bringing Europeans to reside amongst them. As soon as the weather permitted, those who remained, a party of fifty or sixty, carried and accompanied me round the boundaries, by which means I am enabled to form a rough estimate of the extent of the block, which must contain upwards of four hundred acres at the lowest computation, and more than one half of this is available for agricultural purposes.

The proprietors of the land were anxious to be informed, first, whether they would be required immediately to cease occupying and cultivating certain portions contained within the boundaries of the land proposed to be given up; and, secondly, whether they would be allowed permanently to retain the use of the "ngawha" (natural ovens formed by the steam issuing out of the ground in the neighbourhood of the hot springs), more particularly at Ruahine, these being invaluable to them in the process of preparing the "tawa" berry. My answer to the first question was that I thought they might continue to occupy and cultivate until they received intimation to the contrary from those in whom the land was vested, but that the right of occupation, &c., was now transferred. With respect to the use of the ngawhas, I could not answer the question as to whether or not a permanent reservation might be made, but gave my opinion that no restriction would be laid upon their use as long as they were required for the purpose before mentioned.

The sketch which accompanies the letter to your Excellency, signed by the Ngatipikiao chiefs, showing the boundaries of the block of land proposed to be given up, must not be relied upon for any great degree of accuracy, as it was drawn without the aid of even a compass; the bearings and distances were guessed, the former from the position of the sun, and the latter from personal knowledge and such information as could be obtained by me.

I have, &c.,

THOS. H. SMITH.

To His Excellency Sir George Grey, Governor-in-Chief,
Auckland.

No. 25. The SURVEYOR-GENERAL to the Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Respecting the Grant of Land for the School at Otawhao. Surveyor-General's Office, 14th October, 1850.
SIR,—

Referring to your letter dated the 16th May, 1850, requesting that the portion of land given at Otawhao by the Natives for a school should be granted in trust to his Lordship the Bishop, I would beg leave to suggest, for the consideration of His Excellency the Governor-in-Chief, whether, under all the circumstances of the case, and taking into consideration the fact of the land being connected with that already acquired by the Church Missionary Society, it would not as fully meet the objects contemplated by the proposed grant if all the lands were thrown into one block and granted to the Society in the usual manner, thereby preventing any confusion of boundaries or interests, and enabling the whole to be enclosed and cultivated at a less expense to the institutions now in progress, and which the land is designed to support.

I have, &c.,

C. W. W. LIGAR, Surveyor-General.

The Hon. the Colonial Secretary.

Mr. Sinclair.—It can be granted to the Church Missionary Society in the manner proposed by the Surveyor-General.—

G. GREY.

24th October, 1850.

No. 26. The Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY to the NATIVE RESERVE BOARD, Wellington.

Instructions as to Native Reserve Funds. Colonial Secretary's Office, Wellington, 26th December, 1850.

GENTLEMEN,—

I am directed by His Excellency the Lieutenant-Governor to inform you of the following arrangements with reference to the receipt and disposal of the funds arising from the occupation of Native reserves in this district.

As regards the receipts, you will have the goodness to pay them over to the Colonial Treasurer as they fall into your hands, to be held as deposits unavailable, and whenever you may have occasion to draw against such receipts to meet the expenses of the trust you should submit an estimate of the amount required, specifying the services for which it may be due, upon which the Lieutenant-Governor will issue his warrant to the Treasurer to pay the gross amount to you from the funds so placed by you under his charge. Previous, however, to any expense being incurred by you on account of the trust, an application should be made for His Excellency's authority for such expenditure, which authority should be appended to the voucher. The account current of the receipts and expenses of the trust should be forwarded to the Auditor-General quarterly, duly supported by the several vouchers.

I have, &c.,

ALFRED DOMETT, Colonial Secretary.

The Board for managing the Native Reserves, Wellington.

[Extract from New Zealand Gazette.] Endowment for Native Hostelry, Auckland. Colonial Secretary's Office, Auckland, 12th May, 1851.

HIS Excellency the Lieutenant-Governor has directed it to be made known, for general information, that he has granted, with the sanction of His Excellency the Governor-in-Chief, and caused to be marked out and distinguished on the charts of the New Zealand Islands, the undermentioned land, being part of the demesne of the Crown, as reserved land for the maintenance of the Native Hostelry in Mechanics' Bay, where Her Majesty's Native subjects and other poor persons visiting Auckland may temporarily reside free of charge, with their goods and wares and there dispose of such produce as they may bring from the country for sale; and, further, that such "reserved land" aforesaid will be vested in the Colonial Secretary, Attorney-General, and Colonial Treasurer for the time being, to be held and administered by them in trust for the benefit of the said institution.

By His Excellency's command.

ANDREW SINCLAIR, Colonial Secretary.

Suburbs of Auckland.—Section 1, No. 89; contents, 6 acres 1 rood; locality, St. George's Bay.

No. 28. The Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY, Wellington, to H. TACY KEMP, Esq.

Respecting Two Pieces of Land at Pipitea. Colonial Secretary's Office, Wellington, 24th September, 1851.
SIR,—

Two applications having been made to Government respecting the lease or conveyance portions of the land on which Pipitea Pa is built, but the whole of which land is held in common by its Native owners, I am directed by His Excellency the Governor-in-Chief to request you to inform the latter that if they will divide the said land into individual properties, in such manner as may satisfy you that no future difficulties respecting the ownership of the several portions will arise, His Excellency will cause individual grants to be issued to them of their several properties, with power to lease the same, subject to the approval of the Government.

The two cases above alluded to are an intended lease of some of Parata's land to the Rev. Mr. Duncan, of this place, and the conveyance of another piece of land in the pa to Heberley's wife and children.

I have, &c.,

ALFRED DOMETT, Colonial Secretary.

The Native Secretary.

No. 29. H. T. KEMP, Esq., Native Secretary, to the Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY, Wellington.

Land at Pipitea:—Crown Grants applied for. Wellington, 14th October, 1851.
SIR,—

In reply to your letter of the 24th September last, I have the honour to report, for the information of His Excellency the Governor-in-Chief, that, in the presence of the Native proprietors and the other parties concerned, the spots of ground at Pipitea Pa were severally pointed out and marked, for which Crown grants have been requested by the chief Parata, on an intended lease to the Rev. J. Duncan, of this place, and by Heberly on behalf of his wife and children; in the arrangement of which all parties expressed themselves well satisfied.

I have, &c.,

H. T. KEMP, Native Secretary.

The Hon. the Colonial Secretary.

No. 30. The ASSISTANT NATIVE SECRETARY to the Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Manukau.—Respecting the Native Store at Onehunga. Native Secretary's Office, Auckland, 16th January, 1852.

SIR,—

An application having been made to me by a Edward Davis for permission to build a wooden store for the chief Te Waru, of Rangiawhia, on the Native reserve at Onehunga, I have the honour to request that you will be so good as to inform me whether there will be any objection on the part of the Trustees of the Native Reserves to Davis undertaking this work. The store is to be 40 feet long by 20 feet wide, and is intended for the safe custody of flour and other produce for the Auckland market, and the price to be paid for it is, I understand, twenty tons of flour.

I have, &c.,

C. L. NUGENT, Assistant Native Secretary.

The Hon. the Colonial Secretary.

No. 31. The Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY to the NATIVE SECRETARY.

Concerning Crown Grant to Wi Tako and Wi Tana for Reserve at Kumutoto. Colonial Secretary's Office, Wellington, 26th January, 1852.

Sir,—

Wiremu Tako, of Ngauranga, being desirous of obtaining a Crown grant for his land at Kumutoto, I am directed by the Governor-in-Chief to obtain from you a certificate that Tako and his younger brother, Wi Tana Poko, are the only Natives entitled to possession of the land in question. The land is registered as a reserve set apart for "the Natives of Kumutoto" It will be necessary to certify that no other Natives, having any claim to be included among those for whom the land was reserved, exist, or that, if existing, they acknowledge the title of Wi Tako and his brother.

I have, &c.,

ALFRED
DOMETT, Colonial Secretary.

The Native Secretary.

No. 32. The Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY, Wellington, to Mr. Commissioner McLEAN.

Manawatu.—In reference to a Grant of Land to the Wife and Children of Mr. Cook. Colonial Secretary's Office, Wellington, 31st January, 1852.

Sir,—

I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 28th instant, stating that Otaki, Rangihaeata, and other influential chiefs have engaged to convey, free of any consideration, 200 acres of land on the south bank of the Manawatu to the Native wife and children of Mr. Cook, a settler on that river.

In reply, I have to inform you that, having laid your letter before the Governor-in-Chief, His Excellency observes that the permitting the Natives to give land to the Native wives and half-caste children of Europeans involves a very large and, in some respects, dangerous principle. His Excellency cannot, therefore, depart from the precedent he has before laid down, of not permitting a grant of more than one hundred acres being given in such a case; and Mr. Cook can, under such circumstances, select, as the hundred acres for his wife and children, the land which was claimed by Mr. St. Hill, exercising the land order at such other place as may be approved of by the Land Commissioner.

I have, &c.,

ALFRED
DOMETT, Colonial Secretary.

Donald McLean, Esq., &c.

No. 33. The ACTING NATIVE SECRETARY to T. H. SMITH, Esq., R.M.

Bay of Plenty.—Reserve for Cemetery at Rotorua. Native Secretary's Office, 6th April, 1852.
Sir,—

I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 20th ultimo, enclosing a deed of conveyance of a piece of land situated on the north side of Rotorua Lake, which the Nga Te Rangiwhewehi Tribe are anxious to make over to the Church of England and to his Lordship the Bishop as trustee for the purpose of a cemetery; and I have to inform you that I have handed over the documents to the Colonial Secretary, to whose department they belong, and who will make the necessary arrangements relative thereto.

I have, &c.,

C. L. NUGENT, Acting Native Secretary.

T. H. Smith, Esq., Resident Magistrate, Rotorua.,

No. 34. The CIVIL SECRETARY, Wellington, to Mr. Commissioner McLEAN.

Rangitikei.—Native Reserves to be made. Colonial Secretary's Office, Wellington, 21st July, 1852.
Sir,—

I have had the honour to receive and submit to the Governor-in-Chief your letter of the 25th ultimo, reporting the final arrangements which you have made in reference to the purchase of the Rangitikei Block; and, in reply, I am desired by His Excellency to convey to you his authority for making the various reserves which you recommend should be set apart for the use of the several Natives named by you.

I have, &c.,

ALFRED DOMETT, Civil Secretary.

Donald McLean, Esq.,
Commissioner for extinguishing Native Titles.

No. 35. The NATIVE SECRETARY to the Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Native Hostelry in Mechanics' Bay. Native Secretary's Office, Auckland, 18th August, 1852.
Sir,—

I beg leave to call the attention of the trustees of the hostelry in Mechanics' Bay to the state of that building, which is the subject of constant complaints from the Natives who come to Auckland to dispose of their produce. They represent that the floor is in such a bad state that they find it impossible to keep it clean, and that vermin of all descriptions harbour in it. They also complain that they are unable to make use of the building at times when it would be most beneficial to them, viz., in cold or rainy weather, from their being forbidden to light fires inside; and in preference to stopping in it they sleep in tents on the beach. They are also very anxious that partitions should be put up (which I believe was part of the original plan when the building was erected), in order that tribes might be kept separate.

I beg leave to suggest that the building be floored with plank, and partitions put up; that fireplaces be built, and a cooking-place built in rear of the building, as at present the ground in front of it is in a filthy state from its being used as a cooking-place after the Native custom. I understand that the reserve for the support of the hostelry has been leased for the sum of £10 per annum. This sum will not go far towards making the necessary improvements suggested, but might go towards paying off any sum which may be advanced by the Government for the purpose.

I have, &c.,

C. L. NUGENT, Native Secretary.

The Hon. the Colonial Secretary.

Copy of the Grant conveying certain Portions of the Town Belt of the City of Wellington to the Wesleyan Body.

Victoria, by the Grace of God of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland Queen, Defender of the Faith, and so forth:

To all to whom these presents shall come, greeting:

WHEREAS a school is about to be established at Wellington, in the Province of New Munster, New Zealand, under the superintendence the Rev. James Watkin, Superintendent of Wesleyan Missions for that province of New Zealand in which the Town of Wellington is situated, for the education of our subjects of all races, and of children of other poor and destitute persons being inhabitants of islands in the Pacific Ocean: And whereas it would promote the objects of the said institution to set apart a certain piece or parcel of land in the neighbourhood thereof for the use and towards the maintenance and support of the same:

Now know ye that we, for us, our heirs and successors, do hereby grant unto the said James Watkin, Superintendent of Wesleyan Missions as aforesaid, all that piece or parcel of land situate and being in the Town of Wellington, in the Province of New Munster, New Zealand, and bounded towards the North-west, South-west, and South in an irregular line by the Karori Road, two hundred and forty (240) links and two hundred and sixty-six (266) links; by the Botanical Gardens, three hundred and thirty-nine (339) links, and two thousand eight hundred and sixty-five (2865) links; and by No. 28, Karori District, one thousand nine hundred and three (1903) links, one thousand one hundred and fifteen (1115) links, and two hundred and eighty-five (285) links; towards the East, South-east, North-east, and North by a branch of the Kumutoto Stream and an irregular line forming the boundary of the Town Belt six hundred (600) links, five hundred and thirty-nine (539) links; three hundred and thirty-five (335) links, three hundred and thirty-five (335) links, and one hundred and seventy-four (174) links; and by the Wesley Road one thousand and eighty-eight (1088) links and one thousand one hundred and thirteen (1113) links: the contents being seventy-three (73) acres one (1) rood and twenty-two (22) perches, or thereabouts, and the boundaries being more particularly delineated on the plan drawn in the margin of these presents, together with the rents, issues, and proceeds thereof: To hold unto the said James Watkin, Superintendent of Wesleyan Missions for that province of New Zealand in which the Town of Wellington is situated, and his successors in such office; in trust, nevertheless, and for the use and towards the maintenance of the said school, so long as religious education, industrial training, and instruction in the English language shall be given to the youth educated therein or maintained thereat.

In testimony whereof we have caused this our grant to be sealed with the seal of our Province of New Munster, in our said territory.

Witness our trusty and well-beloved Sir George Grey, a Knight Commander of the Most Honourable Order of the Bath, Governor-in-Chief and Commander-in-Chief of our said Territory and its Dependencies, and Governor of our Province of New Munster, at Wellington, in New Zealand aforesaid, this twenty-seventh day of October, in the sixteenth year of our reign, and in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and fifty-two.

G. GREY. No. 46.—Entered on record this 27th day of October, 1852, in Register
1, Folio 49.

ALFRED DOMETT, Colonial Secretary and Registrar.

The land described in this grant has, by deed dated 10th September, 1857, been conveyed by the above-named Trustee to new trustees under the provisions of "The Religious, Educational, and Charitable Trusts Act, 1856."

Manukau.—In re Contract for building the Onehunga Store. Native Secretary's Office, Auckland, 18th December, 1852.

Reverend Sir,—

In reply to your letter of the 25th ultimo, I have to inform you that the contract for building the store at Onehunga was entered into by Te Waru and Mr. Davis without any reference to me. Mr. E. Davis informed me, some months back, that he had entered into an agreement to build a store at Onehunga for twenty tons of flour, which at the price in the Auckland market at that time (£10 to £12 per ton) seemed reasonable enough; and I referred an application, which he made on the 16th January last, for permission to erect the store on the Native reserve at Onehunga, to the trustees of the Native reserve, who approved of a small space being laid out for the purpose. Since then the state of affairs has materially altered. Gold has been discovered in vast quantities at Port Phillip; and the price of flour has risen in that market to £40 per ton; and gold has recently been discovered near Auckland, and the price of flour may be expected to rule double, perhaps treble the price it did when Te Waru made the agreement. I foresee, therefore, that there will be no end of difficulty and discontent in the whole matter. I do not believe the store has progressed further than having the foundation laid and the timber prepared.

I should apprehend, if the store is erected at the sole expense of the Raugiawhia Natives, that they will have the sole right of occupying and using it, of course without their having any claim to permanent possession of the land it is built on; and I do not see how Government could take any share in the concern by erecting a loft over the store—a proceeding which I think might tend to cause disputes at a future time. The trustees of the reserve, however, are the persons who have the sole control over the disposal of the ground, and there is ample room to build a hostelry for general purposes, irrespective of the portion set aside for Te Waru's store.

The sum of £50 has been authorized by the Lieutenant-Governor to be lent to Ngatitipa and the other Natives, and is now ready to be paid over to them. The Natives left Auckland before due authority was obtained for the payment. The sum of £35 was lent to Whakapo some time back, which he promised to repay at an early date; it is however due a long time, and there are no signs of its repayment, although I understand he has a large quantity of wheat on hand. If you chance to see him I should feel much obliged if you would request him to repay the amount at an early date, as his conduct prevents deserving Natives from receiving favourable consideration.

School Books furnished.

I send herewith twenty-five copies of a school book published in Wellington for the instruction of children in the English language.

I have, &c.,

C. L.NUGENT, Native Secretary.

The Rev. John Morgan, Otawhao.

No. 38. The CIVIL SECRETARY to the NATIVE SECRETARY, Wellington.

Lease of Land at Ngauranga sanctioned. Civil Secretary's Office, Wellington, 11th April, 1853.
Sir,—

With reference to your memorandum on a letter from W. E. Wallace, requesting the permission of the Government to lease a portion of the Native reserve at Ngauranga for twenty-one years at a rental of £30 per annum, I have the honour to acquaint you that the application has been sanctioned, and to request that you will assist Mr. Wallace in concluding the arrangement with the Natives interested.

I have, &c.,

ALFRED DOMETT, Civil Secretary.

The Native Secretary, Wellington.

No. 39. Mr. Surveyor FITZGERALD to Mr. Commissioner McLEAN.

Poverty Bay.—Respecting Reserve at Turanganui River, &c. Turanganui, 12th October, 1853.
Sir,—

With reference to the verbal instructions received from you on the 14th September, I do myself the honour to acquaint you, for the information of His Excellency the Governor, that the fieldwork of the Turanganui River Reserve, extending about four miles and a half, has been completed, out of which I have marked ten acres for A. Bowen, the blacksmith. A plan of this reserve will be sent to you, as well as a copy for Captain Smith, on my return to Wellington. I send a hand-sketch of the reserves at Hume's to that gentleman, which has been marked out by me.

From the delay which a surveyor receives from the Natives, and the want of confidence which they sometimes show with reference to survey lines and blocks which do not form boundaries, I deemed it necessary to have a brand made of the letters NR, and to cause blocks with this brand on them to be placed (facing the letters towards the reserves) wherever the boundary was not well defined by natural features. This seems to have given satisfaction. The Natives are thus enabled to understand that these blocks are the only ones which denote their boundaries, and regard the others for the purpose of surveying alone. It has occurred to me that, when the Government cannot spare an officer to survey reserves at the time of purchase, an equal good might be done in giving satisfaction to the Natives by having them simply marked out in this manner.

The Native chief Tamehana Hiko, who accompanied me by your directions, gave me great assistance, and readily and cheerfully joined with my desire to have boundaries made straight where practicable, instead of the crooked shapes they frequently assume. I have, however, in all cases of this sort taken care to add to, if anything, rather than take from their reserves.

I have, &c.,

W. FITZGERALD, Surveyor in Charge.

D. McLean, Esq., Land Commissioner.

No. 40. The NATIVE RESERVE COMMISSIONERS to the Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY, Auckland.

Respecting the Board of Management. Wellington, New Zealand, 22nd April, 1854.
Sir,—

We have the honour to address you on the subject of the Board of Management of Native Reserves in the province, in order that the same may be laid before His Excellency.

In June, 1848, the Board was gazetted by order of His Excellency Lieutenant-Governor Eyre, consisting of Lieut.-Colonel McCleverty, the Attorney-General, and H. St. Hill, Esq.; but in the years 1852 and 1853 Sir George Grey vested the more valuable of these reserved lands by separate deeds in trustees for the benefit of the Native Hospital and a grammar school in Wellington: these are therefore not now under our control.

The hospital endowment trust executed by Sir George Grey is now of no avail, the trustees being appointed ex officio, as holding offices under the General Government—offices which, with the exception of the Resident Magistrate at Wellington, have ceased to exist under the new Constitution: it will therefore be necessary that new ones should be appointed. We have every reason to believe that the power of nomination had been delegated to the Superintendent by His Excellency Sir George Grey previous to his leaving the province. The rents now collected for the remaining reserves by the Board are of small amount. Under these circumstances we beg to suggest that, as those derivable for the hospital endowment are not at present sufficient to cover the expenses of the Native patients, the former rents should also be so appropriated, and that any new trustees appointed for the latter should also be empowered to act as a board of management for the unappropriated reserves, thus relieving the General Government of some expense.

We have, &c.,

The Hon. the Colonial Secretary, Auckland.

On Present State, &c., of Native Reserves. Land Commissioner's Office, Auckland, 29th July, 1854.
Sir,—

I have the honour to report to you, for the information of His Excellency the Officer Administering the Government, that I have been requested by the Hon. J. E. FitzGerald to furnish a report on the present state of the Native reserves in New Zealand, the tenure under which they are held, and the best mode of administering them.

The Native reserves in New Zealand consist, in the settlements of Auckland, Canterbury, and Otago, of blocks of land excepted by the Natives, for their own use and subsistence, within the tracts of land they have ceded to the Crown for colonization, and in general there has been a distinct understanding that they should not at any time be called upon to alienate any lands so reserved, it being considered essential for their own maintenance and welfare to retain them. Those lands are in general cultivated and occupied by the Natives, and in most instances the reserves are sufficiently extensive to provide for their present and future wants.

New Zealand Company's Reserves.

At Nelson, Wellington, and Taranaki the New Zealand Company set apart as a portion of their colonization scheme one-tenth of the lands purchased by that body, for the benefit of the Natives, and trustees have been appointed as guardians for the management of such of those reserves as were not in occupation by the Natives.

Nelson.

In the Town of Nelson there are fifty-three reserves of one acre each, and one hundred of fifty-acre sections in the suburban and rural districts. Of this extent, 37½ acres in the Town of Nelson are let to Europeans for terms varying from seven to ten and fourteen to twenty-one years. Of the rural and suburban land, 654 acres are let in the Town of Nelson. Three acres and a half are occupied by Natives, and in the Motueka and Moutere Districts 634 acres. Niue hundred and twenty-four acres are granted to the Bishop of New Zealand in trust for an industrial school, leaving unoccupied 2,787 acres of country and 12 acres of town land.

The annual rental from those reserves amounts at present to £274 3s., and the management of them devolves on the Hon. Major Richmond, the Crown Commissiomer of Nelson, who has kindly favoured me with the returns from which the information is taken, and of which I beg to enclose copies.

Future Management.

As regards the future management of those reserves, I believe that the most simple and practicable arrangement would be to place them under the control of a local board, to consist of his Honour the Superintendent, the Crown Commissioner, and the Resident Magistrate, and, as honorary members, such clergymen as are engaged in missionary duties connected with the Natives, together with one or two intelligent Native chiefs in the district, who would by this means, although possessing no executive authority in the matter, be nevertheless undergoing a training for managing their own affairs, while their knowledge of all the proceedings of the Board would divest the Natives generally of any suspicion that justice was not done to them in reference to the mode in which the proceeds of their property were appropriated.

The Board should have power to let and receive all rents for the reserves for terms varying from seven to fourteen and twenty-one years, on improving leases; and the proceeds should be applied for the social, industrial, religious, and educational advancement of the Natives. For instance, improvements in their dwellings are much required; for providing them with useful implements of agriculture, such as ploughs, carts, &c., and occasionally perhaps draught-horses or oxen, to enable them to cultivate their land to greater advantage and bring their produce to market.

The Board should report its proceedings to His Excellency the Governor of the Colony at least twice in every year, with statements appended, exhibiting the amount of rents received and the manner in which the sum was expended for the benefit of the Natives. But I conceive that the Board should not have the power of finally alienating any of the reserves without the express sanction of His Excellency the Governor, as it is of importance, for the benefit of the Native race, that certain lands should be permanently retained for them, and it would be even advantageous if, after benevolent provision for carrying out the above objects were made, any surplus funds might be applied for purchasing portions of land for industrious and deserving Natives who would make good use of it.

With reference to religious and educational requirements, provision is already made by the late New Zealand Constitution Act, so that it is unnecessary that funds should be set apart for this purpose, at least until some advance has been made in promoting the secular condition of the Natives.

Taranaki.

At Taranaki the Native reserves on the Company's plan were done away with, as the Natives almost entirely disputed the sale of that district, and in each purchase made from them since Captain Pitzroy's arrangements in 1844 ample reserves have been excepted, by them for their own use, and those are generally occupied by them.

Wellington.

At Wellington there were originally 110 country sections of 100 acres each, and 110 town sections of one acre each. These reserves were in the first instance placed in trust by the Company, the Bishop of New Zealand and the Chief Justice having been at that time acting as trustees; but it was found advisable by Sir George Grey, from the insufficiency, of land in the occupation of the Natives, to cause some of those reserves to be placed at their disposal, by which means he was enabled to continue their loyalty and attachment, and to afford them sufficient inducement to remain at Wellington as permanent and generally industrious settlers and labourers, instead of moving in a body as they contemplated to Taranaki.

Hospital Reserves.

The Hospital at Wellington is erected on a Native reserve; and the building formerly Barrett's Hotel, but at present used as Government offices, stands with several other town allotments (granted as an endowment for the Hospital) on Native reserves.

Grammar School Reserves.

The Military Barracks at Thorndon Flat are built upon Native reserves: these with some others in the town, have been granted in trust for a grammar school at Wellington.

Wi Toko's Reserve.

The reserve at Kumutoto was conveyed to Wi Tako, who receives all the rents and profits arising therefrom.

The information in reference to the Wellington reserves has been furnished to me by Mr. St. Hill, who was agent for the trustees of the reserves. A more accurate return may be obtained at Wellington in reference to the number of reserves appropriated, the number still unoccupied, the number let, and the amount of land annually received for them.

In the several purchases made of late years by the Government, the Natives have retained generally, where practicable, large reserves for themselves, within well-defined natural boundaries, such as rivers, &c., which has greatly contributed to a good understanding between themselves and the European settlers.

If further specific information is requisite in reference to the question of reserves, with a view to the introduction of an Act in the present Assembly relating to them, I would suggest that it might be more advisable to collect further data in order to the maturing with greater care some measure that might be passed during the next session of the Assembly.

I have, &c.,

DONALD MCLEAN, Land Commissioner.

The Hon. the Colonial Secretary.

No. 41a. REPORT of a SPECIAL COMMITTEE of the PROVINCIAL COUNCIL of NEW PLYMOUTH on the Purchase of the WAIWHAKAIHO BLOCK.

THE Committee appointed to inquire into the purchase of the Waiwhakaiho Block are compelled to report that the result of their examination has convinced them that the terms on which that block has been acquired are such as to render the purchase in the highest degree unsatisfactory, and worse than useless to this province.

The Provincial Council having been referred by Mr. McLean, for information on this point, to the documents deposited by Mr. Cooper, on leaving this province, in the care of Mr. Halse, the Committee requested the attendance of the latter gentleman and the Government Surveyor.

A copy of the deed of purchase entered into by Mr. Cooper with the resident Natives was produced, by which it appears that £1,200 was paid for their claims in the Waiwhakaiho Block, exclusively of £1,000 paid to Natives in Wellington, in satisfaction of absentee claims of the Ngatiawa Tribe in this province; but the deed seems to have been accompanied by no plan or specification, and the lands to be reserved to Natives, instead of being defined, are vaguely described as those "shortly to be marked on the plan when the survey is completed," neither the number of acres nor the portion of the district in which they are to be chosen being mentioned. The only document describing them is a sketch-tracing now in the Land Office, which was not made until shortly before Mr. Cooper's departure, and was only compiled from his memoranda at the suggestion of the Surveyor. From this document it appears that the block contains about fifteen thousand acres, and from its peculiar shape (being only one mile wide on its coast boundary, and gradually increasing in width to a distance of fourteen miles inland, where it is three and a quarter miles wide) the nearest portion of the inland half is upwards of nine miles from the coast.

The reserves made for the Natives by Mr. Cooper amount to 1,784 acres, and 395 acres are, according to agreement, to be purchased by them at 10s. per acre before any portion is given out to settlers. In addition to this, by the deed signed at Wellington 500 acres are to be purchased by Wairarapa at 5s. per acre. Thus the acknowledged reserves and Native purchases amount to 2,679 acres; whilst Henare te Whare (Te Puni's son) repudiates the sale altogether, and claims as his patrimony 1,400 acres, 300 of which have already been reserved by Mr. Cooper for other Natives.

The "Committee would draw the special attention of the Council to the following facts: That, while the sum of £1,000 has been paid to Wellington Natives, as compensation for all their claims, not less than 1,500 acres have been appropriated for them in this block, and even for the benefit of Nelson Natives expected to arrive here; and the resident Natives are allowed to exercise their right of choice prior to Europeans—a policy which injurious to this province, both as lessening the supply of land for settlers, and because it holds out inducements to Natives in other parts of the colony to return here. That, respecting 500 acres (included in the above 1,500) to be purchased at the nominal price of 5s. an acre by Wairarapa, the Committee can obtain no information whatever, andj until it is chosen, no sales to Europeans can take place. That, instead of a quantity of available land being brought into the market for the benefit of present settlers and immigrants by the acquisition of the block, the land, after being purchased, has been dealt with in such a reckless manner that (including Henare te Whare's claim) the whole of it for five miles inland has again become. Native property, either as reserves or by purchase. That the necessity of surveying these reserves entails an additional expense on the Survey Department. That the Committee's inquiry results in finding,—That the purchase of the block in question has, in the first instance, been conducted in a very loose and uncertain manner; that all that portion which will for years be of any use has been lavishly disposed of again in one way or another to those from whom it was purchased; that a large sum of money has been spent in buying land without furnishing any useful supply for European settlers; and that the system of paying for blocks of land, and granting reserves the extent and position of which are to be determined at a future time, does but encourage the Natives to ask for larger reserves; thus virtually inducing them to give up their land that they may receive it back again surveyed and apportioned, with the requisite funds to cultivate it; that this kind of arrangement, instead of benefiting this province, tends only to the advantage of the Natives and that of other provinces, and will but make it more difficult to effect satisfactory purchases of land from the aboriginal owners in future.

ROBERT PARRIS, Chairman of Committee.

Respecting Purchase or Lease of Native Reserves.

Land Purchase Office, Taranaki, 19th June, 1854
Sir,—

I have the honour herewith to transmit the copy of a letter which I have received from his Honour the Superintendent of this province, enclosing the copy of a notice which he informs me is about to appear in the Provincial Gazette, declaring all purchases and leases of Native reserves to be illegal under the New Zealand Constitution Act, 15 and 16 Vict., c. 72. I also enclose a copy of my reply of this date, requesting that the publication of the notice may be deferred pending the receipt of your reply to this letter.

- 2. The clause of the Act of Parliament upon which his Honour's view is founded is the 73rd, which enacts that "it shall not be lawful for any person other than Her Majesty, her heirs or successors, to purchase or in any wise acquire or accept from the aboriginal natives land of or belonging to or used or occupied by them in common as tribes or communities, or to accept any release or extinguishment of the rights of such aboriginal natives in any such land as aforesaid, and no conveyance or transfer, or agreement for the conveyance or transfer, of any such land, either in perpetuity or for any term or period, either absolutely or conditionally, and either in property or by way of lease or occupancy, and no such release or extinguishment as aforesaid shall be of any validity or, effect unless the same be made to, or entered into with, and accepted by Her Majesty, her heirs or successors."
- 3. I cannot concur in the view which his Honour takes of the clause above quoted, as it appears intended to apply only to land the Native title to which has not been extinguished, and that Native reserves within purchased districts would not have been contemplated as coming within its meaning. His Honour, however, contends that the title of the aborigines to reserves is not extinguished, but that they are left in precisely the same situation as if they lay outside the exterior boundaries of the blocks. If that were the case, however, I cannot see how they could be secured by the Crown to particular individuals or families, to the exclusion of others who, prior to the purchase, had an equal right to them.

Reserves not purchased, but leased.

- 4. No purchases have at any time been made of any of the Native reserves by private individuals, but it has been the practice of the settlers here for some years past to occupy certain of them under leases for various terms. These leases have always been settled through the intervention of the officer for the time being in charge of this department, whose duty it has been to see that the leases were executed by the proper individuals, with the consent of all parties interested in the land, and that a fair equivalent was secured to the Natives, as rent, under the leases. Hitherto the system has worked well, and has been productive of no annoyance or inconvenience to the lessees or the Government; whilst, from the dearth of land in the province, it has been found to be of great benefit to individual settlers by enabling them to extend their agricultural operations; to the community at large by the increased productiveness of the soil in the hands of English farmers, and to the aboriginal owners of the reserves by securing to them a regular income from land which they could well spare, as care was always taken to see that the Natives had sufficient land elsewhere for their maintenance before any leases of reserves were sanctioned by the Government authorities. Many of the reserves are now and have been for several years lying totally unproductive, and a desire has recently been manifesting itself on the part of the Natives to let them to the settlers. At the present moment negotiations are pending for the leasing of some of these plots of ground, and leases have recently been executed for others, on terms of advantage to both parties.
- 5. The enclosed notice has appeared so suddenly, the Superintendent's letter of the 16th instant having been the first intimation which I received of the light in which the question is viewed by his Honour, that, if published, some degree of confusion and inconvenience must result from it, as pending negotiations must be stopped and a doubt thrown upon the title of several respectable settlers, who, upon the faith of their leases having been arranged in the Land Purchase Office, have expended considerable sums in improving the property; the Natives will become discontented, and claims will be made upon Government for compensation by the lessees.
- 6. I have, therefore, the honour to request that I may be favoured with immediate instructions how to act in this matter, as well in respect to the leases now in existence as to pending negotiations and applications which may be made to me in future to arrange the terms of similar leases.

I have, &c.

G. S.COOPER.

The Hon. the Colonial Secretary.

Enclosures.(No. 1.)His Honour the SUPERINTENDENT, Taranaki, to Mr.
Commissioner COOPER.

Superintendent's Office, New Plymouth, 16th June, 1854.
SIR,—

I have the honour to enclose, for your information, copy of a notice which will appear in the Provincial

Gazette No. 15 as soon as the printer can publish it.

I have, &c.,

CHARLES BROWN, Superintendent.

G. S. Cooper, Esq., Land Commissioner.

Sub-Enclosure.

Public Notice as to buying or leasing Native Reserves. Superintendent's Office, New Plymouth, 10th June, 1844.

Public notice is hereby given that agreements for the purchase or leasing of Native reserves, being the property of tribes or communities, are illegal and void under the New Zealand Constitution Act, 15 and 16 Victoriae, c. 72. Persons entering into agreements, or pretended agreements, for such purchases or leases, are hereby warned that they cannot be protected in possession, and render themselves liable to penalties under the Native Lands Purchase Ordinance, Session VIII., No. 19.

CHARLES BROWN, Superintendent.

(No. 2.) Mr. Commissioner COOPER to his Honour the SUPERINTENDENT, Taranaki.

New Plymouth.—In Reply. Land Purchase Office, Taranaki, 19th June, 1854.
SIR,—

I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 16th instant, enclosing a copy of a notice which will appear in the next Provincial Gazette, stating that agreements for the purchase or leasing of Native reserves are illegal and void under the Act 15 and 16 Victoriae, c. 72, and subject the parties making them to the penalties of the Native Land Purchase Ordinance, Session VIII., No. 19.

As such a notice will have the effect of calling in question the validity of several leases entered into by Natives with Europeans through the intervention of this office, and of occasioning uncertainty in the minds of the former in regard to acts of ownership in reserves made for them by the Crown, I beg leave respectfully to request that your Honour will be pleased to countermand the publication of the notice referred to, until I can receive instructions from His Excellency the Officer Administering the Government upon this subject.

I have, &c.,

G. S. COOPER.

His Honour the Superintendent, New Plymouth.

New Plymouth.—Respecting Report of Special Committee on Waiwhakaiho Block. Wellington, 11th August, 1855.

SIR,—

I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 15th of May last, enclosing the copy of a report of a Special Committee of the Provincial Council of New Plymouth on the purchase of the Waiwhakaiho Block, and calling upon me to state my reasons for making the several reserves alluded to in the said report.

I shall not trespass upon your time by detailed replies to the statements contained in the report transmitted to me by you; but proceed at once to state the reasons which induced me to make the reserves. And first I beg leave to enclose the copy of a memorandum, drawn up by me and forwarded by you to the Superintendent of New Plymouth, in reply to a letter from his Honour, dated 25th November, 1854, and which contains a detailed account of all these reserves. In making this memorandum it was not thought necessary to trouble his Honour, with the reasons why these reserves were made: these, however, in obedience to your instructions, I now proceed to explain.

General Reasons why such Liberal Reserves were made.

When the purchase of the Waiwhakaiho Block was effected, a considerable length of time had elapsed since any land had been obtained from the Natives at Taranaki, and it was looked upon as a matter of great importance to make a commencement in any direction and on almost any terms, in the hopes of its leading to further purchases. The Waiwhakaiho Block was never looked upon as being, in itself, of any particular value, and, from its peculiar shape, but a very small portion of it is composed of open and immediately available land, the greater part being, though generally level and rich in soil, so heavily timbered and lying so far inland that its intrinsic value as an additional acquisition of land to the settlement was never thought to be very great. But the fact of making any purchase at all at that time at Taranaki was considered a great point gained, and more particularly so in reference to the Waiwhakaiho Block, because it was looked upon as being (what it afterwards proved to be) the key to the Hua Block, and because many Natives joined in the sale who had previously been obstinate opponents to the sale of land. I may mention Tangutu and Raniera as instances of this. It was also at that time believed that dealing liberally with the Natives in the matter of reserves in this block might operate as an inducement to the Mangaoraka, Waiongana, and Waitara people to sell some of their much-coveted lands, as it was hoped their opposition might become less obstinate when they saw that really nothing more was asked for, or sought to be obtained from them, than those lands which were of no use to themselves or their children. These are generally the reasons which led to such liberal reserves being made in the Waiwhakaiho Block; and I may add that Henry Halse, who at the time of the purchase filled the office of my Sergeant-Major, and gave me most valuable assistance in conducting the negotiation, was fully aware of all these reserves, and might have explained them to the Provincial Government, in whose service he now holds office. They are equally well known to officers of the General Government now in New Plymouth. I now come to the special reasons connected with the granting of these reserves.

Reserves for Hone Ropiha and Wi te Ahoaho.

The promise to Hone Ropiha and Wi te Ahoaho was the first which was made. It was that each should have one hundred acres in the seaward part of the block and two hundred acres inland in the forest. These reserves were intended as a provision for themselves and for all their relatives: an ample one, certainly, but made ample for the special reason that they had always been told that Government wanted nothing from them but what they could not use themselves. And these men individually deserved liberal treatment at the hands of Government, as it was almost exclusively owing to them that the purchase was effected. Wi te Ahoaho's hundred acres consist of the two sections at Waerengapoka—Native reserves from the foundation of the settlement, which had been occupied by Mr. Nairn. These sections Wi te Ahoaho and his brother never would have given up, and they would have been excepted from the sale had they not been promised as a reserve. Hone Ropiha's hundred acres was originally chosen by me to the eastward of Wi te Ahoaho's, adjoining it, and forming one block. He refused to take this, insisting on retaining his fifty-acre section at Purakau, saying if he got that he would give up his other fifty acres. This I would not agree to, as the Purakau is one of the best sections in the block; and the question was still at issue between us when you arrived at Taranaki in February, 1854, whereupon it was decided by you in favour of Hone Ropiha, who now holds the land. Hone and Wi te Ahoaho had then each to receive two hundred acres in land. Before these were selected by me they both expressed a wish to purchase one hundred acres of their respective reserves, to which I readily acceded, as I had been specially instructed by you to encourage as much as possible the purchase of land by Natives under the Government regulations. In consequence of this wish these two reserves of two hundred acres each were selected by me at a less distance inland than probably they otherwise would have been, as I felt sure that the purchased half of each reserve would in a very short time come into the market, and I could not see why the difference in value between the Government price of 10s. and that which commonly is obtained in New Plymouth should not as well be received by aboriginal natives, who circulate all the money that comes into their hands, and never look forward to hoarding a fortune and quitting the colony, as by European speculators, to whom they are at least not inferior as producers of food and cultivators of the soil which they inherited from their ancestors; and to a share in the benefits arising from the settlement and improvement of which I for one am of opinion that they have a right at least as good as that of any immigrant settler whatsoever. Hone Ropiha's two hundred acres were purposely selected within the boundaries disputed by Henare te Puni and party, because he has much influence over them, which I knew the offer of a good price for one hundred acres would induce him to exercise to its fullest extent; and, as that land could not at the time be offered for purchase by Europeans, I could not see any quicker mode of getting a small piece of it into the market than by allowing Hone Ropiha to become its purchaser. Wi te Ahoaho's two hundred acres were selected by me between the Araheke and Waiwhakaiho Streams, chiefly for the convenience of natural boundaries.

You will thus perceive that pre-emptive rights of selection were not given to these Natives; and I may here state that no such right was given by me in any instance, the only reserves not selected by me being Waerengapoka, and the latter being the only one taken in opposition to my wishes.

Te Ropiha Moturoa.

Five hundred acres were promised to Te Ropiha Moturoa and his people, because Te Ropiha acquainted me that a reserve had been promised to him in Wellington, and that he was about immediately to migrate to Taranaki with a hundred people, who I thought would be much better located on a Native reserve than left to choose their own residences, and perhaps take possession of parts of sections in the hands of the settlers to extort satisfaction for alleged claims upon old purchases, a practice not uncommon in Taranaki. Then, I had heard that Te Ropiha had used his influence very successfully with the absentees in this neighbourhood, and he certainly was very active in rendering me all the assistance in his power in completing the purchase on the spot. Besides this I had some hopes that his influence might be useful at Waiongana, where no other chief would at that time venture to interfere. This reserve might now be reduced, or even done away with altogether, as the projected migration is not, I imagine, likely under present circumstances to take place.

Wairarapa.

I did not then know of Sir George Grey's promise to Wairarapa, nor, as far as I can remember, have I at any time had official intimation of it.

More.

The fifty-acre section to More and his family was given to induce them to remove from Mr. J. Webster's section at Watitiri. I think he had also some claim in the Grey Block. This section was also selected in the land disputed by Henare te Puni.

Rawiri Motutere, Wi Kawaho, Karoraina, and Hopataia.

The reasons for reserving twenty-five acres to Rawiri Motutere and Wi Kawaho are explained in the memorandum enclosed, as are also those for reserving a small piece to Karoraina, and forty acres to Hopataia. The permission to Hopataia to purchase the balance over forty acres was given to encourage the growing desire of the Natives to purchase lands from the Crown.

Matena Tupoki, Wi Tana, and Wi Ropiha.

The sections to Matena, Wi Tana, and Wi Ropiha were given in the following manner: A fifty acre section was at first promised to these three men in common, as one of the original terms of purchase of the block. They afterwards objected to holding the land as tenants in common, and asked for separate reserves of twenty acres each, and for permission to purchase thirty more, so that each might have a section. This, to encourage the purchase of Crown lands by Natives, I agreed to, and selected the lands in their present position, knowing they would soon come into the market, with which view I specially provided that the twenty-acre reserves should be at the end of the sections fronting on the river, as being the least valuable portions of the land Wi Ropiha's section is now to be purchased entirely, in consequence of a subsequent arrangement by which he gave up his claim to the twenty-acre reserve.

Kirihipu.

The section reserved for Kirihipu and others was given to them for the purpose mentioned in the enclosed memorandum, and to prevent their relatives on their arrival from giving trouble to the settlers by taking possession of this or other lands.

Poharama.

Poharama's fifty-acre section was applied for by him for the same purpose; and on my refusing to make any further reserves he asked permission to purchase it, which I gave him for the same reason as that for which similar permission was given to others.

Hohua and Manahi

The two reserves to Hohua and Manahi, and their relatives, were promised at the time when the payment was made, and were given principally for the reason that both parties had no land of their own on which to settle, Hohua and his relatives having been driven off the Moturoa. Reserve by Poharama, and Manahi's people being threatened with ejection by Porutu from the land occupied by them at the Ratapihipihi, near Barrett's Reserve.

Matena Tupoki and Wi Ropiha.

The section at the mouth of the Waiwhakaiho River was promised by Sir George Grey years ago to Matena Tupoki and Wi Ropiha if the land should ever be purchased by the Crown. It would have been excepted from the sale had I not promised to make it a reserve.

The foregoing are, as far as they can be compressed into the limits of an official letter, the reasons which induced me to sanction the reserves and permissions to purchase lands given to Natives in the Waiwhakaiho Block. I beg to return herewith the tracing enclosed in your letter under reply.

I have, &c.,

G. S.COOPER, District Commissioner

Mr. Commissioner McLean, &c., Auckland.

MEMORANDUM by Mr. Commissioner COOPER.

Detailed Account of Native Reserves in waiwhakaiho Block

The explanatory map of the reserves in the Waiwhakaiho purchase being at Taranaki, I can only give a detailed account of them from memory. As however I left in the Land Purchase Office a tracing map which contains full information upon the subject, a reference of this memorandum to either the Sub-Inspector of Police, Mr. Rogan, or Octavius Carrington, with the map in question, will suffice to rectify any error I may make.

Reserves for Hone Ropiha and Wi te Ahoaho.

In the original purchase it was agreed that Hone Ropiha and Wi te Ahoaho were each to have one hundred acres in the lower or seaward part of the block, and two hundred acres each, further inland, for themselves and relatives. Hone Ropiha was afterwards satisfied with a fifty-acre section at Purakau, in lieu of his hundred-acre reserve; his two hundred acres are marked out at Te Pukiekie. Wi te Ahoaho's hundred acres comprise the two sections at Waerengapoka, formerly occupied by Mr. Nairn; his two hundred acres are bounded by the Araheke and Waiwhakaiho Rivers, from the junction running inland. Wi te Ahoaho and Hone Ropiha have both expressed a desire to purchase one hundred acres of their respective inland reserves.

Ropiha Moturoa.

At the same time five hundred acres were promised to Te Ropiha Moturoa and his party, now in course of migration from this neighbourhood. This land has been marked on the map as bounded by the Araheke and Waiwhakaiho Rivers; by Te Ahoaho's inland boundary (not yet marked), and by a line running from a point on the Araheke Stream, the name of which I forget, to another in the Waiwhakaiho called Kaipi, and which forms a part of the Pikipari boundary-line cut by Octavius Carrington in 1852.

More.

A fifty-acre section was promised to More and his family in exchange for all their claims to a place called Whatitiri, and others in that neighbourhood.

Rawiri Motutere and Wi Kawaho.

Of the sections inland of Mr. Smart's boundary-line, the first is a twenty-five-acre piece given to Rawiri Motutere and Wiremu Kawaho, in exchange for a cultivation on Mr. Smart's farm, for which they had not been paid at the Fitzroy purchase.

Karoraina and Ani.

A small corner-piece, about three or four acres, was promised to Karoraina (widow of Te Hemera) and Ani in exchange for cultivations on Mr. St. Aubyn's section, in occupation of Mr. Chilman. Hoera Parepare will pay 10s. an acre for this piece; £1 is paid already.

Hopataia.

The next section was promised to Hopataia—forty acres, being a reserve for all his unsatisfied claims in the Fitzroy and Grey purchases, including Mr. St. Aubyn's section. He is to pay 10s. an acre for the excess over forty acres.

Matena Tupoki, Wi Tana Ngatata, and Wi Ropiha.

The next two sections are in the name of Matena Tupoki and Wiremu Tana Ngatata. A fifty acre section was originally promised to these two men and Wi Ropiha Motutere, as a reserve; but they afterwards asked to have three separate reserves of twenty acres each, each man wishing to purchase thirty acres, so that each might have a fifty-acre section. This was agreed to, and Matene and Wi Tana have to pay for thirty acres each, of which they have deposited the greater part of the price. Wi Ropiha afterwards paid the whole purchase-money for his section, which is marked off further inland.

Kirihipu, Herewini, Hohaia, and Poharama.

A section containing seventy acres, more or less, was reserved for Kirihipu, Te Herewini, and Ihaia, for relatives expected shortly to arrive from Nelson; and adjoining it is a fifty-acre section which Poharama wishes to purchase for the same purpose.

Wi Tako and Ropiha Moturoa.

The five-hundred-acre reserve to Wi Tako was promised when the payment for the Waiwhakaiho purchase was made at Wellington.

Hohua and Manahi.

A fifty-acre section at the junction of the Waiwhakaiho and Mangaorei Rivers, for Hohua and his people, and one hundred acres at Te Katoa for Manahi and his people, were promised when the block was purchased.

Henare te Puni and Hakopa.

Henare te Puni is to have a piece reserved on the side of Devon Road, and Hakopa te Rerewai te Rangi forty acres at Mangaorei, when the opposition of that party is withdrawn to the occupation of the Waiwhakaiho Block.

These, as far as my memory goes are all the reserves promised to Natives in the Waiwhakaiho Block.

G. S. COOPER, District Commissioner.

Wellington,

8th December, 1854.

No. 44. The Right Rev. Bishop SELWYN to the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

Napier.—Requesting the Crown Grant for School Land. Taurarua, Auckland, 22nd September, 1856.
SIR,—

I have the honour to request that you will lay before His Excellency the Governor the Crown grant, which, I understand, has been already prepared, for the school estate at Ahuriri, and that you will furnish such certificates as may be necessary to comply with the requisitions of the Native Reserves Act, section 17.

I have, &c.,

G. A. NEW ZEALAND, Mr. Commissioner McLean. P.S.—The Rev.

Samuel Williams is already in undisputed possession of the above estate, and has stocked it with a flock of sheep for the endowment of the Industrial School.

No. 45. The Hon. the COLONIAL TREASURER to the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

Suitable Reserves to be made for Public Purposes. Colonial Treasury, Auckland, 29th December, 1856.

SIR,—

I am directed by the Colonial Treasurer to inform you that in all purchases of land from the Natives the Commissioners engaged in the negotiations for such purposes will be required to report what portions of each block purchased should, in their opinion, be reserved for the construction of trunk lines of road, or as sites for public buildings for the use of the General Government. And where it may appear to any Commissioner to be desirable that a reserve should be made for military purposes, it will be his duty to call the attention of the Government to the subject. You will be good enough to communicate instructions to the above effect to all Commissioners for the Purchase of Native Lands.

I have, &c.,

W. GISBORNE, Under-Secretary.

Mr. Commissioner McLean, Auckland.

[Extract from New Zealand Gazette.]

Gift of Land at Te Aute, Napier, for Church of England Industrial School. Colonial Secretary's Office, Auckland, 10th June, 1857.

Pursuant to the provisions of "The New Zealand Native Reserves Act, 1856," the following report is published for general information.

E. W. STAFFORD.,

Mr. Commissioner G. S. COOPER to the Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY.

31st March, 1857.

SIR,—

In obedience to the instruction contained in your letter of the 16th of October last, I have the honour to report to you, for the information of His Excellency's Government, that I have ascertained the assent of the aboriginal inhabitants to a grant under the 16th section of "The New Zealand Native Reserves Act, 1856," of certain lands in this district set apart by them as an endowment for an industrial school.

I hereby transmit deeds of gift of two blocks of lands, containing respectively 1,745 acres and 1,408 acres, more or less, situated in the neighbourhood of Te Aute, and which are more particularly described in the deeds by plans and written descriptions of boundaries, and which land the aboriginal owners have surrendered to Her Majesty, her heirs and successors, on condition of their being granted to the Bishop of New Zealand and his successor for the purpose above named. I have also the honour to acquaint you that, when in Auckland in December last, I deposited in the Chief Commissioner's Office a copy of the plan of the land set apart by the late Governor, Sir George Grey, for the like object.

I have, &c.,

G. S. COOPER, District Native Land
Commissioner, Hawke's Bay District.

The Hon. the Colonial Secretary, &c, Auckland.

Report adopted with the advice and consent of the Executive Council of the colony.

THOMAS GORE BROWNE, Governor.

F. G. Steward, Clerk of the Executive Council.

Oruru.—Respecting Purchase of Nopera's Reserve. Land Commissioner's Office, Auckland, 1st August, 1857.
SIR,—

I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your communication, bearing date the 12th June, in which you recommend the purchase by the Government of the Native reserve in the Oruru Valley, granted to the late chief Nopera Panakareao.

Not approved at present.

In reference thereto I have the honour to inform you that His Excellency is not at present prepared to authorize the proposed purchase, but defers giving a final answer until further information shall enable him to form an opinion as to the expediency of the course recommended by you. I have therefore to request that you will state more particularly your reasons for recommending the alienation of this reserve by the family of the late chief Noble; also to express the opinion of the Government that ample provision ought to be made in landed property, to be secured to his heir, and that it is not apparent why the Oruru is an unfit or undesirable locality for this purpose. The annoyance caused to the European settlers through the irregular occupation of the reserve by Noble's followers might possibly be removed by leasing it for a term of years. Upon the expediency or otherwise of such an arrangement you will have the goodness to report.

I have, &c.,

THOMAS H. SMITH, (For Chief Commissioner.)

H. T. Kemp, Esq.,
District Commissioner, Bay of Islands.

No. 48. The CHIEF COMMISSIONER to the ASSISTANT NATIVE SECRETARY, New Plymouth.

New Plymouth.—Respecting Exchange of Ruatangata Reserve. Chief Land Commissioner's Office, Auckland, 11th September, 1857.

SIR,—

Referring to your private note of the 23rd March last,—informing me that the three surviving owners of Ruatangata, a reserve of five acres are willing to exchange it with Mr. Reed for ten acres of his forest land in the Hua Block, stating the circumstances under which and for whom the reserve in question was made, enclosing a tracing of the same, and expressing your opinion that it is one of those cases that may properly be entertained, seeing that both parties will be benefited by the exchange,—I have the honour, by direction of His Excellency the Governor, to inform you that the transaction is unobjectionable, but that it will require an Act of the Provincial Legislature to carry it into effect. So soon as the Ruatangata is surrendered to the Crown, which it must be as a preliminary to the grant to Mr. Reed, it will become subject to the General Land Regulations of the province, and the Crown will have no power to dispose of it to Mr. Reed, or any other individual, otherwise than as prescribed by those regulations. An ordinance therefore will be required to enable a grant in fee to be issued to Mr. Reed of the land to be ceded by the Natives.

And I am further directed to instruct you carefully to negotiate the cession of the Ruatangata reserve to the Crown, when the Provincial Legislature have passed an ordinance enabling the Crown to grant the land in question to Mr. Reed. The negotiation having been already entered upon by you, you will be good enough to inform Mr. Parris that I have desired you to complete it, either alone or in concert with that gentleman, as you may deem most advisable.

I have, &c.,

DONALD MCLEAN, Chief Commissioner.

H. Halse, Esq., Assistant Native Secretary, New Plymouth.

No. 49.[Extract from New Zealand Gazette.]

"The New Zealand Native Reserves Act, 1856," left to its operation. Colonial Secretary's Office, Auckland, 18th March, 1858.

The following Act passed by the General Assembly of New Zealand in the session held in the nineteenth and twentieth years of Her Majesty Queen Victoria, intituled "The New Zealand Native Reserves Act, 1856," having been laid before the Queen in conformity with the provisions of the New Zealand Constitution Act, Her Majesty has been graciously pleased to leave the same to its operation.

E. W. STAFORD.

No. 50.[Extract from New Zealand Gazette.]

Commissioners of Native Reserves appointed: Manukau District, New Plymouth, Wellington, and Canterbury.
Treasury, Auckland, 12th April, 1858.

His Excellency the Governor has been pleased to appoint the Hon. C. W. Richmond, W. Gisborne, Esq., and T. H. Smith, Esq., to be Commissioners of Native Reserves for the Manukau District, in the Province of Auckland, under "The New Zealand Native Reserves Act, 1856;" G. Cutfield, Esq., Henry Halse, Esq., R. Parris, Esq., and the Rev. J. Whiteley to be Commissioners of Native Reserves in the Province of New Plymouth, under "The New Zealand Native Reserves Act, 1856;" H. St. Hill, Esq., S. Carkeek, Esq., R. R. Strang, Esq., the T. B. Hutton, Tamehana te Rauparaha, Matini te Whiwhi, and Rawiri Puaha to be Commissioners of Native Reserves in the Province of Wellington, under "The New Zealand Native Reserves Act, 1856," W. J. W. Hamilton, Esq., C. C. Bowen, Esq., and T. Cass, Esq., to be Commissioners of Native Reserves in the Province of Canterbury, under "The New Zealand Native Reserves Act, 1856."

C. W. RICHMOND.

No. 51.The CHIEF COMMISSIONER to the CROWN LANDS COMMISSIONER, Napier.

Boundaries of Oero Reserve finally determined. Napier, 18th August, 1858.
SIR,—

I have the honour to inform you that the question raised by Maika I wikatea and some other Natives respecting the boundaries of the reserve at Oeso, on Mr. E. S. Curling's run, has been finally settled; and that the boundaries of the three hundred acres originally marked off by Mr. Pelichet are to be considered hereafter as the only ones to which the Natives have a right.

I have, &c.,

DONALD MCLEAN.

The Commissioner of Crown Lands, Napier

No. 52.The CHIEF COMMISSIONER to his Honor the SUPERINTENDENT, Napier.

Ahuriri.—Respecting the Oero Reserve. Napier, 18th August, 1858.
SIR,—

I have the honour to inform you that the question raised by certain Natives respecting the reserve at Oero has been finally settled the original boundaries as settled by Mr. Pelichet being those to which the Natives are to be considered as having a right. I paid a sum of £50 to the Natives upon the settlement of this question; and I have now the honour to enclose a translation of the deed signed by them. The principal desire of the Natives is to have the right of eel, fishery in the Kohinepari Lake, and the large swamp called the Rotoroa. Although I told them that I would not admit, on the part of the Government, their claim to anything more than what was marked off first and described as their reserve, in the original deed of sale, I should imagine that there could be no objection to allowing them to exercise their right over a swamp that can never be of any use to European settlers, except as a boundary. The Natives have purchased two forty-acre sections, for the purpose of securing their eel-cuts and weirs.

I have, &c.

DONALD MCLEAN.

His Honor the Superintendent.

No. 53. The CHIEF COMMISSIONER to Mr. Commissioner SEARANCHE.

Waikanae.—Relative to Issue of Crown Grants for Native Reserves. Chief Land Purchase Commissioner's Office, Auckland, 22nd August, 1858.

SIR,—

Referring to your letter of the 24th ultimo, respecting the purchase of land at Waikanae, and the arrangements proposed by you for a settlement of the Native claims after you had overcome considerable opposition to the sale on the part of some of the Natives, and stating that you had made certain proposals in reference to reserves required for them, subject to His Excellency's approval, with respect to those reserves I have the honour to acquaint you that the Governor has no legal power to issue Crown grants in the manner proposed by you. The object, however, in this case, can be indirectly attained through "The New Zealand Native Reserves Act, 1856," if the Natives will agree to hand over the reserves to the Commissioners for the Province of Wellington, appointed under the aforesaid Act for this purpose. The price proposed by you for the land is satisfactory.

I have, &c.,

DONALD MCLEAN, Chief Commissioner.

W. N. Searancke, Esq District Commissioner, Wellington.

No. 54. The CHIEF COMMISSIONER to Mr. Commissioner G. S. COOPER, J.P.

Napier.—Land Claims of William Edwards's Children at Te Aute. Chief Land Purchase Commissioner's Office, Auckland, 4th September, 1858.

SIR,—

With reference to your letter of the 20th July last relative to the land at Te Aute claimed by William Edwards as the property of his half-caste children, and requesting to be informed whether there is any law in existence by which the land can be granted by the Crown to trustees for their benefit, I have the honour, by direction of His Excellency the Governor, to inform you that the Land Claims Settlement Extension Act, which has been reserved for the signification of Her Majesty's pleasure, makes provision for such cases, and that the case of William Edwards's children will be considered when the Act is allowed.

I have, &c.,

DONALD MCLEAN, Chief Commissioner.

G. S. Cooper, Esq., J.P., District Commissioner, Ahuriri.

Wellington.—As to Gifts of Land by Natives to half-caste Children. Chief Land Purchase Commissioner's Office, Auckland, 10th September, 1858.

SIR,—

With reference to your letter of the 6th instant relative to gifts of land by Natives to half-caste children, urging the importance of some immediate steps being taken for a settlement of their claims, and stating the bearings of the question upon your present negotiations for land purchases, having brought the subject under the notice of His Excellency's Government, I am directed to inform you that you may propose to the Natives as a term of the contracts entered into with them to secure portions of lands of moderate extent out of the purchased blocks to be granted to half-caste children, all such arrangements being of course subject to His Excellency's approval.

Native Reserves to be of Sufficient Extent.

I need scarcely draw your attention to the necessity for having reserves of sufficient extent for the present and future requirements of the Natives themselves set apart in the blocks now under negotiation in your district.

I have, &c.,

DONALD MCLEAN, Chief Commissioner.

W. N. Searancke, Esq., District Commissioner,
Wellington.

No. 56. The CHIEF COMMISSIONER to Mr. Interpreter JOHN WHITE.

Manukau Block.—External Boundaries of Four Reserves to be cut. Chief Land Purchase Commissioner's Office, Auckland, 13th September, 1858.

SIR,—

I have to request that you will proceed to Waiuku as soon as possible and point out in, presence of the Native owners, the boundaries of the four reserves in the Manukau Block of 22,000 acres, purchased by Mr. Searancke: vide copies of deeds of sale herewith, dated 2nd and 22nd October, 1857.

It appears that in concluding this purchase Mr. Searancke specified the extent and position of those reserves respectively as follows: First, Te Ngaio, 1 acre; second, Rewaroa, 5 acres; third, Paraerae, 100 acres; fourth, Whakarongo, 100 acres. But the external boundaries were not cut or defined at the time of purchase, and it is necessary that this should now be done before the land is thrown open for selection.

As Mr. Andrewartha is now laying off that block in sections, you will have the goodness to accompany him to have the boundaries of the reserves clearly defined at the same time in such a manner as to prevent any possibility of future disputes with the Natives.

If the surveyor intimates to you that it is desirable that a public road should be formed through any of the above reserves, you will endeavour to obtain the sanction of the Natives to permit of such a road being made, on the understanding that they will be allowed an equal extent of land to what is taken up for that purpose attached to the reserve through which the road is to pass.

I have, &c.,

DONALD MCLEAN, Chief Commissioner.

Mr. J. White, Interpreter, Land Purchase Department,
Auckland.

No. 57. The CHIEF COMMISSIONER to Mr. Commissioner PARRIS, J.P.

Waiwhakaiho.—Right of Road through Reserve of Wiremu te Ahoaho to be conveyed. Chief Land Purchase Commissioner's Office, Auckland, 20th September, 1858.

SIR,—

The deed of conveyance executed by Wiremu te Ahoaho himself for a portion of land on his reserve at Waiwhakaiho, given up by him as a site for a road, not being sufficiently binding, I have the honour, by direction of His Excellency the Governor, to transmit to you herewith a draft of a deed, to which you will be good enough to adhere as closely as the circumstances of the transaction will admit, taking care likewise that a plan of the land is attached to the conveyance. I have also to draw your attention to the fact that, while Wi te Ahoaho is the principal owner of the reserve in question, especial care should be taken to obtain the assent and signatures of the other Natives formerly residing together with him upon the land; and that the conveyance shall be so executed that no possibility may exist of any of his relations, or any other party, being in a position to come forward hereafter, or at his demise, to dispute his right to sell or disturb the existing arrangement.

The land in question does not come within the operation of "The Native Reserves Act, 1856," having been set apart for Wi te Ahoaho and party under Governor Fitzroy's arrangement of 1844. You will therefore be good enough, in your capacity as District Commissioner, to obtain the cession of the land, making such alterations in the form of conveyance herewith transmitted as you may deem necessary to make it binding upon the Natives; the chief object in all such documents being to make them so clear and explicit as to prevent the possibility of future litigation or dispute.

I have, &c.,

DONALD MCLEAN, Chief Commissioner.

R. Parris, Esq., J.P., District Commissioner, Taranaki.

No. 58. The CHIEF COMMISSONER to Mr. Commissioner SEARANCKE.

Manawatu.—Lands given to Family of Mr. T. U. Cook to be surveyed. Chief Land Purchase Commissioner's Office, Auckland, 9th November, 1858

SIR,—

I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 16th ultimo, relative to three blocks or parcels of land of sixty, one hundred, and two hundred acres respectively, which the Natives of Manawatu are desirous of conveying to the half-caste children of T.U. Cook, Esq., who is at present in occupation of those lands. I have brought this subject under the consideration of His Excellency's Government, who are of opinion that the transaction is fair and desirable; but, at present, a legal difficulty exists as to the issue of a Crown grant for those lands. The Hon. The Attorney-General is of opinion that the 13th section of the Lands Claims Settlement Extension Act will meet the requirements of the case. No grant, however, can be issued until the Act has received the assent of Her Majesty.

Under these circumstances, and pending further consideration and action, it will be advisable to have the land surveyed, if, as I suppose, it is entirely free from any counter-claim by any other European, with a view to its being made over to the Crown for the purposes intended by the Natives. The survey should, of course, be conducted under your instructions, the expense being borne by Mr. Cook himself.

I have, &c.,

DONALD MCLEAN, Chief Commissioner.

W. N. Searancke, Esq., District Commissioner, Wellington.

No. 59. His Honour the SUPERINTENDENT, Taranaki, to the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

Land to be set apart for Tamohare, Ten Acres. Superintendent's Office, New Plymouth, 6th April, 1859.

SIR,—

I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter dated 29th March, 1859, requesting that ten acres of land in a particular position in the Tarururangi Block should be appropriated for the use of Tamohare, he paying for it at the rate of 10s. an acre; in reply to which I beg to acquaint you that the Provincial Government will comply with your request.

I have, &c.,

G. CUTFIELD, Superintendent.

Donald McLean, Esq., Chief Land Commissioner, Auckland.

No. 60. The CHIEF COMMISSIONER to Mr. Surveyor SINCLAIR.

Mangere.—Reserve for Te Wherowhero to be surveyed, &c. Chief Land Purchase Commissioner's Office, Auckland, 18th May, 1859.

SIR,—

I am directed to request that you will proceed at once to Mangere to mark off on the ground the external boundary of the land comprised in the grant to the chief Te Wherowhero, and the portion subsequently set apart by direction of His Excellency the Governor as a reserve for Te Wherowhero and his people; also the position of the public reserve, and the direction of the principal streets, as marked on the plan of the Mangere Settlement.

I have, &c.,

J. ROGAN, D.C., (For Chief Commissioner.)

Andrew Sinclair, Esq., &c.

[Extract from New Zealand Gazette.]

Lands brought under Operation of "The New Zealand Native Reserves Act, 1856." Office of Minister for Native Affairs, Auckland, 26th May, 1859.

The following reports by Josiah Flight, Esq., one of the Commissioners of Native Reserves for the Province of Taranaki, are published for general information.

C. W. RICHMOND.

REPORT by JOSIAH FLIGHT, Esq., of the Province of Taranaki, under "The New Zealand Native Reserves Act, 1856."

Reserve No. 2 (150 Acres).

The Natives whose names are given below, having the sole right to 150 acres of this reserve, and they being desirous of bringing the same under the operation of the said Act, have executed a conveyance of the said land in favour of Her Majesty. The reporter has therefore the honour to recommend that such portion of the reserve as is delineated on the plan drawn in the margin of the deed of conveyance sent herewith should be brought under the operation of the said Act.

Names of the Natives:

I have, &c.,

JOSIAH FLIGHT.

New Plymouth,

14th March, 1859.

Report by JOSIAH FLIGHT, Esq., of the Province of Taranaki, under "The New Zealand NativeReserves Act, 1856."

Reserve No. 9 (Fitzroy Block).

THE Natives whose names are given below, having the right to Reserve No. 9, situate in, the Town of New Plymouth, Fitzroy District, and being desirous of bringing the same under the operation of the said Act, have executed a conveyance in favour of Her Majesty. The reporter has therefore the honour to recommend that the said reserve, as the same is delineated in the plan drawn in the margin of the deed of conveyance sent herewith, should be brought under the operation of the said Act.

Names of the Natives:

JOSIAH FLIGHT.

EXTRACT from minutes of the Executive Council of the 12th April, 1859.—"The Council recommend that the reports be adopted; and they are adopted accordingly."—F. G STEWARD, Clerk of, Executive Council.

[Extract from New Zealand Gazette.]

Church of England Reserve at Papakura, near Auckland. Office of Minister for Native Affairs, Auckland, 1st June, 1859.

The following report by Thomas Henry Smith, Esq., one of the Commissioners of Native Reserves for the Province of Auckland, is published for general information.

C. W. RICHMOND.

"The New Zealand Native Reserves Act, 1856."

I, Thomas Henry Smith, a person duly appointed in that behalf under the provisions of "The Native Reserves Act, 1856," do hereby report that I have ascertained the assent of the aboriginal inhabitants and proprietors of a certain piece or parcel of land described in the schedule hereunder written, and in a deed of cession of the same to Her Majesty the Queen, bearing date the 26th day of April, 1859, to the grant by His Excellency the Governor of New Zealand of the aforesaid piece or parcel of land to the Bishop of the Church of England in New Zealand and his successors, pursuant to the provisions of the said Act, in trust for the site of a church and burial-place and for the endowment of a school in connection with the Church of England.

Witness my hand this 20th day of May, 1859.

THOS. H. SMITH.

Schedule above referred to.

All that piece of land situate at Papakura, bounded on the North-west by Allotment No. 4 of the Parish of Opahake, 534 links, bearing  $246^{\circ}$  by compass; on the North-east by Native land, 1,000 links, bearing  $315^{\circ}$  by compass; on the South-west by Native land, 534 links, bearing  $66^{\circ}$  by compass; and on the South-east by the Great South Road, 1,000 links, bearing  $135^{\circ}$  by compass.

Report adopted this 31st day of May, 1859, with the advice and consent of the Executive Council of the colony.

T. GORE BROWNE, Governor.

F. G. Steward,
Clerk of the Executive Council.

The NATIVE RESERVES COMMISSIONERS to the Hon. the ATTORNEY-GENERAL.

Respecting Lease of Native Reserve to John Moore. Native Reserves Office, Wellington, 23rd June, 1859.
SIR,—

We have the honour to submit for your consideration the following question having reference to a certain class of land reserves in this district, and to solicit your opinion thereon. It refers to those reserves which were given to certain Native tribes by Colonel McCleverty, acting on behalf of the Governor of New Zealand, in consideration of their having ceded to Her Majesty's Government numerous cultivated grounds within and in the neighbourhood of the Town of Wellington, and of which reserves plans were handed over to the Natives at the time that the several negotiations took place.

We are doubtful whether reserves of this class come properly within our control under the provisions of "The New Zealand Native Reserves Act, 1856," and the difficulty has presented itself in a recent case, the particulars of which are as follow: In the year 1847 the Ngatiawa Tribe surrendered to the Government all their cultivations on the Karori, Kaiwharawhara, Harbour, and Lower Hutt Districts, receiving as compensation Town Acres Nos. 633–635 and 637, Wellington, together with other lands as set forth in the deed of agreement. On the 28th of January last we granted a lease of half of Town Acre No. 635 to John Moore for a term of fourteen years, at £7 per annum, subject to a covenant to erect thereon a house of the value of £150. We were induced to take this course from the consideration that nothing had hitherto been done by the Natives with a view to the improvement of this reserve, and under the conviction that a lease of the nature described above would tend to enhance very considerably the value thereof. It nevertheless produced much dissatisfaction amongst the Native proprietors, and called forth a letter of remonstrance signed by nine of them, a copy of which is enclosed. In consequence of this they were invited to a conference with us on the 6th instant. They objected to the lease on the ground that it has been executed without their knowledge or consent, and took exception moreover to some of the terms thereof.

For our future guidance, therefore, we have the honour to request your opinion on the following point, viz.: Has the Board full power of management and disposition over reserves of this class under the provisions of "The New Zealand Native Reserves Act, 1856," or does the law vest that power in the Natives, in whose names and for whose benefit such reserves have been made?

We have, &c.,

ROBERT R.
STRANG. S. Carkeek. (On behalf of the Board.)

The Hon. the Attorney-General.

Minute by Attorney-General.

I add an extract from Native letter alluded to: "Mr. St. Hill has already leased one of our sections there, and receives the rent.

Note by Mr. W. Buller.—The rent accruing under the lease here referred to is appropriated towards the maintenance of the Wellington Hospital.—W.L.B.

No portion of it [the rent] has ever been given to us. Governor Grey told us that after nine years we should resume possession of it. At the expiration of that period we went to Mr. St. Hill, and he refused to give it up to us. Hence we discover that your custom is to give and afterwards to take away.—Te Rira Porutu, Ihaia Porutu [and 7 others]."

W. SWAINSON.

Enclosure. The ASSISTANT NATIVE SECRETARY to the ___ COMMISSIONERS of NATIVE RESERVES.

Wellington.—Opinion of the Hon. the Attorney-General. Native Secretary's Office, Auckland, 24th September, 1859.

GENTLEMEN,—

In reply to the letter addressed by you to the Hon. the Attorney-General, dated 23rd June last, proposing questions respecting the legal powers of the Commissioners of Native Reserves, I am directed by His Excellency the Governor to inform you that the Attorney-General, upon the facts of the case as stated by yourselves, is of opinion that the lands given to the Natives in exchange for their cultivations by Colonel McCleverty, acting on behalf of the Government, are not Native reserves within the meaning of "The New Zealand Native Reserves Act, 1856."

I have, &c.,

THOS. H. SMITH, Assistant Native Secretary.

The Commissioners of Native Reserves, Wellington.

No. 64. The CHIEF COMMISSIONER to Mr. Commissioner H. T. KEMP, J.P.

Bay of Islands.—Ngahikunga Reserve, under Offer to H. Williams, Esq. Native Land Purchase Department, Auckland, 12th November, 1859.

SIR,—

Mr. H. Williams having applied to the Government, requesting that, under clause 8 of the Land Claims Extension Act, a cession may be ordered to be taken of a Native reserve named Ngahikunga, originally made within the boundaries of the claim of Archdeacon Henry Williams, and which he states the Natives are now willing to give up, I have the honour, by direction of His Excellency the Governor, to request that you will, as early as possible, put yourself into communication with the Native owners of the reserve, for the purpose of obtaining the necessary deed of cession, and that you will transmit a copy of the same, when executed, to the Land Claims Commissioner.

I have, &c.,

THOS. H. SMITH, (For Chief Commissioner.)

H. T. Kemp, Esq., J.P., District Commissioner, Bay of Islands.

No. 65. The ASSISTANT NATIVE SECRETARY to the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

Ahuriri.—Purchase of the Oero Reserve completed. Native Land Purchase Department, Auckland, 7th December, 1859.

SIR,—

In reply to your letter of the 23rd August last, reporting, for the information of His Excellency the Governor, your proceedings with reference to the Oero reserve, and forwarding translation of a receipt for the sum of £50 paid by you to the Natives for the purpose of effecting a final settlement of the question, I have the honour to inform you that His Excellency the Governor has been pleased to approve of the arrangements made by you, and to sanction the payment of the above-named sum to the Natives concerned.

I have, &c.,

THOS. H. SMITH, Assistant Native Secretary.

Donald McLean, Esq., J.P., Chief Commissioner, Wellington.

No. 66. Mr. JOHN P. STEWART to Mr. S. DEIGHTON.

Whanganui, 28th April, 1860.

SIR,—

For your information in connection with the Waitotara Block of land, I subjoin the following:—

The Native reserves retained on the bank of the Waitotara River are four, viz.:—

The land in these reserves is mostly of a valuable quality.

The whole of the land upon the Whanganui side of the Okehu Stream being also retained, there are left in the portion now offered for sale 24,900 acres, of which, however, 7,500 acres consist of sandhills of little value, they being nearly barren, with patches of scrub and toetoe, &c., only here and there.

This leaves 17,400 acres, whose value is much lessened by the occurrence of the foregoing reserves in different portions of the block, destroying in a great measure its unity. Of this quantity more than one-half is open fern land of a good description, the remainder being bush land, the timber upon which is not of much value, there being little of it fit for sawing. The soil of both the open and the bush land is of a very superior description in general, but the portion of the open land adjoining the sandhills and the coast-line, having a light sandy soil, is better adapted for grazing purposes than for cultivation.

I have, &c.,

JOHN P. STEWART, Surveyor, Native Land Purchase Department.

S. Deighton, Esq., Whanganui.

HERBERT S. WARDELL, Esq., R.M., to the Hon. the NATIVE MINISTER.

Wairarapa.—On Occupation of Land near Waiohine Bridge by Ngatuere and Party. Wellington, 22nd January, 1861.

SIR,—

In the memorandum I had the honour to hand you on the — ultimo, on the alleged improper occupation of certain land near the Waiohine Bridge, Wairarapa, by Ngatuere Tawhao and others, I stated that I could not form an opinion on the right to the land in question until I had examined certain plans and applications for land in the Crown Lands Office. Having made the necessary examination and inquiries, I have now the honour to report that I am of opinion that Ngatuere is in rightful occupation of the land, and that no sufficient reason exists for his removal from it. The land has not been sold by the Crown, but forms a portion of the Ferry Reserve, of which 140 acres were given to Ngatuere by deed dated March, 1858.

I annex for your information—(1) A copy of a portion of a plan dated 1856, now in the Crown Lands Office, on which the Ferry Reserve, the surrounding selections of land, and the proposed line of road are given; (2) copies of application for land situate to the west of the Ferry Reserve (Mr. Fennie's, dated 19th March, 1856; Captain Carlyon's, dated 20th November, 1856); (3) a duplicate of (1), on which I have indicated by dotted lines the position of the present road, and the site of Ngatuere's village. From these it appears that the land applied for in 1856 by Mr. Fennie and Captain Carlyon was bounded on the east by the then new line of road and the Ferry Reserve respectively, as given in the annexed plans. It is worthy of remark that Fennie's application was put in by Mr. Hughes, the surveyor, who afterwards made the plan from which the tracings 1 and 2 are taken. The diversion of the road was not determined upon until subsequent to 1856. The fact of the road being diverted does not affect the boundary of the land sold; it follows therefore that that portion of the reserve between the road as proposed in 1856 and the road as now formed does not form part of the land selected by Messrs. Fennie and Carlyon, and consequently that Ngatuere's occupation of it does not interfere with any right acquired by them. Crown grants have not yet been issued for the selections referred to.

The circumstances under which Ngatuere occupies a portion of the reserve are these: In March, 1858, in consideration of the sum of £200 and 400 acres of land, of which 140 acres of the Ferry Reserve were to form a part, he executed a deed conveying to the Crown the Taratahi Block, which had been previously sold by Wi Kingi and others. I applied to Mr. District Commissioner Searancke, to be informed whether any arrangement had been made as to what part of the Ferry Reserve was to be given to Ngatuere, and in reply received the letter of which I annex a copy for your information.

Although Ngatuere's portion of the reserve has not been set out or defined, he has been allowed to form the village and occupy land on both sides of the present road. I consider, therefore, to require him now to remove to any other portion of the reserve would be as unjust as, I am satisfied for the reasons given in my memorandum, it would be impolitic. It is highly important that the 140 acres should be set out with the least possible delay. It is desirable that a few acres (five or ten) at the approach of the bridge should be reserved as they might be required.

I have, &c.,

HERBERT WARDELL, Resident Magistrate.

The Hon. the Minister for Native Affairs, Auckland.

Enclosure.Mr. Commissioner SEARANCKE to H. S. WARDELL, Esq., R.M.

Wairarapa.—Concerning Reserve of Ngatuere. Wellington, 7th January, 1861.

SIR,—

In answer to yours of this date, referring to the Ferry Reserve at the Waiohine River, as applied to the reserve for Ngatuere Tawhao, I beg to state that no arrangement was made as to what particular portion of the Ferry Reserve was to be given up to the Natives, but assuredly the part actually occupied by them. The then Crown Lands Commissioner verbally requested me to retain a portion, represented to me as a valuable site for a mill, in the lower part of the reserve down the river. To this I consented, provided that it did not interfere with the Natives, nor was a portion which they particularly wished to have for cultivation. Ngatuere's reserve has not been set out up to the present time, notwithstanding repeated applications on my part to the Provincial District Surveyor to set out the Ferry Reserve in accordance with the plans in the Provincial Survey Office. At the present time I am returning to the Wairarapa, unable to carry out my engagement to Ngatuere to set out the reserve (which I had engaged to do myself at once) from want of the necessary bearings and lengths of lines to enable me to do so.

I have, &c.,

WILLIAM N. SEARANCKE, District Commissioner.

H. S. Wardell, Esq., Wellington.

No. 68.HERBERT S. WARDELL, Esq., R.M., to the Hon. the NATIVE MINISTER.

Wairarapa.—Respecting the Boundaries of Ngatuere's Reserve. Wellington, 3rd April, 1861.
SIR,—

I have the honour to report the existence of a difficulty in the arrangement of the boundaries of Ngatuere's reserve at the Waiohine, of which I was not aware when I reported to you on the subject in January last. At that time I was under the impression that Ngatuere was not occupying any portion of the land sold by the Crown, of which Hughes's proposed line of road forms the eastern boundary: in this I find I was in error, arising from the insufficient manner in which Mr. Hughes had marked out the road. By reference to the plan and memorandum I have the honour to enclose, you will understand the present position of the question. The space tinted purple (containing fifteen acres), part of the land sold to Captain Carlyon, has been long in the occupation of Ngatuere and his people as cultivations, &c., and they are very indisposed to give up possession of it, especially as Ngatuere's mother is buried there. The space tinted yellow (twenty acres) is also claimed by Ngatuere as within what he understood to be the boundaries of the reserve, and is partly cultivated. These thirty-five acres are not claimed in addition to the 139 acres to which he is entitled, but as forming part of it.

Under these circumstances I consider I shall be acting within your instructions by employing a portion of the money you placed at my disposal for the settlement of this question, in compensating the Natives for the improvements which they have made on the land. My impression is that the sum required for the purpose will not much exceed £50. I will, however, make the most economical arrangement practicable.

I have, &c.,

HERBERT WARDELL, Resident Magistrate.

The Hon. the Minister for Native Affairs, Auckland.

HERBERT S. WARDELL, Esq., R.M., to the NATIVE SECRETARY.

Porirua.—Disputed Boundary of Native Reserve. Wellington, 5th June, 1861.
SIR,—

In obedience to His Excellency's request conveyed in your letter of the 3rd ultimo, I have made inquiry into the case of disputed boundary at Porirua, and have now the honour to report thereon.

On receiving the necessary preliminary information, which was very readily afforded by the Crown Lands Commissioner, I visited Porirua and had an interview with the parties concerned. I found a Mr. Stevens in possession of certain land which he contended he had purchased of the Crown, but which was claimed by Natives as part of the land reserved at the time of the sale of the district, and they produced a rough map of the reserves signed by Sir George Grey, a tracing of which (marked A) I enclose for your information. In explanation of this map, I enclose (B) a copy of the translation of the deed of sale, certified by Colonel McCleverty, on the map of the district in the Provincial Survey Office.

Having visited the land in dispute in company with Mr. Swainson, District Surveyor, I find that Mr. Stevens is undoubtedly occupying part of the land reserved by the Natives, and I have indicated the position of the land so occupied by him by an asterisk on the tracing (Enclosure A). This difficulty appears to have arisen partly from a mistake in the survey of the stream forming the boundary of the Native land, which made Section 25 (that purchased by Mr. Stevens) appear to contain more land than it really did, but chiefly from Mr. Park, the then Provincial Surveyor, having given Stevens for his western boundary "a line equalizing the stream," instead of the stream itself, in consequence of which Stevens has occupied land on the Natives' side of the stream.

Mr. Swainson's letter (Enclosure C), together with the tracing of the map from which Stevens's selection was made (Enclosure D), will put you in possession of the circumstances under which the survey was made for

Mr. Stevens, and their result. On the tracing you will observe the correct position of the stream laid down, and the extent to which the line which Mr. Park gave as an equalizing one encroached on the Native land. As, however, the stream has always been the boundary of Section 25, and as Mr. Stevens's application for land is for "Section 25, about one hundred acres," and afterwards "for the remainder of Section 25," the land on the opposite (western) side of the stream has not been sold to him. Whether he is entitled to compensation for any mistake into which he may have been led by Mr. Park giving him a line as his boundary instead of the stream, it is not for me now to express an opinion, but I may state that he has cleared about thirty acres of land, and erected some rough buildings and about one hundred chains of bush fencing. All this is done on Native land.

The Natives have repeatedly complained to Stevens of his occupying their land, but he appears to have considered that he was not bound to pay any attention to their remonstrances unless it came through the Government, and it was only on their absolutely preventing him from doing more work on their land that he applied to the Crown Lands Commissioner on the subject. The Natives were very anxious that Mr. Stevens should immediately remove from their land: as to do so would be attended with much inconvenience to Mr. Stevens, I arranged with them, subject to His Excellency's approval, that they should receive the sum of £10 if they allow Mr. Stevens to remain in peaceful possession until the 31st December next. They profess to value Mr. Stevens's clearing, &c., very lightly, as they say it has all been done against their protest.

I have, &c.,

HERBERT WARDELL, Resident Magistrate.

The Native Secretary, Auckland.

Enclosure B.[ TRANSLATION.]

Porirua, 1st April, 1847.

These are the lands that are given up by us to the Governor, beginning at the boundary formerly laid down to us by Mr. Spain at the Kinapora, running to Porirua, Pauatahanui, Horokiwi, extending as far as Wainui; then the boundary takes a straight course inland to Powaha, running quite as far as Pawakataka. There are three pieces kept in reserve for us of the land that is given up by us to the Governor. One of these, beginning at Te Aratawa, running in a straight line inland; then it crosses and comes out at the house belonging to Mr. Jackson, running along the water edge; the other boundary comes as far as Waitawa, and runs straight along the water edge till it reaches Te Aratawa. We have likewise this again in reserve, the boundary of which runs from Jackson's house until it reaches the creek on the side of the cultivated garden of Te Hiko; then it runs straight along that river, running straight along the back of the ridge, then breaking out again to the waterside at Papakohai, a little outside of the settlement at Ohau. We have this again in reserve, the boundary of which begins at Tawitikuri, running along the ridge until it reaches the mountains above the Paripari; then it runs along the ridge to Wainui, and it then descends into Wainui River; it then runs straight along that river to Pawaha, running to Pawakataka; the part outside this boundary we still retain as ours. If any of our cultivations that are above Taupo should fall within the boundary of the Governor's land they are to be returned to us. The payments for these lands are these: £2,000 in money—£1,000 to be given to us on the 1st day of April, 1847; £500 on the 1st day of April, 1848; and £500 on the 1st day of April, 1849; which, being added together, makes £2,000, which concludes the arrangement.

Witnesses to the signatures—

W. A. McCleverty,

Lieutenant-Colonel. S. Armstrong, Captain, 99th Regiment. L. R. Elliott,

Lieutenant, 99th Regiment. W. F. G. Servantes, Lieutenant, 6th

Regiment, Interpreter to the Forces.

Enclosure C.

Survey Department, Wellington, 29th May, 1861.

SIR,—

In reply to your letter of the 27th instant, requesting me to inform you what instructions were given to Mr. Macmanaway from this office, relative to the private survey he made of Section No. 25, Takapu District, I beg to give the following information, so far as my memory will permit:—

On Stevens purchasing the said section, he employed Mr. Macmanaway to survey it for him, and Mr. Park, then Provincial Surveyor, instructed him, I believe, as follows: To commence the dividing line between Sections 101 and 102, at Porirua, and cut this line with a certain bearing, first a distance of 59 chains, which distance would, according to the map used in this office and considered correct, have brought him to the stream forming the boundary between the Native and Crown land; then with another bearing, starting from the said point to cut the division-line between Sections 25 and 28, Takapu District, a distance of 6,180 links, bringing him to the New Zealand Company's line of road through the district which forms the eastern boundary of No. 25. To determine the western boundary—the one now in dispute—he was to measure 550 links from the above-mentioned point at 59 chains, and then lay off an equalizing line along the general course of the stream with a certain bearing, as shown in the plan laid before him, and which line ought to have crossed and recrossed the stream several times, sometimes half a chain on one side and then again two or three on the other side.

That the two former portions of his instructions were carried out I have no doubt whatever; but when he found, upon commencing the equalizing line, that there was no stream—in fact, that no stream had been crossed at the 59 chains—I should certainly consider it was his duty, or that of any other surveyor, to have at once reported the case to this office.

I have confined myself entirely to the question of Mr. Macmanaway's instructions, but intend making a more lengthened report on this case to his Honour the Superintendent.

I have, &c.,

GEORGE F. SWAINSON, District Surveyor.

No. 70. The CHIEF COMMISSIONER to MALCOLM FRASER, Esq., GOVERNMENT SURVEYOR.

Wairarapa.—A Reserve to be surveyed for Te Kepa. Native Land Purchase Department, Auckland, 11th July, 1861.

SIR,—

Referring to your letter respecting a reserve claimed by Te Kepa, on the Huangaroa River, I have the honour to request that you will at once mark out on the ground a reserve in that locality of two hundred acres, or thereabouts, for him, taking care to interfere as little as possible with European claims. In mentioning two hundred acres for the reserve you will be pleased not to confine yourself to the exact quantity; a due regard should be had to the disposition of the land and natural boundaries.

I have, &c.,

DONALD MCLEAN, Chief Commissioner.

M. Fraser, Esq., Wellington.

No. 71. MEMORANDUM on the KAWAU PA, New Plymouth.

The occupation by the Natives of the town pa, New Plymouth, has been for some time a subject of complaint by the Europeans residing in the vicinity of the pa, more especially that portion of it which interfered with the continuation of Currie Street. In the early part of April last I had several conversations with the Natives upon the subject, and they appeared to me quite willing that the land should be sold to the Government.

A Commission was appointed in April, 1861, to value the pa and buildings. One claimant, whose name I forget, objected to the award as being too small. Te Waaka, who had a house in the pa, was at this time with the rebels, and did not accept the terms of peace until the following June. He then offered to give up certain lands as an atonement for his offence, including his claim in the town pa. This offer was qualified at the suggestion of Mr. Parris, and it was ultimately proposed that the Pukenui Reserve only should be ceded. The Government assented to this arrangement.

I am of opinion, from what I know of the Natives claiming the pa, that they may be induced to surrender their claims for the sum awarded by the Commission, if fairly distributed among the proprietors. This, it appears to me, will be the simplest solution of the present difficulty.

DONALD MCLEAN, Chief Commissioner.
22nd November, 1861.

MEMORANDUM on the PURCHASE of TWO NATIVE RESERVES.

Kaipara.—Purchase of Two Reserves in the Waioneke and Okaka Blocks.

Te Keene and Paraone, who were the principal claimants in the Waioneke and Okaka Blocks, which are now being handed over to the Provincial Government, have been to the Native Office several times regarding two Native reserves: one in Okaka called Tipare, containing fifty-four acres; the other in Waioneke, containing about eighty-two acres. They have just now agreed to accept £7 10s. for each, which I promised to give, subject to the approval of the Government. I submit that it will be very desirable to have the reserves purchased, as they might otherwise become an annoyance to persons hereafter, who might be running cattle on Okaka and Waioneke.

I have, &c.,

JOHN ROGAN, District Commissioner.

Auckland,

7th December, 1861.

Minute.

Mr. Rogan may proceed to acquire these reserves as recommended.—F. D. Bell (for Native Minister). 7th December, 1861.

REPORTS of PROPOSED CESSION of a PIECE of LAND for RESIDENT MAGISTRATE'S RESIDENCE.

Waiapu.—Proposed Cession of Land for Magistrate's Residence. Auckland, 9th January, 1862.
SIR,—

The Natives of the Waipu District having offered to cede a piece of land (estimated to contain from fifteen to twenty acres) to the Crown, as the site for the residence of the Magistrate, I have the honour to request that I may be informed what steps are to be taken in order to the execution of the necessary deed of cession. The Natives of Tokomaru offered a site for the same purpose during my recent visit, or rather, I should say, expressed their willingness to do so in case any difficulty was experienced at Waiapu in procuring one.

Under these circumstances, and anticipating the location at some future time of a Magistrate within the Tokomaru District, I would suggest that their present disposition should be availed of, especially as from my long and personal acquaintance with them I am sanguine of success in this matter.

I have, &c.,

WILLIAM B. BAKER, R.M.

The Native Secretary, &c.

15th January, 1862.

IN my general report of the 3rd instant, I stated the particulars connected with the offer of a site for a Magistrate's residence, viz., that the Natives positively declined to sell an acre of land; that they offered to give from twelve to twenty acres for this purpose. A letter, signed by thirty-two of the principal chiefs residing between Rangitukia and Whangara offering this land, was enclosed.

The land offered is situated near the pa of Rangitukia, on the banks of the Marahea, a stream of considerable volume which bounds it on the north; on the east, or front, lies the trunk road intended to lead up the valley; the southern boundary is a line running from the fence of Hohepa te Rore's wheat-field (and at a right angle to the main road) towards Te Mapara; the back boundary, a small stream. The soil is of excellent quality, and perfectly level. There is not a tree upon it except a few young manuka.

I append hereto the original, with translation of the Maori letter referred. I feel it to be my duty again to state that the Ngatiporou are extremely jealous of any attempt to acquire (by purchase or deed of gift) any portion of their land. Even though they had themselves opened the question, I found it necessary to be extremely cautious; the very word "whenua," used by an agent of the Government, seemed sufficient to arouse suspicion and distrust. Other sites were named, but objected to by me on account of their distance from the pa at Rangitukia.

In a letter, dated as far back as the latter end of 1860, the Ngatiporou offered a site at Te Kawakawa (Karakatuwhero). As my instructions directed me to locate myself at Waiapu; I made no inquiries about this land; but I was informed that it is very well situated fertile, and possesses the advantage of being near Hicks Bay, from which place there are more frequent opportunities of communicating with Auckland than from any other on the coast.

I respectfully request to be informed, in order that I may give a definite answer to the Natives, whether the offer of the land at Rangitukia is accepted; or whether an extension of the boundaries of that piece will be necessary; or whether negotiations should be opened with them for a fresh site of greater extent, near Rangitukia; or whether, in the event of failure at Waiapu, a site is to be acquired elsewhere; or whether the offer of Karakatuwhero will be accepted, and the Magistrate's location be removed to Te Kawakawa. May I also be informed whether a site is to be obtained at Tokomaru?

WILLIAM B. BAKER.,

Rangitukia, Waiapu, 20th December, 1861.

O SIRE, OUR LOVING PARENT,—

We greet you. The Magistrate has come hither to our village. We have saluted [lit., sighed towards] the law, that it may be a loving parent to benefit the children, the old women, the old men, the orphans, and the poor. A certain portion of our land has been ceded to us for him, that is, upon your name. We rejoice over this great boon which has come amongst us, namely, the law of the Queen, which is to arrange the portions of our land that they may be right; for our roads, that they may be made straight; and for all good works also, that they may be performed [introduced] among us, lest the root of bitterness spring up, and the many be confused.

From me,

RAWIRI RANGIKATIA. [And 31 others.]

His Excellency Sir George Grey, K.C.B., &c.

No. 74. EXTRACT from REPORT on GRANT of SITE for MAGISTRATE'S RESIDENCE.

Resident Magistrate's Office, Rangitukia, 27th February, 1862.

Before leaving Auckland I addressed the Native Secretary on the subject of the site offered by the Natives for the residence of the Magistrate, and also regarding the expense of erecting a house thereupon. I have as yet received no written reply thereto, but learned from the minutes of the Government that the piece of land named was considered to be too small for the purpose, and that I was to be instructed to treat with the Natives for an extension of the boundaries.

Finding that during my absence from the district a difficulty had arisen with regard to the first offer, and that prompt measures were necessary in order to secure a fitting site, I at once closed with the offer of the Ngatipiritai Tribe, who by a deed of gift dated the 22nd instant (a copy of which I enclose) ceded to the Crown a valuable piece of land, estimated to contain from one hundred to one hundred and twenty acres. It possesses the advantages of nearness to the sea, easy access to an inexhaustible supply of firewood and fencing, convenient to the Natives, and a fertile soil. The offer was made, and the whole transaction arranged in a manner which is highly commendable. I did not hear a dissentient voice, and, indeed, heard nothing whatever about it until the Natives came to invite me to walk round the boundaries. I have this day taken possession in the name of the Queen, and marked off a portion to be cleared and fenced immediately.

I have, &c.,

WILLIAM B. BAKER., Resident Magistrate, E.C.

The Hon. the Attorney-General, &c.

No. 75. REPORT of CESSION of 700 ACRES as SITE for a SCHOOL.

District of Waiapu. Resident Magistrate's Office, Rangitukia, 27th February, 1862.

SIR,—

I have the honour to inform you that on the 22nd instant I perambulated the boundaries of a block of land situated at Mamiti (Upper Waiapu), estimated to contain 700 acres, which the Natives offer to cede as the site for a school in which their children may be taught the English language.

The land is of superior quality, for the most part perfectly level, and situated within natural boundaries. Timber for building and fencing can be procured with great facility, but firewood is rather scarce. It can, however, be obtained in any quantity during the period of the river-freshes. The site has been for some time past set apart for school purposes, and one or more of the Church Missionary body have been to look at it, but no agreement has been entered into nor possession taken of it. The Natives, failing to secure the object of their wishes, and acting on the proposal made in Sir George Grey's policy published in the Maori Messenger, now urge the acceptance by the Government of the site, and express their willingness to assist in the maintenance of the school there.

I feel that it will be unnecessary for me to say anything in support of so laudable a proceeding, and trust that I may be authorized to procure the execution of a deed of gift, and to enter upon preliminary arrangements with as little delay as possible.

I have, &c.,

WILLIAM B. BAKER, Resident Magistrate.

The Hon. the Attorney-General, &c.

Major SPEEDY, R.M., to the NATIVE SECRETARY.

Landing-place claimed as a Native Reserve. Waiuku, 3rd May, 1862.

SIR,—

I have the honour to forward you a letter dated Waiuku, 3rd May, 1862, with a translation, by which you will perceive Hori Tauroa and Pita te Whare lay claim to the land in front of Campbell's publichouse, in the Township of Waiuku, which runs some distance along the creek. They desire to obtain a Crown grant for the same with the view of selling the land to Mr. Currie, a settler at Waiuku.

I have, &c.,

JAS. SPEEDY, Resident Magistrat.

The Native Secretary, Auckland.

Minute by Mr. H. Halse, Assistant Native Secretary.

Forwarded for the information of the Government.

The land claimed by Tauroa and Pita is a Native reserve, and most likely regarded as common property to all the Ngatiteatas, of which tribe the writers of this letter are members. If the Governor advised Hori Tauroa as stated, I presume it will be necessary to obtain the consent of the owners to place the land under the provisions of "The Native Reserves Act, 1856." But previously to attempting this I submit that it may be well for Major Speedy to inquire more closely into the reasons of this desire on the part of Hori Tauroa and Pita, in order that the Government may be satisfied of their soundness and sufficiency.

H. HALSE.

13th May, 1862.

No. 77. MEMORANDUM on the PURCHASE of the WAIUKU BLOCK, Manukau.

IN purchasing the Waiuku Block, which had been under negotiation for upwards of six years, and which was claimed conjointly by the Ngatiteata and Ngatitipa Tribes, neither of those tribes admitting the right of the other to sell, it was found necessary to deal separately with each tribe, and accordingly £1,500 was paid to Ngatitipa to satisfy their claims to the block. Neither Aihepene nor any of the Ngatiteata Natives signed this deed or received any portion of the money, as they were only entitled to their own share, which was set apart and paid to them in two instalments of £500 and £600, to the first of which Aihepene's name is attached. The boundaries cited in this deed describe the whole of the Waiuku purchase. In that part of the block, for which £1,500 was paid to the Ngatitipa, is a Native reserve called Akaaka, 445 acres, which Aihepene now claims. It will be found that this claim will not be recognized by Waata Kukutai and his people.

Titi was a Native reserve in the Waiuku, for which £20 was paid to Katipa and Wetera te Kauae in August, 1855, and £130 was paid to Katipa and a number of his people as a final surrender of this land in 1856. The deed expresses that no more money shall be paid for Titi, as the parties signing the deed are the only claimants.

In 1848 Aihepene received £50 for Te Puni, which he acknowledges to be a final payment for this land, which has been purchased several times over (see Mr. White's report on Waata Kukutai's claim to Te Puni). It is probable the payment of £50 to Ratapatiti has induced Aihepene to set forward his claim to the lands referred to by him, which has been seen by the Chief Commissioner, who says he cannot maintain any claim whatever to the land in question.

Mr. White will probably explain the circumstances connected with Wharenga, to whom the papers should be referred when he returns from the South.

J. ROGAN, District Lands Commissioner.
19th August, 1862.

MEMORANDUM on RESERVES in the PUKETAPU BLOCK, Manukau.

I DISTINCTLY remember proceeding to Ihaia's settlement, in the Puketapu Block, previous to its purchase. While there I had a conversation with him respecting the purchase of it. Ihaia mentioned to me—pointing out at the same time an elderly female and a grown lad, whose names I have forgotten—that they were the principal and original owners of the land, and that it would be necessary that a reserve should be made in order that he and they should always have a home on the land, and that he should like it to include their settlement and cultivation, where we then were. The name of this place he himself told me was Parairai. No allusion was at that time made to a reserve at Whakarongo.

Subsequently, on my proceeding to Waiuku to complete the purchase of this block, Aihepene asked me whether any reserve had been made by Ihaia. I told him one reserve of a hundred acres had been made by him at his settlement. Aihepene then, evidently from a strong feeling of jealousy, said that he must have a similar reserve made for him, and then mentioned Whakarongo as the locality, which was consented to by me after considerable delay.

The way in which the reserves are mentioned in the deed conveys, by implication, their respective ownership only.

WILLIAM N. SEARANCKE.
5th September, 1862.

Minutes.

Mr. Searancke having decided that Ihaia is entitled to Parairai, and that Whakarongo was intended for Aihepene, they should be informed accordingly.—J. ROGAN. 2nd December, 1862.

For Mr. Searancke. To state to whom the Crown grant for Whakarongo should be issued, as well as Parairai.—J. ROGAN. 12th January, 1863.

Parairai is for Ihaia te Manga; Whakarongo is for Kaihau Aihepene.—WILLIAM N. SEARANCKE. 12th January, 1863.

No. 79Mr. Commissioner PARRIS to the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

Respecting Purchase of Te Kawau Pa. New Plymouth, 3rd November, 1862.
SIR,—

With reference to the Kawau, Native reserve in the Town of New Plymouth, I have now the honour to report, for the information of the Government, that the land has been conveyed to Her Majesty, the houses have been conveyed to the General Government, and the rent, &c, duly paid in accordance with my instructions from the Hon. the Native Minister, conveyed to me by letter from the Under-Secretary, dated the 12th September last. The only question not settled is that in reference to a piece of land for them at the Henui (his Honour the Superintendent not having been written to on the subject), as recommended by me in my letter of the 16th April last, and approved by the Government, as reported to me by the Acting Native Secretary by letter dated the 8th May last.

I have now the honour to request to be informed whether the Government wish to have the deed of conveyance for the land registered in this, the province to which it appertains.

His Honour the Superintendent has requested me to state that he shall be glad to have the land and houses handed over to him at the earliest convenience, to enable him to complete certain works which have been commenced there.

I have, &c.,

ROBERT PARRIS, District Commissioner.

The Chief Land Purchase Commissioner, Auckland.

SIR,—

There is some misunderstanding about the reserve at Wharekaka. I never agreed to give it up either to Manihera or to Wi Tutere, and nothing was said to me about Wi Tutere building his house there. Manihera has repeatedly applied to purchase the reserve, but I have always declined to sell it, but promised to take his application into favourable consideration if he succeeded in inducing the Natives to withdraw their claims to Borlase's land. I have, in fact, no power to part with the reserve, except it can be made part of such an arrangement as I proposed in respect of Borlase's homestead. You will, therefore, explain all this to Wi Tutere, and request him not to proceed with his house. Let me have an estimate of the quantity of land in Karaitiana's block as soon as the survey is completed, and sound him as to price.

Mr. Borlase's Land.

I wrote to Manihera last week telling him not to mix himself further with the dispute about Borlase's land. He has, I think, done all he can be called upon to do in the matter. It would be well to caution the Natives that, as they have not paid for the land, £200 of the £440 paid by them to Mr. McLean having been returned, they can only have a claim to a very small portion of the land. I enclose a letter from Romana te Pehi, setting up a claim to Karaitiana's land. Inquire into it.

I have, &c.,

I. E. FEATHERSTON, Superintendent.

Mr. S. Deighton, Greytown.

Wairarapa.—Respecting Wi Tutere's Application for Wharekaka Reserve. Wairarapa, 20th February, 1863
SIR,—

With reference to Wi Tutere's application for the Wharekaka Reserve, I remember the conversation that took place at Greytown, just as you were leaving for Wellington, when he asked leave to settle there till he was able to purchase it. You then told him he might do so, as the place would not be sold to the Europeans. He asked you at the time if you would give him a pukapuka, so that it would be all right. You then said there was no occasion for that, as Manihera had already applied for the land, and that you should not forget it, and that there was no fear of its being sold to the Europeans. He mentioned at the same time that he was going to build a whare there. The conversation took place outside the house, just before Mr. Mantell left, and as there was a great noise and disturbance among the Natives it is possible it may have slipped your memory. I remember the conversation from the fact of Tutere being so very anxious to have the pukapuka. I will see Tutere, however, and give him your message without delay. The estimate of the quantity of land in Karaitiana's block will be forwarded by next mail, and as I am to meet him on Tuesday I can sound him as to a price.

Romana's Claims.

Romana was speaking to me about his claims; but he is in the wrong, as one of his own people, Hakaraia, went with us and pointed out the boundaries. There are two streams named Mangatopitopi, and he was under the impression that both were included in the block, whereas the line runs between them, excluding the portion that belongs to him. I informed him that no payment would be given until the affair was properly investigated, and the consent of all the owners obtained, at which he was perfectly satisfied. I shall see the claimants to Borlase's homestead to-morrow or Monday, when I shall mention about the £200.

Mr. Wardell has a message from the Governor to give to Ngairo and others respecting the King's flag, and has requested me to be present with him, merely as a witness to their answer. I have promised to do so, with the understanding that I am not to appear in the matter in any way, or to say anything, as I told him I was cautioned by you some time ago to avoid the subject.

I have, &c.,

S. DEIGHTON.

His Honour the Superintendent, Wellington.

No. 82. MEMORANDUM respecting GRANTS for TAMIHANA TE RAUPARAHA and MATENE TE WHIWHI at Otaki.

MR. EDWARDS, R.M., having been instructed by the Hon. the Colonial Secretary to proceed with the issue of certain Crown grants for allotments in the Township of Otaki, to be granted to Tamihana te Rauparaha and Matene te Whiwhi, I accompanied that gentleman as surveyor, to ascertain whether it was the wish of other Natives occupying or owning allotments that they should be placed on the same footing as regards title to their land as the above-mentioned individuals. After having ascertained the consent of about sixteen to the system of Crown grants being adopted, I was unexpectedly stopped in my endeavours by the interference of the King Natives at Otaki. They came over in a body from Pukekaraka, and a very warm discussion ensued between the two parties. The usual arguments were used by the King party—viz., that the mere survey of any allotments in the town would be an act leading to the establishment of the Queen's mana in the district—and I was distinctly told by them that any attempt on my part to measure any pieces in the town, or even to make a resurvey of the pieces claimed by Tamihana, would be resisted by force. My answer to them was that I only visited Otaki with the object of ascertaining their wishes; that a promise had been made to Tamihana and Matene, and that if any others wished to enjoy the same privileges I was there for the purpose of either obtaining their consent or to hear their objections to the same.

Both previous to meeting the Natives and subsequently, I had conversations with the Ven. Archdeacon Hadfield on the subject, and, that gentleman's objections to the system proposed to be adopted being identical with those raised by the Natives, I will briefly give them: (1.) That the Town of Otaki is one in which tribal right exists to its fullest extent—common to all; and no particular piece, no matter whether in occupation or not, can be dealt with without the consent of the whole. (2.) That hitherto the Natives have always objected to any individualization being attempted, more especially on the occasion of the survey of Tamihana's claims being made under the direction of Mr. Searancke. (3.) That it would be a certain means of dispersing the Natives and introducing an objectionable class of Europeans. (4.) Questions the legal right of Government to grant land over which the Natives have not surrendered their right to Her Majesty. (5.) That one of the pieces claimed by Tamihana, being that on which his father lived, was at the time of his death proposed to be given (with the consent of all) as a site for a hospital.

In conclusion, I must beg leave to express my opinion that if such grants are made to the parties in question, giving them thus a power to sell—which it impossible they might avail themselves of—it will lead, in the present state of affairs, to (at the least) a very bad feeling among the Otaki Natives.

GEORGE F. SWAINSON, Commissioner, Native Reserves.

Wellington,

23rd February, 1863.

No. 83. His Honour the SUPERINTENDENT to Mr. SAMUEL DEIGHTON.

Wairarapa.—Relative to Reserve said to have been given to Manihera. Superintendent's Office, Wellington,
24th February, 1863

SIR,—

It is impossible that any such conversation as you report can have taken place between Tutere and myself; as I have uniformly refused to part with the reserve to Manihera except on condition of Borlase's land being given to me. Any application of Tutere to occupy and build upon the land must have been met at once by a distinct refusal. What passed between yourself and Tutere of course I do not know, but certainly I never gave permission to Tutere to occupy the reserve, nor held out any hope of selling it to him. On the contrary, I requested you to explain to Tutere that, though the land should not be sold to Europeans, yet I could not, at present, make any arrangement respecting it with Manihera, who had the first claim to it. I have written to Mr. McLean respecting Nepia's claim, and shall communicate his answer as soon as I receive it. Ascertain where Wi Kingi is, whether at Otago or the Kaikouras, and write to him asking when he intends returning to complete the sale of the land at Greytown, his title to which is claimed by Ngatuere and others.

I have, &c.,

I. E. FEATHERSTON.

Mr. S. Deighton.

No. 84. COPY of a DESPATCH from his Grace the Duke of NEWCASTLE, K.G., to Governor Sir GEORGE GREY, K.C.B.

Downing Street, 26th February, 1863.

SIR,—

I have had under my consideration an Act passed by the Legislature of New Zealand intituled "An Act to amend the Native Reserves Act." The effect of this Act is to transfer to the Governor and Council the species of trusteeship exercised hitherto in respect to Native reserves by a Board of Commissioners; and, as the assent of the Natives is a necessary condition for bringing Native reserves under the operation of the Act, it enables the Governor in Council also to declare that this assent has been obtained.

I cannot but view this Act with great apprehension, though I observe your Ministry consider it of so ordinary a character as to require no comment. Even in England it is thought necessary that the administration of any important trust, affecting the management of large landed property, should be vested in some permanent body unaffected by the politics of the day, and it would be held very unsafe to vest such a trust in the Ministry for the time being. But all the peculiarities of the present case, whether arising out of the circumstances of New Zealand as a new country or out of the nature of the peculiar trust, which lies especially exposed to the varying impulses of popular feeling, and, if unjustly or even inconsistently administered, may rouse the most dangerous kind of discontent enhance the objections of principle to which the Act lies open. The circumstance that the Governor's concurrence is necessary to the acts of the Ministry may possibly furnish a guard against a hasty assumption of the Native assent, that being a matter on which a veto can be effectively used; but, in matters of practical administration, where action is indispensable, and a veto therefore ineffective, it is plain that the management of these Native lands will be exposed immediately to the alternations of popular feeling.

As, however, I have relinquished to the Colonial Government the administration of Native affairs, I am bound to assume that the Act will be so administered as to neutralize its obvious dangers; and I have to inform you that Her Majesty will not be advised to exercise her power of disallowance in respect to it.

I have, &c.,

NEWCASTLE.

Governor Sir George Grey, K.C.B.

No. 85.[Extract from New Zealand Gazette.]

G. F. Swainson, Esq., appointed to ascertain Assent of Natives under "The New Zealand Native Reserves Act, 1856." Native Office, Auckland, 25th April; 1863

HIS Excellency the Governor has been pleased to appoint George F. Swainson, Esq., to be a person to ascertain the assent of the Natives in the Province of Wellington to their reserves being brought under the operation of "The Native Reserves Act, 1856."

F. D. BELL

The RESIDENT MAGISTRATE, Central Whanganui, to the Hon. the NATIVE MINISTER.

Native Eel-weirs for Sale. Courthouse, Central Whanganui, 28th April, 1863.

SIR,—

In compliance with a minute of the Native Minister, dated 8th November, 1862, on letter from D. S. Drurie, R.M., dated 30th June, 1862, respecting the eel and inanga weirs in the District of Okiu, on the Mataraua Stream and its tributaries, I have the honour to report that I proceeded on the 13th March, in company with the chiefs Tamati Puna Pehira and Hoani Wiremu Hipongo, to get all the information I could respecting these fisheries. I would state that, on the day previous to my being there, some one (supposed to be a European) set fire to and burnt one of the principal weirs in that locality, which at the time nearly put an end to further negotiation. However, I beg to state the number and names of nearly the whole of the eel and inanga weirs, most of which were seen by me—namely: (1) Wharetahi, (2) Otapiri, (3) Oti, (4) Waihirereiti, (5) Waihirerenui, (6) Te Houhi, (7) Aratawa, (8) Ngawarua, (9) Okurangatai, (10) Puhikanui, (11) Mangapaiari, (12) Ta Kahakaha, (13) Te Pakiaka, (14) Katikatea, (15) Te Piri-o-Hema, (16) Tatai-o-te-Matau, (17) Te Rere I., (18) Te Rere II., (19) Pirinoa, (20), Putataua, (21) Maraeroa, (22) Tutumapou, (23) Whangairiro, (24) Okahukura, (25) Rotokopu, (26) Kairepa, (27) Kahukatia, (28) Whareatua, (29) Kaitara, (30) Maeaui, (31) Tanga-a-te-Kahoroiiwi, (32) Waikamate, (33) Te Poroporo, (34) Tuhi-a-te-Rerewha, (35) Te Awahurie, (36) Moturautawhiri, (37) Makakahi, (38) Te Uri-a-te-Wharemoa, (39) Korakonui, (40) Otarawairua. These forty weirs are in the main stream of the Mataraua.

The following are in the tributaries, principally the Mangamouku Creek—namely: (41) Matakanohi I., (42) Matakanohi II., (43) Puharawhara, (44) Te Kupenga, (45) Mangamutu, (46) Arapakiaka, (47) Te Kopua, (48) Te Parapara, (49) Kohikohitawa, (50) Te Ngarukaiwaka, (51) Mata Herepuru, (52) Kohukohu, (53) Maraua, (54) Takanga-o-Ngatai, (55) Te Mata, (56) Te Kaiwhata—which are now offered by the owners of these fisheries for the sum of £200.

I would state that these are all the fisheries owned by the Natives on the above-named stream and its tributaries, but I do not recommend the above sum, leaving to the Government to state what sum will be given.

I have, &c.,

JOHN WHITE R.M., Central Whanganui.

The Hon. the Native Minister, Auckland.

Memorandum.—(Received 2nd May.)

Mr. White requested to state whether the sum named is understood as an equivalent for the cancelling of the whole eel-pa clause and rights under it in the Whanganui deed.

W. MANTELL.

2nd May.

Memorandum.

Mr. White (6th May) says: "The £200 asked for by the Natives is only for the weirs in the stream and Valley mentioned in my report; not for all the fisheries mentioned in the Whanganui Purchase deed." For the Minister for Native Affairs.

W. MANTELL.

9th May.

Memorandum.

Mr. Mantell.

Will you be pleased to communicate with the Superintendent of Wellington, and ascertain whether his Honour would recommend the sum of £200 being paid for the acquisition of the eel-weirs mentioned by Mr. White. I fear that, at this rate, the extinction of the eel-weirs at Whanganui would involve the extinction of the balance of the Land Purchase Fund of Wellington.

F.D. BELL, Native Minister.
2nd July.

Minute.

The demand is monstrous, and the Native Minister is perfectly correct. I certainly shall not agree to more than £25 being paid for the eel weirs named by Mr. White. I believe great mischief will ensue from Native Resident Magistrates and Native Reserves Surveyors being allowed to meddle with land questions.....

I. E. FEATHERSTON, Superintendent.

Whanganui,

7th July, 1863.

No. 87. Mr. Commissioner SWAINSON to the Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Respecting Reserves at Waiwhetu. Native Reserves Office, Wellington, 5th July, 1864.
SIR,—

I have the honour to bring the following case under your consideration and to request instructions thereon:—

- On the allotment of Native reserves, &c., by Colonel McCleverty, to the different tribes and hapus in the Port Nicholson District, certain lands were given to the Waiwhetu Natives (Te Amua), including Section No. 19, Lower Hutt, purchased for them from a private individual.
- This section was occupied by them at once, and is so still, having been subdivided by and among, themselves.
- Of the original holders thereof, as mentioned in the deed (twenty-five in number), only four or five are now alive.
- The right to the various strips into which the section was divided, occupied formerly by the aforesaid original holders, has been a source of continual dispute between the heirs thereto or others putting themselves forward as such.
- The particular case in dispute is as to the disposition of that portion belonging to Te Watarauhi (deceased), the principal chief of Te Amua.
- During the last year I have held, at their own request, no less than five meetings to discuss the question; and, although satisfactory decisions have been arrived at for the time, a month hardly elapses without a repetition of the dispute.
- I yesterday informed the Natives that, with the concurrence of the Government, I should bring the case under the Intestate Native Succession Act, to which they unanimously agreed on the principles of the Act being explained to them.
- Under clause 2 of the said Act, I therefore apply for and on behalf of Hoani, Tipene, and Huhana, disputing claimants in this case, that an inquiry be made by a Commissioner (myself or some other person) to be appointed in that behalf.
- That any Commissioner, so appointed, may have power to inquire into any similar case that may exist in regard to the rightful ownership of other portions of said section.
- That, with the consent of the Natives lawfully entitled to any portion of the said section, a readjustment of the division thereof may be made in order to facilitate the issue of Crown grants.

I have, &c.,

GEORGE F. SWAINSON, Commissioner of Native Reserves.

The Hon. the Colonial Secretary,
Native Department.

The RESIDENT MAGISTRATE, Waipa, to the Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Waipa.—Requesting that Land at Whatawhata be reserved. Whatawhata, 11th November, 1864.
SIR,—

It being the intention of the Government shortly to locate settlers at this post, I have to request that the point of land where I am at present residing may be held as a Government reserve. I lately had the honour of pointing out to you the locality to which I refer, and my reason for requesting it is that closely adjoining my house there is a burial-ground belonging to William Naylor and the Ngatimahanga Tribe, which consequently is held in high respect amongst them. I have been requested also by William Naylor and several other Natives to ask the Government to reserve this piece of land, as they are averse to the idea of the remains of some of the highest chiefs being desecrated by settlers. The whole piece is not above three acres, and a small portion is river frontage.

I have, &c.,

R. C. MAINWARING, R.M.

The Hon. the Colonial Secretary, Auckland.

Memorandum.

Referred to Major Heaphy. Will he be so good as to have a reserve made, for general purposes, where indicated?—W. Fox. 17th November, 1864.

Mr. Stephens, surveyor at Whatawhata, has been instructed to make this reserve.—C. HEAPHY. 19th November, 1864.

No. 89. Mr. Commissioner SWAINSON to the Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Land at Porirua to be brought under "The New Zealand Native Reserves Act, 1856." Native Reserves Office, Wellington, 17th November, 1864.
SIR,—

I have the honour to enclose a certificate and report for adoption by His Excellency the Governor in Council, that I have ascertained that certain Natives, owners of a portion of land excepted from sale (clause 14, "Native Reserves Act, 1856"), have assented that it should be brought under the provisions of the Act. There is no provision made that such assent should be given by them in writing, but they willingly complied with my request that such should be done. The land is a portion of a large block excepted in Mr. Spain's decision on the New Zealand Company's purchases, and can be most advantageously let for their benefit if removed from the jurisdiction and penalties of the Native Land Purchase Ordinance.

The intentions and working of the Native Reserves Acts are so little understood by the Natives that I am preparing an analysis and compendium of them in Maori, which I trust, after submitting to the Government, I may be authorized to have printed. The cost of such for the use of the district would not, I think, exceed £10 or £15, which I should propose to defray from the Native Reserve Fund, leaving it, of course, for the Government to order any extra number of copies for the use of other districts they saw fit to do.

I have, &c.,

GEORGE F. SWAINSON, Commissioner of Native Reserves.

The Hon. the Colonial Secretary,
Native Department.

MEMORANDUM for the NATIVE MINISTER.

Wellington.—Regarding a Piece of Land at Te Aro.

THE land alluded to in Moturoa's letter is seven acres allotted under Colonel McCleverty's arrangements to Pipitea Natives, but for Moturoa especially. No Crown grant has been issued for this land.

Moturoa is a very strong Kingite, and has for the last three years left Pipitea, and resides at Waikanae. His object in giving it to Mohi appears to be an underhanded transaction, in order that he may reap the benefit of a Crown title. This he acknowledges by saying he "does not know the troubles of this world." His title is perfectly clear to the land, if not vitiated by his adherence to Kingism.

I do not see how any such mode of gift, or transfer, can be acquiesced in by the Government; but on his taking the oath of allegiance, and submitting to the Queen's authority, I should recommend that he should receive a grant for the same, when he will be at liberty to dispose of it as he thinks fit.

GEORGE F. SWAINSON, Commissioner of Native Reserves.

Native Reserves Office,

11th February, 1865.

Enclosure.

Te Aro, 9th January, 1865.

FRIEND,—

This is my word to you about my land at Te Aro, that I have given it to Mohi Ngaponga, and to his wife Hera, and to their children. The reason I give it is because I do not know the difficulties [? troubles] of this world. I have fixed this land for Mohi Ngaponga, and for his wife Hera, and for their children. They will show my letter to you, when you can write a Crown grant for Mohi, and Hera, and their children. The acres of that land are seven, inside the fence; towards one side the fence is on the hill of Tira. You work this. This is my land I have fixed for Mohi, and for his Wife, and their children, lest I should be wrong, and that some other man should be hasty about this land. Therefore I have completed the gift of it to Mohi. You give him the Crown grant. My words are very straight. There is no dispute about this block. These are the names of his children: Mere Whakateni and Hemi Moturoa. Enough.

From your loving friend,

ROPIHA MOTUROA.

Mr. Swainson, Commissioner of Lands.

No. 91.[Extract from New Zealand Gazette, 7th June, 1865.]

Fundarising from Native Reserves, Wellington, to be paid over and expended in the Erection of Native Hostelry, Molesworth Street.

By His Excellency Sir GEORGE GREY, Knight Commander of the Most Honourable Order of the Bath, Governor and Commander-in-Chief in and over Her Majesty's Colony of New Zealand and its Dependencies, and Vice-Admiral of the same, &c.

WHEREAS, by "The New Zealand Native Reserves Act, 1856," it is enacted that it shall be lawful for the Governor of the said colony at any time, and from time to time, by Letters Patent under the Public Seal of the Colony, to appoint persons to be Commissioners for carrying this Act into effect, who shall be styled "Commissioners of Native Reserves," and such Commissioners from time to time to remove: And whereas by "The Native Reserves Amendment Act, 1862," it is enacted that, from and after a day to be fixed by the Governor by Proclamation, to be inserted in the Government Gazette of the colony, and also of each of the provinces of New Zealand, all the power and authority which by "The Native Reserves Act, 1856," are given to, or vested in, or which may be exercised by Commissioners appointed or to be appointed under that Act shall vest in and may be exercised by the Governor: And whereas, by a Proclamation bearing date the fourth day of August, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-three, all the said powers were, from and after the first day of September then next ensuing, declared to vest in the Governor of the said colony: And whereas by the second recited Act it is further enacted that the Governor may, by Order in Council, from time to time delegate all or any of the powers competent to the Commissioners under the said Act unto any person or persons for any time, subject to such regulations and restrictions, or stipulations, as may be specified in such orders, and every such delegation may from time to time in like manner be altered or revoked: And whereas I, Sir George Grey, the Governor of the said colony, did, by Order in Council bearing date the twelfth day of September, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-three, delegate to George Frederick Swainson, of Wellington, in the Province of Wellington, Esquire, all the powers competent to Commissioners under the said first-recited Act, without any restrictions or stipulations whatever, until the same shall be revoked: And whereas by the first-recited Act it further enacted that all moneys which shall come to the hands of the Commissioners under the provisions of this Act, except in respect of special endowments, shall be applied by such Commissioners for the benefit of the aboriginal inhabitants for whose benefit such lands may have been set apart, in such manner as the Governor of the said colony may from time to time direct:

Now, therefore, I, the said Sir George Grey, the Governor as aforesaid, in exercise of the said power and authority, do hereby order George Frederick Swainson, as such Commissioner as aforesaid, to pay over such sum or sums of money, being the produce of Natives reserves, as have or shall from time to time come into his hands under the provisions of the first-recited Act, to such person or persons as the Honourable the Minister for Native Affairs for the time being shall from time to time direct, for the erection, fencing, furnishing, &c., of the Native house about to be built in Molesworth Street, in Wellington aforesaid, or for such other purposes as the said Minister shall approve, on behalf of the Natives of the said Province of Wellington.

Given under my hand, at the Government House at Wellington, and issued under the Seal of the Colony of New Zealand, this seventh day of April, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-five.

G. GREY.

By His Excellency's command.
WALTER MANTELL.

MEMORANDUM as to the TITLE of NATIVES holding LAND under Colonel Mc CLEVERTY's Deeds.

Wellington, 21st April, 1865.

A CASE having come yesterday before the Resident Magistrate in which the title by which the Natives hold land by virtue of Colonel McCleverty's deeds is considered questionable, if not invalid, will the Hon. the Native Minister be good enough to obtain the opinion of the Attorney-General on the subject? It is argued that the deeds in question are merely agreements "subject to the approval of the Lieutenant-Governor or Governor" (see deed), no evidence of such approval being forthcoming. It is a case of such vital importance to the Natives that I am most anxious that the point should be settled immediately. The case was adjourned to enable Mr. Brandon to obtain further evidence. Enclosed is the deed I produced in Court, and which was considered waste paper. All of Colonel McCleverty's deeds are worded in the same manner. If the view taken by the Resident Magistrate is correct, the title to every piece of land in the vicinity of the town (including Te Aro and Pipitea-Pas) given to the Natives by Colonel McCleverty is invalid.

GEORGE F. SWAINSON, Commissioner of Reserves.

The Hon. the Native Minister.

Opinion.

I understand that this land formed part of the tract included in grant of the Port Nicholson District to the New Zealand Company. On the dissolution of the Company it reverted to the Crown. Colonel McCleverty, as the authorized agent of the Crown, agreed with certain Natives to grant them the piece of land in question. Under such agreement the Natives have a good equitable title, which the law would no doubt enforce, and which the Crown is prepared to maintain. Mr. B—— occupies the land under agreement with the Natives for a lease. Mr. B—— cannot dispute his lessor's title. I can offer no opinion on the point as to how this state of affairs may bear upon the question before the Resident Magistrate.

HENRY SEWELL, Attorney-General.
26th April, 1865.

No. 93. Mr. Commissioner SWAINSON to the Hon. the NATIVE MINISTER.

Leasing of Allotments at Te Aro and Pipitea to Europeans. Native Reserves Office, Wellington, 2nd May, 1865.

SIR,—

The private leases and agreements between Native owners, or, at all events, claimants, of small allotments in Te Aro and Pipitea Pas are increasing to such an extent that I think it my duty to call your attention thereto, and beg to offer a few suggestions as to the best means of preventing points of law (which may affect the Native title in, the first place, and Europeans' right of occupation in the second) being brought to bear against either party.

The case stands thus: Te Aro and Pipitea Pas are guaranteed to the respective tribes by Colonel McCleverty, not as under the general arrangement of an exchange for other lands.

I think that impartial men of both tribes consider that these pas are held by them under a sort of supervision of the Government—i.e., that in cases of dispute the Government have a perfect right of interference. No special subdivision of these pas has ever been made, so far as title is concerned. About seven or eight year ago the resident Natives employed a private surveyor to undertake this work, but his plans are, and will be, continually liable to dispute by those who were not present at the time of survey. These Natives have ample opportunities of letting their small pieces with considerable advantage to themselves, but it ought to be done on some system; not to allow a single individual, on his own word, to claim and lease without others, who may have an equal right, being made aware of the transaction.

I would beg to suggest the following plan for the consideration of the Native Minister: (1.) That the Government should call upon or request all Native claimants (or half-castes) to lands in the two pas in question to assemble and state their claims. (2.) In this case the provisions of the Intestate Native Succession Act might be made use of, as so many of the original holders are dead. (3.) That if possible the very irregular shape of the claims should be adjusted and made as rectangular as possible, but of course with due regard to the size and value of the original claim. (4.) That when this is done grants be made from the Crown to those whose claims are substantiated.

I think some such plan might at all events be attempted with success at Pipitea, which has been so long unoccupied by the Natives—in fact there is only one resident on it. Its only use to them is the annual rentals which might be obtained from it, and its excellent situation would insure its speedy occupation.

In the case of the portion of the Te Aro Pa occupied by Marangai's party, the Government will eventually have to step in, and finally settle the disputes which almost daily arise.

I have, &c.,

GEORGE F. SWAINSON, Commissioner of Native Reserves.

The Hon. the Native Minister.

Mr. Commissioner KEMP to the NATIVE SECRETARY.

Respecting Purchase of the Kahikatea Reserve. District Commissioner's Office, Bay of Islands, 20th May, 1865.

SIR,—

With reference to the memorandum dated the 16th instant, in further explanation of the negotiations for the purchase of the bush reserve adjoining the coal mines at the Kawakawa I have now the honour to forward, for the information of the Hon. the Native Minister, the copy of a letter, with translation attached, from the chief Kawhiti, who is the leading man in this district, on the same subject. After giving the subject careful consideration, I think I shall best consult the interests of the Government by paying the money to the Native settlers as soon as the plan is completed, believing that, under the circumstances, there will be no difficulty in arranging a transfer of the land in question in the usual manner to the provincial authorities.

I have, &c.,

H. TACY KEMP, District Commissioner.

The Native Secretary, Wellington.

Bay of Islands.—Urging Purchase of the Kahikatea Reserve. Kawakawa, Waiomio, 17 Mei, 1865.
E.HOA,—

Tenei ano te kupu ki a koe Ki te oti te ruri a te Pepene, i te Kawakawa, ki te hoki-atu raua, kia hohorotia mai nga moni te whakaputa kia wawe te riro atu te whenua i a koe, kei puta nga raruraru a te Maori; engari, kia tere nga moni te puta. I mea atu au ki a koe i to taua korerotanga i Kororareka, ki te oti te ruri, o te Kawawawa e hohoro ranei te whakaputa, i nga moni? Mea mai ana koe ki au, "Ae." Ka mea atu au, kei pera me ta Mita Hane Wiremu me Ngahuhu na te roa, ka he; ki te puta nga moni, hei Kororareka puta ai—ka mutu ena kupu.

MAIHI P. KAWHITI.

Ki a Te Henare Kepa, kei Te Kerikeri.

[TRANSLATION.]

Kawakawa, Waiomia, 17th May, 1865.
FRIEND,—

My address to you is this: As soon as Mr. Fairburn has finished the survey of the Kawakawa, and they have returned, let no time be lost in paying the money, and cause the land to fall into your hands at once, before any further questions (unforeseen) arise on the part of the Native sellers. Let then there be no delay in paying the money. When we were discussing the matter at Kororareka, I inquired of you thus: "When the survey is finished will the money soon after be paid?" Your answer was, "Yes." I then observed that it was better that it should be so, lest a similar proceeding arise to that which has taken place in the negotiations entered into by Henry Williams for the purchase (under the new Act) of the Ngahuhu Blocks, viz., the delay in the payment of the money has set aside the purchase. When the money is paid, let it be paid at Kororareka.

MAIHI P. KAWHITI.
Henry Kemp,
Kerikeri.

Willington.—Suggesting That Native Reserves be brought under Operation of the Native Lands Act.

THE Hon. the Attorney-General has, I think, decided on a former occasion that the title has not been extinguished in the tenths of land set aside by the New Zealand Company for the Natives, as such are excluded in the grant from the Crown. In that case they can only be brought under the Act of 1852 by obtaining the Natives' consent, under clause 14. But from copies of correspondence attached it will be seen that a former Attorney-General decided that lands held under Colonel McCleverty's arrangements are not reserves within the "meaning of 'The Native Reserves Act, 1856.'"

With regard to Te Aro, Colonel McCleverty's deed states: "This pa is also guaranteed to them; vide map attached, containing 2 acres 1 rood 11 perches.—W. A. MCCLEVERTY, Lieut.-Colonel." Pipitea deed says: "The plan of the pa will hereafter be annexed; it is guaranteed to them, and is a Native or public reserve.—W. A. McC."

If this class of land is not at present, or cannot be, brought under the Native Reserves Act, are not the Europeans leasing the same subject to the penalties of the Native Land Purchase Ordinance? Might they not be brought under the Native Land Act? We cannot force them to assent.

GEORGE F. SWAINSON.
16th June, 1865.

MEMORANDUM for the Hon. ATTORNEY-GENERAL.

I think that the simplest and fairest way of settling this would be by the Native Land Act, if it can legally be applied to them. Can it?—W. B. D. MANTELL. 17th June, 1865.

Minute.

The late Attorney-General's opinion is not, I think, substantially different from my own. In order to bring the lands in question under the Native Reserves Act, proceedings must be first taken under the 14th section of that Act. Till this was done the Commissioner of Native Reserves had no power over them. I think they may be brought under the Native Reserves Act in the manner pointed out in section 14 of that Act, or they may be dealt with under the Native Land Act.—HENRY SEWELL, Attorney-General. 19th June, 1865.

WALTER LAWRY BULLER, Esq., R.M., to the NATIVE SECRETARY.

As to Survey of Putiki Reserve. Resident Magistrate's Office, Whanganui, 29th June, 1865.
SIR,—

Adverting to my letter of the 28th instant (No. 44), I have now the honour to furnish for your information a copy of my correspondence with Mr. Field and with Mr. R. Woon on the subject of the Putiki-Whanganui Reserve, and the subdivisional survey thereof.

I have, &c.,

WALTER BULLER, Resident Magistrate.

The Native Secretary, Wellington.

Enclosures.(No. 1.)H. C. FIELD, Esq., Surveyor, to the RESIDENT MAGISTRATE, Whanganui.

Respecting Survey of Putiki Reserve. Whanganui, 27th May, 1865.

SIR,—

In reply to your inquiries as to the Putiki Reserve, and the survey of it, I beg to report as follows:—

The reserve consists in all of from seventeen to eighteen hundred acres of land, of which about two hundred acres is proposed to be laid out as a township, while the rest is merely surveyed with a view to the issue to the several owners of Crown grants for the various portions. The laying off of the township, and the survey of the outlying portions of the reserve, were first proposed during the Governor's visit to Whanganui at the end of the year 1862, and the work was at once commenced and for some time went on rapidly. In order to enable the town to be laid off according to a regular plan it was arranged that the various boundaries of the Native claims should be cancelled, and that to each of the original owners of the land town sections should be allotted in proportion to, and as nearly as possible in the situation of, his original holding. This was agreed to by the whole body at a meeting convened by Mr. White, Resident Magistrate (I think in 1863), but a difficulty afterwards arose from some of the Natives, of whose land a considerable portion would be absorbed in a street, and who seemed to feel no certainty that they should get the damage made good out of the adjacent lands, insisting on the street being arranged so as to run along the old Native boundary-lines, irrespective of parallelism, equidistance, or regularity. After battling with these recusants for some time, Mr. White, who either had not, or supposed he had not, the necessary powers to override such frivolous objections, and who applied for them repeatedly in vain, desired me to let the town survey stand over, and get on with that of the outlying lands. This was accordingly done; a considerable portion of the boundaries of the several Natives' land were ascertained and surveyed, and seventeen blocks, measuring in all about four hundred acres, were mapped, and applications sent in for Crown grants. The grants, however, did not come, and Mr. White seemed to possess no power to let the lands, and thus the work seemed to a great extent thrown away. Several hundred acres more have been partially surveyed, but could not be mapped, because, in the absence of the Native owners of portions of the land, some of the boundaries could not be defined.

When the Governor was here a few months ago he promised to remove all the difficulties which had impeded the work, and desired me to get on with the town survey as fast as I could, and I have accordingly devoted to it all the time I have been able to spare from my duties as Town Surveyor. I have found the same objections made to the regularity of the plan as were offered in 1863, and in some cases by the same persons, and I have several times found the pegs pulled up and the flag-poles taken away. I have, however, persevered with the work, and hope, weather permitting, to have the whole of the portion of the town, from the Mission-house to Montgomery's, completed by the end of next week.

You will see by the above that the difficulty here arises from a totally opposite cause to that at Kaiapoi referred to by yourself, as it proceeds from the land being held as individual property, while the boundaries of the several holdings will not harmonize with a regular plan, owing to their having been run in all sorts of directions, according to the fancy of the Maoris themselves when they sub-divided the land. As regards the payment for the work, it was understood between Mr. White and myself that the Colonial Government was responsible for the whole, and this was confirmed by the Hon. Mr. Mantell when he visited Whanganui. Nothing, however, has yet been paid on account of the town survey, as it was Mr. White's intention to settle that part of my account out of the proceeds of some of the sections sold.

The survey for the country lands was paid for by Mr. White as the maps for the issue of Crown grants were sent in, a schedule being furnished with each map for Mr. White's guidance, and apportioning the cost among the several landowners whose lands were included in such map, with a view to the recovery of their share from each person.

I think the above will explain the position of the work in reference to the several points on which you requested information, but I shall of course be happy to furnish any further information if you should require it.

I have, &c.,

H. C. FIELD.

W.L. Buller, Esq., R.M.

(No. 2)Mr. Commissioner W. L. BULLER to Mr. Surveyor FIELD.

As to Subdivisional Survey of the Putiki Reserve. Resident Magistrate's Office, Whanganui, 4th June, 1865:
SIR,—

I am in receipt of your letter of the 27th ultimo in reference to the subdivisional survey of the Puitiki Reserve.

If Mr. Woon (who has been appointed under the 17th clause of "The Native Reserves Act, 1865") is prepared to report the assent of the Natives owning the reserve to its being brought under the operation of the Act, the principal difficulty adverted to in your letter will be at once obviated, and the progress of the survey no longer retarded by frivolous and vexatious claimants; for when the report has been adopted in Council and published in the New Zealand Gazette the Commissioner will proceed to administer the reserve himself in accordance with the provisions of the Act. But the first step is to get an accurate description of boundaries, in order that the reserve may be correctly defined in the schedule appended to Mr. Woon's report. I shall feel obliged, therefore, by your furnishing me with such description at your earliest convenience.

I have, &c.,

W. BULLER, R.M., Commissioner of Native Reserves.

H. C. Field, Esq., Surveyor, Whanganui.

Major SPEEDY, R.M., to the Hon. the NATIVE MINISTER.

The Claims of Natives to the Landing-place as a Reserve. Resident Magistrate's Office, Waiuku, 27th November, 1865.
SIR,—

I have the honour to inform you that a piece of land situated in the Village of Waiuku has been just cut up by the Government surveyors. This land is claimed by Aihepene and Hori. It is not among the pieces reserved by Mr. Turton for them, but I am given to understand that, since the completion of the purchase of the West Waiuku Block from the Ngatiteatas, Mr. Turton has offered them £100 for the piece referred to. I enclose a memorandum of Mr. Halse's, which mentions it as a Native reserve.

Hori Tauroa interfered with the surveyors, but on my promise to write to Government about it, and my assurance to him that the fact of the Government surveying it would not interfere with the title of the rightful owners, he allowed the survey to proceed.

I have, &c.,

JAS. SPEEDY, Resident Magistrate.

The Hon. the Native Minister, Wellington.

MEMORANDUM of GENERAL GOVERNMENT AGENT.

Mr. Warner is requested to state whether the surveyors referred to are Provincial Government surveyors; and, if so, what are the instructions in reference to the survey of the land referred to.—FRED. WHITAKER. 8th December, 1866.

The GENERAL GOVERNMENT AGENT to Major SPEEDY.

Office of the Agent for the General Government, Auckland, 13th December, 1865.
SIR,—

With reference to a letter from you under date November 27th, addressed to the Hon. the Native Minister, I have the honour to inform you that, beyond the completion of the survey of the land at Waiuku, to which Aihepene and Hori make a claim, nothing will be done until Mr. Turton or Mr. Mackay has made inquiry into the circumstances of the case.

I have, &c.,

FRED. WHITAKER.

Minute.

Mr. Warner.—In reference to the land at Waiuku, let the survey commenced be completed, but no further steps taken without further authority. Inform me when same complete.—FRED. WHITAKER. 12th December, 1865.

Minute of General Government Agent.

It appears to me from these papers that the land in question is part of the Waiuku Village, and is Crown land which has been handed over to the province. It also appears that the provincial authorities set the land apart as a landing-place, &c., for the Natives, and that it has been so used. The setting-apart, however, was not in exercise of any legal authority, and therefore did not change the character of the title, so that the land is still at the disposal of the province. Having regard, however, to Mr. Turton's statement of the object and use of still allowing the land to be used as heretofore, I do not think it would be right to sell it. Let it therefore be retained for use as heretofore, and let all parties be informed that it will be kept for this purpose as long as the Government think it necessary. Refer to the Waste Lands Commissioner to carry out the above.—FRED. WHITAKER. 29th January, 1866.

Minute by Deputy Waste Lands Commissioner.

The surveyor has been employed by the authority of the Provincial Government (vide correspondence 1502/65); and I beg to add, for his Honour's information and that of the General Government, that when the Waiuku Block was surveyed in 1855 all the Native reserves therein were defined, the portion of land at present adverted to not being one of them; that the block was subdivided for sale in 1856 by the Provincial Government, and then the spot alluded to, together with another adjoining piece of land, were set aside for the temporary accommodation of the Natives trading at Waiuku, in order that they might not interfere with intending settlers. The correspondence above quoted will show how the case has been recently dealt with.—H. N. WARNER, Deputy Waste Lands Commissioner. 9th December, 1865.

Minute.

Inform Major Speedy that nothing will be done in reference to the land beyond the completion of the survey until Mr. Turton or some other person has investigated the question of title. Refer to Mr. Turton, if he is about to return; if not, to Mr. Mackay.—FRED. WHITAKER. 12th December, 1865.

The CROWN AGENT, Auckland, to the Hon. the NATIVE MINISTER.

Waipa.—Applying for Crown Grants for Native Reserves in Waipa and Waitetuna Block. Auckland, 4th January, 1866.

SIR,—

I have the honour to transmit to you, for the issue of Crown grants, the plans and particulars of certain reserves and repurchases made by me in the Waipa and Waitetuna Block when engaged on that service as the Special Commissioner in 1864. Other similar reserves at Waiuku (plans enclosed) I forwarded about five months ago through Mr. Chief Judge Fenton, and for which the Crown grants have been received. I have visited Waipa and Raglan on purpose to be correct as to the grantees, and other items, and I hope that the Crown grants will be forwarded to me without delay.

I have, &c.,

H. H. TURTON, Crown Agent (late Special Commissioner).

The Hon. the Native Minister, Wellington.

WAIPA and Waitetuna Block (193,450 acres), purchased at Raglan, and deed of conveyance signed on the 16th September, 1864.—H. HANSON TURTON. Auckland, 4th January, 1866.

1. Native Reserves No. I.

Extent.—551 acres situate at Whatawhata, on the left proper bank of the Waipa.

Boundaries.—Commencing at Ikurangi, on the bank of the River Waipa, leaving out the point of land called Pungapunga (about twenty acres rebels' land, reserved for Government use), and running nearly north-west, striking the river, again following the course of the Waipa to a creek called Here-paenoa; from thence it runs south, keeping a swamp on the right hand till it reaches the Tawatawa Creek, which runs into the Waipa, and forms the southern boundary; thence down the Waipa till you reach the Ikurangi, which forms the eastern boundary. Plan attached.

Grantees.—(1) Hami Ngaropi, of Ngatimahanga; (2) Hemi Matene te Puke, of Ngatimahanga; (3) Hone Kiagi Muriwhenua, of Ngatimahanga; (4) Te Waapu.

Nature of Grant agreed on.—In trust for the members of the tribe, but with full power to lease or sell.

Native Beserves No. II.

Extent.—455 acres on left proper bank of Waipa.

Boundaries.—Commencing at Parewhakataha, on the Waipa (nearly opposite to Tuikarama), and running inland to Pukahukahu; then running north to Horomamaku, on the Mangakowhai, and following the course of that stream to the Waipa River; and then from the confluence of the Mangakowhai to Parewhakataha. Plan attached.

Grantees.—(1) Hetereka Otene-Riri, Ngatimahanga; (2) Akana Whaingara, Ngatimahanga; (3) Kereona Putoitoi, Ngatimahanga; (4) Piripi Otene, Ngatimahanga; (5) Tewi Otene, Ngatimahanga; (6) Rihimona Otene, Ngatimahanga; (7) Te Waaka Otene, Ngatimahanga.

Nature of Grant.—Same as Reserve No. I.

Native Reserves No. III.

Extent.—632 acres above Kaniwhaniwha Stream, on left proper bank of River Waipa.

Boundaries.—Commencing at the junction of the Kaniwhaniwha with River Waipa, and running up the former stream till it reaches the Totara; thence in a right line to the mouth of the Kohangawhirinoa Stream, and following the course of the Waipa to its junction with the Kaniwhaniwha.

Grantees.—(1) Te Aho, of Aotea; (2) Rihimonaotene; (3) Te Kewhene te Paia; (4) Te Rakena; (5) Hohepate Poria; (6) Wiremu Nera te Awaitaia, Ngatimahanga.

Nature of Grant.—Same as Nos. I. and II.—i.e., unconditional.

Native Reserves No. IV.—(Puketutu.)

Extent.—As surveyed, it is 3,400 acres and 28 perches, but the surveyor was misled by the Natives in the first instance. The names of the boundaries are right, and Major Heaphy will be able to insert the proper area on the Crown grant when it arrives. Plan attached.

Boundaries.—Commencing at Maunarima, and keeping the boundary-line to the Otonga Creek; running up the Otonga Creek to its meeting with the Mangaokahu Creek, and following the course of the latter till it falls into the Waitetuna, and so on in that river to the starting-point.

Grantees.—Wiremu Nera te Awaitaia, Ngatimahanga; Hakopa te Kotuku, Ngatimahanga; Hapeta Waaka Nukutaurua, Ngatimahanga; Hone Kingi Huriwhenua, Ngatimahanga; Eruini Matetaitua, Ngatimahanga; Te Waapu, Ngatimahanga; Hemi Nera, Ngatimahanga; Hemi te Puru, Ngatimahanga; Hone Pirihi, Ropata Piko, Hoani Ngaiwhi.

Nature of Grant.—Same as Reserves Nos. I., II., and III.

Native Reserves No. V.

Extent.—100 acres, situate at Kaiparera, on the left proper bank of the Waipa. Plan attached.

Boundaries.—As per plan.

Grantee.—A. J. Dickey, Clerk of Native Land Compensation Court, in trust for his wife, Eliza Dickey.

Nature of Grant.—As above.

Native Reserves No. VI.

Extent.—50 acres, Lot No. 61, on bank of the Mangaotama Creek, which runs into the Waipa below Te Rore.

Boundaries.—See plan attached.

Grantee.—Wiremu Nera te Awaitaia, chief of Ngatimahanga, Raglan.

Nature of Grant.—To himself unconditionally.

Native Reserves No. VII.

Extent.—22 acres 3 roods, Lot No. I., on proper right bank of Mangaotana Creek.

Boundaries.—See plan attached.

Grantee.—Wiremu Nera te Awaitaia, chief of Ngatimahanga Tribe, Whaingaroa.

Nature of Grant.—Unconditionally to himself.

Native Reserves No. VIII.

—(Reserves for the Ngatihourua Tribe, residing at Whatawhata, on the Waipa River.)

Reserve 1.—500 acres of country land at Tuhikaramea, about three miles above Whatawhata, on proper right bank of the River Waipa.

Boundaries.—See plan attached.

Grantees.—Matutaera te Kaniwhaniwha, Mohi te Rongomau, Waaka te Ruki, and Haria Tatai.

Nature of Grant.—Conditional. In trust for the members of the tribe, but without power either to lease or sell.

Reserve 2.—13 acres 1 rood 34 perches, situated at Te Taia, Whatawhata. Plan annexed.

Reserve 3.—3 acres 2 roods at Pehihoukura, Whatawhata; at present the residence of the local Magistrate, but to devolve on the Natives when no longer required by Government for any special purpose. As an old cemetery, it is better under our care than theirs. Plan annexed.

Grantees and Nature of Reserve.—The same as at Tuhikaramea, Reserve No. 1, above.

Reserve 4.—5 acres at Whatawhata, timber land: that is, twenty quarter-acre sections. Sections Nos. 150 to 170. See plan.

Reserve 5.—6 acres 1 rood at Whatawhata: that is, twenty-five quarter-acre town sections.

Grantees and Nature of Grant.—The grant for these two reserves had better remain until I can visit Waipa again, and so fix each claimant on his own proper section. I will then forward the names, numbers, and other particulars.

2. Native Re-purchases No. I.

Place.—At Kaiparera, on the Waipa. See plan.

Extent.—338 acres.

Price paid.—5s. per acre; £84 10s.

Grantees.—Hemi Matini te Puke, Ngatimahanga, 200 acres; Hone Kingi Huriwhenua, Ngatimahanga, 40 acres; Hakopa te Kotuku, Ngatimahanga, 20 acres; Waaka te Ruki, Ngatimahanga; 42 acres; Te Waaka, Ngatimahanga, 36 acres. Total, 338 acres.

Note.—The above-named purchasers will wish to have it subdivided by-and-by, and then apply for separate grants. Until then they wish to have one grant for the whole, as it is in the midst of a settling district.

Nature of Grant.—Unconditional.

Native Re-purchases No. II.

Place.—At Mangaone and Rangitukia Greeks, near Kaiparera, Waipa.

Extent.—108 acres.

Price paid.—5s. per acre; £27.

Grantee.—Hone Pirihi, Ngatimahanga, Raglan.

Nature of Grant.—Unconditional.

Native Re-purchase No. III.

Place.—Kaniwhaniwha, on the Waipa.

Extent.—332 acres. See plan attached.

Price paid.—5s. per acre; £83.

Grantees.—Matutaera Kaniwhaniwha, Ngatihourua, 220 acres; Hone Pihama and Hone Pirihi, 56 acres; Hone Ihaka, 28 acres; Wiremu Ngaweke, 28 acres. Total, 332 acres.

Nature of Grant.—Unconditional.

Native Re-purchases No. IV.

Place.—Tuhikaramea, on the Waipa (as before), on the Delta.

Extent.—56 acres.

Boundaries.—See plan attached.

Price paid.—£10 for twenty-eight acres. The other twenty-eight acres given to Heteraka as a commission for assisting me at the purchase, the same as was allowed to Aihepene and Hori Tauroa at Waiuku.

Grantees.—Heteraka Otene te Riri, Ngatimahanga, of Whaingaroa.

Nature of Grant.—Unconditional.

Native Re-purchases No. V.

Place.—Tuhikaramea, on River Waipa (as before), on the Delta.

Extent.—98 acres.

Boundaries.—See plan.

Price paid.—£35, or about 7s, 2d. an acre.

Grantee.—Homi Matene te Puke, of Ngatimahanga Tribe, Whaingaroa, Raglan.

Nature of Grant.—Unconditional.

H. H. TURTON, Special Commissioner.

Auckland,

17th July, 1866.

H. HANSON TURTON, Esq., to the SECRETARY for CROWN LANDS.

Whaingaroa.—Error in Boundary of Puketutu Reserve. Auckland, 11th January 1866.

SIR,—

In reference to the plan of the Puketutu Reserve at Waitetuna, near Raglan, I beg to draw your attention to the accompanying sketch of Mr. Todd, the District Surveyor, as being the correct one according to the deed of sale, and so to be inserted in the Crown grant for which I applied. Mr. Breen, the surveyor, was misled by the Raglan Natives as to the starting-point of his straight boundary from Waitetuna to Ngatokorua-a-te-ra-Whatiora, on the Waipa; and so included 486 acres more land than what was included in my original purchase.

I have, &c.,

H. HANSON TURTON.

The Secretary for Crown Lands, Wellington.

MEMORANDUM by JAMES MACKAY, Esq., Civil Commissioner.

THE accompanying tracing shows an error in the boundary of the Kaniwhaniwha block of land purchased by Mr. Turton on behalf of the Government from W. Nero and the Raglan Natives. It appears that about 486 acres have been taken from W. Barton and the Ngatitemainu Tribe. I believe the boundary is not quite correct yet. I now propose that a Crown grant should be given to W. Barton and his people for any land which may have been wrongfully taken from them by the error in the cutting of the line. On receipt of instructions in this matter I will proceed to complete the question.

JAMES MACKAY, Jun.
29th March, 1866.

Mr. Surveyor FRISSELL to Mr. JAMES MACKAY.

Waitetuna, 7th December, -1865.
SIR,—

I beg to inform you that, by direction of Mr. Todd, District Surveyor, I measured the distance from the Parawai Creek on the Waitetuna (the one from which the northern boundary-line of the Karamu Block was run by Mr. Breen) to the Maunurima Creek, which latter is the creek mentioned in the deed thus: "Ka timata hei te hau raro i te awa a Maunurima e rere ana ki roto ki Waitetuna, a haere whakamarangai i reira tae noa ki Nga-tokorua-a-te-ra-Whatiora i te taha o Waipa, &c.; and find the distance to be, 1,507 links, and the included angle to 77° 33#, as per the accompanying, sketch. The field-books and plans having gone into the Survey Office, I know not the length of the northern boundary-line so as to calculate the area, but assuming it at eight miles gives an area of 471 acres, which, paid for at the same rate, as the rest of the block, would amount to about £4 1s.

I have, &c.,

E. FRISSELL, Government Surveyor.

James Mackay, Esq., Civil Commissioner, Raglan.

The SPECIAL COMMISSIONER to Mr. MACKAY, Civil Commissioner.

Parnell, 11th January, 1866.
SIR,—

I beg to return the sketch which Mr. Randal has inserted on the large office copy, giving the surplus area at 486 acres, the boundary being longer than eight miles. He would like to be supplied with a true copy both of sketch and note. I have sent a copy with explanations to the Secretary of Crown Lands, so as to prevent the incorrect survey being inserted on the Crown grant. And if you recommend another Crown grant for the overplus in favour of Wi Patene in trust for Ngatitemama Tribe, or of his own family, as you suggested, it might be done at present time, and thus clear another difficulty from the path.

I have, &c.,

H. H TURTON.

Mr. Mackay, Civil Commissioner, Auckland.

No. 100.[Extract from New Zealand Gazette.]

Appointments under "The New Zealand Native Reserves Act, 1856." Native Secretary's Office, Wellington, 15th January, 1866.

His Excellency the Governor has been pleased to appoint Alexander Mackay, Esq., George Frederick Swainson, Esq., Robert Parris, Esq., and James Hamlin, Esq., to be persons to ascertain the assent of the Natives to their reserves being brought under the operation of "The Native Reserves Act, 1856."

A. H. RUSSELL.

No. 101.H. HANSON TURTON, Esq., Special Commissioner, to the Hon. the NATIVE MINISTER.

Waiuku.—Grants for Wahi-tapus should not issue except on certain Conditions. Auckland, 22nd January, 1866.
SIR,—

I have to beg that you will send up immediate instructions to our Registrar of Deeds not to issue any of the grants for the wahi-tapus and burying-grounds at Waiuku, except on receiving a certificate from the Resident Magistrate or Native Interpreter to the effect that all the dead have been exhumed and removed from off the section granted.

On the 3rd July I made an arrangement with the Ngatiteata to collect their dead from the seven teen different cemeteries scattered over the block into three burying-grounds only, which were mentioned. In return for these I would recommend the Government to issue direct grants, and allow them to sell the rest. But now they are applying for the grants before the bodies are removed, and so will bring much trouble both on the Government and the European purchasers.

I have, &c.,

H. HANSON TURTON, Commissioner.

The Hon. the Native Minister, Wellington.

No. 102.The COMMISSIONER of NATIVE RESERVES to the Hon. the NATIVE MINISTER.

Respecting Road at Upokotauaki. New Plymouth, 28th April, 1866.
SIR,—

With reference to the plan of Upokotauaki, with a roadway shown on it leading to Allotment No, 15, I have the honour to report, for the information of His Excellency's Government, that no public road was ever established there—nothing but a private road to Allotment No. 15, for which the owner thereof is bound to keep a gate by the Egmont Road, and also at the end of the road by Allotment No. 15.

I have, &c.,

R. PARRIS, Commissioner of Native Reserves.

The, Hon. the Native Minister, Wellington.

Reporting State of Native Reserves in the District, with Tabular Returns. Native Reserves Office, Wellington, 21st May, 1866.

SIR,—

In compliance with the instructions conveyed in your minute on the letter of Mr. Mackay's, 65/25/13, I have the honour to furnish the following report on the state of the Native reserves in this district, with tabular returns of each class. I have preferred adopting those forms, as they were furnished to the various Commissioners by the Government in or about 1859, and convey all the information required in a more concise manner than a mere official letter could do.

Previous to the passing of "The Native Reserves Act, 1856," the reserves, (which consisted only of those made by the New Zealand Company) were under the management of Colonel McCleverty, D. Wakefield, Attorney-General, and Mr. St. Hill, R.M. On the 16th March, 1858, a Commission was issued by Governor Browne to Messrs. St. Hill, Carkeek, Hutton, Strang, Tamehana te Rauparaha, Matene te Whiwhi, and Rawiri Puaha, in accordance with clause 1 of the Act. Mr. Wardell's name was subsequently added to the list.

The active management of the reserves was usually undertaken by Messrs. St. Hill, Strang, and Carkeek. For some time previous to the session of 1862 these gentlemen had frequently impressed upon Government the necessity of other arrangements being made, and tendered their resignations; as, holding most important official appointments, they considered that their duties as Commissioners could not be carried out effectually. For this reason mainly, I believe, the Native Reserves Amendment Act of 1862 was prepared by the Government, and passed by the Assembly.

At the close of the session my services as Surveyor of Native Reserves and Lands in the province were accepted by the Government, who at the same time intimated to me that such office would be accompanied with that of Commissioner under the Act of 1862. At the same time the Government accepted the resignation of the Commissioners appointed under Act of 1856.

Present Commissioners in the Province.

The Commissioners in the Province of Wellington now consist of—Myself, Wellington (district undefined); W. R. M. Buller, Whanganui (but previous to Mr. White's removal he was appointed Commissioner for Central Whanganui, while Mr. Buller held a similar office for Manawatu).

Classes of Reserves.

These are shown in the tabular returns already mentioned to consist of—(1) Town-acre reserves, New Zealand Company's country sections; (2) Colonel McCleverty's allocation reserves, taken from those general ones made by the New Zealand Company, and with additional country lands (unselected at that time by Europeans) given to Natives as compensation for surrounding various cultivations on selected lands; (3) Reserves brought under the Act by assent of Natives; (4) Reserves in Wairarapa and on the West Coast, made by or for, on purchase or sale of different blocks, but over which the Commissioners, past and present, have but little jurisdiction. Of this latter class no return is furnished.

Management of Classes.

Class No. 1, Town. — The remaining original town-acre reserves, after deducting Colonel McCleverty's awards, and the acres granted by Sir George Grey as hospital and college endowments, are managed by the Commissioner for the time being. For proceeds of these reserves see tabular return.

Class No 1, Country.—The same remarks apply. (See tabular return.)

Class No. 2, Town.—(Colonel McCleverty's allocation.)—These reserves are let by the Natives independently of the Commissioner, in accordance with the opinion and instructions of the Attorney-General (Whitaker), given to the late Commissioner. They are held by Te Aro, Pipitea, Waiwhetu, Ngatitama (Ohariu), and Tiakiwai Natives, under registered deeds made by Colonel McCleverty on behalf of the Governor. I have no means of ascertaining the amount of income derived. (See Return No. 2.)

Class No. 2, Country.—(See Remarks No. 2, Town.) In many cases I have been unable to ascertain the annual rental received by the Natives. As I have already stated, they are let independently of the Commissioner. So far as the information given to me by the lessees and the Natives goes, I can account for £558 10s. received by them annually as rent for country lands, but this is probably £200 or £300 below the actual rentals.

Before proceeding to Class No. 3, I must briefly mention that certain original town-acre reserves were, in 1851 and 1853, conveyed by His Excellency Sir George Grey to certain trustees as an endowment for the hospital and a proposed grammar school. As I have already made a separate report on one of these cases, it is not necessary that I should further allude to them.

Class No. 3 are those reserves made by Natives on the sale of a block of land. Over such reserves the Native title has not been extinguished, and they cannot be legally dealt with unless brought under clause 14 of Act of 1856, i.e., the Native assent to the land being under the Act. The Native Land Purchase Ordinance of 1847 prohibited the renting of such lands. Mr. Searancke, Land Purchase Commissioner, was the first officer appointed in this province to obtain assent under that Act. I am not aware that Mr. Searancke acted in any case. In 1863 a case occurred of certain Natives (holding title under Colonel McCleverty's deeds) wishing to sell a portion of a reserve. (See Hunter's papers.) Mr. Searancke having left the province, I was appointed to succeed him in that office. It is with great pleasure I am able to inform you that (as per Return No. 3) the sum of £200 per annum is now legally received by me as rent for such reserves, and paid over to the Natives of Porirua, &c., being for a small portion only of their valuable lands, payments being made on or about the proper rent-days. I should much wish to see the assent system more generally carried out, and never miss an opportunity of urging its adoption. It insures their receipt of the rents, as the Commissioner can sue or re-enter, and put a stop to the old system of advances, or the rent being paid by £2 now, a blanket on account, and so on, without any system of regularity.

Rental, past and present.

I may here notice that the annual rental received by the late Commissioners at the time of their resignation was £88 for the following leases: No. 1, 250 acres, realized £30 per annum; No. 2, 200 acres, realized £20 per annum; No. 3, 200 acres, realized £30 per annum; No. 4, 100 acres, realized £8 per annum: total, £88.

Comparison may be made between this sum and that which I have before mentioned (£69 6s.) as being the actual receipts at present for Class No. 1, town and country reserves. I therefore beg to state that the land comprised in Lease No. 1 has been sold; products of No. 3 paid over to Hemi Parai (see Return No. 1, country); No. 4 sold; so that I have only the amount of £20 (see Return No.) derivable from the rents of the late Commissioner towards the return of £69 6s now furnished by me.

Expenses of Native Reserves Office.

In 1862 my services as Surveyor of Native Lands and Reserves were accepted by the General Government, as already stated, with the addition of the office of Commissioner of Native Reserves. The one pay for these two offices is, I imagine, a charge against the fund for Native purposes. A secretary, interpreter, and receiver of rents (the same person) was appointed by the first Board, that of 1848, and has been confirmed by their respective successors, I has been held by the following gentlemen: Messrs. Smith, De Vœux, Cheeseman, Buller, and E. Baker. On my succeeding to the Commissionership the Government of 1862 sanctioned the continuance of this office, then held, by Mr. Baker, at the same rate of pay—viz., £25 per annum—and this is the only direct charge against the proceeds of the reserves in the Wellington District.

In short, the present annual account stands as follows: To rent received, £299 6s.; expenses, £25: total, £274 6s. Mr. Baker's services as secretary are not often available (owing to his duties in the Supreme Court), excepting in translating Native letters; but very frequently disputes arise as to the division of rents received by Natives under Class 2, when Mr. Baker or myself is usually called upon to act as arbitrator, and the money is "impounded" until the dispute is fairly settled.

But to return to Class No. 4, i.e., reserves made by or for on the purchase of a block. In the first case such reserves will usually be found to be on the best sites for cultivation (present or future), eel-weirs, or some other natural advantage; in the second case the Commissioner purchasing is supposed to make advantageous reserves for perhaps the most meritorious of the sellers for the common good of all, or for some good and sufficient reason. In Wairarapa the reserves made for Natives have been principally granted (though grants not issued see return of grants); but the generality of what are called reserves made by them are not such, but are exceptions from sale, consequently Native land. Tracing on a map the boundaries as set forth in a deed or sale explains it at once. The few reserves in the Wainui Block, West Coast, are principally by, with one or two exceptions, which have been brought under the Act. The Manawatu, Rangitikei, &c., reserves are of course under Mr. Buller's jurisdiction.

Native Reserve Accounts.

The accounts of Native Reserves Fund were never published by the late Commissioners as required by the Act, but were done so by myself up to the 30th September, 1864. The transfer of the management of that fund led me to doubt at first whose duty it was to prepare them, but they shall be forwarded as soon as possible.

General Remarks.

Much has been said by persons high in authority against the sale of any reserve under any pretext whatever—that it will end in depriving the Natives of their only means of subsistence,. &c., As a general principle I would never advocate the sale of a single acre of reserve if it is suitably selected, either in point of value, present or future, or adapted for their own occupation, such as the valuable reserves in the Lower Hutt. But when I see reserves selected twenty-six years ago, which even now are barely accessible, and at any time perfectly unsuited to a Native, my general principle gives way: let such reserves be sold at the market price, and the proceeds be reinvested.

I am aware that much has been said about the sale of two sections in the Lowry Bay District to Messrs. Fitzherbert and Dick. Now, the first is a perfect morass, into which a 10-foot pole could be easily inserted; the second is almost barren clay, which will not grow a potato. Surely the sale of such reserves as these, if the proceeds are properly managed, is a benefit to the Natives.

But will the issue of Crown grants in their present form (without any restriction clause as to sale) for these reserves prove a benefit to the Natives? I am afraid not; the latter is or will be the greater evil. Far better trust to the judgment and discretion of a Commissioner, who ought to know the nature of every reserve in his district, to recommend a sale, than to put an uncontrolled power into the Natives' hands. Vide the late case of Ropiha Moturoa.

Many points and much information may in this lengthy report have been omitted, but to which I trust the Native Minister will call my attention; and I can only regret that, owing to various circumstances, its completion has been delayed.

I have, &c.,

GEORGE F. SWAINSON, Commissioner, Native Reserves.

The Hon. the Native Minister.

The RESIDENT MAGISTRATE, Rotorua, to the Hon.

the NATIVE MINISTER.

One Acre of Government Land set apart as a Public Burial-ground. Maketu, 23rd May, 1866.
SIR,—

I have the honour to report to you that some Europeans and Natives have been buried in a piece of land belonging to the Government. His Excellency Sir George Grey, when last here, requested me to apply to the Government to allow this portion of land to be set apart as a burial-ground. I beg to bring the matter before your notice now.

I have, &c.,

W. K. NESBITT, Resident Magistrate, Rotorua.

The Hon. Colonel Russell, Native Minister.

What is the proposed extent of land to be set apart for this purpose?— A. H. RUSSELL. 23rd May, 1866.
About one acre.—W. K. NESBITT, R.M.
One acre approved.—A. H. RUSSELL. 23rd May 1866.

No. 105. His Honour the SUPERINTENDENT, Taranaki, to the ASSISTANT NATIVE SECRETARY.

Respecting Right of Road through Reserve No. 1, bought of Poharama. Superintendent's Office, New Plymouth, 30th May, 1866.
SIR,—

A dispute having arisen as to a right of road through a piece of land formerly a Maori reserve, which right I am informed was obtained through your agency, I have the honour to request that you will inform me whether you recollect the transaction, and give me each information with regard to it as you may be able.

The land in question is part of Native Reserve No. 1; the Mangaotuku Stream runs through it, and the old Omata Road crosses that stream in the reserve. The right of road referred to is said to have been purchased by you from Poharama for Peter Priske, to give him access to a back section, the road of which, as marked on the plan, was impracticable.

The question now raised is: What was the nature of the right obtained by Priske? Was it an actual purchase of the freehold of the roadway, or the purchase of a permanent right of passage to his section for all purposes? Or, lastly, was it only the right to pass to his section for some special purposes or for a limited time, that was obtained? And, further, was it implied in the contract that the owners of the Maori reserve would ultimately have to fence along the roadway?

I shall feel much obliged by your giving me a statement of whatever you recollect on the subject with as little delay as possible, as the case is one which, if it cannot be settled otherwise will have to be taken before the Supreme Court. Should the transaction have entirely passed out of your memory, we must of course rely on the evidence we can obtain from others.

I have, &c.,

H. R. RICHMOND, Superintendent.

H. Halse, Esq., Assistant Native Secretary, Wellington.

The ASSISTANT NATIVE SECRETARY to his Honour the SUPERINTENDENT, Taranaki.

New Plymouth.—As to Right of Road through Native Reserve No. 1 Wellington, 4th June, 1866.
SIR,—

I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your Honour's letter, No. 390, of 30th May, relative to a right of road through a Native reserve inland of Moturoa. In reply, I have the honour to forward the enclosed statement of what I recollect on the subject.

I have, &c.,

H. HALSE.

His Honour the Superintendent, Taranaki.

Enclosure.

Moturoa.—Statement as to Right of Road bought of Poharama for Mr. Priske.
(Memorandum.)

IN the year 1858, as well as I can remember, Peter Priske made known to me his wish to obtain a road to a back section of his, as the road marked on the plan was impracticable. Mr. Priske added that a road could be taken through, I think, the inland portions of a reserve if Poharama's consent could be obtained, and asked me to help him. I afterwards made a personal inspection of the road marked on the plan, and considered it impracticable. I then proceeded with Mr. Priske and Poharama, who met me by appointment, to that portion of the reserve where a right of road was wanted. Mr. Priske pointed out the line of road desired, and I explained the same to Poharama. After a little consideration Poharama agreed to allow Mr. Priske a right of passage to his back section, because he was a good pakeha: but my impression is that the privilege was not to extend beyond Mr. Priske. I mean that, in the event of Mr. Priske's section falling into the hands of strangers, the right of passage would cease.

To the best of my recollection the above was the nature of the right obtained from Poharama for the special convenience of Mr. Priske, and a small sum of money I believe £5—was afterwards given to Poharama for the privilege. There was no purchase, of the freehold of the roadway. Poharama was not told that he or his people would ultimately have to fence along the roadway.

H. HALSE.
4th June, 1866.

No. 107.[Extract from New Zealand Gazette.]

. At the Government House, at Wellington, the tenth day of January, 1867. Present: HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR IN COUNCIL.

IN exercise of the powers vested in the Governor by "The Native Reserves Act, 1856," and "The Native Reserves Amendment Act, 1862," the Governor, with the advice and consent of the Executive Council of the Colony, doth order that the land hereinafter described—that is to say: All the parcel of land, being the section marked E on the plan of the Waiwhakaiho District, in the Province of Taranaki, bounded towards the North by section marked E, towards the East by a Native reserve marked C, towards the South by section marked EI, and towards the West by the River Waiwhakaiho, being land subject to the operation of the said Act shall be sold, and the same is hereby sold to John Whiteley, of New Plymouth, Wesleyan Missionary, and Charles Edward Rawson of New Plymouth, settler, for the sum of one hundred and fifty, pounds sterling.

FORSTER GORING, Clerk of the Executive Council.

[Extract from New Zealand Gazette]

*Native Reserves in the Ngatiruanui District made in Confiscated Lands*NOTICE..

WHEREAS the District of Ngatiruanui Coast was brought under the New Zealand Settlements Act and taken for settlement, subject to certain promises set forth in the order of confiscation, it is now notified for public information, and in order to show that the promise of the Government is not forgotten, that His Excellency has reserved the following lands within the district for surrendered insurgents, that is to say, the land comprised in Schedule A hereto for the benefit, use, or occupation of the people of the Tangahoe hapu of the Ngatiruanui Tribe, and the lands comprised in Schedule B hereto for the benefit, use, or occupation of the Pakakohi hapu of the same tribe, these hapus having lately returned to their allegiance; provided that the lands comprised in the said schedules are subject to more exact definition as to their boundaries, and as to the purposes for which, and the persons of either of the hapus respectively for whom, the same shall be specially set apart. And as to the land comprised in Schedule C, it is notified that the same has been, in fulfilment of the same promise set apart for the use of Hone Pihama, a chief of the Tangahoe hapu, to be hereafter granted to him absolutely in recognition of his valuable services during two years; and in addition to the lands in the schedules other reserves will be made and hereafter described, to contain burial-places of certain chiefs and others of the Tribe of Ngatiruanui, and to be granted to the chief Tito te Hanataua.

J. C. RICHMOND.

Native Office, Wellington,

26th January 1867.

SCHEDULE A. *Tangahoe Reserves.

- Ten thousand acres of land, more or less. Bounded on the South-west by the River Tawhiti, a tributary of the Tangahoe; on the South-east by a survey-line drawn inland from near the junction of the Tangahoe and Tawhiti; on the North-west by a survey-line parallel to the line last named, and three miles distant from it; and on the North-east by a survey-line drawn at right angles to the two last-named lines, through a point on the former or south-eastern boundary five miles distant from the Tangahoe River: which block is intended to include, either wholly or in part, the places known as Turangarere, Otapawa, Taiporohenui, Whareroa, Ohangai, Matangarara and Pokaikai.
- Five hundred acres of land, more or less, situated on the sea-coast between the rivers Waingongoro and Tangahoe. Bounded on the South-west by the sea-beach; and on the South-east, North-east, and North-west by survey-lines: which block is intended to include the place known as Whaukina, either wholly or in part.

- One hundred acres of land, more or less, adjacent to and bounded on the East by the River Tangahoe; on the South by the sea-beach; and on the North and West by survey-lines: which block is intended to include the place-known as Tataramoa, either wholly or in part.

SCHEDULE B. *Pakakohi Reserve.

- Six thousand acres of land, more or less, adjacent to and bounded on the North-east by Tangahoe Reserve (No. 1, Schedule A); bounded on the South-east by a survey-line two miles distant from and parallel to the north-western boundary; and on the South-west and North-west by survey-lines: which block is intended to include, wholly or in part, the places known as Mokoia and Meremere.
- Two thousand eight hundred acres, more or less. Bounded to the Southward by the River Mangamaire; on the North-west and South-east by survey-lines one mile distant from each other, and drawn parallel to the corresponding boundaries of the Pakakohi Reserve (No. 1, Schedule B); and to the Northward by a survey-line about five miles inland from the Mangamaire River before-named: which block, at its seaward extremity, is near to, but is not intended to include, the place known as Manutahi.
- Two hundred acres, more or less. Bounded on the North and West by the Tangahoe River; on the East by a survey-line; on the South by the Hingahapi River; on the South-west by the sea beach and survey-lines: which block is to include the site of the former Village of Manawapou.

SCHEDULE C. *Hone Pihama's Reserve.

Five hundred acres. Bounde to the Westward by the Oeo River; to the Southward by the sea beach and to the Eastward and Northward by survey-lines.

No. 109The SECRETARY of CROWN LANDS to Mr. Surveyor SWAINSON.

Wellington.—Relative to Lighthouse Reserve at Pencarrow Head. General Crown Lands Office, Wellington, 7th March, 1867.

SIR,—

With reference to a claim made by certain Natives for rent of the Lighthouse Reserve at Pencarrow Head, I have to request you to be good enough to forward to this office a plan in your possession, alluded to in your memorandum on the papers attached to the claim, showing the first purchase of the New Zealand Company in that locality, dated 7th October, 1844, and any other documents or deeds of the same nature you may have in your possession relating to the acquisition of lands in this province by the Government from the Natives, in order that the same may be filed as records in this department. I have also to request you to be good enough to forward, for the purpose of reference, the original deed between the Pitone Natives and Colonel McCleverty.

I have, &c.,

ALFRED DOMETT.

G. F. Swainson, Esq., Commissioner of Native Reserves.

RETURN of RESERVES made for FRIENDLY NATIVES

and RETURNED REBELS.

(No. 1.)

Memorandum on Bay of Plenty Lands, for the Information of the Agent for the General Government; Auckland. Civil Commissioner's Office, Auckland, 9th June, 1857.

Item 3.—In reference to Item 3, Colonel Haultain and Mr. Whitaker instructed me to leave the portion of the block east of Opape to the Natives.

Item 4.—In Item 4 the giving-back is but nominal, for the Natives would not have given it up. But I was required to make the best arrangement I could effect, and now the surveys are advanced I find that about 58,000 acres were thus obtained. Also some of Item 5 will yet be available, but not required, for purposes of compensation.

Items 4 and 5.—In Items 4 and 5 there are about 18,000 acres of agricultural land. There are 54,000 acres of swamp, and 62,000 acres of mountainous country, say half of it very barren.

Item 7.—From Item 7 land has been provided for all the military settlers. There are yet, however, 75,000 acres of saleable land, which, exclusive of township sites, I estimate at the value of £31,750.

The amount of cash paid in compensation for land is £200; to be paid to Fulloon, £150: total, £350. Scrip: Nil.

J. A. WILSON, Crown Agent.

1. Opape Reserve, for Rebels only of the Whakatohea Tribe who have surrendered.

BOUNDED on the North by the sea; on the East by a line from Point Titoi to Tarakeha, thence to Tawatihitihi, thence by a straight line running through Puketeko to the southern boundary of the confiscated block; on the West by Waiawa River from its mouth to the point where it passes between Makeo and Wakahau Hills, thence by a line parallel with the eastern boundary from the point of Wakahau Hill to the southern boundary of the confiscated block; on the South by the boundary of the confiscated block.

2. Hiwarau and Hokianga Reserves at Ohiwa, for surrendered Rebels and Loyal Natives of the Upokorohe Hapu.

Bounded on the North by Ohiwa Harbour, from the mouth of Nukuhou River to Punawai; on the East by the surveyed line from Punawai to the first point where the road strikes the Nukuhou River; on the South and West by the Nukuhou River; also the Island of Hokianga in Ohiwa Harbour.

3. Whakatane Reserve, for surrendered Rebels and Loyal Natives of the Ngatipukeko and Ngatiawa Tribes.

Bounded on the North by the sea; on the East by Whakatane River; on the South by southern boundary of the confiscated block; on the West by a line running from the coast south to Orakaureka, thence to Te Wakaeme, thence to Ruakinui, thence to Te Karaka, thence to Otupokai, thence to Owhaikawa, thence to Otarere, thence to Haukumukumu, thence to Okahaua, thence to Opotaka, thence to Te Ruangarara, thence to Te Takapau, thence by a line running south to the confiscated boundary. Vide postscript to memorandum appended.

4. Reserve for Whakatohea Chief Te Ranapia te Uatuahu.

Lot 33 in Opotiki Valley, 50 acres.

5. Reserves for Whakatohea Chiefs, on condition that they remain loyal to 1st January, 1870, when Crown Grants will be issued.

Te Ranapia te Uatuahu, Lot 1, Tirohanga, 50 acres; Piri te Makarini, Lot 3, Tirohanga, 50 acres; Reweri te Rangimatanuku, Lot 4, Tirohanga, 50 acres. All the bearings in this schedule are magnetic.

J. A. WILSON, Crown Agent.

Memorandum to Schedule of Native Reserves in Bay of Plenty District.

The boundaries of the Ohope Reserve are in abeyance until the appeal in the chief Wepiha's case has been decided. There are four other small Native reserves, amounting in all to about 112 acres of land, particulars of which will be forwarded when their details are complete. A sketch-map of a large portion of this district, containing much information, has been forwarded by me to the Agent of the General Government in Auckland.

J. A. WILSON, Crown Agent.

P.S.—The Government have reserved the right to take from the Whakatane Reserve a portion of land equivalent to the compensation that may be awarded or granted on the eastern side of Whakatane River.—J. A. WILSON, Crown Agent.

Memorandum.—One hundred and forty-six claims, preferred by three hundred and eighteen claimants, are disposed of.—J. A. WILSON, Crown Agent. 28th June, 1867.

6. Ohope Reserve, for surrendered Rebels and Loyal Ngatiawa Natives of Ngatikokopu and Ngatiwharepaia, of which Hapus Apanui, Wepiha, and Kepa Toihau are the Chiefs.

Bounded on the North by the sea; on the East by a line running south from high-water mark on the sea-coast to Te Horo at the mouth of Tauwhare River; on the South by Tauwhare River from Te Horo to the point where the Tauwhare recedes three-quarters of a mile from the sea, thence by a line running due west to the western boundary; on the West by a line running S.S.E. from high-water mark at Te Arakuri at the western end of Ohope beach, until it meets the southern boundary.

7. Rangataike Reserve, for surrendered Rebels and Loyal Natives of Te Pahipoto Ngaitamaoke and other Hapus.

Bounded on the East by the Whakatane Reserve; on the South by the southern boundary-line of the confiscated block; on the West by the Tarawera River from the southern boundary to Puke Tapu, thence by a straight line to Patuhoe, thence to the Te Arero, thence to Otihere, thence to Te Pahauahaua-o-Rangipakokina, thence by the Rangitaike River to its first bend north of Te Teko, thence by a line bearing towards the hill Ohinetiwai to the western side of Titingaroa Swamp, thence by the edge of Titingaroa to Te Rakau Puhī; on the North by a line running from Te Rakau Puhī to Oteukuhanga, thence to Mauawairihi, thence by a line bearing East to the western boundary of the Whakatane Reserve. All the bearings in this schedule are magnetic.

J. A. WILSON, Crown Agent.

P.S.—The Government has reserved the right to lay out roads through all the Native reserves in the Bay of Plenty District.—J. A. WILSON, Crown Agent.

(No. 4.)BAY OF PLENTY DISTRICT.Schedule of Land given to the Arawa Tribe.

Bounded on the North by the sea from the mouth of Waitahanui to the mouth of Te Awa-o-te-Atua; on the East by Te Awa-o-te-Atua and Tarawera Rivers; on the South by a portion of the southern boundary of the confiscated block, and on the West by the western boundary of the confiscated district.

J. A. WILSON, Crown Agent.

SCHEDULE of AWARDS given in the COMPENSATION COURT held at OPOTIKI.

Hoki Ngapuhi, claimant; Lots Nos. 1 and 6 on Opotiki Flat, near Waioeka River; 100 acres.

Tamati te Au, claimant; north-west portion of Lot 7; at Tirohanga; 10 acres.

Rewiri Moka, claimant; Lot 57, at Waioeka Valley; 50 acres.

Joseph Kennedy, claimant; Lot 76, Waiotahi; 50 acres.

Mereana Waiti, claimant; Lot 19, at Te Mapou, and half of Lot 82, at Ohui, 25 acres.

Meremana, claimant; 25 acres at eastern extremity of Town Belt. This has been selected by Crown Agent and claimant.

Hauauru Taipari, claimant; 100 acres at Te Pukenui, at Ohiwa. This has been selected by Crown Agent and claimant.

SCHEDULE of AGREEMENTS made by CROWN AGENT with PERSONS preferring COMPENSATION CLAIMS in BAY OF PLENTY BLOCK.

Miriama Makawa, claimant; allotment by Town Belt, no number, 44 acres, and western end of Lot No. 25, at Ohui, 12 acres; 56 acres.

Mary Davides, claimant; fifty-acre Lots 9 and 47 in Waioeka Valley; 100 acres.

Ngahiraka and others, claimants; Town Lot No. 277, quarter-acre at Opotiki; fifty-acre Lots 4 and 5 at Ohui; 100 acres.

Mohi Wikitahi and others, claimants (£120 paid May, 1866).

Te Kiekie, claimant (£30 paid May, 1866).

Ritihia Ropiha, claimant; Lot No. 47, on eastern shore of Ohiwa; 50 acres.

Elizabeth Brown, claimant; west half, of Lot No. 23, at Ohui; 25 acres.

Rena te Ratapu, claimant; east half of Lot No. 23, at Ohui; 25 acres.

Te Whitika, claimant; Town Lot No. 30 in military township, Opotiki; 1 acre.

Elizabeth Fulloon, claimant. (£150 paid); not less than one quarter-acre, nor more than one half-acre, in township when surveyed at Whakatane, to secure to her the graves of her relatives. 50 acres by mill at Whakatane, to be surveyed as per agreement.

Tiwai Paihana, claimant (£50 paid); two quarter-acre lots in civil township, Nos. 7 and 8, also five acres in the military township near Waitangi at Opotiki; fifty-acre lots at Ohui, Nos. 2 and 3; also east half of Lot 2, Onekawa, at Ohiwa, 25 acres, and 100 acres to be selected on eastern side of Otara River, at Opotiki, south of land surveyed for military settlement; 225 acres.

Papa Kahawai, claimant; 50 acres. Not yet selected.

SCHEDULE of AWARDS given in the COMPENSATION COURT held at OPOTIKI; the AWARDS having yet to be selected by CROWN AGENT and CLAIMANTS.

Timoti te Pokiwaho, claimant; 12 acres at Opotiki or elsewhere. Nearly arranged.

Mereana Hauauru, claimant; 25 acres at Waiawa. Claimant has refused to make the selection, and is going to appeal to the Governor.

Mereana Hauauru, claimant; 50 acres at Ohiwa. Claimant has refused to make a selection.

Mereana Hauauru, claimant; 40 acres at Manukatihiti, Waioeka Valley. Claimant has refused to make a selection.

Wakata, claimant; town lots, two allotments, quarter-acre each; 25 acres at Opotiki. Claimant absented herself before judgment was given, and did not return.

Wi Karaka, claimant; 30 acres at Waiawa. I have endeavoured to arrange the selection of this.

Hoani Tunui, claimant; 30 acres in Waioeka Valley. Have, not seen claimant since judgment was given.

Huhana te Waihapuranga, claimant; town lot, one allotment, quarter-acre; 40 acres in Waioeka Valley.

Have not seen claimant since judgment was given.

Henare Wakarongohau, claimant; 40 acres at Waimana. Have not seen claimant since judgment was given.

Mere Petere, claimant; 40 acres in Waioeka Valley. Have had much trouble with this claimant, who will not make a selection.

Watene Tuma, claimant; 40 acres at Opotiki. Have not seen claimant since judgment was given.

Hana Arapeta, claimant; 15 acres in Waioeka Valley. Have not seen claimant since judgment was given.

Rangi Tukehu and others, claimants; 100 acres on Whakatane Flat. Have not seen claimants since judgment was given.

Kiepa te Tua, claimant; 25 acres at Waimana. Have not seen claimant since judgment was given.

J. A. WILSON, Crown Agent.

Mr. PARRIS to the Hon. J. C. RICHMOND.

Reserves for Friendly Natives and Returned Rebels. New Plymouth, 11th June, 1867.

SIR,—

I have the honour to forward herewith the returns called for in the Under-Secretary's letters dated 16th May and 21st November, Nos. 208-2 and 218-2, so far as the matters referred to have been settled up to the present time. In addition to the schedule which gives the totals, I have appended thereto a detailed account of the reserves made for returning rebels, but of course His Excellency's Government is aware that a great many more reserves will have to be made in every district, as has already been contemplated.

In the Ngatiawa coast, Waitara South and Oakura Blocks, that is, from the White Cliffs (the northern extremity of the confiscated territory) to Hangatahua, in the Taranaki District, and also in the Ngatiruanui coast from Patea to Waingongoro, so much of the available land by the seaboard has been taken up for the military-settlement scheme that there is not sufficient to satisfy the awards to loyal Natives within the same lines; but there is a great deal of very fine country inland of those lines, as soon as it can be made available, which is a work of time, and cannot be reckoned upon as available at the present time.

The block of land between Waitotara and Whenuakura is computed to contain over 50,000 acres of very superior land within eight miles from the beach: of this about 22,000 acres will be required for military settlers not yet located, and for awards to loyal Natives; the remainder will be at the disposal of the Government, and would, I have no doubt, realize from £1 10s. to £2 an acre, if put into the market judiciously. The block between Whenuakura and Patea is computed to contain 12,000 acres of available land within the same distance from the beach; and, after, laying out the township on the south side of Patea, it is proposed to reserve the remainder for awards of the Court to loyal Natives and for returning rebels.

From Waingongoro to Hangatahua, a seaboard of fifty miles, there is a district of very fine land, and no military settlers' settlements. In this, district 62,500 acres have been awarded to loyal Natives. These it is proposed to concentrate as much as possible within the block between Hangatahua and Waiweranui set apart for that purpose, and for the Ngawahunga returning rebels (none having been reserved for that purpose north of Hangatahua), and within the block set apart for the chiefs, William King Matakatea, and the late Arama Karaka and their followers, between Moutote and Taungatara. Upon this block it is also proposed to concentrate as many as possible of the rebels, thereby leaving a block between Moutote and Kapoiaia; and another block between Taungatara and Kaupokonui, altogether about twenty miles of a seaboard with its proportion of back land to confiscated line, nearly free, to be disposed of by the Government. From Kaupokonui to Waingongoro, about eight miles across by the seaboard there is the finest block of land in the whole district, estimated at, over 30,000, acres. Out of this a reserve has to be made for the Ngaruahine section of the Ngatiruanui Tribe.

The estimated total area of land confiscated in the Province of Taranaki, including, I presume, the Patea, Waitotara Block, and the block inland of the Whanganui Settlement, is 1,144,300 acres. From this must be deducted 291,852 acres for mountain and swampy land, as per estimate, leaving 852,448 acres of the so-called available land, of which there has already been used for military settlers, loyal and rebel Natives, as per schedule, 272,243½ acres, leaving 580,204½ acres. From this quantity a further reduction will have to be made for returning rebels, and reserves for absentees, and the quantity abandoned south of the Waitotara River.

In the present state of the whole question it is impossible for me to furnish exact information, for the only part of the confiscated territory which has ever been surveyed is that where the military settlers' settlements are, and an approximation as regards any other part would be very imperfect data to base a calculation upon.

I have, &c,

R. PARRIS, Civil Commissioner.

The Hon. J. C.
Richmond.

Enclosures.(No. 1.)QUANTITY of LAND set apart for RETURNING REBELS to Present Time.

11th June, 1867.

(No. 2.) PROVINCE OF TARANAKI

NOTE.—Survey and roads cost 1s. 4d. per acre, principally block surveys.

His Honour I. E. FEATHERSTON to the Hon. J. C. RICHMOND.

Manawatu.—Settlement of Back Rents and Native Reserves. Superintendent's Office, Wellington, 27th July, 1867.

SIR,—

Adverting to my letter of the 23rd March last, I have now to report, for the information of the Government, that during my recent visit to Manawatu and Rangitikei I held several meetings with the Ngatiapa and Ngatiraukawa at their respective pas, with a view to a final settlement of the outstanding questions of back rents and Native reserves.

1. Back Rents.—The back rents (amounting now to nearly £3,000) due by the runholders under the old Native leases were required to be paid up, and it was necessary, in the first place, to ascertain to what particular Natives, and in what proportions, these arrears of rent should be paid to the tribes who lately claimed the block. It will be in your recollection that the payment of the rents was one of the proximate causes of the tribal quarrel which led to my interference on behalf of the General Government in 1863. As I reported at the time, an arrangement was entered into with the runholders, with the mutual concurrence of the tribes interested, for the non-payment of rents, pending some adjustment of the dispute; one condition of such arrangement being that I made myself responsible for the ultimate recovery of all the rents so impounded. At the recent meetings to which I have alluded, the representatives of the three tribes principally concerned, the Ngatiapa, Ngatiraukawa, and Rangitane, united in a request that, before proceeding to any division or distribution of this money, I should on their behalf receive the rents from the runholders, and that, when the whole amount had been paid up, I should call a general meeting of the tribes to determine its disposal. As the request was unanimous, and as the course recommended by the Natives seemed likely to prevent a further complication of an already difficult question, I readily assented to the proposal, and in that position the matter now rests.

2. Reserves.—In my report of the 23rd March I described the position and extent of the reserve at Puketotara which I had set apart for the Rangitane, and I furnished with that report copy of a memorandum of agreement entered into with Kawana Hunia (the representative chief of the Ngatiapa), whereby I guaranteed to him and his tribe 1,000 acres at Papakatea, 500 acres at Tawhirihoë, and 10 acres at Te Awahou.

It will be seen by a reference to my notes of the Parewanui meeting in December last that Ihakara, the Ngatiraukawa chief, in the interests of peace and in order to conciliate the Ngatiapa, voluntarily surrendered to Kawana Hunia the right which he had to a reserve at Tawhirihoë, in terms of my pledge that I would not disturb the Ngatiraukawa in any of their existing settlements. While fully appreciating the motive which had actuated Ihakara in making this large concession to a rival tribe, I regretted that he had done so, and I promised his hapu, who evidently felt the humiliation very keenly, that I would do my utmost to recover possession of Tawhirihoë, and to grant them a reserve there, explaining, however, that this could only be accomplished with the concurrence of the Ngatiapa. I am glad to be able to report that I have made an arrangement with Kawana Hunia which places Tawhirihoë again at my disposal. I attach a copy of a memorandum of agreement on the subject (Enclosure 1).

The reserves for the Ngatiraukawa Tribe have not yet been defined. I have, however, promised the chiefs that they shall not be required to relinquish any of their permanent settlements, that their burial-places shall be held sacred, and that ample reserves shall be set apart for all the resident hapus.

The non-sellers in that tribe having declined to accept of a reserve to the extent of their claims as admitted by the sellers, I have signified my willingness to refer the question to two arbitrators, in order that the extent and position of their actual claims may be determined, and excluded from the purchase; and, failing arbitration, I have stated my readiness to leave the settlement of this question to any two Judges of the Native Land Court who may be selected by the Government for that duty. I append (Enclosure 2) a copy of my memorandum in English and Maori, setting forth the conditions of the proposed arbitration. I have not yet received from the non-sellers any definite reply to this proposal. There would be no difficulty in furnishing an approximate assessment of the claims of the non-sellers, as required in your letter of the 10th November last; but, as I have agreed to go to arbitration on the question, it is obviously unnecessary for me to go further in to the subject at present.

For the information of the Government I beg to forward herewith (Enclosure 3) a list of Natives of the Ngatiraukawa Tribe, who allege claims to the Rangitikei-Mauawatu Block, and who have not signed the deed of cession. I beg to furnish also (Enclosure 4) a brief sketch, by Mr. Buller, of the migration and conquest upon which the Ngatiraukawa claims chiefly rest.

In conclusion, I have the honour to recommend that, if the non-sellers should reject the proposals I have made to them, His Excellency the Governor should be advised to appoint a special Commission to inquire into the claims of the dissentients, and to determine their extent, in order that they may be excluded from the Government purchase.

I have, &c.,

I. E. FEATHERSTON.

The Hon. J. C.
Richmond.

Memorandum.

4th July, 1867.

IN consideration of my getting sole possession of the Pakapakatea Reserve of 1,000 acres, I agree to surrender to Mohi Mahi, on behalf of the Ngatipa Tribe, my claim to a reserve of 500 acres at Tawhirihoë.

KAWANA (his x mark) HUNIA.
Witness—W. BULLER, R.M.

Memorandum.

4th July, 1867.

ON behalf of the Ngatiapa Tribe I agree to relinquish the claim to a reserve at Tawhirihoë, save and except ten acres to be selected by Dr. Featherston, in consideration of my receiving from the Government a reserve of 500 acres at Te Kawanu in the Rangitikei-Manawatu Block.

MOHI (his x mark) MAHI.
Witness— W. BULLER, R.M.

Note in Explanation.

The original arrangement with the Ngatiapa was that Kawana Hunia should have 500 acres at Tawhirihoë and 500 acres at Pakapakatea, and that there should be a tribal reserve of 500 acres adjoining Kawana Hunia's at Pakapakatea. Mohi, on behalf of the tribe, has lately been anxious to exchange the 500 acres at Pakapakatea for a reserve of similar extent at Te Kawau. The present arrangement is practically this: Kawana Hunia exchanges his personal reserve of 500 acres at Tawhirihoe for the tribal reserve of 500 acres at Pakapakatea, and Mohi, on behalf of the tribe, accepts a reserve of 500 acres at Te Kawau in lieu of the Tawhirihoe Reserve.

(No. 2.) MEMORANDUM by Dr. FEATHERSTON.

I agree to refer the claims of non-sellers in the Rangitikei-Manawatu Block to arbitration, subject to the following conditions: (1.) Two arbitrators, either pakeha or Maori, to be appointed, one by the non-sellers, the other by the Land Purchase Commissioner, such arbitrators being entirely disconnected with the land or with the disputants, and wholly disinterested in the question at issue. The arbitrators to appoint an umpire, or the arbitrators and umpire to be appointed by His Excellency the Governor. (2.) The arbitrators to be appointed within one month from the present date, and the arbitration to take place at Rangitikei. (3.) All non-sellers of whatever rank to prove their individual claims to the satisfaction of the arbitrators, having previously signed a paper assenting to the proposed arbitration, and pledging themselves to accept as final the decision of the arbitrators as to the nature and extent of their claims.

I. E. FEATHERSTON.

Rangitikei,

4th July, 1867.

(No. 3.)

MANAWATU-RANGITIKEI BLOCK.—Resident Ngatiraukawa, alleged claimants, who have not signed the deed of cession: Oroua: Takana te Kawa, Te Ara (a woman), Hoeta te Kahuihui, Kerehana Tauranga, Koro te One, Erina Taurua (a woman), Rahira Kahuihui (a woman), Te Reihana, Repuma te Oreie, Te Warihi, Horopapera, Reweti te Kohu, Pini, Matiu.—Papakiri: Parakaia te Pouepa, Nirai Nape, Te Roiri Kamara, Pitihira te Kura, Roera Hore, Kipa te Whitu, Hakopa te Tehe, Hemara te Mataaho, Ihaka te Mataaho, Arapata te Wharemakatea, Pineaha Mahauariki, Paratene Hakaraia, Heta Ngatuhi, Tiaki te Pakarau.—Taikoria: Whiriharai te Angiangi, Wirimu Kingi, Tohutohu, Paranihi te Tau, Eruini te Tau, Tiuiwata Tekerunga, Naera te Angiangi.—Rangitikei: Pumipi te Kuka, Te Keremihana, Miritana te Raki, Wireti te Rea.

(No. 4.) A BRIEF SKETCH of the MIGRATIONS of the NGATIRAUKAWA from TAUPO to COOK STRAIT, and of their Wars with the Resident Tribes (Native Account).

LONG anterior to the occupation of this country by the pakeha, the Ngatitao Tribe, led by Te Rauparaha and Rangihaeata, migrated down the West Coast from Kawhia to Cook Strait. After leaving Taranaki their progress was not opposed by the tribes on the coast, and the Ngatitao journeyed in peace till they came to the mouth of the Manawatu River. Here Te Rangihwinui, at the instigation of the Whanganui tribes, had planned a treacherous attack on Te Rauparaha, with whom he was professedly friendly. Hostilities were, however, precipitated by the aggressive and unauthorized act of a party of Te Rauparaha's men. Finding, on their arrival at the Manawatu River, that the canoes had been hidden, apparently to prevent their crossing, they retaliated on the river tribe (the Muaupoko) by killing one of their women. Fighting with the Mnaupoko immediately followed, and the neighbouring tribes were successively drawn into it. This warfare was kept up for more than two years with varying success, the Ngatiapa, Ngarauru, Whanganui, Rangitane, and Ngaitahu, who afterwards emigrated to the Middle Island, all taking part in the struggle. The Ngatitao were eventually the victors, and located themselves at Kapiti, and on the mainland opposite.

At a later, period a party of Ngatiraukawa from Taupo, numbering about eighty men, and led by Taratoa and Hukiki te Ahukaramu, paid a ceremonial visit to the Ngatitoa at Kapiti. They came down through the gorge of the Rangitikei River, and their visit is remembered as "To Kariritahi, On their return a second party, numbering about a hundred, consisting of Ngatihua, Ngatikauwhata, and Ngatiparewahawaha, paid a similar visit, which is distinguished as "Te Heke Whirinui." These parties came armed, but their passage was not opposed in any way by the resident tribes, who were unprovided with firearms. On their return to Taupo with a favourable account of the country they had visited, the Ngatiraukawa decided on migrating as a body to the coast. Accordingly about the year 1830 the tribe came down in large force, and entered the district by the gorge of the Turakina River. They attacked and overpowered the Ngatiapa at their settlement on that river, capturing a number of women and boys. They came out at the Turakina Heads, and proceeded down the coast, fighting the Ngatiapa along their line of march. A party of 200, which had detached itself from the main body, at Kokakotahi in the Upper Turakina, took an inland route along the course of; the Oroua River, driving the Ngatiapa before them. This party consisted of the following hapus—viz., Ngatikauwhata, Ngatiteihiihi, and Ngatikahou. On arriving at the mouth of the Oroua, they made a raid up the banks of the Manawatu River (of which the Oroua is a tributary), and attacked the Rangitane at Hakione, overpowering them and carrying off some of their women. Proceeding a little further they came upon another Rangitane settlement, occupied by Te Pauau and his people. This village was attacked, but its inmates all escaped. The invaders pursued the fugitives for some distance, but, failing to overtake them, they took possession of the Rangitane canoes, and descended the Manawatu River. Finding a small Rangitane settlement on the river-bank opposite Puketotara, they landed, and the villages, mistaking them for friendly visitors, welcomed them ashore. The war party killed some and took others prisoners, Rota Tarehe and Arapata Takahu (both now living) being among the latter. Peropero, a Rangitane chief of high rank, was among the killed on this occasion. The war party then proceeded down the river to its mouth, and thence spread themselves along the coast. Many Ngatiapa women were captured by this war party, all of whom were afterwards restored to their tribe.

Peace was at length established between the invaders and the Ngatiapa; and the Ngatikauwhata, a section of the Ngatiraukawa, with the concurrence of Te Kokiri Hamuera (Hamuera te Raikokiritia's father), located themselves on the banks of the Oroua. When, at a later date, Te Rauparaha arranged a division of the lands claimed by conquest, the Ngatikauwhata chief Te Whata (father of the present chief Tapa te Whatu), claimed to be the possessor of all the Oroua Plains, and that claim was tacitly recognized by all the other sections of the tribe. Te Rauparaha allotted Waikawa to the Ngatiteihiihi, Ohau to the Ngatipare, and Horowhenua to Te Whatanui, who allowed the conquered Muaupoko to remain in joint possession. The Manawatu-Rangitikei country was not allotted, Manawatu River being the limit of Te Rauparaha's tribal partition of the land. The territory north of that boundary was left to the occupation of any sections of the Ngatiraukawa who might choose to locate themselves there as joint occupants with the Ngatiapa.

At a very remote period the Muaupoko were occupants of a part of the Rangitikei-Manawatu Block, and they still assert claims there.

After peace had been established with the Ngatiapa, Te Rauparaha made war on the Rangitane, and defeated them signally at Hotuiti, their strongest pa. At a later period again the Ngatiraukawa sent a war party to Whanganui to avenge the death of Ruamaioro, one of their chiefs, who with his whole party had been treacherously murdered when on their way to visit their friends at Kapiti. The Ngatitoa and Ngatiawa warriors joined the expedition, and the Ngatiapa, headed by Te Hakeke (father of the present Kawana Hunia), made common cause with the Ngatiraukawa in this invasion of the Whanganui country. The expedition is said to have numbered 1,200 men. The Whanganui tribes accepted a challenge at Putikiwharanui (opposite the site of the present Town of Whanganui), and were defeated with great loss. On the evening of the day of battle the pa surrendered. They received little or no quarter. A large number of them were killed and eaten, and others were taken captive to Kapiti. The Ngatiapa returned in company with the Ngatiraukawa, and reoccupied the coast. Te Hakeke, and a few of his immediate followers, accompanied the force to Otaki, where they located themselves for a short time, ultimately returning to Rangitikei. Prior to the Ngatiraukawa invasion the Rangitane and the Ngatiapa were alternately friendly and at war with each other.

When the Ngatiawa and Ngatiruanui, in 1839, made war on the Ngatitoa and Ngatiraukawa, the latter sought the aid of the neighbouring tribes with whom they had then established friendly relations. Besides the Ngatiapa allies, the Whanganui sent a contingent of 200 men, under Pehi Turoa; the Ngatituwharetoa (Taupo) sent 140 men, under Te Heuheu; the Ngatimaniapoto sent 200 men, under Taonui and Tariki; the Ngatiteupokoiri (a section of the Ngatikahungunu) sent 100 men, under Te Whaiukau; and a few Rangitane chiefs joined the expedition. A section of the Ngatitoa, under Te Hiko-o-te-rangi, made common cause with the enemy. Before the arrival of reinforcements the Ngatiraukawa and the Ngatitoa had defeated the invaders in four successive fights, known respectively as "Maringi-a-Wai," "Haowhenua," "Te Rereamanuka," and "Te Pa-a-te-Hauataua." Three more battles were afterwards fought, the combined forces acting under Te Rauparaha and Rangihaeata, and the result was the utter defeat and rout of the enemy. After this permanent peace was established among the Coast tribes.

The following hapus of the Ngatiraukawa located themselves on the Rangitikei-Manawatu Block: The Ngatiparewahawaha, under Nepia Taratoa and Taiaho; the Ngatikauwhata, under Te Whata; the Ngatiteihiihi, under Te Whetu and Te Kohu; and Ngatipare, under Te Matenga and Te Kiharoa; the Patukohuru, under Taikapureia; and the Ngatirakau, under Ngaturia. The Ngatiwhakatare, a section of the Ngatiraukawa, assert claims to the Rangitikei-Manawatu Block, although they have never actually resided upon it. During the early tribal wars, the Ngatiwhakatare, acting in concert with the Ngatitarua (who afterwards migrated across the Strait), sent a large war party, under the chiefs Te Puoho, Te Mahuebue, Te Purangi, and To Momona, to avenge the death of Te Rauhiti, a Ngatiraukawa chief, who had been treacherously killed when on a visit to Taranaki. They defeated the Ngatiapa on frequent occasions, and took many prisoners, among whom were Wi Mekomoko and Kaewha (the mother of Kawana Hunia). On the re-establishment of peace the prisoners were liberated.

WALTER BULLER.

Wellington,

26th July, 1867.

Mr. Surveyor SWAINSON to the UNDER-SECRETARY, Native Department.

Forwarding Report on Native Reserves allotted by New Zealand Company. Wellington, 13th August, 1867
SIR,—

I have the honour to forward a return of lands set apart "in the New Zealand Company's settlements (in the Province of Wellington) under that company's scheme, for the benefit of the Natives, the subsequent disposal of each section," &c., together with a condensed report on the same.

I have, &c.,

GEORGE F.
SWAINSON.

The Under-Secretary, Native Department.

Enclosure.REPORT ON RESERVES made by the NEW ZEALAND COMPANY in its Settlement in the PROVINCE OF WELLINGTON.

ONE of the principles laid down by this New Zealand Company in founding its past settlements in New Zealand was that of "reserving out of every purchase of land from the Natives a portion of the territory ceded, equal to one-tenth of the whole, and to hold the same in trust for the benefit of the chief families of the ceding tribes. The Company did not propose to take the reserves for the Native owners in large blocks, as it has been the practice to make for the Indians in North America, because that plan tends to impede settlement, and to encourage savages to continue barbarous, living apart from the civilized community; but the Company's reserves were to be made in the same way as if the reserved lands had been actual purchases made of the Company by the Natives. Accordingly, out of 1,100 sections or 110,000 acres, which the Company offered to the public at the preliminary sales of land in the first settlements, 110 sections (11,610 acres), which were reserved for the Native chiefs, were appropriated according to an order of choice determined by ballot in the same way as the priority of choice was determined among the purchases in general." (See instructions from the directors of the Company to Mr. Halswell, 10th October, 1840.)

Under such land orders and orders of choice, Captain Smith, the New Zealand Company's principal surveyor, selected on behalf of the Natives sections in the first districts thrown open. After his resignation this duty of selecting devolved upon Mr. Halswell, who was appointed by the Company's Commissioners for the management of Native reserves, and subsequently on Mr. St. Hill.

In the selections made by Captain Smith, both of town and country lands, he appears to have exercised the orders of choice as much as possible in selecting those lands which were in actual occupation. Thus the Native cultivations at Te Aro were selected as reserves: the same at Thorndon, Pitone, Ohiro, Kaiwharawhara, &c. These reserves were placed by the Company under the management of Mr. Halswell. Subsequently such management was transferred by Governor Hobson to the Bishop of New Zealand and the Chief Justice, from whom it passed to Mr. St. Hill, Colonel McCleverty, Mr. D. Wakefield, &c., in whose hands it remained until the passing of the Native Reserves Act of 1856. Their jurisdiction extended over all the tenths, both town and country.

On Colonel McCleverty making the final awards of settlement of outstanding claims and disputes between the Company and the Natives, compensation in land was given to individual tribes and hapus, on condition of their relinquishing all claims to former cultivations made on lands purchased from the Company by European settlers. These awards consisted partly of unselected lands, which was the property of the Company, and partly of some of the tenths before mentioned.

These lands are set forth and secured to the Natives by deeds executed between Colonel McCleverty (with the sanction of the Governor) and the Natives. Over these the Commissioners, under the Native Reserves Act of 1856, have no control or jurisdiction, according to a decision given by Mr. Whitaker when Attorney-General; but the legal status of these reserves (Colonel McCleverty's) appears involved in doubt—i.e., whether they are considered as Native lands over which the Crown has waived the extinction of title, and can be treated by the Natives as such. It is, however, worthy of notice that the Government, having in some instances actually purchased lands of this class from the Natives; have tacitly admitted their title to be free from the trammels of any prior extinction. These tenths are excluded in the grant from the Crown to the Company.

In the years 1851 and 1853 all of the Native reserves on Thorndon (with the exception of about one-eighth of an acre) which had not been previously dealt with by Colonel McCleverty, or included in Tod's grant, were granted by Sir George Grey as endowments for hospital and college and grammar-school purposes, "for the relief of all classes of our subjects," and to such grammar school are to be admitted "all classes and races of our subjects inhabiting New Zealand."

The original reserves in the different districts were tabulated as follow, in a return furnished by Mr. Beere, Principal Surveyor, to Mr. G. Clarke, Protector of Aborigines, 31st January, 1844: 110 town acres, representing tenths of 1,100 acres of which the Town of Wellington consists. 3,400 acres out of 44,100 acres of country lands; but subsequently further Native-reserve selections were made, increasing the above to 4,200 acres.

The Porirua purchase in dispute between the Company and the Natives was finally settled by Colonel McCleverty in 1847, and the reserves previously selected as such for the Natives were either retained, with other lands, or exchanged for lands selected by purchasers. These reserves have been hitherto dealt with by the Natives, except in cases where they have been brought under the Native Reserves Act by assent.

The Whanganui reserves originally set apart by the New Zealand Company were, it appears, amalgamated (or thrown up in lieu of other lands taken for the purpose) at the final, completion of the Whanganui purchase by Mr. McLean in, May, 1848.

The Company's purchase at Manawatu (South Bank) having been ignored by the Crown, I will only briefly notice that 14,900 acres were selected by purchasers, and 4,800 acres selected as Native-reserve tenths. Those original selectors who have not reselected in other settlements have a preemptive right not only in this block, but, as it appears from the exemption clause in the Native Lands Act, in any part of the land described in the schedule. Only 1,700 acres are required for this purpose by resident owners, and 11,000 by absentees.

GEORGE F. SWAINSON.

Wellington,

13th August, 1867.

No. 114. REPORT on RESERVES, NATIVE Lands, &c., Hawke's Bay.

G. S. COOPER, Esq., R.M., to the Hon. J. C. RICHMOND.

Napier, 26th August, 1867.

SIR,—

In compliance with instructions left with me by Mr. Rolleston on the occasion of his visit to Napier, I have the honour to enclose a skeleton map of this province showing the main features of the country; the land remaining to the Natives, as distinguished from what they have sold to the Crown; the Native reserves in alienated blocks; the principal villages; and the main lines of road in the province.

With regard to the reserves, I have to report that, as will be seen from the map, they form but a small percentage of the area sold. The Makahua Reserve (No. 5 on map), half of Pakowhai (No. 7), one section of 200 acres, eleven of 100 acres each, and one of 50 acres at Tikokino (Nos. 13 and 14), and Rangaika (No. 19), are the only portions of the reserves which are granted, or promised to be granted, to individuals for their separate use.

The only land which was given back to the Natives after their title had been extinguished, and for the general use, instead of to individuals, was a block of 700 acres at Tikokino (No. 14 on map). Of this quantity 300 acres were promised at the time of purchase, and appear in the deed as a condition of sale. The remaining 400 acres were afterwards added by Governor Gore Browne, on its being represented to His Excellency that the original acreage was insufficient to maintain the population:

All the other reserves shown on the map come under subsection (2) of section 3 of "The Native Lands Act, 1866." Of these the Natives have sold absolutely to the Government Manukaroa (No. 6), Tukuwaru (No. 11), Puketitiri (No. 23), and Kohenurakau (No. 18), and part of Pourere (No. 8); and they have sold absolutely to private individuals Waipukurau (No. 9), Rangaika (No. 19), Awanga (No. 21), and Roro o Kuri (No. 22). Those that remain to them are let—I believe without exception—to European tenants at fair rents, and for periods not in any case exceeding, twenty-one years.

Unfortunately for the rising generation many of these reserves were passed through the Native Land Court prior to the 8th of October last, and so, have missed coming under "The Native Lands Act, 1866." To show how much this is to be regretted, and what a misfortune it would have been had all the reserves remained alienable, it is only necessary to say that, in the case of almost every alienable reserve yet unsold, negotiations are in progress for its sale, and these are being prosecuted with vigour, the greater in proportion to the paucity of other land owned by the grantees. This is easily intelligible: a man who owns large tracts of land, from which he derives a revenue more or less capable of supporting him in the habits of luxury and idleness to which the Asiatic temperament of the Maori naturally inclines him, feels but little temptation to part with the small pieces which, from being in the heart of settlement, have acquired an exceptional value; whereas another, who perhaps has sold nearly every acre he possessed, and sometimes a bit of his neighbour's as well, is easily tempted to let his valuable reserve go at a price far beyond his wildest dreams of ten years ago, which will nevertheless not only leave him a pauper in a country where parish rates and unions are as yet unknown, but will turn his offspring into a race of thieves and vagabonds on the face of the earth. I most earnestly trust, therefore, that His Excellency's Government will not relax in any case the wise and salutary restrictions upon the alienability of reserves in this province which are imposed by the Act of 1866.

There are no reserves or grants of land in the province for religious or charitable purposes. There is one estate of 7,397 acres granted as an educational endowment. This estate is comprised in three grants of contiguous properties, of which two were ceded by the Maoris to the Crown under the provisions of "The Native Reserves Act, 1856," and the third is a free gift of Crown lands promised by Sir George Grey, and granted by Colonel Gore Browne: These grants are made in favour of the Bishop of New Zealand, who has conveyed them to trustees appointed by the General Synod of the United Church of England and Ireland in New Zealand. As the trust upon which the land given by the Maoris is granted differs from that affecting the free gift from the Crown, I have extracted from the grants the words describing the trusts, which are as follow, the first two being in relation to the lands granted by the Maoris, and the third to that granted by the Crown: (1.) Grant dated 10th June, 1857, 1,745 acres, to George Augustus, Bishop of New Zealand, and his successors, "upon trust as an endowment for a school to be maintained at Te Aute, in the District of Ahuriri aforesaid, for the benefit of the aboriginal inhabitants of New Zealand." (2.) Grant, same date, 1,408 acres, same trust. (3.) Grant, dated 7th July, 1857, 4,244 acres, same grantee, "upon trust as an endowment for a school to be maintained in the District of Ahuriri aforesaid for the education of children of our subjects of both races in New Zealand." Thus the first two deeds grant 3,153 acres to endow a school "at Te Aute," for "the benefit," which may be educational or pecuniary, of the "aboriginal inhabitants," not of the district where the land lies, but "of New Zealand;" while the third deed grants 4,244 acres, by far the most valuable part of the property, to endow a school, not at Te Aute, but anywhere "in the District of Ahuriri aforesaid," which district is undefined, "for the education of children of our subjects of both races in New Zealand." Thus, of 7,397 acres lying almost in one block, 3,153 acres are to be applied to one trust, and 4,244 acres to another quite distinct.

No steps have been taken as yet to fulfil either of the trusts under which this valuable estate is held. Of this failure, however, I am bound to say that the blame does not attach to the Bishop, to the present trustees, or to the incumbent and manager of the estate, the Rev. Samuel Williams, but rather to the want of auxiliary funds to develop the resources of the property; and partly, and as many people think mainly, to the change which has taken place amongst the Maoris themselves, and which would incline them to any system of education rather than one associated with any particular religious denomination, or, perhaps I should say, with any religious element at all.

The system on which the estate has been managed has been that of endeavouring to bring it so soon as possible into a state of solvency, in the hope of being able subsequently to make enough, by farming the property, to erect the necessary buildings and carry on a school. To carry out this view, Mr. Williams, to whose uncontrolled management the estate has been hitherto committed, has spared neither time nor trouble, and has not only given his own practical experience, but has advanced a considerable sum of money, which, I believe, has not yet been wholly refunded to him. The result of it all has been that an excellent farm and cattle-station has been established, but simply nothing whatever has been done towards carrying out the original idea or ideas with which the land was made over to the head of a religious sect.

If I might make a suggestion, I would recommend that a Commissioner should be appointed to examine and report upon the value of the property, the amount of incumbrances with which it is burdened, and the best means of relieving it; and also to suggest in what way the present trusts may be amended so as to insure the establishment of a good common grammar school, at which the youth of both races indifferently might receive a sound education at as small a cost as possible; and I have no doubt that this might be accomplished at an expense, not far exceeding that of the board of the pupils, as I do not think the present annual value of the estate is less than one thousand pounds. Such an institution, were it in working order, and judiciously conducted under experienced management, would be gladly and extensively taken advantage of by parents of both races, and would supply a want which is daily becoming more felt.

I regret that so great a delay has taken place in forwarding this report. It has arisen from the pressure of work upon the Provincial Land Office, arising chiefly from the plans for the Native Land Court which had to be examined and passed, and which, with other matters, delayed the completion of the map until now.

I have, &c.,

G. S. COOPER, Resident Magistrate.

The Native Secretary, &c., Wellington.

Mr. Surveyor G. F. SWAINSON to the

ECERTARY, Native Department.

Wairarapa.—Transmitting Returns of Crown Grants and Native Reserves. Wellington, 14th September, 1867.
SIR,—

In accordance with your request I have the honour to forward a return I have prepared of all Crown grants made to Natives in fulfilment of promises made by the Government on the purchase of lands in the Wairarapa District. The return also shows the ungranted reserves of the same class. I also forward a draft general return of grants made within the province.

I have, &c.,

GEORGE F. SWAINSON.

The Under-Secretary, Native Office.

Enclosure.

RETURN of all CROWN GRANTS made to NATIVES in the PEOVINCE of WELLINGTON under "The Crown Grants Act (No. 2), 1862," with SPECIAL WAIRARAPA RESERVES granted and not granted, to 30th June, 1857.

(No. 2.)SPECIAL RESERVES NOT GRANTED (Wairarapa District).

The above are, I think, all the special reserves in the Wairarapa District for which grants have been promised by the Government at the time of purchase of the blocks within which they are situate, or at a subsequent date.

The general reserves are numerous, and can only be individualized by operation of Native Lands Act or of some other tribunal appointed by the Government in case the Native title is deemed to have been extinguished.

For general reserves see return of all Native reserves in Appendix to Journals, and in Report of Land Purchase Department.

GEORGE F. SWAINSON, Late Commissioner of Native Reserves.

Wellington,

14th September, 1867.

No. 116.REPORT of the PUBLIC PETITIONS COMMITTEE on the PETITION of Fifty-one NATIVES of the WAIRARAPA.

THIS petition contains two distinct complaints against the Executive of the colony, and prays for redress. It also contains a request. The Committee purpose taking up all these three subjects seriatim.

The first complaint is to the effect that the percentages arising from the resale to the public of certain lands in the Wairarapa District, originally sold by the petitioners to the Government with a pledge that a certain percentage should be expended under certain conditions for their benefit, have not been so expended. The Committee have examined the conditions inserted in the deeds of sale executed by the petitioners and accepted on the part of the Government, assuring the former that 5 per cent. shall be so expended. The conditions are as follow: "It is further agreed to by the Queen of England on her part to pay us at certain periods, within certain years, to be decided on by the Governor of New Zealand and ourselves—that is, that we are to have a certain additional consideration for the land we have sold, to be paid to us for the construction of flour-mills for us, for the forming of schools to teach our children, for the construction of hospitals, and for medical attendance for us, and also for certain annuities to be paid to us for certain of our chiefs; but it is hereby agreed that we, and certain officers who shall be appointed by the Queen or the Governor of New Zealand, shall carefully discuss in Committee to which, and at what times, and in what proportions the said money shall be applied to each of the purposes above specified. The payments to be made annually to our chiefs are to be decided upon by the Governor of New Zealand only, or by an officer appointed by him, who shall have the power of deciding as to which of the chiefs shall receive the annual payments. These payments for all the above purposes are to be as follows: that is, when the surveys are complete and the land is resold which we have transferred to the Queen of England, or to the Kings or Queens who may succeed her, a certain portion of the money to be received by the Queen or Government of New Zealand as payment for the said land is to be deducted for the purposes which have been above specified: the amount of the money to be returned to us is 5 per cent., or equal to five pounds out of every hundred pounds, after deducting the surveys and other expenses connected with laying off the said lands."

The Committee have also obtained a return from the Treasury, proving that from the 29th March, 1853, to the 31st December, 1866, lands and scrip have, in the Wairarapa District, been disposed of to the value of £63,179 18s. 9d. From this sum must be deducted, in the first instance, as cost of survey, at the rate of 5 per cent., £3,159. Five per cent. upon this sum gives the amount to which the above-mentioned conditions are applicable—viz., £3,001 1s. But appears that authorized payments from the year 1855, on account of some of the petitioners, have been made to the amount of £453 10s. 2d., and another sum must be added on account of the Papawai Mill, amounting to £400, leaving a balance of £2,147 2s. 10d. With reference to the above sum of £2,147 2s. 10d., the committee recommend that it should immediately be disposed of as stipulated in the conditions above quoted.

The second complaint is that some of the Crown grants for the lands which were reserved from public sale, and restored to the petitioners, have, and some have not, been issued to the petitioners. The Committee have examined the reports of the Land Purchase Commissioners relative to the extinguishment of Natives titles (Nos. 59, 74, and 81, pages 287, 289, and 303, printed as C.—No. 1), and they have also examined the Appendix to the Journals of the House of Representatives, Session 1862, E.—No. 10, pages 11 and 23. In the latter page there is a detailed list of the reserves in the Wairarapa District, for which Crown grants were promised to the petitioners. They have also examined the Appendix to the Journals of the House of Representatives, E.—No. 7, page 1, Session 1865. They find that out of the twenty reserves enumerated in the list in page 23, Appendix to the Journals, Session 1862, E.—No. 10, Crown grants have been issued to the petitioners in fifteen cases, leaving only five cases in which they have not been issued. These five cases are as follow:—

The reason assigned in Case No. 1 for the non-issuing of the Crown grant is that Paul Stone is dead, and that succession should be proved under the Native Lands Act. The Crown grant is in the Native Office, and it is evident that the Secretary for the Native Department should cause the succession to be proved and notice given to the heirs to take up the Crown grant within a fixed time. The Crown grant appears to have been promised in the year 1858.

The cause assigned Case 2 for the non-issuing of the Crown grant is that the grantee is dead, and that nothing further is known in the matter. This reserve has not been surveyed.

The cause assigned in Case 3 for the non-issuing of the Crown grant is that, although the reserve is situated in the midst of lands purchased by European settlers, nothing is known respecting the grantee. This reserve has not been surveyed.

The causes assigned in Cases 2 and 3 are most unsatisfactory. The Provincial Government of Wellington has been allowed to deduct, as shown above, £3,159 for the survey of the lands sold, and they should be called upon to cause the surveys to be executed. The Crown grants should then be drawn out in favour of the original grantees, and then notice should be given by the Native Secretary to the grantee or the heirs, as the case may be, to take up the Crown grants within a fixed time. The promises of Crown grants in both these cases were made in the year 1853.

The cause assigned in Case No. 4 for the non-issuing of the Crown grant is that the grant was prepared, but it was found to be incorrect, and it cannot be rectified until the provincial authorities cause the survey of the adjacent lands. Nothing can be more unsatisfactory than the cause assigned in this case. The provincial authorities should be at once Compelled to survey the adjacent lands. The Crown grant should then be prepared, and notice issued to the grantee to take it up within a fixed time. The Crown grant was promised in 1855.

In Case 5, it appears that Matiaha paid for the land on the 7th March, 1866, but the reserve has not been surveyed, and consequently no Crown grant has been prepared. As observed above, the Provincial Government of Wellington has been paid in hard cash by the grantee for the land they ought to be at once compelled to survey the land; the Crown grant should then be prepared, and notice given to the grantee to take it up within a fixed time.

Having disposed of these five cases, there remain the forty-three general reserves in the Wairarapa District (enumerated in the list detailed in the Appendix to the Journals, 1862, E.—No. 10, page 11) to be disposed of. The Committee find that, out of these forty-three cases, Crown grants have been promised in the seven following cases only:—

- This reserve is surveyed, but the Crown grant is not yet prepared. The Secretary for Crown Lands should be called upon to prepare the Crown grant, and send it to the Native Office to be dealt with as suggested above.
- These reserves have been surveyed, and it is alleged that the Crown grants cannot be prepared until the names of the other claimants are obtained. The Crown grants should be drawn out in the names of the original grantees, and then notice should be served on the heirs to take them up within a fixed time.
- This case is similar to that of Nos. 2 and 3, and similar remarks apply.
- This case is similar to that of Nos. 2 and 3, and similar remarks apply.
- The Crown grant in this case has been prepared, but disputes have arisen among the heirs.
Case brought under Native Lands Act, August, 1867. If this case has been disposed of under the said Act, no delay should be allowed to elapse before the Crown grant is made to accord with the certificate of the Court, and delivered to the parties who have obtained an award in their favour.
- Rihara Taka is said to be absent, in the employ of Archdeacon Leonard Williams. The grant is said to be lying in the office of the Wellington Crown Lands Commissioner. The Native Secretary could have no difficulty in serving a notice upon the grantee through Archdeacon Leonard Williams, and this course should be adopted.

There are still two cases which cannot be found among the printed papers. They are as follow:—

In Case No. 1, the reserve has been surveyed, and the Crown grant is said to be in course of preparation in the office of the Secretary of Crown Lands. That officer should be called upon to prepare the Crown grant forthwith.

In Case No. 2, Paul Stone has paid for the land. The survey has been made, but no Crown grant has been issued. Paul Stone is dead, but that is no reason why the Crown grant should not be made out in the name of the deceased, and then notice can be given to the heirs to prove their title, and to take up the Crown grant.

The request which the petitioners make is, that Crown grants should be at once issued to them in accordance with the decisions of the Native Land Court in all cases disposed of by that Court.

The Committee have been informed that considerable delay is occasioned by it being necessary to refer to Auckland in every case before these Crown grants can be prepared and issued; and I am directed to suggest that it appears highly impolitic that any unnecessary delay should occur between the decision of the Native Land Court and the issuing of the Crown grants.

Like all petitions from the Maori race, the terms in which this petition has been drawn up are so vague as to have entailed an immense amount of trouble upon the Committee; and I am directed to offer their thanks to Mr. Domett, the Secretary for Crown Lands, Mr. Rolleston, Under-Secretary, Native Department, and to Mr. G. F. Swainson, for the assistance which they have rendered to the Committee on the present occasion.

J. CRACROFT WILSON,
C.B., Chairman.

[Extract from New Zealand Gazette.]

Native Reserves made in Confiscated Territory. G. GREY, GOVERNOR. ORDER IN COUNCIL. At the Government House, at Wellington, the eighth day January, 1868. Present: THE PRESIDENT AND MEMBERS OF THE EXECUTIVE COUNCIL.

WHEREAS by section three of an Act of the General Assembly of New Zealand, intituled "The Confiscated Lands Act, 1867," power is given to the Governor from time to time as he shall think fit, by Proclamation in the New Zealand Gazette, to reserve out of the lands taken under "The New Zealand Settlements Act, 1863," "The New Zealand Settlements Act, 1864," and "The New Zealand Settlements Amendment and Continuance Act, 1865," and "The New Zealand Settlements Acts Amendment Act, 1866," or out of land which by "The East Coast Land Titles Investigation Act, 1866," and "The East Coast Land Titles Investigation Act Amendment Act, 1867," it is provided shall be deemed to be Crown lands, such lands as to him shall seem fit, and there out to grant such portion or portions thereof as he shall think fit to such person or persons of the Native race as he shall think deserving, and shall appear to him to have acted in the preservation of peace and order and in suppressing the rebellion:

Now, therefore, I, Sir George Grey, K.C.B., the Governor of the said colony, in pursuance and exercise of the said recited power and authority, do hereby proclaim and declare that I reserve for the purposes aforesaid, out of the land so taken as aforesaid, the pieces of land mentioned in the schedule hereto for the persons whose names are therein mentioned.

FORSTER GORING, Clerk of the Executive Council.

Newcastle.

Town of Newcastle.—Wiremu te Wheoro, Lot 426, 1 rood 7 perches; Hori Kingi te Anaua, Lot 427, 1 rood 15 perches; Haimona te Aooterangi, Lot 428, 1 rood. 8 perches; Kawana Paipai, Lot 429, 1 rood 2 perches; Noa te Rauhihi, Lot 430, 35 perches; Wiremu Barton, Lot 431, 1 rood 2 perches; Mete Kingi, Lot 568, 1 rood 1 perch; Te Raihi, Lots 118 and 119, 1 rood 8 perches.

Mangatawhiri.

Town of Havelock.—Hete Kingi, Lot 54, 1 acre; and Rural Lot 68, 14 acres, near Havelock.

Tauranga.

Parish of Te Papa.—Hamiora Tu and Te Retimana te Ao, Lot 20, 196 acres; Tomika te Mutu and Te Kuka te Mea, Lot 92, 100 acres; Tomika te Mutu, Lots 105 and 109, 109 acres.

No. 118. Mr. Commissioner PARRIS to the Hon. the NATIVE MINISTER.

Respecting Native Reserve on Mr. S. Fishleigh's Farm. New Plymouth, 28th April, 1868.
SIR,—

With reference to the last paragraph of the Under-Secretary's letter, dated 17th March, respecting a small reserve on Mr. Fishleigh's farm, I have the honour to inform you that this reserve is one of many that were made at the time of the purchase of the Fitzroy Block, being at the time a small Native cultivation (one of those spots which the Natives were in the habit of cultivating for a few years and then abandoning it); but, as Governor Fitzroy ordered all their cultivations to be reserved, they had to be marked as such on the maps, and this one, like many others, being situated in the centre of allotments afterwards taken up by Europeans, has no right of road left for it; consequently the Native owner has derived no advantage whatever from it for nearly twenty years. In 1863 the Commissioners for Native Reserves recommended that this reserve should be sold to Mr. Fishleigh for £5, the amount which he has offered for it; but the Native Minister, Mr. Bell, was of opinion that the interest of the Native owner would be better protected if the reserve was sold by public auction; but it would not have been so, for if Mr. Fishleigh bid one shilling for the reserve no one would be likely to bid against him. Seeing there was no right of road to it, and knowing those particulars, the Commissioners were of opinion that it would have been doing the Native owner an injustice to have submitted the reserve to public auction. This class of reserves has given the Government from time to time a great deal of trouble. Europeans holding land orders under the New Zealand Company were never allowed anything for them, and were subjected in several cases to great annoyances from the Natives until the Government bought them out, but not at the expense of the purchasers under the New Zealand Company, as in the case of Mr. Fishleigh by his offer of £5, the full value of the land, even if there was a road to it. I have caused this reserve, with three others, to be brought under the Native Reserves Act for management in the usual form, should you think proper to allow Mr. Fishleigh to purchase it, which I strongly recommend.

I have, &c.,

R. PARRIS, Civil Commissioner, and Commissioner for Native Reserves.

The Hon. the Native Minister, Wellington.

No. 119.[Extract from New Zealand Gazette.]

Native Reserves Commissioner appointed. G. F BOWEN, Governor. ORDER IN COUNCIL. At the Government House, at Auckland, the first day of March, 1870. Present: His EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR IN COUNCIL.

WHEREAS, by an Act of the General Assembly of New Zealand, intituled "The New Zealand Native Reserves Act, 1856," certain powers therein specified are vested in the Commissioners under the said Act: And whereas by another Act of the General Assembly of New Zealand, intituled "The Native Reserves Amendment Act, 1862," all the powers and authorities which by "The New Zealand Native Reserves Act, 1856," are given to or vested in, or which may be exercised by, Commissioners appointed or to be appointed under that Act, shall vest in and may be exercised by the Governor: And it is by the said Act further enacted that the Governor may, by Order in Council, from time to time delegate all or any of the powers competent to the Commissioners under the said Act unto any person or persons for any period, and subject to any regulations or stipulations as may be specified in such order:

Now, therefore, His Excellency Sir George Ferguson Bowen, in exercise of the power and authority so vested in him as Governor as aforesaid, doth by this Order in Council delegate, until this order shall be revoked, to Major Charles Heaphy, V.C., all the powers competent to Commissioners under the said first-recited Act, without any restrictions or stipulations whatever.

Approved in Council this first day of March, one thousand, eight hundred and seventy.

H. W. YOUNG, Acting Military Secretary, (For Clerk of the Executive Council.)

No. 120.REPORT on the NATIVE RESERVES in the PROVINCE of HAWKE'S BAY.

- IN reporting on the condition of the Native reserves in the Province of Hawke's Bay, it may not be irrelevant to allude to the degree of social advancement which the Natives of that locality have manifested, and the practical loyalty for which they have been conspicuous.
- They appear to be remarkable for habits of order, their villages and paddocks are the best kept, and they possess the greatest amount of material wealth of any tribe in New Zealand. At Omarunui they assisted the settlers in crushing out the rebellion of the earlier Hauhau fanatics, and at the Mohaka they suffered heavily for their allegiance to the Queen's Government.

- The advent of the white settlers was the commencement of their prosperity, which increased as the settlement advanced.
- The chief cause of their prosperity was unquestionably the circumstance of their preserving to themselves a large extent of good land while selling or letting blocks for our settlement. They parted with the hilly, pasturage country, and much good cultivable land, but they kept large areas of the rich plain where their cultivations lay, and a sufficiency of grass country to afford them a large income from rents.
- The action of the Native Lands Act, in individualizing the titles to these lands, conferred a benefit on the owners by the security that it gave that improvements made by the existing owners would be enjoyed by his descendants without being liable to the rapacity of the chiefs or the intervention of the tribe; but it was not unattended by disadvantageous effects, which had not been provided against.
- The easy acquisition of the means of living by the rental of land induced in many of the Natives habits of extravagance and debt. While the land was held by the tribe in common it could not be forfeited by the indebtedness of the individual; but as soon as it became the property of one man, or of six or ten men who held it in virtue of an absolute Crown grant, that individual share or interest became a convertible property, which was liable to be seized as security for debt, and sold by action of the Courts in times of scarcity or depression. And thus for a debt trivial, perhaps, in its origin and amount, but increased by interest and law costs, land, which while the common property of the tribe was secure from seizure, became liable to be cut away altogether from the children of the first grantees.
- It may be urged that with all civilized people the possession of land is, and ought to be, amenable for the indebtedness of the owner; but the social laws of civilization will not always apply justly to the case of a people not entirely emerged from barbarism. The present price of Native land is utterly disproportionate to its future value; and, in the case of entailed estates, the consent of the successor as well as the act of the possessor is necessary to alienation.
- Above all, it would be a matter of regret if a law intended for the good of the Native should prove, in its operation, rather for the benefit of his European creditor. Notwithstanding their general prosperity the debts of the local Natives are of very considerable amount. Since Crown titles have been received mortgages and sales to the extent of £31,826 have been effected for country lands.
- This sum is, however, far from representing the full amount, as "costs" to an unknown extent are charged against the estates, and mortgages are in many instances for a "running account."
- The improvidence of the Natives is stimulated by the facilities with which they can obtain goods, and occasionally money, from the storekeepers and publicans on the security of a mortgage on a fertile and accessible estate.
- The more prudent of the Natives say that the temptation to incur debt in this manner was so great that where, amongst a number of co-grantees in an estate, three or four mortgaged their interests it was almost impossible, in the close relations that exist in a hapu, for the remainder to keep their shares unencumbered, and the land drifted from their possession.
- Karaitiana, a chief conspicuous for his loyalty, in speaking of his difficulties in connection with land, said: "We mortgaged our grants, but not to an extent beyond what we had the means to pay the interest of, and more, from rents receivable from land let to white men. But the time of low prices for wool and stock came, and the white men did not pay the rents agreed upon—one owing three years' rent—and while we could not get in the money owing, we were called upon periodically for the interest on the mortgages; and so our debts increased, and we had to mortgage other lands, or to sell to keep off legal proceedings."
- One of the principal chiefs of Hawke's Bay, once a very large landowner, is now almost without land, and others were so fast divesting themselves of their property that, until recent measures were taken to check such action, a danger existed of the children of the present landowners becoming paupers.
- Acting under instructions received from the Hon. the Native Minister on 19th February, 1870, visited Hawke's Bay in February last, and conferred with the principal chiefs on the subject of rendering inalienable for themselves and their descendants certain conveniently-situated blocks of land. Aware of the improvidence, in respect to land-selling, of some of their number, and of its disastrous results, they were induced to hand over to trustees appointed by the Government lands to the extent of about 31,000 acres.
- I was desirous that the places which, by their industry, had become most valuable should be permanently secured to them, and succeeded in obtaining their conveyance of a large portion of the rich plain lying between the Villages of Clive and Meanee. The Native Village of Pakowhai, with 834 acres of enclosed paddocks, about £3,000 of household property, and the best artesian well in the district, were conveyed, to trustees by Karaitiana, the sole owner

- Other large blocks, or individual interests therein, upon the banks of the Ngaruroro and Tukituki Rivers, and comprising fine fertile land, are also made over to trustees, together with estates on the higher grounds available as sheep runs, and from which rents are now being derived.
- In all, lands to the extent of about thirty-one thousand acres were put in trust.
- The Chief Judge of the Native Land Court was very desirous that land which had been individualized in title by the Court should not be utterly lost to the owners. Mr. Fenton kindly supplied me with the form of trust-deed which has been used, and which was drawn out by Sir William Martin, D.C.L.
- The explanation to the Natives of the Act they were becoming parties to, and their future position in regard to the land, required the fullest discussion with each person concerned; but with the valuable aid of Mr. Locke, Resident Magistrate, and Mr. Martin, Hamlin, Interpreter, I was enabled, I think, to make them thoroughly understand the provisions of the trust-deed, and to learn myself their views in regard to estates they were desirous of securing to their relatives or descendants.
- The provision of "The Native Lands Act, 1869," by which a majority in value of the grantees must consent to any conveyance before the transfer of an individual interest becomes valid, made the work very tedious, as the owners were generally scattered and could only be brought together with difficulty. Where white men represented the majority in value their interests were rather opposed to the transfer of the remaining shares to a trust. It is worthy of consideration whether, in the case of a conveyance to a beneficial trust or in settlement, a modification of that provision, of the Act would not be judicious.
- Though the general condition of the Natives of Hawke's Bay has been advanced by the settlement of the district, yet, in many cases, fixed habits of indolence have resulted from the acquisition of the easy means of maintenance derivable from rents. In assisting the Natives to transfer the titles of a portion of their land to a trust I endeavoured to secure good fertile land that would repay labour bestowed upon it, and so conduce to their returning to habits of farming.
- With this view I arranged with Manaina Tini and Pinehira for the conveyance to trust of the unsold portion of the Mangateretere East Block, near the Village of Havelock. This is Very fertile land, said to be worth £7 or £8 per acre. The deed was signed by the above-named chiefs before I left Napier.
- The chief Te Hohepa Ringanohu and others were desirous that the Raukawa East Block, of 4,438 acres, should be reserved for their descendants. This is very fine land, said to be worth £5 an acre. A mortgage of £550 lies upon certain interests-in it, but with good management that amount might soon be cleared off this fine estate, and the mortgage of £1,200 on the Mangateretere East estate lessened. Hohepa te Ringanohu signed the trust-deed for Raukawa East, and promised to obtain the signatures of other of the grantees.
- At the request of Manaina Tint and his relations, I drew out a deed for the Waikahu Block, of 764 acres. This is very fine land and in part cultivated, lying near the Waitangi Bridge.
- For the Natives at and near. Te Aute the Koparekore Block, of 1,278 acres, and Te Tarere, of 236 acres, were put into trust. I also had prepared a deed of the Pouputahe Block, of 241 acres net, at the request of Renata and others.
- It was very desirable that some land should be secured for Te Meihana Takihi and his relatives, as they had sold largely. I therefore arranged that Te Awa-a-te-Atua Block, of 5,070 acres, should be conveyed to trustees, Te Meihana executing the deed, and promising, to obtain the signatures of his relatives.
- For Karaitiana and several of his relatives not holding interests in the Pakowhai estate, I arranged that, the Ngatarawa No. 5 Block, of 5,375 acres, should be set apart. Te Meihana Takihi and Karaitiana signed the deed, which was left with Mr. Locke for completion.
- Te Heketa and others owning property at the Forty-Mile Bush desired that land in that locality should be made inalienable. I arranged that the Oringi Waiaruhe Block, of 12,008 acres, should be conveyed to trustees; the deed was signed by the principal owners before I left the locality.
- The Papaaruhe Block, of 276 acres, is granted with a limitation to the effect that it shall not be alienated for more than twenty-one years without the consent of His Excellency the Governor. The owners desire to put it into trust, in order that the rents might be equitably divided amongst them. I would respectfully request that His Excellency in Council be moved to give the required consent to the settlement in trust. A deed was prepared, and left with Mr. Locke for execution by the grantees.
- Paora Ropiha and Wi Patene have for some time past been desirous of selling the Eparaima West Block, granted with a limitation similar to that last described. They offer as an equivalent that the Pakowhai Block, at Black, Head and other lands shall be put in trust for their children. The proposal seems to have been for some time favourably entertained by the Government, and, the matter having been referred to me to act in, I have ventured to prepare and leave for, execution a trust-deed for Pakowhai, in anticipation of your approval of their request, when they render inalienable a full equivalent for Eparaima West.
- Many other Natives desired to hand over their lands to the trust, but in all the cases not shown in Schedule C there existed difficulties that prevented their wish being at once complied with.

- The chief Harawira Tatere and others of the Cape Kidnapper Natives desire to hand over the large blocks of Kairaka and Te Apati. Crown grants have not yet been issued for these. When some temporary difficulties are cleared away, I shall recommend that a portion of the Waimarama Block shall be made inalienable for them, but I am not at present sure that the wants of these people are such as would justify the reservation of all the above-mentioned lands.
- I am very desirous of securing some land for the chief Tareha, but have not been able to find a granted estate that is sufficiently unencumbered for the purpose.
- Of ungranted land there is, near Pa Whakairo, a good block called Te Koau, of which, by Native report, Tareha appears to be the chief owner. I have drawn his attention to the propriety of handing this over to trustees as a provision for him in the future, and he has promised to furnish me with a description of the boundaries.
- I would respectfully recommend that, in accordance with the provisions of "The Native Reserves Act, 1856," a competent person should be appointed to obtain the consent of the owners of the following blocks — Pohirau, for Te Heketa; Otukarara, for Paora Kaiwhata; Te Torohanga, for Noa Huki; Pukehou, for Paora Korokoro; Tutake Opaque and Te Koau, for Tareha—to their becoming Native reserves in order to their being proclaimed as such under clause 17 of "The Native Reserves Act, 1856." As incidental to the subject of Native reserves, I may mention that during my stay at Hawke's Bay the much-vexed negotiation of the purchase of the Heretaonga Block was brought to a close, the purchase-money being taken by the Native owners, who receive from the purchasers a reserve (which will vest in trustees) of 1,600 acres in the best part of the block.
- Messrs. Cuff and Stedman, conveyancers at Napier, were employed by me for that part of the work which more particularly demanded professional assistance.
- The Natives treated me with great confidence, and appeared to be well satisfied with the action taken by the Government in providing means for the conservation of their land. Several of the chiefs, who by their actions have proved themselves to be steadily loyal, spoke with bitterness when alluding to the manner in which claims have been made against their estates, and I am quite convinced that, if action had not been, taken by the Government to arrest the further alienation of the lands necessary to them, many loyal Natives, in becoming landless, would have been driven into disaffection.
- There are a number of small reserves—chiefly fishing-stations and landing-places—that have not yet occupied the attention of the Land Court, and which scarcely appear in the map of Hawke's Bay. I append a list of these—Schedule B—and recommend that they should be brought under the notice of the Court with a view to being granted in such manner as shall secure the Native and the public right in their use respectively.
- The trust-deeds and papers connected therewith are in the hands of Mr. R. M. Locke, who will obtain the signatures of the Natives who have yet to sign, and attend to the requisite stamping and registration.
- In addition to the plans, thirteen in number, on the trust-deeds, I made copies of thirty-four plans of Native reserves, appending to each short abstracts of title, &c, and which I have placed in the hands of the lithographer to be printed as part of an appendix to the Report on Native Reserves.

CHARLES HEAPHY, Commissioner of Native Reserves.

The Hon. the Native Minister.

29th May, 1870

Charitable Trusts.

THERE is so much of Native interest and Governmental responsibility attaching to the trust endowments at Wellington that, though not strictly within my cognizance, I have included them in the accompanying schedules. These lands were originally amongst the reserved "tenths," selected as Native reserves in pursuance of the contract between Colonel Wakefield and the Native sellers of the Port Nicholson Block; they were subsequently granted in trust for various religious, educational, and charitable purposes, from which Natives, in common with Europeans, might derive a benefit. Other lands belonging to the "tenths" have been appropriated by the Government to purposes conducing to the welfare of the Natives, but not so exclusively for their benefit as not to leave cause for dissatisfaction on their part. The Native Office and hostelry, the Governor's stables, and a part of the Te Aro barrack sites were among these appropriations.

While the Natives participated in the advantages which such institutions as the college and grammar school, hospital, and cathedral church conferred, the Europeans did so equally or, from their larger numbers, to a greater degree. In the terms of the trusts no provisions exist by which the Natives are to enjoy peculiar advantages or a preference at these institutions, although the sites, and in some cases the endowments, are taken from lands which, by agreement, were to be inalienable as reserves for the maintenance of the Natives.

It was declared by the secretary of the New Zealand Company that the reserves were to be "held in trust for the residuum and proper maintenance of the chiefs, their tribes and families."

See also terms of sale of New Zealand Company's land, 1st May, 1839: "110 sections will be reserved by the Company, who intend to distribute the same as private property amongst the chief families of the tribe from which the land shall have been originally purchased."—Vide "Supplementary Information relative to New Zealand," page 167.

The purposes to which seventeen reserves have been appropriated are: A cathedral-church site, a, civil-hospital site and endowment, a grammar-school endowment, a Church-of-England school endowment, a military-barrack site, and a Native departmental office and hostelry site. It is impossible reasonably to aver that these purposes and uses are consistent with either the letter or spirit of the declaration above alluded to.

The Natives state that they have not a right to free access to the hospital, but admit that they obtain admission, the Government, or some one, paying the charges. As far as I am able to obtain information on the other side, it appears that, a provision having been made in the terms of each trust-deed to the effect that the Natives shall participate in the charity equally with Europeans, it was not thought unfair that some few of the Native reserves should be so appropriated. It is easy to understand how health and education were considered as indispensable to the well-being of the Maori as the "fitting maintenance" which the New Zealand Company's agent had promised.

It is provided in the terms of the cathedral-site grant that the Native patients of the civil hospital shall have free sittings in the cathedral church.

It is necessary, now, to ascertain how far the compact regarding the tenths was adhered to by both parties. In the first place it was broken by the Company in their agent selecting the 11th, 22nd, and 33rd sections instead of the 10th, 20th, and 30th, so causing the proportion to be an eleventh instead of a tenth.

An appeal to the Supreme Court has been for some time threatened by the Natives, who have paid, I am informed, £50 to a solicitor at Wellington for a legal opinion to guide them.

Some additional land may have been given as an equivalent to the deficient area, but the whole of the reserves were of less value from the order of choice on which they were selected being moved back. But the compact was broken in a more serious manner by certain of the Natives—those, notably, of the south side of the harbour—omitting to give possession of the land to the Company when the reserves were ready for their occupation. It is no part of the present consideration as to whether it was wise to require or expect that the Natives would remove from their pas and cultivations; it is sufficient that they sold such places, and then, in many cases, declined to give them up. I am aware that it may be said that certain of the Natives had never received any payment for the land until the time of Colonel McCleverty's inquiry. This may be true in exceptional instances, but not extensively and such Natives received awards of land of far improved value. The manner in which Colonel McCleverty himself viewed the ownership is shown in the wording of his deeds, which, in nearly all, is as follows: "These lands are given in lieu of lands on settlers' sections," or "belonging to settlers."

The refusal of the Natives to vacate the pas and cultivations led to a compromise: certain of the reserves were conveyed to the Natives respectively, and other lands, to the extent of about 12,205 acres in the Town and Town Belt of Wellington and the rural districts, made over to them in perpetuity. In addition to these the Government purchased several sections of rural land, and handed them over to the Natives for their sole use and benefit.

It thus appears that the Natives received, outside the scheme of the "tenths," as much as 12,509 acres of suburban and rural land. Under these circumstances the morality of the appropriation of certain of the reserves for charitable trusts in which the Natives would fully participate cannot, I think, be reasonably impugned. But it is difficult or impossible to cause the Natives to understand that their own act was the occasion of the scheme of reserves being altered. "We never got any of the additional land awarded by Colonel McCleverty," some of them will argue—"others received that land: give us, as you promised, the rents of the reserves at Thorndon and Te Aro."

To very many of the Natives this claim appears just, and in places far beyond the limits of the Wellington Province the misapplication of the reserves has for several years been the subject of discussion and censure. It may be wise, therefore, for the Government to make a concession—at the present time it could not be considered a sign of weakness. I would, respectfully recommend—(1) That payment of rent the amount to be settled by arbitration—should be made by the Government for the reserves used for the Native Office and Government, stables, and for the site of the barracks at Te Aro; (2) and, in consideration of the site and endowment land of the civil hospital being original Native reserves, to make provision to secure to the Natives free admission to, and medical assistance at, that institution. If this proposition, or a reasonable modification of it, be not agreed to by the Natives the only course open that I could recommend would be to suffer an appeal from them to the Supreme Court.

The Words used were— "Of the land ceded by the chiefs, a portion equal to one-tenth of the whole will be reserved and held in trust by the New Zealand Company for the future benefit of the said chiefs, their families and heirs."

The schedules for the Province of Wellington give the following areas, viz.: Class A1—Charitable and religious reserves, 2,101 acres 3 roods 25 perches; Class A1—With a specified purpose, 8,661 acres 3 roods 33 perches; Class A1—Reserves under Native Lands Acts, 1,110 acres; Class B1—McCleverty's awards, 18,153 acres and 23 perches; Class B2—General reserves, 37,435 acres 2 roods 8 perches; Class C1—Grants with limitations, 105,904 acres 2 roods 25 perches: total, 173,366 acres 3 roods 34 perches.

By a return giving the names of the tribes in the North Island, presented to the General Assembly, 1870, the following appears to be the approximate Native population of the Province of Wellington: Otaki District, 740; Wairarapa District, 850; Rangitikei and Manawatu Districts, 1,091; Whanganui and Upper. Whanganui, 2,641: total souls, 5,322. This shows reservation of 31½ acres on the average per head, for the Native population of the Province of Wellington, independent of purely Native territory.

There have been made the following maps and tracings of Native reserves since, the date of the last report: Lithographs: Auckland, 15; Wellington, 2. Maps: Auckland, 19; Wellington, 15; Hawke's Bay, 4. Tracings: Auckland, 141.

The account of receipts and, expenditure of the Auckland Native Reserve Trust is made from the 15th July, 1871, as on that day the first moneys were received by the Trustee.

C. HEAPHY. 5th May, 1871. [NOTE.—The schedule to this report is too voluminous to be reprinted. See Parliamentary Papers, F.—No 4, 1871.—ED.]

No. 122.[Extract from New Zealand Gazette:]

Delegation of Powers under "The New Zealand Native Reserves Act, 1856." G F. BOWEN, Governor. ORDER IN COUNCIL. At the Government Buildings, at Wellington, the twelfth day of June, 1871. Present: THE HON. the PREMIER, PRESIDING, AND MEMBERS of the EXECUTIVE COUNCIL. Hawke's Bay District.

WHEREAS by an Act of the General Assembly of New Zealand, intituled "The New Zealand Native Reserves Act, 1856," certain powers therein specified are vested in the Commissioners under the said Act: And whereas by another Act of the General Assembly of New Zealand, intituled "The Native Reserves Amendment Act, 1862," all the powers and authorities which by "The New Zealand Native Reserves Act, 1856," are given to or vested in, or which may be exercised by, Commissioners appointed or to be appointed under that Act, shall vest in and may be exercised by the Governor; and it is by the said Act further enacted that the Governor may, by an Order in Council, from time to time delegate all or any of the powers competent to the Commissioners under the said Act unto any person or persons for any period, and subject to any regulations or stipulations as may be specified in such order:

Now, therefore, His Excellency Sir George Ferguson Bowen, in exercise of the power and authority so vested in him as Governor as aforesaid, doth by this Order in Council delegate, until this order shall be revoked, to Samuel Locke, Esquire, all the powers competent to Commissioners under the said first-recited Act, without any restrictions or stipulations whatever.

WILLIAM FOX., FORSTER GORING Clerk of the Executive Council.

THE Native reserves in this province have been set apart in the following manner: (1.) By contract made with the Native sellers of the land. (2.) By the voluntary action of the Governor in setting apart Crown lands as hostelry and school sites, and lands for the endowment of such institutions. (3.) By agreement with friendly and loyal Natives in lands taken under "The New Zealand Settlements Act, 1863." (4.) By appropriation out of confiscated blocks for surrendered rebels. (5.) At the instance of the Natives; and by the Governor, on the recommendation of the Judges of the Native Land Court.

Several of the reserves shown under the first two heads had been entirely lost sight of until search was made for the purpose of compiling the attached schedules.

In order to show the degree of responsibility attaching to the Government in respect to these reserves, I have classified them as follows:— Class A: Trusts under provisions of Crown grants or legislative enactment— (1) With a distinct and specified purpose; (2) For the benefit of Natives generally. Class B: Reserved lands, not under enactment— (1) For a specified person or purpose; (2) For the benefit of Natives generally. Class C: Reserves under or to be brought under Native Land Acts— (1) Grant with limitations; (2) Land which should be made inalienable; (3) Granted lands reconveyed to trustees.

Under Class A will be found the hostelry sites in Auckland and Onehunga, with the hostelry-maintenance reserves at Mechanics' Bay and St. George's Bay. The particulars of rents, &c., of these reserves will be found under the head of "Utilization." In this class will also be found a large number of reserves made for surrendered rebel Natives under the provisions of "The Confiscated Lands Act, 1867." The schedule shows fifty-seven of these, comprising about 2,744 acres, as having been surveyed and allotted, and a further liability in land for 1,900 Natives, equal to 96,145 acres. In most cases certain named chiefs or heads of families hold possession of these lands in trust for their people. Provision will have to be made for the survey of these reserves.

The schedules show that the period of probation of eighteen returned rebels, who are entitled to 727 acres of land at the Bay of Plenty, has expired. The conditions under which land was allotted to them appear to have been that the respective Native, or his "heirs and assigns," should "continue loyal" till the 1st January, 1870, when he would become entitled to receive a Crown grant. These grants should be issued with as little delay as possible to such of the Natives as have fulfilled the conditions.

It is necessary to draw attention to the character of several of the Crown grants made to friendly Natives under. "The New Zealand Settlements Act, 1863," and "The New Zealand Settlements Amendment and Continuance Act, 1865." The grant of Te Akau, on the West Coast, near Waikato Heads, of 90,360 acres, of date 13th March, 1867, has the following habendum: "To hold unto the said Tamihana Tunui [and twelve others], their heirs and assigns, for ever, in trust for and to divide the same among themselves and the loyal Natives of the Tribes Ngatitahinga and Tainui, with power to the said grantees to lease the same for any period not exceeding thirty years." Power is thus given to the Native Trustees to decide as to who is and who is not loyal, in so far as participation in the estate in virtue of loyalty is concerned. The grant does not set forth whether loyalty at date was essential, or would be sufficient at some subsequent period. There are grants in trust for the benefit of the Ngatimahanga, the Ngatihaua, and the Ngatihourua Tribes of the same nature. By section 5, "Confiscated Lands Act, 1867," it is provided that the subdivision of such an estate may be referred by the Governor in Council to the Native Land Court. It is desirable that these grants should be brought before the Court, and a definite partition of the land made as soon as possible, as on the death of any one of the grantees the heirs, whether loyal or rebellious, become trustees to hold or divide the estate.

Another class of deeds is represented by that dated 21st October, 1865, by which an estate at Waiuku is granted "to Riporaha Taranga and her heirs, and after her death to Aihopene Kaihau and Hori Turoa, in trust for the tribe called Ngatiteata." Also in the grant to Piti Katipa, of 21st October, 1865. In these cases it is desirable, I think, that the land should be conveyed to the Queen before, if possible, the death of the first-named grantee, and fresh Crown grants issued of a simpler character, as it is evident that, after the death of the grantees, their heirs and the named successors would, by the terms of the present grant, have conflicting interests.

Certain of the returned rebels, settled in the confiscated blocks, have asked to be allowed to lease or sell the land allotted to them. Except in extreme cases, as, for instance, where the land is unsuitable for the Native mode of cultivation and an exchange might be desirable, compliance with such request ought not, I think, to be conceded. If surrendered Natives could lease or sell their allotments, or if their residence on them were not made indispensable, the act of submission might be resorted to for purposes of gain only. It is desirable that Natives who come in should experience the advantage of civilization—of roads and markets in settled districts—and that their improvement in circumstances should be apparent to those who hold themselves aloof. This can only be effected by making the lands inalienable, and by issuing Crown grants to those who have improved their holdings, and fulfilled a prescribed term of residence. When their holdings are made secure it does not appear objectionable that they should become liable to contribute in money or labour to the improvement of the roads in their districts.

Utilization of Reserves.

By the action of the Native Land Court the great mass of the Native reserves in the Province of Auckland have been granted to the Natives for whose benefit they were originally set apart. Schedule C1 shows that 267 deeds, conveying 253,735 acres, have so issued. These reserves are either granted in trust or with restrictions that prevent the grantees mortgaging or selling the land absolutely, or letting it for more than twenty-one years without the Governor's consent. These lands are of course removed from the immediate control of the Government, but a responsibility rests with the Governor in regard to them that entails the necessity of a supervision, as frequent applications are made to alter the terms or remove the restrictions contained in the grants. Mr. John White states that at the West Waiuku the Native trustees have sold to white people some of the land granted to them in trust for themselves and relations in perpetuity.

The above rates of the Tauranga lands are for the first seven years of the term of twenty-one years. These lands have been for some time under agreement for lease, but, owing to the existence of doubts as to powers under the respective Acts, they could not, until the present month, be definitely let.

The Hostelry Maintenance Reserve No. 4, of Section 12, City of Auckland, has, until this year, remained unused. The footpath in common use from Auckland to Mechanics' Bay traversed its length, and access had to be free to a spring of water in the centre of the allotment. Upon offering, publicly, a portion of this land in March last for lease, objection was taken by the trustees of the adjoining estate of Hone Ropiha's to its probable enclosure. It appeared that the Crown had conveyed away a small street that had formerly given access (on paper) to Hone Ropiha's land in the rear of the hostelry reserve, which was then Crown land. The trustees claimed a right-of-way through the land, and, as it appeared that they would suffer an injustice if the reserve were enclosed, a lane 12 feet wide was set out along the western end of the reserve to afford the required access. The ground lying between this lane and the spring was then offered at public auction on lease for twenty-one years, and let to J. T. E. Rogan for £14 a year. The Municipal Council have commenced the construction of a path outside of the reserve, it having already been intimated that rent would be required for the further use of the land. When completed this path will afford good frontage access to the remaining part of the reserve, which I estimate may yield about £15 a year on a twenty-one years' lease. I propose that the sum of £40 shall be appropriated out of the proceeds of the hostelry lands for the purpose of leading the water from the spring to a fountain, to be constructed on the flat near the hostelry, where the water will be of benefit to the Natives and the inhabitants of the neighbourhood generally. The lease of the part let contains a provision to prevent the contamination of the water.

At Tauranga four additional allotments may be expected to be let, and at Onehunga one lot, yielding together about £9 a year additionally, in the course of the next year.

The lease of the hostelry-maintenance land at St. George's Point, Allotment 89, Section 1, will expire on the 9th June, 1873. Six and a quarter acres are here let for £13 a year. I propose to divide the land into four building lots, which I estimate would yield an aggregate of £40 a year.

The local authorities have lately taken down the Native market-sheds at the entrance of Queen Street Wharf. The hostelry site in Mechanics' Bay is too far from the centre of population of the city for the convenience of purchasers at a market. I therefore recommend that a quarter of an acre of the reserve at Point Britomart, near the Breakwater, should be set apart for a Native-produce-market site. The surface of the reserve is now 40 feet above the beach, but earth is required for filling the intake, and the alteration of level for as much space as will be required at first will present no great difficulty.

It is observed by the trustees of private trusts in Auckland that twenty-one years is too short a term to be attractive to good tenants. I respectfully recommend to the consideration of the Government the propriety of making forty years the maximum period in all future grants of beneficial trusts to European trustees.

See Reports of Native School Trustees to the Diocesan Synod of Auckland, 1870.

The foregoing sums, at their highest estimate, constitute, however, but a small income in relation to what is necessary for the legitimate—I do not allude to the political—government of the Natives. Educational and industrial institutions for their benefit are necessary, as well as hospitals and lunatic and other asylums. All these expenses, which, whether borne by the Provincial or General Governments, must be heavy, might be met by landed endowments. I would, therefore, recommend a very considerable addition to be made to the reserves in confiscated blocks for such purpose, and append a list (List E) of convenient lands. It is proper, however, to contemplate the arrival of a time when no distinction of race will exist as far as these purposes are concerned, and I would recommend that the terms of the trust should not be of such a nature as to make the revenue available exclusively for the benefit of the Maoris.

The endowment for the hostelries is "for Natives and other poor persons visiting Auckland."

By Schedule A1 it appears that there are 1,022,669 acres in held in trust for the benefit of the Natives of the province.

By Schedule C1 it will be seen that there have been reserved for Natives, by means of restrictions in Crown grants issued under the Native Land Court, an area of 258,735 acres, and by Schedules B1 and B2 it appears that in other ways 26,568 acres have been set apart for their benefit. This aggregate area of 1,307,973 acres, together with the large area of unceded land which is still available for them, appears a tolerably sufficient provision for the future wants of a people that does appear to be increasing in numbers.

It is possible, however, that there may be some tribes that have sold recklessly, and are in danger of becoming paupers. The ramifications of family and hapu make it a very difficult thing to arrive at the precise extent of land held by any one tribe, but a careful collation of the schedules with the map, aided by what information is available as to the numbers of the respective tribes indicate the Rarawa of Mangonui, the Ngatiwhatua of Auckland, and the Patukirikiri of Coromandel, as those that have the least extent of land left in proportion to what they have sold.

The schedules show that there are about 24,296 acres reserved for the Rarawa. The population of that tribe is estimated at 1,275 souls: thus the average is 19 acres per head. The Ngatiwhatua Tribe comprises about 254 souls, and has 10,251 acres reserved, or 40 acres per head. The Patukirikiri, of Coromandel, have about 100 acres of cultivable land for a fast-diminishing population of twenty-nine souls. This area would have been less, but for the reservation, in 1857, at the instance of Mr. Commissioner McLean, of the Island of Motu Tapere, which is fertile, and in the midst of good fisheries. All their other land fit for cultivation at Coromandel the Patukirikiri have sold. They, however, have possessions by collateral relationship at Koputauake and Whangapoua, so that there is no present danger of their becoming destitute. The extent, however, of the land they have sold within the last six years, amounting as it does to 6,822 acres, shows that the temptations presented by the high value of land near a gold field will induce Natives to sell recklessly that which should be held sacred for their children.

The Coromandel Native population in 1858 was 351 souls: in 1870 it appears to have been 280, showing a decrease of 71 souls in twelve years.—Vide Mr. Fenton's compilation of Census Returns, 1859, and "Return of the Names of the Tribes of the North Island, &c.," in Appendix to Journals, 1870.

Having regard, then, to the circumstances of these tribes with low areas of land, I would recommend that none of the cultivations of the Rarawa and Ngatiwhatua Tribes should be allowed to be sold; that an area of 600 acres should be made inalienable at Koputauake, and 600 acres, lying immediately south of the Pungapunga Stream, for the future wants of the Coromandel hapus. I also recommend that 1,000 acres at Waitaia, Mercury Bay, should be reserved for the future wants of the Natives of that place, and 444 acres at Opito Point for the Natives of Otama.

I would draw attention to the fact that there exist large tracts of land at Hokianga and Bay of Islands that have reverted to the Crown as "surplus land," on old land purchases. To the sale and Crown-granting of this in the ordinary manner, as waste lands, there exist acknowledged difficulties—such, indeed, as to prevent their settlement. These difficulties would not exist, however, in many cases if the lands were appropriated as endowments towards the support of Natives in local hospitals, and I think an arrangement might be made between the General and Provincial Governments, by which a large estate might thus be utilized, and the local revenue relieved of a liability that presses heavily.

Schedule D shows lands granted to friendly Natives, in which no provision has been made for necessary roads. These lands have been allotted, apparently, under the provisions of "The New Zealand Settlements Act, 1863," and Crown grants issued under "The Friendly Natives' Contracts Confirmation Act, 1866." Agreement was made, I believe with the Natives to whom the land was allotted that necessary roads should within five-years be taken, but no provision was made in the Crown grants to that effect. The period for taking such roads expires on the 1st August, 1871, and I thought it my duty to draw the attention of the Agent of the General Government at Auckland to the circumstance, and to the desirability of taking the roads before the expiration of the term. At the suggestion of that officer I have drawn on the maps the several lines of road that appear necessary, and the Native grantees have been informed of the roads being required.

Lying between the settlement of Raglan and the Waikato is an endowment estate of 10,000 acres for a Colonial University, and contiguous to it a grant in trust of 3,000 acres to the loyal chief Wiremu Nera, for the Ngatimahanga Tribe. As the main road from the Waikato to the West Coast would have to go in this direction, I was ordered by the Hon. the Native Minister, in February last, to report on the most suitable line for such road. I examined four different passes, and crossed the dividing range eight times, through a densely-wooded and mountainous country, and at length found a pass with easy gradients, and by which a road two miles sixty chains shorter than the present mail track could be carried. The Natives, who are anxious to work in the formation of this road, do not object to its being taken in part over their land. I have prepared a separate report and plan on the subject of this road that will be available for the information of the Assembly.

CHARLES HEAPHY, Trustee of Native Reserves. Auckland, 19th July; 1871. [NOTE.—For schedule to this report see Parliamentary Papers F.-No. 4, 1871. ?ED.]

No. 124. REPORT on the NATIVE RESERVES in the # PROVINCE of HAWKE'S BAY.

THE Schedules appended show the aggregate area of the Native reserves to be as follows: Class A1—Trusts under Crown grant, &c., 8,394 acres 1 rood 19 perches; Class B1?Reserves for a specified purpose, 887 acres 2 roods 17 perches; Class C1?Grants with limitations, 135,532 acres; Class C2—Land to be made inalienable, 2,160 acres; Class C3—Granted lands conveyed in settlement,

This area cannot be accurately stated until the extent of each individual interest is defined by action of the Native Land Court.

18,132 acres: total, 165,105 acres 3 roods 36 perches.

According to the enumeration in a return of the names of tribes in the North Island, published in the last Blue Book, the Native population of Hawke's Bay consists of 1,897 souls.

This is, perhaps, below the amount. The Superintendent of Hawke's Bay estimates the number at 3,000, which would give an area of 55 acres to each Native.

These numbers show a proportion of about 87 acres of reserved land to each Native.

In my report of last year I stated that I had prepared thirteen deeds that were either executed or in course of execution by Natives who had obtained grants to their estates through the Native Land Court, and were desirous to put the properties into trust to prevent the land from being alienated away from their children. I also drew attention to the desirability of altering, in the case of trusts, that part of "The Native Lands Act, 1869," which provides that no conveyance shall be valid that is not consented to by a majority in value of the co-grantees. The Crown grants to Natives, issued under the Native Lands Acts, are generally to groups of ten persons, and that provision, although a salutary one in respect to ordinary sales, is an obstacle to placing the separate shares or interests of individuals in trust. It was found, practically, that as soon as three or four owners of an estate expressed a desire to place their lands in trust there were, if the land were attractive, influences brought to bear from outside to prevent the concurrence of the remaining Natives, whose interests were immediately secured by European purchasers paying deposits of part, if not the whole, of the purchase-money. In this way the intention of several of those who desired to settle their lands on their children has been frustrated; and, in other cases, where the majority in value have signed the trust-deed, the estate will be broken up between Natives and white men. Of course the restriction applies equally where the majority in value are against selling, but an action at law would be necessary to prove the proportion of the relative interests. A new Native Land Act is, I believe, likely to be introduced during the forthcoming session of Parliament. I would recommend the alteration of this law in as far as trusts are concerned.

By the 14th clause of "The Native Lands Act, 1869," it is enacted that in respect to past transactions the proportions of shares or interests of any Natives in a group in a Crown grant shall be considered to be equal. The Natives state that the effect of this is in some cases very unfair, and that in one case the smallest interests in a very valuable suburban estate—improved and with a mill worth £1,000 upon it?were bought by white men whose interest, properly one-twentieth each, became increased to one-eighth each by the enactment, the shares of the remaining co-grantees, who had not sold or moved their interests, being diminished commensurately. This law, I respectfully suggest, should also be amended or repealed.

In order to ascertain how far it is wise further to reserve lands for the Natives of Hawke's Bay, I have prepared a return from the records of the Native Land Court of all lands in that province granted with limitations (i.e., Native Reserves, Class C1) showing alphabetically the names of the Natives for whom the reserves were made, and, as far as possible, their respective interests in detail and aggregate. The figures of this return, considered in reference to the amount of land over which the title is not extinguished, and the extent and condition of the Native population, will afford fair means of determining in future what land the Natives may safely be allowed to part with, and what should be made inalienable.

By the 5th section of "The Native Lands Frauds Prevention Act, 1870," it is made the duty of the Trust Commissioner, appointed under the provisions of that Act, to certify before any Native land can become alienated "that sufficient land is left for the support of the Natives interested in such alienation." I have supplied that officer with a copy of the return above mentioned, and of all the information I was in possession of that would facilitate his work.

The average proportion of 87 acres of reserved land to each Native, as shown by the returns,—or, accepting the highest estimate of the Native population (3,000 souls), 55 acres,—is not of a character to cause much apprehension of the Natives having a scarcity of land for their future wants. The Auckland Provincial Government offered 40 acres for each adult immigrant, and 20 acres for each child; or, roughly, 30 acres per head, as an inducement to persons to settle. By the New Zealand Settlements Act the General Government were enabled to offer 50 rural acres to each military settler, which, as nothing was given to the children, was not a higher rate than that of the Provincial Government. With these the amount of Native reserved land does not compare disadvantageously. But at Hawke's Bay much of the land is fit only for pasturage, and, relatively, a much higher rate ought to rule. It is, therefore, necessary that each individual transaction of Natives in selling their land should be watched by the Commissioner, especially as some of the Natives have but a very small area of their once large possessions left for their own and their children's uses.

I have recommended that the Trust Commissioner should be instructed to bear in mind the circumstances of the following Natives in respect to the sufficiency of land that is to be reserved for them, viz.: The chief Te Heketa, who has no land reserved for him; he is desirous of having Pohirau made inalienable. Paora Kaiwhata has no land reserved for him; he is desirous of having Otukarara. Paora Korokoro has no reserve; he requires Pukehou to be secured in trust. The chief Noa Huke has nominally 262 acres reserved at Ngatarawa; he is desirous of having Te Torohanga reserved for his children; and the chief Tareha te Moananui indicates Tutake Opaque and Te Koau as proper to be made inalienable. There are 150 acres already reserved for Tareha, but, considering that chief's position, I beg to recommend that these places be excluded from the possibility of alienation, and placed in trust as soon as possible.

CHARLES HEAPHY, Trustee of Native Reserves. Auckland, 31st July, 1871. [NOTE.—For schedule to this report see Appendix to Journals, F.—No. 4, 1871.—ED.]

Mr. G. B. WORGAN to the Hon. D. McLEAN.

West Coast Reserves. Survey Office, Patea, 12th February, 1872.
SIR,—

I have the honour to enclose a tracing of sketch of the block lying between Whenuakura and Patea Rivers, showing the position of the lands given to Major Turner and Mrs. Hewitt, 400 acres each; the position of the lower boundary of the University reserve of 10,000 acres, the railway reserve, &c. The Patea River has not been traversed more than four miles from the mouth inland, and the Whenuakura about five miles. Of the block shown as Native award (portion included in railway reserve marked 1) to Eruete te Pewa and others, 800 acres have been arranged for by negotiations for purchase: the remaining 112 acres, belonging to Haimona Hiroti, Mete Kingi, Ramia Poari, Pango, Wikitoria, Ramia Roe, and Riheta Paihi, have been partly offered for sale, but may stand over for the present. Deducting, therefore, these 112 acres, and other reserves, there remains an area which may be estimated at 8,000 acres, the survey of which for sale I will proceed with at once, in conjunction with other work in hand. I shall hope to have a plan ready for Gazette notice within, say, four months, provided it be cut up into blocks not less than 100 acres in extent.

I have, &c.,

GEORGE B. WORGAN..

The Hon. D. McLEAN to Mr. G. B. WORGAN.

Reply. Hawera, 14th February, 1872.
SIR,—

With regard to your letter of the 12th instant, I have to request that you will proceed to mark off the reserves, and get the land between the Whenuakura and Patea Rivers ready for sale as soon as possible. You will be careful that the proposed site of the town and railway-crossing at Hukatere is not included.

I have, &c.,

DONALD

McLEAN..

NAMES OF NATIVES to whom GRANTS of LANDS in the Township of GISBORNE are to be made in Fulfilment of Promises heretofore made, with the Numbers and Areas of the Lots.

Town Lots.

HENARE POTAE, Lot 120, 1 rood; Paora Parau, Lot 211, 1 rood 19 perches; Ropata Wahawaha, Lot 32, 1 rood; Hotene Porourangi, Lot 35, 1 rood; Hirini te Kau, Lot 44, 1 rood; Mokena Kohere, Lot 53, 1 rood; Raharuhi Rukupo, Lot 131, 1 rood.

Poverty Bay,

5th April, 1872.

REPORT on NATIVE RESERVES in the PROVINCE of AUCKLAND.

The COMMISSIONER of NATIVE RESERVES, Auckland, to, the Hon. the NATIVE MINISTER. Wellington, 2nd July, 1872.

SIR,—

I have the honour to forward herewith my report on the Native reserves in the Auckland District for 1872.

I have, &c.,

CHARLES HEAPHY, Commissioner of Native Reserves.

REPORT of the COMMISSIONER of NATIVE RESERVES, Auckland.

THE lands mentioned below, which have been marked on the plans as Native reserves, but have hitherto had no legal status, have lately been proclaimed as reserves for educational purposes under "The Confiscated Lands Act, 1867." An Act of the Legislature will be necessary to define the more immediate purposes, whether for Native, industrial, or common schools, to which they shall be devoted.

Town of Tauranga.—All those parcels of land in the said town being Allotments No. 3, Section 2, 1 rood; No. 4, Section 2, 1 rood; No. 193, Section 2, 1 rood; No. 72, Section 1, 25 perches; No. 140, Section 1, 32 perches; No. 141, Section 1, 32 perches; No. 604, Section 2, 1 acre; No. 605, Section 2, 1 acre; No. 606, Section 2, 1 acre; No. 607, Section 2, 1 acre; No. 608, Section 2, 1 acre; No. 609, Section 2, 1 acre; No. 610, Section 2, 1 acre; No. 611, Section 2, 1 acre; No. 612, Section 2, 1 acre; No. 613, Section 2, 1 acre; No. 702, Section 2, 1 acre; No. 703, Section 2, 1 acre; No. 714, Section 2, 1 acre; No. 715, Section 2, 1 acre; Suburbs of Tauranga, Allotment No. 50, Section 2, containing 5 acres; Rural Allotment No. 114, Section 2, containing 103 acres.

The following properties have been let during the present financial year: (1.) The Hospital Reserve at Mangonui, with the building upon it, let to Mr. McIntosh, at a rent of £10 8s. a year commencing from 1st January, 1871. First nine months' rent received.

Mr. McIntosh had been previously in irregular occupation.

(2.) The occupation of the Native grain store at Onehunga, no longer required for the purposes for which it was built, has been let to Mr. M. H. Roe, on condition that he shall expend £2 annually in preventing the further dilapidation of the building, which had not been used since the rebellion in the Waikato. (3.) The Suburban Lot No. 8, of Allotment 11, Section 20, Onehunga, has been agreed to be let to Mr. M. H. Roe, for twenty-one years, from 1st July, 1872, at £4 10s. a year. (4.) The footpaths having been removed by the City Council, at my request, and an improved way opened, I have been enabled to let by auction for twenty-one years, at £13 a year, the lower or eastern portion of Allotment 4 of Section 12, City of Auckland. Andrew Craig, the tenant, has paid half a year's rent in advance. Account current from 7th October, 1871, date of last account, to 30th June, 1872, is attached.

After the confiscation of the Waikato lands, Crown grants were given to the loyal Natives of the Ngatiteata Tribe for very extensive blocks of land, out of the territory so taken, at the West Waiuku, between the Waikato and Manukau Harbours. These grants were issued in pursuance of recommendations made by Mr. Commissioner Turton, and were confirmed by "The Friendly Natives' Contracts Confirmation Act, 1866." The grants conveyed the land in some cases absolutely to several Natives, and in others in trust to the chiefs for the loyal Natives of the tribe. The interests in the lands were of a very varying character; occasionally the grantees were almost the sole owners, while in other cases they possessed but a moderate interest in the land. Some of the lands were for cultivation, some were wahi-tapu and some were fishing-stations, or landing-places.

From not understanding, in some cases, the nature of the responsibility attaching to the trusts, and in others from cupidity, the grantees mismanaged the administration of these lands. They are stated to have illegally sold some, and to have misappropriated the rents of other of the reserves. Under these circumstances they applied to the Government to extricate them from their difficulties, which had reached to such a height that the grantees, whose acts were loudly complained of by the inferior owners, were themselves anxious to hand over the estates to Government agents, for partition, either of area or interest, among the parties entitled to share in the respective grants. With this view, 103 pieces of land are being handed over by the Natives interested, in trust, to Mr. John White and myself. This refers to the lands for which there are absolute grants. Where the grants are in trust to the chiefs, the latter are giving their consent to such an allocation of the land as will admit the inferior men, whose interests were before ignored, and are asking the Commissioner of Native Reserves to act on their own behalf. This work, which Mr. John White appears to be carrying out to the satisfaction of the Natives of both interests, will be very tedious, and will further involve some expense in surveying.

At the Piako two estates are also being conveyed to Mr. R. M. Searancke, and myself, as trustees, and in other places the Natives are desirous of doing similarly.

In the prosecution of my duties as Commissioner of Native Reserves, I have found that a considerable block of land in the Coromandel Peninsula, near Cape Colville, belongs to the Crown. The place is called Whangataupiri, and takes its name from a beach and bay, situated mid-way between Cabbage Bay and the Cape. The block extends for a mile parallel with the beach, and about half a mile inland.

This land was purchased from the Natives by Mr. F. Peppercorne, who received from the Government, in 1848, or thereabouts, scrip to the amount of £125 in extinguishment of his claim. The land is supposed to be auriferous, and is well timbered. I should recommend that conspicuous branded pegs be placed at the four corners of the block, and its position trigonometrically fixed with regard to the off-lying islands.

I have, &c.,

CHARLES HEAPHY, Commissioner of Native Reserves.
2nd July, 1872.

I recommended in my report of 1871 that the Government should pay to the Native Reserve Fund a rent for the two acres occupied as a barrack-site at Te Aro, and that Native patients should be admitted free of charge to the Wellington Hospital. These arrangements, I thought, were necessary, having in view the purpose for which, the reserves were originally made, and the asserted divergence from such purpose which occurred when they were utilized. These recommendations have so far been followed as that the Government has intimated an intention of paying £14 a year rent for the barrack-site. No charge of any kind, I am informed, is made to Maori patients in the hospital.

In order to test the validity of the grant of the Native-Office site to the Hospital Trustees, the Government, in 1866, declined to pay any further rent. The question so raised now being assumed to be determined, the sum of £110, back rent for five years and a half, from 1st July; 1866, to 31st December, 1871, was paid out of the Trust Fund to the Hospital Trustees on the 23rd May last.

I stated in my last report that the Natives claiming interest in the Wellington Town Reserves had paid £50 to a solicitor to commence proceedings in the Supreme Court, to ascertain whether, the original intention of the reservation had not been diverged from. Since then the case has been tried, and a decision given on certain issues submitted. This decision is in favour of the view that the compact between the New Zealand Company and the Natives in the original purchase of the Port Nicholson District was a valid one; that by it certain lands were set apart for the future benefit of the selling Natives; and further, that the lands at Thorndon granted by Sir George Grey to the Hospital Trustees were a part of such lands. The remainder of the points in dispute—the misapplication or otherwise of the proceeds in their use by a public charity—have yet to be determined, and it is proper to be prepared for a finding adverse to the interests of the charity, which depends to a large extent upon the rents of the land. It would now be almost impracticable to restore the reserves to Native use. Other interests have grown up—the hospital itself stands upon one of the sections—and it would be best to allow those interests to remain undisturbed. With this view I would recommend that an Act of the Legislature should be obtained to authorize the claims of the Natives in respect to such lands to be sent to a legally-constituted reference to determine the amount of money to be given in lieu of occupation. A private member of the General Assembly is, I believe, about to introduce such a measure, and I have furnished a list of the lands that would probably come under the operation of such an Act.

Several long-pending disputes in respect to the ownership of lands and the participation in rents have been settled in a manner with which the Natives on both sides expressed their satisfaction. These were more particularly at Porirua, where difficulties had arisen in respect to the lands let to Messrs. Thomas, Wall, and Major Edwards, and at Makara, in relation to the land let to Mr. Trotter. In these cases, owing to incomplete and unrecorded arrangements having been made many years since, with the further complication of change of ownership, caused by the decease of old chiefs who drew the rents and the rise of a new generation, the moneys in some cases had to be temporarily impounded until a fresh basis of distribution could be laid down. I am happy to be able to report that these matters, of which I have elsewhere given detailed accounts, are now settled.

The long-pending difficulty in respect to the town sections at Te Aro let to the Hon. Mr. Mantell has been settled by a new lease in place of the lost one, and on similar terms, but for a new period of fifteen years from 1st January, 1872, being granted to that gentleman, who has paid £108, the amount of back rent.

The dispute between Wiremu Tako and the Ngauranga Natives, which was the subject of a police-office case about two years since, has at length been settled; Mr. Futtar, the tenant, paying to Wiremu Tako the sum of £50 for the surrender of a collateral claim that was ignored by the survivors of the Natives to whom Colonel McCleverty awarded the reserve. The Natives regard the award in the light of a promise of a grant, and it will be well to issue to them a grant for the land, with a restriction on the power to alienate.

Another dispute had been long pending at Porirua. Ever since the death of the chief Hohepa Tamaihengia, of that place, the right to certain reserves had been the subject of contention. With Major Edwards, R.M., and Mr. T. E. Young, of the Native Department, I met the Porirua Natives on the ground on 18th November last, and succeeded in arranging all the chief points of the dispute. By the assistance given to the Natives in defining their respective interests in the reserves, they were enabled at once to utilize them; an assignment of the interests of an unprofitable tenant was made in respect to the Kahotea Reserve, near Titahi; and a tenant found for No. 5, who paid £40 down, as a year's rent in advance, on an agreement to rent it for seven years, from 22nd, November, 1871. The details of these transactions have already been reported.

The Natives interested in No. 4 Reserve, on the east side of Porirua, and the Kahotea Reserve, assert that when surrendering to the Governor their control of the land they were not aware of the effect of the act, and they now ask that the reserves may be restored to them. As there appears to be a foundation for the statement, I would recommend that grants, with restrictions on the alienation, should be issued for them.

The Natives of the Wellington District are fast getting the reserves awarded to them by Colonel McCleverty surveyed into individual estates, in order to simplify the division of rents, and, in some cases, with a view to obtaining Crown grants for the respective pieces. This work is to the Natives a very expensive process, and I would respectfully suggest to the consideration of the Government whether, in the case of these inalienable reserves, it would not be just and wise to remit the payment of Crown-grant and registration fees.

The collection and distribution of the rents of Wellington reserves, which—since the retirement, in 1867, of the last Commissioner of Native Reserves, Mr. Swainson—has been chiefly performed by Mr. Young, now reverts to the Commissioner. This duty, and the requirement for my presence in settling a number of disputes among Natives claiming interests in reserves about Cook Strait, necessitated my removal from Auckland to Wellington. I have much pleasure in bearing witness to the satisfaction which Mr. Young appears to have given to the Natives in the performance of his duty.

The legal position of many of the Native reserves is such that the Commissioner cannot grant valid leases or recover rents. The present mode of reserving a piece of land by bringing it under the operation of "The New Zealand Native Reserves Act, 1856," is not always a convenient one, and does not apply when Crown grant has issued under the Native Lands Acts. Some simple form of settlement is much required, as the Natives frequently are anxious to "tie up," as they term it, their cultivation lands from the risk of temptation to sell in times of pressure or emergency. The powers of a trustee to manage such lands also require defining.

I have already alluded to the propriety of providing, by landed endowment, for the necessary expenses of Native hospitals, lunatic asylums, and vaccination, establishments. These institutions are indispensable, and it is much more easy now to provide endowments than it will be after the lapse of a few years. The confiscated lands appear to be fitting territory to afford such endowments, and I have already submitted a list of sections for such appropriation, but the process for setting them apart by the existing law is so cumbrous, and, withal, so uncertain in its effect, as to be almost unserviceable.

All these circumstances point to the necessity of a new law being passed that, while repealing the existing Acts affecting Native reserves, shall gather up what is good in them and add clauses to meet new requirements. I would respectfully recommend that such a Bill be introduced to the Legislature. Sir William Martin's draft of a Native Reserves Bill, printed last year, is an excellent basis for such a measure.

Account current to 30th June, 1872, is attached.

CHARLES HEAPHY, Commissioner of Native Reserves.

Wellington,

16th August, 1872.

CORRESPONDENCE relating to the MANAWATU-RANGITIKEI PURCHASE. *Survey, &c., of Native Reserves.

(No. 1.) The Hon. D. McLEAN to his Honour the SUPERINTENDENT, Wellington.

Native Office, Wellington, 2nd November, 1871.

SIR,—

From intelligence received from Rangitikei, I am glad to be able to inform you that Mr. Carkeek is progressing satisfactorily with the survey of reserves in that district. I beg to suggest to your Honour that it would be most advisable that the Native reserves should be accurately defined and laid out before the subdivision of the lands for sale and settlement. In almost every instance where this step has been omitted, delays have occurred and differences with the Natives have frequently arisen, which might otherwise have been easily avoided if this necessary preliminary had been more fully attended to.

I have, &c.,

DONALD MCLEAN..

His Honour the Superintendent, Wellington.

(No. 2.)The Hon. D. McLEAN to his Honour the SUPERINTENDENT, Wellington.

Native Office, Wellington, 30th March, 1872.

SIR,—

Referring to the suggestions made by your Honour in a conversation held with you on the subject of the Rangitikei Manawatu Block, I have the honour to inform you that I entirely concur with your views on the subject of the resumption by you of the management of these lands. I have already intimated to your Honour that the main difficulties connected with this question have been removed. They consisted chiefly in the surveys and definition of reserves and boundaries; and now all arrangements concerning the larger reserves, and those whose adjustment was attended with the greatest difficulties, have been completed so as to obviate any future complications. At the same time, there are still details to be settled, such as the definition of burial-grounds, eel-lagoons, &c. Your Honour is aware of the importance often attached by Natives to isolated spots of this kind, and of the advantage which in many cases attends the surrender of a few acres situated in localities where the land is not of much value. With regard to the surveyors-whom you so promptly placed under my instructions to mark off the Native reserves, I consider that the time has now arrived for re-transferring them to your Honour, and for the discontinuance of advances for their pay. I do not think that the services of more than one will be necessary to complete the arrangements entered into by me with the Natives, and for this service I would suggest the employment of Mr. Morgan Carkeek, who was present at the several interviews affecting the reserves.

Among the unfinished transactions, there is one touching two mortgages—one for £1,000; the other for £500. On the £1,000 mortgage the Natives have already obtained an advance of £300, leaving them to receive a sum of £1,200 altogether. This is to be paid, at the request of the Natives, on the completion of all surveys in which Ngatikauwhata are interested, and on the final definition of all reserves. It has also been arranged that maps should be furnished, signed by the Natives prior to the payment of the money, and that some of the leading chiefs should give the necessary authority for Mr. Macdonald to receive it for them, and should attend in Wellington to witness the payment.

The drafts of the deeds are now in the hands of the Attorney-General for preparation. Instructions will be issued to the Treasury to enable you to obtain the above-named sum of £1,200 when required.

I have, &c.,

DONALD
McLEAN..

His Honour the Superintendent, Wellington.

(No. 3.)The Hon. W. FITZHERBERT to the Hon. the NATIVE MINISTER.

Superintendent's Office, Wellington, 29th June, 1872.

SIR,—

Referring to your letter of the 30th March last, No. 1,304, in which you inform me that instructions will be issued to the Treasury to enable me to obtain £1,200 when required, I have now the honour to inform you that I shall probably require the above-named sum on Monday next, and shall be obliged by your giving the necessary instructions for it to be placed at my disposal.

I have, &c.,

WILLIAM FITZHERBERT, Superintendent.

The Hon. the Native Minister, Wellington.

(No. 4.)The Hon. W. FITZHERBERT to the Hon. the NATIVE MINISTER.

Superintendent's Office, Wellington, 3rd September, 1872.

SIR,—

I have the honour to forward to you herewith, for your information, detailed schedules of the Native reserves in the Rangitikei-Manawatu Block; also tracing showing the position of each reserve. All the reserves shown on tracing have been surveyed and pegged off on the ground. The information given under the head of "Owners" will require to be examined by yourself.

I have, &c.,

WILLIAM FITZHERBERT, Superintendent.

The Hon. D. McLean, Native Minister, Wellington.

SCHEDULE of RESERVES given to NATIVES in the RANGITIKEI-MANAWATU BLOCK by the Hon. The NATIVE MINISTER.

- No. 1. Tapa te Whata, 200 acres, Mangawhatu, Oroua River.
- No. 2. Ngatikauwhatu Tribe, 50 acres, junction of Makino and Mangaone.
- Nos. 3, 12. Ngatikauwhatu Tribe, 400 acres, junction of Makino and Mangaone.
- No. 4. Ngatikauwhatu Tribe, 1,035 acres, Kawakawa.
- No. 5. Purchased from Natives, 514 acres, reserve at Pakehou.
- No. 6. Ngatikauwhatu Tribe, 40 acres, Rotonuihau, on the Oroua River.
- Nos. 7, 15, 65 Te Aru Takana, 30 acres, Tauranganui, on the Oroua River.
- No. 8. Wirihari te Angiangi, 50 acres, Oau.
- No. 9. Wirihari te Angiangi, 40 acres, Oau.
- No. 10. Matene te Whiwhi, 100 acres, Kairakau, on the Oroua River.
- No. 11. Ngatikauwhatu Tribe, 200 acres, Kopani, on the Oroua River.
- No. 12. Vide No. 3.
- No. 13. Waikato Natives, 100 acres, adjoining Nos. 3 and 12.
- No. 14. Ngatiwehiwehi Tribe, 110½ acres, Paparata, near Ohau.
- No. 15. Vide No. 7.

- No. 15a. Taimona, 50 above Kawakawa, on the Oroua River.
- No. 16. Anitu Pekama, 50 acres, near Small-Farm Town.
- No. 17. Rangitane Tribe, 1,100 acres, Puketotara.
- No. 18. Hare Rukena, 500 acres, adjoining the above.
- No. 19. Hoani Meihana, 35½ acres, Waipunoke, on the Oroua River.
- No. 20. Kere, 10 acres, Patangu, on the Oroua River.
- No. 21. Nepia Taratoa, 100 acres, Mataihiwhi.
- No. 21a. Ahurotu, 19 acres, Mataihiwhi.
- No. 22. Kerehama, 125 acres, near Mangamahoe.
- No. 23. Ereuru Taratou, 100 acres, Mataihiwhi.
- No. 23a. Winiata, 19 acres, Mataihiwhi.
- No. 24. Ngatikahori Tribe, 124 acres, Maramahoru Pa.
- No. 25. Atereta Taratou, 100 acres, near Maramahoru.
- No. 26. Vide No. 33.
- No. 27. Kerenuhaua, 50 acres, near Maramahoru.
- No. 27a. Wereta, 50 acres, near Small-Farm Town.
- No. 28. Ngatiparewaha Tribe, 615 acres, near Paku Rakateu.
- No. 28a. Ngatiparewaha Tribe, 192 acres, near Small-Farm Town.
- No. 29. 8 acres at Koputara (not settled).
- No. 30. Hare Reweti and others, 285 acres, Ohinepuhiaroe.
- No. 31. Aperahama, 100 acres, Mingirou.
- No. 32. Hoani Meihana, 11 acres, near Waipunoke at the Oroua River.
- Nos. 33, 26. Hare Reweti and others, 439 acres, Poutu, near Makawai.
- No. 34. Aperahama, Maramahoru (included in Maramahoru Reserve).
- No. 35. Vide No. 73, 10 acres for Hone te Tehi.
- No. 36. Ngatikahoro Tribe, 3 acres, Tawhirihoe.
- No. 37. Te Peiria, 102 acres, near Mangamahoe.
- No. 38. Matenga te Matakū, Kaputara, 60 acres (not settled).
- No. 39. Hunia, 109 acres, Awahou.
- No. 40. Ngatuihu Tribe, 200 acres, Te Kauwau.
- No. 41. Hunia, 87 acres, Kaiko Kopu.
- No. 42. Hakaraia, 50 acres, near Waitoi.
- No. 43. Hamuera and others, 1,000 acres, Taurarua.
- No. 44. Kawana te Akeke, 20 acres, Omanuku.
- No. 45. Ngatiapa Tribe, 390 acres, Pukepuke.
- No. 46. Utuku and others, 400 acres, near Waitoi.
- No. 47. The Ngatipikihao and others, 4,510 acres, Te Reureu.
- No. 48. Meta, 77 acres, Rangitawa.
- No. 49. Panapa, 35½ acres, Awahou.
- No. 65. Te Ara, Ngapiro.
Vide No. 7, Takana, Oroua River.
- No. 66. Ngatikauwhatu Tribe, 40 acres, Ruahine, Oroua River.
- No. 67. 10 acres, Te Maraoura, Oroua River.
- No. 69. Surveyed by Mr. Carkeek, under instructions of the Hon. the Native Minister, 211 acres, Tokorangi.
- No. 72. Metapiri, 100 acres, Puketotara.
- Nos. 73, 35. 110 acres for Te Pemu and others, 110 acres, near Small-Farm Town.

SCHEDULE of RESERVES given to NATIVES in the RANGITIKEI-MANAWATU BLOCK by Dr. FEATHERSTON.

- No. 53. Tapa te Whata, 300 acres, Awahuri.
- No. 54. Huneu, 1,000 acres, Pakapaka Teu.
- No. 55. Ngatiapa Tribe, 500 acres, Te Kauwau.

- No. 56. Ratene (pre-emptive right to be paid for), 100 acres, Te Kauwau.
- No. 57. Ngatiapa, 11 acres, Awa Hou.
- No. 58. Hunia, 3 acres, Awa Hou.
- No. 59. Ngatiapa Tribe, 13 acres, Tawhiriho.
- No. 60. Ngatiapa Tribe, 10 acres, Waipouri.
- No. 61. Ihukuru, 50 acres, Tawhiriho.
- No. 62. Nepia Taratoa and others, 50 acres, Matuihiwhi.
- No. 63. Horowanu, 147 acres, near Maramahoru.
- No. 68. Atareu, 50 acres, near Maramahoru.
- No. 70. Harekewitu and others, 100 acres, Ohinipuhia.
- No. 71. Rangitane Tribe, 1,066 acres, Puketotara.

SCHEDULE of RESERVES in the RANGITIKEI-MANAWATU BLOCK awarded by the NATIVE LAND COURT on the 16th October, 1869.

- No. 50. Ngatikauwhatu Tribe, 4,500 acres, Awahuri.
- No. 51. Kooro te One, 500 acres, Oroua Bridge.
- No. 52. Wirihari te Angi, 200 acres, Oau.
- No. 64. Ngatikahoro, &c., 1,026 acres, Mangamahoe.

RECAPITULATION of RESERVES in the RANGITIKEI-MANAWATU BLOCK awarded to NATIVES.

Awarded by the Hon. the Native Minister, 14,379½ acres; by Dr. Featherston, 3,361 acres; by the Native Land Court, 6,226 acres: total, 23,966½ acres.

Jos. G. HOLDSWORTH, Commissioner of Crown Lands.

The Hon. D. POLLEN to the Hon. the MINISTER for PUBLIC WORKS. General Government Buildings, Auckland, 4th December, 1872.

SIR,—

I have the honour to transmit herewith a letter from Mr. Preece, written by direction of Mr. Mackay, relative to the purchase of several blocks of land in the Thames District, containing in all about 129,200 acres, the titles to which are now being investigated by the Native Land Court sitting at Shortland, and to request that I may be furnished with the necessary funds, and with authority to make advances from time to time as required for the purchase of these lands.

I have, &c.,

DANIEL POLLEN..

The Hon. the Minister for Public Works, Wellington.

Enclosure.Mr. PREECE to the Hon. D. POLLEN.

Hikutaia and other Blocks. Auckland. 22nd November, 1872.

SIR,—

I have the honour to inform you that I was requested by Mr. James Mackay, jun., to call on you in reference to an advance which he wishes to obtain towards the purchase of land in the Hauraki District, now passing through the Native Land Court.

In reference to my conversation with you on the subject. I have to inform you that the following blocks are now before the Court at Shortland, all surveyed, and titles will be completed during the next few weeks—viz., Tairua, 36,000 acres; Whangamata, 45,000 acres; Hikutaia, 15,000 acres; Mangakirikiri, about 6,500 acres; Ipuwhakatarā, about 2,500 acres; Omahu, about 7,000 acres; Whenuakite, about 6,700 acres; Kereta, about 1,500 acres; Rangahau (Crown grant) 9,000 acres: total, 129,000 acres. These blocks could be all purchased (by making reserves where necessary) if funds were provided at once while the Natives are assembled; and Mr. Mackay is anxious to be supplied with the means of purchasing the same, and requested me to ask you to see the Hon. the Minister of Lands, now in Auckland, and urge on him the necessity of dealing promptly in the matter.

I have, &c.,

J. W. PREECE..

The Hon. D. Pollen, General Government Agent, Auckland.

Wellington, 30th June, 1873.

Province of Wellington.

DURING the interval between the date of Mr. Swainson's retirement from the Commissionership of Native Reserves in 1867, and my location in Wellington, last year, several disputes had arisen amongst the Port Nicholson Natives interested in the reserves made by the New Zealand Company, and by Colonel McCleverty. These disputes,

I have stated the mode of settlement of these disputes minutely, as there are Natives interested, indirectly, in the reserves, who reside outside of the immediate district, and whose only means of becoming accurately informed on the subject will be by the official report.

which chiefly related to the appropriation of rents, have been settled in the following manner, viz.:—Section 12, Ohariu: The rent paid by Mr. France, £14 14s. a year, is to be divided equally between Paiura, Mete Kingi Paerahi, and Paratene. Section 13, Ohariu: Paratene is to have 25¼ acres for subsistence-land, and Mete Kingi is to have eleven acres. Sections 4 and 5, Porirua: The dividing boundary of these reserves has been adjusted by survey. By this, 71 acres 1 rood 20 perches, on the northern side of Section 5, becomes apportioned to Raiha Horomona.

The Reserve No. 84, in the Hutt Valley, has, in conformity with a purchasing clause in the lease, been sold to Mr. P. Cotter for £1,000. This land was purchased in 1855 by Sir George Grey, with public money, in order to supplement the reserves of the Ngatitama people of Kaiwharawhara, who have since, by instalments, repaid the money. The purchase-money was handed by Mr. Cotter to Wi Tamehana, Ihaia, and Taituha; T. E. Williams, Esq., being nominated to divide the money amongst the claimants.

The reserves at Makara, Nos. 22 and 24, comprising 200 acres, were, in 1862, let by two chiefs of the Ngatitama to a tenant, for a term of twenty-one years, on a yearly rental of £30. The title of the lessors did not appear to be clearly established, and the case was complicated by one of them having died intestate, and the other having disappeared from the district, and gone, it was alleged, into rebellion. The tenant, under the circumstances, withheld payment of the rent. At a meeting convened here on the 7th August last, of all the Natives interested in the land, it was decided that Harata, widow of Wi Pakata, one of the original lessors, should receive £10 a year, Paratene te Wheoro £5, and Rei te Wharau £5, yearly; and that, on due payment of arrears, the lease should be suffered to run its term.

The town sections at Te Aro, Nos. 1,031 and 1,082, have been let by public tender to Charles Swiney, for twenty-one years, from 11th October, 1872, at £2 2s. a year, the tenant to fence in within twelve months. These reserves lie at the extreme southern end of the town, as surveyed.

The Governor has consented to the sales of the following reserves (grants with limitations under Native Lands Acts)—viz., Taumata Whakapono, West, No. 89N, containing 944 acres, at Wairarapa, from Wi Tinitara te Kaewa, to James Gilligan for £300; Te Aro Pa, Wellington, Sections 1, 2, and 7, comprising 24 perches, from Hemi Parai to his Honour the Superintendent of Wellington, for £270; Te Aro Pa, Section 8, containing 20 perches, from Hemi Parai and Hori Ngapaka, to the Superintendent, for £70.

The Wellington and Masterton Railroad is surveyed through a number of Native reserves, chiefly those awarded by Colonel McCleverty. Some difficulty was experienced in causing the Native owners to comprehend a measure of compulsory land surrender for purposes of public works. Ultimately the sum of £55 an acre was agreed to between the valuers and the owners, as the rate to be paid for land in Sections Nos. 1, 2, 3, 16, and 20, Pitone. The area required was 11 acres 1 rood 39 perches, and the payment £632 3s. 2d. It was desirable that this sum should be invested in the purchase of other land for the benefit of the Natives; but as the occupants of the land taken showed damage to actual cultivations, loss of crop, and dispersion of stock, and as the Government, in the case of a McCleverty reserve, had no controlling power, the money was given without restriction to the Natives. To each Native whose name appeared on McCleverty's deed of award of 13th October, 1847, the sum of £30 2s. was given, and the Native Land Court was called on to determine as to the ownership of the interests of the deceased awardees. On the 12th February, 1873, the Court made orders in favour of twenty-three owners, and at a date previous to these negotiations had made an order in favour of other eight. The Natives interested agreed that all the derivative owners should "share and share alike," and the sum of £16 8s. 4d. was paid to each of twenty-two Natives. Possession of the land has been given up to the railroad authorities.

In 1864 the sum of £915 9s. 10d. was lent by the Government to the chief Te Manihera Rangitakaiwaho, of Greytown, in order to extricate him from his pecuniary difficulties. The money was advanced on the security of the Wharekaka Estate of 1,389 acres, the property of that chief. By the sales of sheep, in which a portion of the money lent was invested, and from the rental of the land, various sums were from time to time paid into the Treasury on account, and on the 12th March last I received from Te Manihera, and paid into the Public Account, the sum of £327 17s. 5d., by which the loan was recouped. The property was re-leased to Te Manihera.

The reserves awarded by Colonel McCleverty to the Port Nicholson Natives have been hitherto in their own management. The owners now find that some of the lands might be made more productive, and the rents of other portions more satisfactorily applied; they have therefore voluntarily placed the following lands with me for administration: 6th May, 1873.—Town of Wellington: Sections 13 and 15, Leach, tenant; Section 14, J. Fitchett, jun., tenant; Sections 37 and 39, J. Brown, tenant; Section 23, Wyngate, tenant; Sections 18, 20, 22, Mrs. Leach, tenant; Section 49, O'Connor, tenant; Section 45, J. Dransfield, tenant; Section 27 and 28, unlet. Town Belt, Te Aro: 41½ acres, Leach, tenant. Ohariu: Section 91, unlet; and Sections 7 and 8, R. Bould, tenant.

The decision of the Court of Appeal in Regina v. Fitzherbert declares that the lands known as the "tenth Native reserves" are legally demesne lands of the Crown, unencumbered with any trust. This cast a doubt on the status of a considerable number of estates here and at Nelson that are yielding a revenue for Native purposes. It has also prevented the letting of several reserves in Wellington and at Manawatu, for which tenders were received. While declaring the reserves to be the property of the Crown, the Court of Appeal indicated that there might exist a moral obligation towards the Natives in regard to an interest in the lands. There is no doubt that when the land was purchased of them the Natives were solemnly promised that these reserves should be made for their future benefit; and it is essential that faith should not be broken. A Bill has therefore been prepared to give by enactment a legal status as Native reserves to such of the lands as have not been granted.

Province of Auckland.

At the request of the Waikato Natives, who are again bringing their produce for sale to One-hunga, the Native hostelry or grain store at that place has been put into a habitable state, at an expense of £59. It had been unused by the Natives since the outbreak of the Waikato war.

The occupation by Mr. McIntosh of the building erected as an hospital at Mangonui has ceased, by which £10 8s. a year is lost until another tenant can be found.

The lease of the reserve No. 89, at St. George's Bay, now let for £13 a year to Mr. Blackett, expired in June, 1873. It is proposed to offer this land (6 acres 1 rood) in building allotments, by which a much larger rental than that heretofore received for it as pasturage land is expected to be obtained.

The Thames and Waikato Natives have placed in trust with Mr. R. M. Searancke, and myself, the following properties—viz., Maungatapu, on the Piako, 6,110 acres, by Te Raihe and others; and Te Au o Waikato, 8,560 acres, by Tuhakaraina and others. Applications have been received also from the undermentioned chiefs for me to undertake the management of their granted lands, viz.: From Kiriama Tauwhare and others: Peria, 8,020 acres. From Te Raihi and others: Hinuwera, 5,396 acres: Matamata, 5,468 acres. From Tu Whenua and others: Paritu, 24,229 acres.

The reserve, No. 72, of Section No. 1, Town of Tauranga, containing twenty-five perches, has been let to James Weir Greay, on a yearly rental of £7; a lease for twenty-one years to be given as soon as it can legally be done.

Province of Hawke's Bay.

Four hundred acres of the Pakowhai Estate, B1, No. 1, held in trust by Samuel Locke and Charles Heaphy, have been let for twenty-one years to Alexander McHardie, at a rental of £1 an acre per-annum for the first eleven years, and £1 10s. an acre per annum for the remainder of the term, Mr. McHardie to pay £1,000 of his rent in advance, receiving temporarily an allowance of 8 per cent. interest. This arrangement has been made at the request of the Natives beneficially interested. Four hundred and thirty-four acres, including the village, will remain reserved for purposes of cultivation and subsistence.

Account current to 30th June, 1873, is furnished herewith.

I have, &c.,

CHARLES HEAPHY, Commissioner of Native Reserves.

The Hon. the Native Minister.

[Extract from New Zealand Gazette.]

Reserve of a Site for a Cemetery at New Plymouth.

WHEREAS by the regulations for the sale and disposal of lands taken under the authority of "The New Zealand Settlements Act, 1863," and "The New Zealand Settlements Amendment and Continuance Act, 1865," contained in the schedule to an Order in Council made and issued, bearing date the eleventh day of May, 1871, it is provided that the reserves for roads and all other public purposes whatever, and for education, and the sites for churches and chapels or other places of worship for different religious denominations, may be made by Government out of any confiscated lands, and that notices of all such reserves shall be published in the New Zealand Gazette: It is hereby notified that the land specified in the schedule hereunder written shall be reserved for the purpose therein mentioned and set opposite the description of the said parcel of land.

I have, &c.,

G. MAURICE O'RORKE, Secretary for Crown Lands.
24th February, 1874.

SCHEDULE. *Description and Purpose of Reserve.

Waitara District, Province of Taranaki.—All that parcel of land situated in the Township of Raleigh West, containing by admeasurement 29 poles, more or less, being portion of Block CXVII., having a frontage of 120 links to McLean Street, and extending back in a rectangular section 150 links in depth; the north-west corner of the said section being distant from the north-west corner of the said Block CXVII., 175 links. For a cemetery.

[Extract from New Zealand Gazette.]

Reserve for a Cemetery.

PURSUANT to the regulations for the sale, disposal, and occupation of lands taken under the provisions of "The New Zealand Settlements Act, 1863," and "The New Zealand Settlements Amendment and Continuance Act, 1865," and which said regulations are contained in the schedule to an Order in Council made and issued on the eleventh day of May, 1871, and published in the New Zealand Gazette of the first day of June in the same year, it is hereby notified that the parcel of land specified in the schedule hereto, and which land was on the third day of August, 1871, reserved for the purpose therein mentioned, will, on the expiration of three calendar months from the publication of this notice, be changed from such purpose to that of a cemetery.

I have, &c.,

G. MAURICE O'RORKE, Secretary for Crown Lands.
Dated this eleventh day of March, 1874.

SCHEDULE. *Number, Description, purpose, and Area of Lot.

LOT NO. 10 of the Manutahi Ten-acre Lots, in the Province of Taranaki; General Government purposes; 9 acres and 6 perches.

Province of Auckland.

THE tenant of the lower part of Lot 4, Section 12, in Mechanics' Bay, having become insolvent, has given up his occupation. The sea-wall built by the Harbour Commissioners has entirely cut off the water-frontage of this reserve, and materially injured it. The tenant had taken it for a timber-yard, but it has become unfit for such a purpose.

At Onehunga, the tenant of Subsection 8 of Lot 11, Section 20, has also given up occupation. The completion of the railroad to the new wharf has to some extent transferred business from the vicinity of the old wharf where this reserve is situated. I have, however, succeeded in reletting a part of this land to Mr. Sims, on yearly occupation, at a rent of £3 10s. a year.

The land at Blakett's Point, Lot 89 of Suburban Section 1, has been surveyed into six lots of about an acre each, and offered for ease by public auction. The following lots have been let: Subdivision No. 1, 1 acre, 21 years, at £5 a year, to Mr. —; Subdivision No. 2, 1 acre, 21 years, at £3, to Mr. —; Subdivision No. 3, 1 acre, 21 years, at £4, to Mr. —; Subdivision No. 4, 1 acre, 21 years, at £5, to Mr. —; Subdivision No. 5, 1 acre, 21 years, at £4, to Mr. —; Subdivision No. 6, 3 roods 20 perches, 21 years, at £3. In all, £24 a year, against £13 a year, recent rent.

Lower part of No. 4, Section 12, Mechanics' Bay, has been relet for £12 a year, for 21 years. An iron tank has been purchased for the hostelry, Mechanics' Bay, for the sum of £4 5s.

At Onehunga a custodian has been placed in charge of the storehouse and hostelry. The Waikatos are again making use of this place that had been unused by them since the commencement of the Waikato war. The sum of £6 3s. 6d. has been expended in materials and building of a chimney to this hostelry.

At Coromandel the chief Makuare te Pukeroa applied to be allowed to substitute a larger and more valuable piece of land for Porangau No. 13, containing 29 perches. By an inadvertence he had allowed this land to be reserved for him while it was under contract for sale to Mr. John Lynch, who has built a house upon it. I personally examined the piece offered, and found it was of larger area (1 rood 23 perches) and more valuable, being at the actual landing-place, and in use as a timber-yard. The exchange was therefore allowed, and the substituted land placed with Mr. R. M. Keddell, and myself, in trust for Makuare and his heirs. The tenancy of the Maungatapu estate at the Piako, containing 6,110 acres, has been transferred from T. B. Gillies, Esq., to W. A. Murray, Esq.

Waiuku.—The lands granted in 1866-67 to the loyal Natives of Waiuku under "The Friendly Natives' Contracts Confirmation Act, 1866," have been cause of much trouble to the Natives beneficially interested. They comprise upwards of 3,749 acres, and were conveyed in trust to certain chiefs for themselves and their tribes or hapus. The chiefs contracted for the actual sale of some of these reserves, and let others in an irregular manner. Instead of dividing the rent derived amongst those legally entitled to receive it, it is asserted that they have kept it for their own purposes: certainly they have rendered no accounts. They have also sold the valuable timber, to the material injury of the land, and the lesser claimants complain that this is done without their concurrence or participation. Various propositions have from time to time been made to the Natives to adjust these matters, but, although the Native trustees are willing to rid themselves of the trouble of management, they have hitherto declined to accede to any arrangement that did not leave to them such a share of the profits as was incompatible with the rights of the lesser claimants. I visited Waiuku in May and met Paora te Iwi, Wiremu Tauroa, and other Natives of influence. After an exhaustive discussion of their position in relation to the reserves, I proposed that the most fertile and valuable of the reserves—Tahurangi—of 1,700 acres, should be cut up into conveniently-sized sections for each family or individual, as might be required, and allocated to them by an officer of the Government. The trust grants should then be surrendered, and grants, with limitations on sale, made to the families or individuals to whom the land was so allotted. The Natives present agreed to this, and have written a letter (copy appended) expressing their desire that such plan should be carried out. I promised, Sir, to recommend the measure to your approval. It will require an expenditure, chiefly in surveying, of about £300 to carry out; but, having in view the fact that an individualization of title had been from the first promised to these people, and believing that the plan would tend to remove a long-continued source of irritation, I did not hesitate in assuring them that it would receive the careful consideration of the Government. If the individualization of the Tahurangi reserve can be successfully carried out, other of the reserves may also have to be divided; and, when enough subsistence-land is surveyed off and rendered inalienable, the restrictions to lease, which are now keeping several large and valuable reserves unutilized and are much complained of, might be removed and tenants found for them.

Tauranga.—The lease of Lot No. 50, in the suburbs, has been transferred from H. L. Skeet to Mr. Noah Parsons. The tenant, Mr. Gray, of Lot No. 72, in the town, having shown conclusively that the rent agreed to be paid was excessive, a new arrangement has been entered into, by which the rent shall be £5 a year instead of £7. Lots Nos. 140 and 141, in the town, have been let for twenty-one years to R. F. Koller, for £5 first seven years, £10 second seven years, and £15 for remainder of term.

Province of Wellington.

The following lands have been purchased by the Commissioner of Native Reserves for the Government—namely: No. 1. Sixty-nine acres at Pencarrow. Head, being the Wellington Lighthouse site. This was a part of a large reserve made by Colonel McCleverty, in 1848, for the Pitone Natives. By some inadvertence a beacon first, and subsequently a lighthouse, was erected on this reserve, without the consent of the Native owners being asked. In 1865 the lighthouse was purchased by the General Government from the province, and several attempts were made to purchase the necessary land for a station, but the Natives required a sum that was unreasonable and excessive. In September last I obtained the assent of the Natives to convey to the Crown sixty-nine acres around the lighthouse-station for the sum of £138; and to commute their claims for rent, firewood-taking, and cattle trespass from the time the General Government had been in possession, July, 1865, to July, 1873, for the sum of £35. The sale has been carried into effect, and the deeds registered.

The adjacent land at Orongorongo had been held since 1852 as a sheep-station by Mr. Riddiford, who had received a Crown grant from Governor Grey for an area of 594 acres in the midst of it. The cession of the land to the Crown had never, however, been completed. It lay just beyond the limit that the Natives averred they had sold to the New Zealand Company, and a payment of £30 out of £100 had been made to them for it in 1853, when the negotiation was interrupted. In November last I assembled together the Natives interested in the land, and offered them £70, being the unpaid balance originally agreed upon. A long discussion ensued, and the land having advanced greatly in value, and it being known that it was Crown-granted, a larger price was demanded. Ultimately, £30, as interest, was agreed to be given, and deeds of cession were signed and registered.

I have purchased from the owners of Section 57, at Taita, in the Hutt, four acres of that reserve, for the Wellington-Masterton Railway, for the sum of £100.

At Ikamaru, near Ohariu, a section of 100 acres sold to a settler was known, for several years past, to extend over a piece of land that was originally a Native reserve, and over portions of which certain Natives still claimed an interest. About a year since, after a very close investigation, three women, Paritawhera, Rihi, and Riria, were found to have valid claims—the two former to forty acres each and the last to sixty acres, which areas were respectively awarded to them. As Paritawhera's claim lay contiguous to the settler's land, I obtained, at the instance of the Commissioner of Crown Lands here, your sanction to buy out her title, which I did for the sum of £15. The land was poor and hilly, and of little value to the woman, but of considerable importance to the settler.

The town acres Nos. 89 and 90, in Taranaki Street, on which stand the barracks of the Armed Constabulary, have been purchased for the Crown from the Te Aro Natives for £500. By these several arrangements, the causes of a long-standing discontent in the minds of the local Natives have been removed, as well as some anxiety felt by the respective settlers.

The town acres Nos. 995 to 1,005, in Rintoul Street, near the Adelaide Road, comprising 11 acres, have been let by tender to Dr. A. Johnston, for twenty-one years, at a rent as follows: First seven years, £20 a year; second seven years, £25 a year; and third seven years, £30 a year. The lease of town acres Nos. 972 to 989, in the same locality, has been transferred from the Hon. Mr. Mantell to Dr. Johnston. All the pegs of these lands having disappeared, it was necessary to have them surveyed, at a cost of £7 10s.

The reserve, Te Puka, of 60 acres at Wainui, West Coast, has been let to Isaac Smith, for seven years, at £6 a year, and 155 acres of the Wainui Reserve to the same person at £8 a year.

I stated in my last report that the owners of the Native reserves in Polhill's Gully, Te Aro, and at Ohariu, had placed those lands in my hands, being unable to manage them themselves. Since taking over these lands, I have collected rents and recovered arrears to the amount of £124 11s. 6d., and placed the property generally on a more satisfactory footing. Thus the road in the upper part of the gully ran along impracticable levels. This has been altered, and a new line of road arranged, and the site, 29 perches, conveyed to the Crown. As the main water-pipes for the city supply led over this ground, the City Council has paid the sum of £25 for the alteration.

I have let part of Lot No. 39, in Wordsworth Street, containing 3 roods, to William Thompson, for twenty-one years, at £10 a year, from 1st January, 1874. I have recovered £5 arrears from the late tenant of No. 37 and other part of No. 39, and made arrangements by which the new tenant takes upon himself the liability of £20 more of arrears that the Natives had suffered to become due from the outgoing tenant, whose terms of occupation were of an unsatisfactory nature.

I have had surveyed, at a cost of £5, Section 91 at Ohariu, and let it to Mr. J. Marshall. It contains 119 acres of hilly bush land. The terms are, for first seven years, £15 a year; second seven years, £20 a year; and last seven years, £25 a year. This has not been hitherto utilized.

The Native reserve at Kaiwharawhara, called Otari, of 134 acres, has been let for fourteen years to Samuel Woodward, at £20 a year for first seven years, and £25 a year for remainder of term. This has not before been let.

About 1 acre 2 roods in the immediate rear of the Wellington Gaol has been let for twenty-one years to Mr. M. Reid, on behalf of the Provincial Government, at £3 a year. This land has not before been utilized.

The tenant at Makara has paid up £40 of arrears of rent, which is divisible amongst Ngatitama Natives here and at Wellington. The two last-named reserves have been voluntarily placed with me by the Natives for management.

Whanganui.—The foreshore of the river abreast of the market-place, and of Sections 74, 75, and 76 in Taupo Quay, has been set aside for a Native market and landing-place for canoes, due provision being made for public access to the river. Out of the confiscated lands at Patea and Whenuakura 500 acres have been set aside as reserves for general Native purposes. They will be ready for letting on completion of survey. Leases fallen in or surrendered, four. New leases granted, or contracts made for leases, sixteen. Arrears of rent recovered, £113 1s. 6d. Arrears of rent at present, nil. Transfer of leases, three.

Lands placed in the Management of Commissioner.—The Ngatitama chief Wiremu Tamehana has voluntarily placed with the Commissioner of Native Reserves for management three sections in Block No. X.

of the Village of Takapuahia, at Porirua; and the Natives Erenora Tungia and Hoane te Okoro, of the same tribe, have placed with the Commissioner twelve sections in Block No. VIII of that village.

McCleverty Reserves.—The following lands have been under the action of the Native Land Court, and the Native title determined: Komangatawhiri, Reserve 3; Haukopua; Ngauranga, Sections 8 and 9; Omororo, Section 16, Ohiro; and part of town belt.

CHARLES HEAPHY, Commissioner of Native Reserves.
Wellington, 29th May, 1874.

THE specific duty imposed upon me by Parliament was to decide whether any compensation was due to the Province of Wellington by the colony in respect of the Native reserves made by Mr. McLean in the Manawatu Block.

Upon careful consideration of the demands of the province for such compensation, of the documents connected with the history of the case, and of the evidence given before me, I came to the conclusion that the provincial authorities had failed to make out their claim. But the same reasons which led me to this conclusion also led me to think the province was equitably entitled to relief in respect of certain cash payments made out of its Treasury in connection with the purchase of the block, which should be defrayed in the first instance by the colony, and then charged against the province in the same way as the cost of purchases from the Natives is now chargeable by law.

I was about to make a formal award to this effect when a question arose in my mind as to whether the words in the Act by which I had been appointed would authorize this being done. I requested the consent of the Government to my obtaining the opinion of the Attorney-General on the point; and I submitted the following memorandum, to which the Attorney-General gave the annexed reply: "For the Attorney-General: Being now prepared to make my award on the claim of the Province of Wellington referred to me by the Assembly, a point arises out of the wording of 'The Rangitikei-Manawatu Crown Grants Act, 1873,' as to which I am desirous of having the Attorney-General's advice. Section 5 of that Act says that I am 'appointed to be arbitrator, to consider and decide what compensation, if any, shall be paid to the Province of Wellington on account of lands taken and awarded to the Natives under promises or arrangements made by the Hon. D. McLean.' The Attorney-General is requested to favour me with his opinion—(1) Whether the words of the section in question restrict the arbitrator to the sole question whether the province is or is not entitled to compensation on account of Mr. McLean's reserves; (2) or whether the arbitrator is at liberty under the Act to make a general determination, which should include such a question as that of interest paid on the loan raised for the purchase-money of the block, if he thinks there are equitable grounds for any relief to the province in that respect." "Opinion.—I am of opinion that no other question is submitted to the arbitrator's decision than that of compensation on account of the reserves taken, and that the arbitrator is not at liberty to go into or decide upon any other matter or question.—J. PRENDERGAST. 5th February, 1874."

I am therefore precluded by this technical difficulty from making the award I intended; but as the making of an award to the effect merely that the province was not entitled to compensation would, in my judgment, not do fair justice to the case, I have thought it my duty to refrain from making any award at all, and to confine myself to reporting my opinion to Parliament.

The foundation for the claim to compensation really lay in this: that the provincial authorities deemed the whole Manawatu Block had, under the judgment of the Native Land Court on the 25th September, 1869, and subject only to the Native lands excepted by that Court, become "provincial estate" immediately upon the publication in the Government Gazette of the notification dated 16th October, 1869, that the Native title over the block had been extinguished. But when, in the course of the inquiry before me, it turned out that there had been an understanding between the two Governments that the province was not to claim possession under this notification until the lands excepted by the Court had been laid out upon the ground, and that neither Government was, till that was done, to proceed to any possessory act under the notification; and when it further clearly appeared that the disturbances with the Natives, which ultimately were quieted by Mr. McLean's mission, had arisen in the laying-out of the excepted lands, I at once stopped the case, and declared that it seemed to me the foundation to any claim to "compensation" was cut away.

Before taking evidence in the case, however, I had perceived that the papers laid before Parliament in 1872 gave no connected or even intelligible account of the events which led to Mr. McLean's interposition; and I had made it my care to examine all the correspondence which could throw light on these events. From a vast mass of papers I have extracted whatever seemed in any way important to a fair view of the whole case; and I now append a précis, which, read with the evidence taken before me, will, I think, enable Parliament to see the chain of circumstances which necessitated Mr. McLean's mission, and to judge of the correctness or otherwise of the general conclusions to which I have myself arrived.

It will be observed that there is a conflict between the statements of the two Governments on several important points. It could hardly have been expected to be otherwise when so many complications had taken place, extending over so long a time. The story, however, may really be summed up in a few sentences. The Native Land Court having given a judgment which affirmed the validity of the purchase, but directed certain excepted lands to be laid out upon the ground, the Government were induced, against their better judgment, to publish a notice that the title was extinguished, without waiting for these lands to be surveyed. This notice was, however, in reality, to go for nothing; no possession was to be claimed till the survey should be made. The survey was, from the first, under the control of Mr. Buller, Resident Magistrate and Deputy Land Purchase Commissioner, and the provincial survey staff was under his orders. The survey was no sooner begun than it was stopped by the Natives. Mr. Buller issued summonses against three of the Natives, and, acting in his judicial capacity, arrested the most turbulent of them—an ex-constable, called Miritana. This strong step had only a momentary effect; disturbances were again renewed, and wherever the surveyors attempted to lay out the reserves they were turned off, their trig stations destroyed, and the survey-pegs torn up. The General Government then suspended the general survey. At an early stage of the disturbances they had decided that Mr. McLean should go to the district; and the Provincial Government, not being able to obtain possession of an acre, constantly pressed the Government to hasten his visit. There was never any discussion between the two Governments as to which was to be liable for the results of his mission. No conditions whatever were made as to the extent of any concessions to be made to the Natives by Mr. McLean. Neither the General Government, however, nor Mr. Halcombe (who represented the Provincial Government in the communications that took place) had any doubt that concession of some sort would be made. When the news came of Mr. McLean's reserves, the Provincial Government became alarmed at their extent. But neither they nor the Provincial Council made any remonstrance against the reserves, nor was any claim in respect of them ever advanced by the province till Dr. Featherston came out from England.

It is abundantly clear that if the extent of the reserves had not exceeded 3,000 or 4,000 acres nothing would have been said about them. But, in my opinion, the difference between that amount and the amount actually granted affords no ground for claiming "compensation" as against the colony. It is idle to represent the interests of the two Governments as other than absolutely identical; it is certain that they agreed to act in concert; and no argument tending to fix on either Government separately a special responsibility for Mr. McLean's interposition, or a special liability for its results, can, I think, have any force.

It is impossible for me to agree in the remonstrances of some members of the General Government, amongst themselves, against that Government "mixing itself up in the Manawatu difficulty." The General Government could not possibly escape being mixed up in it. It would have been no use, if the obstruction to the survey had ended in actual conflict and loss of life, for the General Government to say that it was all the fault of the province. Ministers, in fact, took the only step that could have been taken consistently with common sense, when they determined to try for an amicable settlement with the Natives. On the other hand, I find it equally impossible to concur in the arguments by which it is sought to throw the whole liability for Mr. McLean's action on the colony. In Mr. Halcombe's letter of 15th May, 1871, the Provincial Government expressed their belief that "forcible measures were necessary to enable the province to obtain possession of its property," and that "Mr. McLean, as Defence Minister responsible for the peace of the colony, and as Native Minister responsible for the relations between the two races, was ex officio the proper person on whom to place the responsibility of a resort to force." But nothing is clearer than that a resort to force was not in the mind of either Government at the time (1869–70); that, on the contrary, the Deputy-Superintendent and Mr. Fox had agreed there was to be nothing of the sort; and that the Provincial Government themselves believed that any resort to force would bring on a conflict. Moreover, it was always expected that Mr. McLean would make some concessions to the Natives; and the Provincial Secretary was under the impression that, to a reasonable extent, his action would have been indorsed by the province. This impression was originally contained in the draft of the same letter (of 15th May), though it was struck out before the letter was sent in. Why it was struck out it is difficult to see. It was a very important fact in the case; and it certainly should have been communicated to Mr. Fitzherbert, when upon assuming office he called for a statement of what had been done.

But is it fair that under such circumstances the province should be left in the position of having paid a large sum in cash for interest on loan and other expenses connected with the acquisition of the land, before any possession of it was obtained? Suppose that (as Mr. Fox said) quiet possession had not been got for twenty years—suppose it had never been got—can any one say it would be right that the Provincial Treasury should go on paying for nothing? The control of all operations connected with the purchase of Native lands for the Crown always did, and obviously always must, rest with the General Government. It makes not the slightest difference that the Land Purchase Commissioner of the General Government employed to make the Manawatu purchase was also Superintendent of Wellington. It is not my province to express any opinion upon the exceptional manner in which the money for the original payments to the Natives was allowed to be raised, or the equally exceptional proceedings which ended in the judgment of the Native Land Court in 1869; but, when once it clearly appeared that quiet possession of the block was impossible without the special intervention of the Native Minister, it seems to me that the proper course would have been to reconsider the whole matter, and to place the province in the same position, pecuniarily, as it would have been if the General Government had conducted all the proceedings throughout. That some idea of this kind had been in the mind of the General Government is clear from the concession contained in Mr. Gisborne's letter to Mr. Fitzherbert of 4th April, 1872, Where he proposes "to eliminate from the accounts of moneys then charged against the province all cash expenses incurred by the Government since the date (16th October, 1869) of the notice of the extinction of Native title in the block, in the settlement of disputes arising out of that purchase; and to charge these expenses to the loans for the purchase of lands in the North Island under the Public Works and Immigration Act, the interest and sinking fund of the cost to be chargeable, as in the case of other land purchases in the Province of Wellington, to that province." What I fail to see is the principle on which this should only be done as from the date of the notice. It appears to me that what was right to be done in respect of what happened after that date was equally right to be done in respect of what happened before. If the argument, that the notice of the extinction of Native title constituted the territory as "provincial estate," falls to the ground by the admission that no possession was to be claimed under it till the Native reserves were laid out, it is clear that the responsibility of laying out the reserves lay with the General Government and not with the province; and exactly the same reasons which existed for relieving the province from any part of the cash payments before possession was given must, in my opinion, exist for relieving it from the whole. And if that admission cuts the ground away from the claim to "compensation" for the land taken by Mr. McLean for his reserves, it also shows that the province ought to have been, and therefore ought now to be, relieved from providing, in the first instance, the cost of acquiring a clear title, and settling the Native disputes.

Of course I do not mean that this cost should be carried to final charge as an expenditure by the colony. On the contrary, I see no ground for not making it in the usual way a charge against the province. It should be defrayed out of loan, and the province should pay interest and sinking fund as proposed by Mr. Gisborne. The only fair way, I think, of dealing with such a case is the one laid down in section 38 of "The Public Works and Immigration Act, 1870," which enacted that a separate account should be kept by the Colonial Treasurer, against each province of the North Island, of all moneys expended in the purchase of Native lands within the province, and that each province should be charged with the cost incurred in the purchase of such lands (with interest) so long as the province should in respect of such lands continue to be indebted to the colony for the advance. I find that the amount of "cash eliminated from the account," as that account stood at the time of Mr. Gisborne's letter, was this: for survey expenses, £389 10s. 5d.; for advances to Dr. Featherston, £2,662 8s. 2d.: total, £3,051 18s. 7d. Since that time, however, the first sum has been increased by further disbursements to £1,281 9s. 9d., and this sum, together with a sum of £1,200 advanced to Alexander McDonald on mortgage for five years, was charged in 1873 to the Immigration and Public Works Loan. The second item, on the other hand, has been diminished to £1,962 8s. 2d.; and this item has not yet been transferred to the loan, because the Treasury was led to believe the amount would probably be repaid, as to the extent of £700 it appears to have been. But no interest has yet been charged to the province in respect of the sum transferred to the loan, nor indeed has any account under section 38 been made up with any province in respect of moneys expended for purchase of Native lands. So that as regards the Province of Wellington the account is, in fact, open. I think it should be closed. Only, instead of stopping at the date proposed by Mr. Gisborne, the account should go back to the beginning, and be brought down to the time of getting possession for the province by the making of Mr. McLean's reserves.

It only remains for me to say what sums paid by the province should, in my opinion, be repaid to the Provincial Treasury and charged upon the loan. In the first place, I take the interest on the loan which was raised to pay the Natives under "The Wellington Loan Act, 1866;" secondly, the cost of raising that loan; thirdly, any supplementary purchase-money paid to the Natives after the loan was paid away; fourthly, the salaries and allowances of the Land Purchase Commissioners; and lastly, the expenses of the judgments in the Native Land Court, including counsel's fees in defending the title of the Crown. I am not able to see, in any one of these items, any distinction in principle which should separate it from the items paid by the General Government after the 15th October, 1869. They were all payments for like purposes, and all were of necessity preliminary to giving the province quiet possession.

Had I been able to make a definite award for the repayment to the province of these sums under the term "compensation," or had the General Government been willing that I should go into the question of an equitable adjustment as between the two Governments, I should, of course, have taken an accurate account of the moneys coming under the heads I have mentioned. As it is, I have only been able to estimate them from information supplied by the Provincial Government. According to this information, the amount would probably be as follows: Interest paid by Provincial Treasury, £10,565; cost of raising loan of 1866, £889; supplementary purchase-money, £345; Land Purchase Commissioners, £2,500; costs in Native Land Court, £966: total, £15,265. But of course, if Parliament should be pleased to concur in the views expressed in this report, an accurate account would now have to be taken, and the final sum be added to the amount already in suspense under Mr. Gisborne's elimination.

F. D. BELL, Speaker.

House of Representatives,

16th July, 1874.

[NOTE.—For further Papers on the Manawatu case, see Parliamentary Appendix H.—18, 1874.—ED.]

CORRESPONDENCE relating to the TAIRUA NATIVE RESERVE.(No. 1.) His Honour the SUPERINTENDENT, Auckland, to the Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Superintendent's Office, Auckland, 18th June, 1875.

SIR,—

I have the honour to enclose an abstract, prepared by the Waste Lands Commissioner, showing the manner in which an area of 1,000 acres (as yet unselected) was reserved for Natives in the Tairua Block. You will find from this abstract that this block appears to have been purchased from the Natives on the 7th December, 1872, without any such reservation for them having been made, and that it was handed over to this province on the 24th June, 1874, free from such reservation of 1,000 acres. I beg, therefore, that an explanation may be afforded as to the time when the reservation was made, and by whose authority, and whether the Natives have since attempted to sell or lease this land, or any part of it, to any other person; and, if so, to whom.

I have, &c.,

G. GREY.

The Hon. the Colonial Secretary, Wellington.

(Enclosure in No. 1.)

Mr. TOLF, Waste Lands Commissioner, to his Honour the SUPERINTENDENT, Auckland. Waste Lands Office, 4th May, 1875. (Memorandum.)

THE following abstract of title shows the manner in which the area of 1,000 acres (as yet unselected), claimed by Natives, in the Tairua Block, was reserved for them: Crown-granted to Natives 10th June, 1874, but legal title vested in them from 29th November, 1872. Conveyed by Natives to the Queen on the 7th December, 1872, without any reservation expressed in the body of the deed. Proclaimed waste lands of the Crown, and made subject to provincial administration, on the 24th June, 1874. No reservation contained in the Proclamation, which in this respect corresponds with deed. Conveyance above alluded to, from Natives to the Queen, registered 15th July, 1874. Upon this instrument an indorsement, bearing no date, appears reserving 1,000 acres (position undefined) for the grantees. Proclaimed within the limits of the Hauraki Gold-Mining District on the 8th April, 1875. In this Proclamation the exception of 1,000 acres is made.

D. A. TOLE, Waste Lands Commissioner.

Note

NOTE.—The terms of the indorsement, which would appear to be in the handwriting of Mr. Mackay, and different from that in the body of the deed, are as follow: "It is hereby agreed that the Governor of New Zealand shall cause to be issued to Miriama Pihi Pukukauri, Peneamene Tanui, Hori Kerei Tuokioki, Matene Pehi, and Marara Hauata, a Crown grant for 1,000 acres of the land conveyed to the Queen by the within-written deed, such land to be selected within three months from the date hereof, and to be taken in either one or two blocks, at the option of the said Miriama Peri Pukukauri. Expenses of survey to be borne by the Crown.—JAMES MACKAY, jun., agent for Land Purchases, Immigration and Public Works Act. Witness to signature of James Mackay, jun.: JNO. GUILDING, Licensed Interpreter, Shortland."

(No. 2.) His Honour the SUPERINTENDENT, Auckland, to the Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY.

(Telegram.) Auckland, 2nd July, 1875.

Re reserve of 1,000 acres, Tairua Block. Please not to let Crown grant for this issue till this Government is heard.

G. GREY.

(No. 3.) His Honour the SUPERINTENDENT, Auckland, to the Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Superintendent's Office, Auckland, 17th July, 1875.
SIR,—

Herewith I have the honour to enclose a copy of the translation of a letter from the Native. Peneamene Tanui, to show that Mr. O'Halloran and Mr. Guilding (or one of them) have agreed to lease from the Natives the reserve of 1,000 acres in the Tairua Block, which the Provincial Government have reserved for a township.

I have, &c.,

G. GREY.

The Hon. the Colonial Secretary, Wellington.

(Enclosure in No. 3.)PENEAMENE TANUI to his Honour the SUPERINTENDENT, Auckland.

Whitianga (Mercury Bay), 29th June, 1875.

FRIEND,—

Salutations to you who now represent the chiefs of the Hauraki, who are gone from before our eyes. Friend; I greet you. Friend, Wilkinson has come to me for our land at Tairua. You did right to send him, but two other pakehas have come to us for that place, who wish us to lease to them. We have not concluded our talk yet; but I know this: I shall certainly not consent that George Wilkinson may have it, for I have received a payment in advance from those pakehas, and they must not say that I am robbing them by letting another have the land. Friend, I greet you. Enough.

From your friend,

PENEAMENE TANUI.

Sir George Grey, Superintendent of Auckland.

(No. 4.)The Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY to his Honour the SUPERINTENDENT, Auckland.

Colonial Secretary's Office, Wellington, N.Z., 21st July, 1875.

SIR,—

I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter No. 2,337, of 17th July, enclosing copy of the translation of a letter from the Native Peneamene Tanui, "to show that Mr. O'Halloran and Mr. Guilding (or one of them) have agreed to lease from the Natives the reserve of 1,000 acres in the Tairua Block, which the Provincial Government have reserved for a township." I should feel obliged if your Honour would kindly indicate in what portion of Tanui's letter it is shown that an agreement has been made for a lease to Messrs. O' Halloran and Guilding, or to one of them.

I have, &c.,

DANIEL POLLEN.

His Honour the Superintendent, Auckland.

(No. 5.)Mr. JAMES MACKAY to the Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY

Auckland, 17th July, 1875.

SIR,—

I have the honour to inform you that Sir George Grey, in his official capacity as Superintendent of this province, has thought proper to make certain statements respecting the 1,000 acres of land reserved for the Natives in the Tairua Block which reflect seriously on my character. In addition to this a writ has been issued against myself and others in the Supreme Court by Sir George Grey, which was sued out by his solicitor, Mr. W. L. Rees, and in accordance with an affidavit sworn by the person last named, which contains serious allegations, having no foundation in fact.

Having been informed that a writ had been issued against me, I proceeded to the office of the Registrar of the Supreme Court accompanied by Major Green, and was shown the writ, the affidavit, and declaration made in support of it by Mr. W. L. Rees. On my solicitor's clerk applying to make a copy of these to day, he was informed that the writ and affidavit only could be copied, and that the declaration was merely lodged there pending an application to the Court for an injunction.

If the writ, affidavit, and declaration were not filed, then the Deputy-Registrar had no right to show the letter to me and say that I "could have a copy taken by my clerk without payment of any further fee than the shilling paid by Major Green for the search." As I have been thus deprived of a copy of the declaration in question, it becomes necessary for me to endeavour to give its contents from memory. The declaration appeared to me to set out. "That the Native grantees absolutely conveyed to the Crown their title to 36,000 acres of land, known as the Tairua Block, without any reservation whatsoever. That the only record of any reservation was an indorsement on the back of the deed by myself that the Natives were entitled to a reserve of 1,000 acres, to be selected by them within three months, and to be taken in not more than two blocks. That the selection had not been made within the stipulated time by the Natives, and had lapsed. That the General Government had handed over the Tairua Block to the Provincial Government without mentioning the right of the Natives to select 1,000 acres within it, and that I had not informed the Government that any arrangement had been made to make such reserve. That I had no right or authority to afterwards cause such reserves to be selected and surveyed. That, since the proclamation of the Tairua, Pakirarahi, and other blocks as an extension of the Hauraki Gold-Mining District, I, without the authority of the General or Provincial Government, had fraudulently made the reserve in a place different from that which had originally been arranged as a site for it. That the block surveyed was at the only place suitable for a township for the Tairua extension of the Hauraki Gold-Mining District. That Gerald O'Halloran and John William Richard Guilding, two officers in the service of the General Government, and paid by them, had entered into arrangements with the Natives for a lease of the reserve in question on behalf of themselves and others. That I was likely to apply to the Crown and recommend the issue of a Crown grant to the Natives interested. That it was necessary to prevent great and irreparable loss and damage to the plaintiff as Superintendent of the province to issue an injunction against the execution of such grant, and to stop any lease from the Native owners to John William Richard Guilding and Gerald O'Halloran on behalf of themselves or others."

This I believe to be the substance of the declaration, and I shall now proceed to state the fact of the case.

In December, 1872, I commenced negotiations for the sale of the Tairua Block to the Crown. After many discussions of the question a deed was prepared which contained no reservations except those of the rights of Seccombe and Son to kauri timber (which had been acquired in 1864). No mention had been made of a reserve, as none had then been asked for. The purchase-money spoken of was £3,000, but on the day the deed was presented for execution the grantees, at the last moment demanded a reserve of 2,000 acres, or a payment of £3,600, being £100 per 1,000 acres. I then agreed to pay £2,900 and allow a reserve of 1,000 acres, which was to be selected within three months, and in not more than two blocks. The site of the larger portion of the reserve was fixed at Pukioire, at the head of the navigation of the Tairua River, and the position of the remainder was not determined, some of the Natives being in favour of taking it at Te Karaka burial-ground, and others near the mouth of the river. I did not deem it advisable to alter the conveyance, or cumber it with a covenant to produce title-deeds. I therefore asked the Natives to convey the whole to the Crown, on the understanding that a grant should be issued to them for 1,000 acres, and, to satisfy them, indorsed the particulars of this arrangement on the back of the deed. The Natives within the three months applied to me to survey the reserves, and I told them it would be attended to as soon as my other engagements would allow of it.

In my report of the 24th March, 1873 (vide G.—8, Appendix to Journals of the House of Representatives, 1873), I thus alluded to the Tairua purchase: "Tairua: Area 36,000 acres; price £2,900. It adjoins Whenuakiti (Government land), and gives access to the sea to the eastward. Gold has been found in these blocks. Not yet included in gold-mining district. Reason of delay in proclamation is the non-completion of survey of the Wharekawa Block (purchase negotiated; vide Return No. 2). Wharekawa separates these blocks from the Whangamata Block. Some land available for cultivation on these blocks. A reserve of 1,000 acres to be selected in one or two blocks is to be made at Tairua, and a grant issued for the same to the owners, as arranged by the Native Land Court."

In April, 1873, Timothy Sullivan was murdered by Purukutu at Waikato, and I was requested to proceed there as agent for the General Government, which effectually precluded me from completing the arrangements for surveying the reserves, as I was absent from the Thames District for upwards of twelve months. I had no communication with the Natives respecting the reserves until the 11th May last, when a letter was forwarded to me requesting me to have it surveyed. I enclose the original with translation. I instructed John Guilding, a licensed interpreter in my employ and who is not a Government officer, to proceed to Tairua with a surveyor and lay off the reserve. This was done. Nine hundred and ninety acres were surveyed at Pukioire, and ten acres at Te Kutakuta, near the mouth of the river. They applied to me on the 26th May to allow them to take twenty acres at Te Karaka burial-ground, and reduce the Pukioire reserve to 970 acres, as by letter enclosed herewith with translation. The latter question has not been arranged.

With reference to the objection raised, that I had no right to lay off the reserve at Tairua without consulting the Provincial Government, I would beg to state that I received orders from the Hon. Mr. Ormond and the Hon. the Native Minister to make reserves for Natives where necessary, and I have on no occasion gone beyond the letter or spirit of those instructions. I afterwards saw a statement in the Thames Advertiser, published at the time of Sir George Grey's visit to the gold fields, to the effect that this reserve was unknown before the proclamation of the Tairua extension of the Hauraki Goldmining District; that it was subsequently made at the only site suitable for a township for that district, and had been leased to private persons for that purpose. It was insinuated afterwards that I, or some person in my employ, had leased the land from the Natives. These assertions and insinuations culminated in the writ of summons sued out on behalf of Sir George Grey by his solicitor, and the affidavit and declaration made on the 10th instant, copies of which will be forwarded if obtainable. As far as I am concerned, I distinctly deny that I ever asked the Natives to lease to me the Tairua reserve, or any portion of it, or that I ever suggested, directly or indirectly, to any person whomsoever to do so, either on my behalf or on his own account.

I leave the other defendants mentioned in the writ to vindicate their own conduct, which I have no doubt will bear the light of thorough investigation. I would have replied more fully to the allegations contained in the declaration had a copy of it been procurable. If any of the allegations made in the declaration to the writ issued against myself and others in the Supreme Court respecting the Tairua reserve are incorrect, Sir George Grey cannot plead that he was refused any information on the subject of the Tairua land purchase or the leases of timber there, as he was, on the 22nd of June last, apprised by the Hon. the Colonial Secretary that I had been instructed to furnish him with any information he required on the subject. On 25th June I forwarded a telegraphic message to him to that effect. I received a reply that nothing but a copy of a telegram was required. In supplying this I, on the 28th ultimo, again offered to give any information or explanation in my power required by his Honour. This he declined in his letter of the 29th June, saying he thought it desirable under the present circumstances to communicate direct with the General Government. If Sir George Grey had taken advantage of the offer made to him by the Hon. the Colonial Secretary, he would have been furnished with full particulars about the Tairua land purchase and timber leases, and need not have been under the necessity of employing a secret agent to make inquiries amongst the Natives at Mercury Bay respecting the Tairua reserve; and probably would not have resorted to the extraordinary measure of issuing a writ in the Supreme Court against myself and others. I consider the more constitutional course for his Honour the Superintendent to have pursued in the matter, if he had any reason to suspect me of wrong-doing, would have been to have complained to the Hon. the Colonial Secretary, and requested him to cause an inquiry to be made into my conduct in the matter. I must, however, respectfully submit that it does not appear right for one officer of the Colonial Government to proceed against another in the Supreme Court, even on public grounds, unless with the consent of the General Government first obtained. It is unnecessary to enter further into the question; but if any vindication of myself were necessary it is to be found in the fact that they who instituted have found it expedient to withdraw proceedings.

I have, &c.,

JAMES MACKAY.

The Hon. the Colonial Secretary, Wellington.

Wellington, 30th June, 1875.

Province of Auckland.

Waiuku Reserves.—On the confiscation, in 1865, of the West Waiuku Block, the loyal Natives there resident were promised that their villages, cultivations, and burial-places should be returned to them, surveyed and under Crown grant. The block taken consisted of 47,030. acres, of which, in fulfilment of the promise, 6,614 acres 3 roods 35 perches were subsequently granted to them in thirty-six Crown grants. An Act, entitled "The Friendly Natives' Contracts Confirmation Act, 1866," was passed to legalize the arrangement. The grants were generally made out to six or seven of the chiefs, in trust for their tribes. Some of the grants conveyed the land absolutely, whilst others had varying restrictions on the power to sell, mortgage, and let. It soon, however, appeared that the original rights and holdings had been of a much more complex nature than was estimated. The trusts specified in the grants were in some cases inappropriate, and in others the Natives interested beneficially would not recognize the Maori trustees as the fitting persons to have control over their lands. Further, the trustees in several instances misapprehended their position, assumed the rights of absolute owners, and misused their trust. It was asserted by the inferior people that the chiefs let the grazing on the tribal estate, and gave no account of the rents. They sold to the neighbouring settlers the valuable puriri timber that was necessary for fencing the Native cultivations, and yielded no account of the proceeds. Emissaries from the King country from time to time fostered the discontent that resulted from these irregularities. Various and earnest attempts were made to remedy these evils, but without success. At one time the trustees would not, from jealousy, agree to a rearrangement; at another, having found that they could not profitably manage the properties, they consented to hand them over to European trustees, but quarrelled over the scheme of partition of the respective rents. They would consent to get rid of the responsibility of the trusts, but not to surrender the undue advantages which their hold of the land gave them. This bad state of things reacted on the condition of the people generally; the young men would not, with any heart, clear or cultivate land that was not secured at least to the head of the family, nor defined from that of the tribe by an intelligible boundary: they grew listless, idle, and intemperate. I received, Sir, your instructions, in February last, to endeavour to arrange a plan by which the lands so involved might be allocated and secured to the proper owners, and the dissatisfaction terminated. The way was cleared for my work by you having, while at the Waikato, succeeded in inducing the chiefs Aihene Kaihau (who had married the King's sister) and Hori Tauroa to leave the King country and return to their people at Waiuku. I met the chiefs and people at Waiuku on the 10th of March and three following days, and, after a careful inquiry into their respective claims and rights, induced them to consent unanimously to a plan of allocation which appeared equitable and capable of being carried into effect. They had from the first been promised a survey of their several pieces, but a survey was useless whilst the chiefs monopolized the choicest land and the best timber. I, however, aided by Mr. Marshall and Mr. King, induced the chiefs to abandon their unreasonable claims and agree to surrender their trusts, upon a scheme (carefully drawn out by Mr. Marshall) that specified the exact area to be given to each member of the tribe, chief or slave, adult or infant, and the locality, generally, where it should be laid out. Where individuals were alone, they were by this scheme to have separate grants; where a family desired to remain together, the aggregate area for its several members could be surveyed in one piece. Crown grants were to follow, with varying restrictions, as fitting, upon alienability. The trustees (two absentees excepted) consented, in the presence of the tribe, to surrender their trusts, and signed a memorial (in Maori and English) asking for the plan of allocation to be carried out, and for legislative action to relieve them of their responsibility. The work of dividing the estates into such minor holdings has been carried out by survey, under my own immediate superintendence; the Natives appear to be satisfied with the localities awarded to them, and have assisted in carrying out the scheme. An Act will be necessary to give effect to the arrangement, and legalize the surrender of the trusts and the issue of new grants.

Tauranga.—Lots 3 and 4, Section 2, of the Town of Tauranga, have been let on lease to Thomas Corbett for a term of twenty-one years, at the following rental, viz.: £5 per annum for first seven years; £10 per annum for second seven years; and £15 per annum for remainder of the term. They contain about 1 rood each. The lots Nos. 45 and 163, Section No. 1, in the Town of Tauranga, have been set apart as reserves for general Native purposes.

Onehunga. — A lease for a term of twenty-one years has been executed to Mr. J. Roe for Subdivisions Nos. 1, 2, 5, and 6 of Lot 12, Section 20, Town of Onehunga, at a rental of £14 a year. These lots had been previously in the occupation, with promise of a lease to his father, Mr. M. Roe, who desired the transfer.

Remuera.—The lots Nos. 75 and 98 of Section 16, Remuera, have been conveyed to the heirs of Ihaka Takaanini. They were purchased with funds the property of that chief, previous to his decease. The sum of £4 16s. 5d., paid in 1871–72 for rates on this land, has been recovered from the trustees of the estate. The northern portion of Lot 53 of Section 16, at Remuera, containing 5 acres, was purchased in 1857 by the Government for the late chief Patene Puhata, of Waiheke; the sum of £90 being advanced for the purpose. This money has not been repaid. The land being unproductive and chargeable with assessment rates, it has been considered proper to sell it and close the account. The property has accordingly been sold to Mr. T. Morrin for the sum of £135, less agent's commission of £3 7s. 6d. The sum of £90, with £1 13s. paid for rates, is thus recovered, and the balance, amounting to £39 19s. 6d., will be payable to Patene's heirs.

Province of Wellington.

In conformity with an old existing promise, the Native Reserve IV., on the east side of Porirua Harbour, comprising 382 acres, has been conveyed to Hon. Wi Parata and Ngahuka Tungia. This land, originally belonging to those chiefs, was brought in 1866 under the provisions of "The Native Reserves Act, 1856," and has been ever since managed by the Commissioner of Native Reserves. About four years since it was shown that the Natives, in handing this land over, did not understand the effect of their act; it was therefore determined to return the land to the original owners, which has thus been done.

Komangatawhiri, Porirua.—A long-outstanding dispute about this reserve at Porirua has been decided in the following manner, viz.: That, of the annual rental of £50, Wi Katene, of Nelson, should receive the current instalment of £25, no deduction being made for survey expenses, but that from all future half-year instalments £10 should be kept back by the Commissioner of Native Reserves, and placed to a "separate survey account," until the cost—about £120—for survey is covered; also that the Ngatitoa Tribe shall always receive the January net instalment, and the Ngatitama Tribe the July net instalment. £25 was paid to Wi Katene, with the approval of all interested.

Omaroro.—No. 16, Town Belt, Wellington: J. F. E. Wright, the tenant, had, in virtue of a purchasing clause in his lease, deposited (in bank) the sum of £700 for the freehold of his farm, containing 146½ acres, as above. The question of actual ownership was referred by the Commissioner of Native Reserves to the Native Land Court; and, upon the decision of that Court in favour of Hemi Parai and the Wi Tako being given, the money was handed to those chiefs, who conveyed the land to Mr. Wright. This was a "McCleverty" reserve, a class which the Natives have uncontrolled power over.

Hutt Valley.—Part of Subdivision No. 8 of Section 20, Te Momi, was purchased by me 29th January, 1875, for the Crown, for purposes connected with the Wellington and Masterton Railroad, from Komene Paipa and Patara Rangiatea. It contained 1 acre 3 roods 8 perches; price, £63 5s 10d. This was also a "McCleverty" reserve.

Mangaroa, Hutt.—Section No. 132, Mangaroa, containing about 100 acres, has been let by tender for twenty-one years to Mr. Cruikshank, at £10 per annum.

Pakuratahi, Upper Hutt.—The sections Nos. 3, 4, and 7, containing about 335 acres, have been let by tender to the following persons, viz.: Section No. 3, to H. Whightman and J. Sennex, for the term of twenty-one years, at £30 a year; tenants to clear fifty acres of land. Section No. 4, to J. Sennex, for twenty-one years, at £50 a year for the first ten years, and an increase of £20 a year for remainder of term; tenant to clear eighty acres. Section No. 7, to H. Whightman, for twenty-one years, at £50 a year for the first ten years, and £80 a year for remainder of term; tenant to clear eighty acres.

Makara.—Five acres of Section No. 22 have been let by Parata te Kiore, the Native beneficially interested, with the approval of the Commissioner of Native Reserves, to the J. B. Petit-Jean, for a Roman Catholic church site, on a term of twenty-one years, at a rental of £1 a year. A Court of inquiry, consisting of the Commissioner of Native Reserves and the Hon. Wi Tako Ngatata, recommended that Pirinara Tutawhia should receive an inalienable grant for sixty acres in Section 39, Makara. The recommendation has been approved.

In previous reports I have stated that the Wellington Natives have voluntarily intrusted to my management certain of their reserves at Polhill's Gully, Wellington City, and in other places. Of these I have this year let the following: Section No. 23, Aro Street, Te Aro, containing one acre, to Robert Lyon, for twenty-one years from 1st January, 1874, at £15 a year. Section 45, Te Aro, containing one acre, to Joe Dransfield, for twenty-one years from the 1st December, 1875, at £13 a year; this being an increase of £1 a year upon the old lease, which expires on the 30th November, 1875. Section 49, Te Aro, containing one acre, to Mr. W. Cornor, for twenty-one years from 1st June, 1875, at a yearly rental of £14. The Natives beneficially interested have approved of each of these arrangements. The collective proceeds of all the Wellington lands so intrusted to me by the owners to let I divide periodically amongst the people interested I have induced the chiefs, who generally have other sources of income, to share alike with the inferior people in the division.

Manawatu.—The sections Nos. 203, 204, 205, 207, 209, 210, 211, 212, 213, 214, 228, 238, and 239, comprising 62 acres, in the suburbs of Palmerston, have been let by tender for twenty-one years to H. S. Palmerson, at a rental of £25 Os. 4d., first seven years; £32 12s. 7½d., second seven years; and £41 6s. 8d., third seven years. Half-year's rent in advance has been received.

Whanganui and West Coast.—Leases have been executed as follow in respect to lands let last year:—Whenuakura: Section 88, 130 acres, J. Sheehan, £45 10s. per annum; Section 28, 95 acres, C. and D. Symes, £21 7s. 6d.; Section 94, 70 acres, F. J. Stewart, £19 5s. Patea: Section 488, 29 acres, G. B. Worgan, £5 1s. 6d.; Section 489, 43 acres, J. S. McCarthy, £11 16s. 6d.; Section 503, 66 acres 2 roods 6 perches, Gane Brothers, £16 12s. 6d.; Section 547, 67 acres and 14 perches, Napier and Mitchell, £8 7s. 6d.

During the last session of the General Assembly a petition was received from Charles Vincent; of Waiau, near Waitotara, the owner of a mill built on land held under a promise of a lease, in accordance with the prescribed Flax Regulations for confiscated lands. The petition stated that the growing flax upon which the mill depended had been improperly burned off by the chief Major Kemp, and prayed redress. I had the honour of receiving your directions to endeavour to settle the matter in an equitable manner. On inquiry on the ground it appeared that Kemp had been a principal owner of the Okotuku Block, within which Waiau is situated; that on the cession of the block he had abstained from participating in the payment, and that in consideration of this, and in recognition of his military services, the Government had promised him a grant of 400 acres, to include an eel-fishing creek. The Waiau Creek, with 600 acres on its margin, had been promised by Mr. Commissioner Pharazyn to Mr. Vincent, for a flax lease, and the latter had erected a mill and made other improvements thereon. At a subsequent period G. B. Worgan was intrusted by the Government with the allocation of the 400 acres to Kemp. The latter selected the Waiau Creek, and 400 out of the 600 acres allowed to Vincent. Mr. Worgan seems to have failed to make Kemp understand the relative positions which he and Vincent would have to each other during the currency of the latter's lease, or of the proportionate part of Vincent's rent which it would be proper for Kemp to receive. Kemp, after a time, found that the mill and dam were obstructive to the eel-fishing of his people, and, deriving no present benefit from Vincent, let his 400 acres to an adjacent settler for purposes of cultivation. In clearing the land, and possibly to oust Vincent, Kemp burnt off the flax from the 400 acres. Vincent complained that his means of subsistence were gone, and laid his damages at upwards of £9,000. The case presented this difficulty: that there existed no other locality in the district where an eel-fishing creek could be secured for Kemp, and it appeared to be almost impossible for eel-fishing and the mill operations to go on together. Further, whether Vincent or Kemp was the rightful occupant, some one—either Vincent or Kemp's tenant—would suffer an injury, and have to be compensated. On examining the ground, I found that the flax had not been so much destroyed as entirely to prevent work at the mill. This enabled me to claim for the damages to be proportionately reduced. Mr. Vincent admitted that, in the existing state of the market, flax-dressing, save for rope-making, would not pay, and I found that there was a sufficiency of the material still growing for this limited branch of the business. It became necessary, however, to give Vincent a right, in case of flax becoming again in demand, to cut the plant on some adjacent Crown land. It was further arranged, with your approval, that he should receive the sum of £164 2s. for his expenses in coming to the session, and for loss of time since the suspension of the mill work. For the future he was, in respect to the 400 acres, to be considered the tenant of Kemp, that chief promising to protect him in the occupation of the land. The eel-fishing was to be arranged by mutual concession. This mode of arrangement still left the contingency of a claim by Kemp's tenant against him for breach of engagement in letting the land; but as it was questionable how far that letting was legal and valid, and the tenant ignorant of Vincent's holding, it was thought right to leave him to his remedy at law. Some difficulty occurred subsequently in finding other land conveniently situated for the supply of flax until the burnt plants were again grown, Vincent asserting that he could again fully work the mill to advantage. Eventually it was arranged that, in full satisfaction of all demands against the Crown, Vincent should be allowed to purchase at £1. 10s. an acre the section No. 415, at Okotuku, containing 350 acres. Legislative action will be necessary to legalize this.

CHARLES HEAPHY, Commissioner of Native Reserves.

The Hon. the Native Minister.

Province of Auckland.

LEGISLATION will be necessary in order to allow Crown grants to issue to the Natives of the West Waiuku Block for lands given to them at that place in 1865, under the New Zealand Settlements Act, and lately subdivided for the respective families and individuals. The plans in detail for the grants are now ready. The history of these reserves is given in my report of last year. The tenancy of the eastern half of the Hostelry Endowment Reserve, No. 4 of Section 12, in Mechanics' Bay, has lapsed, the tenant having left the district without paying the rent due. The land has been advertised for lease by auction for twenty-one years.

Onehunga.—About nine perches of land on Lot 11, Section 20, has been advertised for lease by auction. It has hitherto been kept unlet on account of its affording convenient approach to a timber wharf, but, the latter being decayed and no longer used, the land is available for letting.

Maungatapu.—A survey of a common boundary of this reserve, and the erection of fences between it and the contiguous Native property, will be necessary; but the expense of this can be borne by the forthcoming instalments of rent. On this holding, which is a separate trust to W. N. Searancke and C. Heaphy, Mr. Murray has paid since last entry the sum of £106 13s., being two years' rent up to 21st March, 1876, and 9s. in excess. The whole of this amount has been paid by Mr. Searancke to the Maungatapu Natives.

Auckland 10-per-cents—Hunua Purchase.—In my report for 1874 on Auckland 10-per-cents it is shown that, out of the proceeds of sales in the Hunua Block, the sum of £889 18s. 7d. had accrued and was available for certain beneficial purposes in connection with the people who had originally sold that land. Of that sum, £444 19s. 3½d. was set apart for school purposes. Honana te Irirangi and others of the sellers, however, represented, and with reason, that that amount was disproportionately large in respect to the number of their children. The sum was therefore reduced by half, and a moiety paid over to the sellers, as follows: Te Honana, Watene, Wi te Oka, and others, £52; Hori te Whetuku, £40; Te Retimana Waihou, £15; Mata Tiria, £50; Ihaka's children, £10: total, £122.

Province of Hawke's Bay.

Karaitiana Takamoana, the Native beneficially interested in the Pakowhai estate of 834 acres, which in 1870 he put into trust with Mr. S. R. M. Locke, and the Commissioner of Native Reserves, applied to the trustees to validate a sale made by him of a portion of the estate to Mr. McHardy, the tenant of the property, and owner of the contiguous land. It appeared that before Karaitiana put the land in trust he had sold to Mr. McHardy a part of it, without properly defining the boundary, the result of which was that Mr. McHardy's fence included thirty-nine acres of the reserve. Karaitiana considered that, as the land had been in McHardy's possession for several years and was improved, he was bound to give him a conveyance of it. For the thirty-nine acres, £730 was paid to Karaitiana, and the trustees validated the sale. The Natives interested in the Arai Native Reserve of 1,000 acres have asked that the land may be placed with trustees, for administration under "The Native Reserves Act, 1856." In 1872, the Waikokopu Block, of 730 acres, was brought under the Native Reserves Acts, by the late chief Ihaka Whanga. Contained within its boundaries were two small blocks of the respective areas of 16¼ acres and 21¼ acres, which had long since been sold to Captain Salmon, of Auckland. For economy of fencing and other reasons, it was very desirable that these blocks should again become merged in the larger estate; they were therefore bought from Captain Salmon. By means of the rent derived from the whole-reserve, the cost price (with interest) of the purchases was defrayed; and from the 13th April, 1876, the property has been clear of debt.

Province of Wellington.

Wainui Reserves.—Te Puka, sixty acres. This land has, at the request of the Natives interested been let to Mr. F. Smith for fourteen years, to date from 4th April, 1872, at a rental of £6 a year, to be paid to Aperahama Mira.

Wainui Town.—The unused sections of this land, with the exception of sections numbered from 1 to 25 and from 109 to 114, were, at request of the Natives interested, let to Mr. J. Smith for seven years, to date from 26th April, 1872, at a rental of £9 a year, to be paid to Ropata Tangahoe for distribution.

Pakuratahi—Hutt.—Messrs. Sennex and Whightman, whose tenders for Sections 3, 4, and 7 were accepted (vide my report of last year), having failed to pay rent or comply with the stipulations of letting, the reserves were again advertised in the Wellington papers for lease by tender. Mr. Gladman Smith's tender for the three sections of £60 a year for first seven years, £70 a year for second seven years, and £80 a year for the remainder of the term, was the-highest, and was accepted. Mr. Smith has paid six months' rent in advance.

Ramaroa.—The death of the Ngatitoa chief Ropata Hurumutu rendered it necessary to ascertain who were the Natives beneficially interested in this reserve. At a general meeting held at Porirua on the 1st March, 1876, called by Gazette notice, it was determined that the rent receivable from Mr. Mackay should be divided in equal shares amongst the following Natives: Rapehana te Otaota Ropata Tangahoe, Keritu, Ruihi, Huria te Waari, Haani Tunei, Aperahama Mira, Marekay Hare Reweti, Riria, Hema, Hiniri, Heta, Pumipi Pikewhera, and Parekahu Whakataupoki. The two first-named were appointed to receive the rent from the Commissioner, and distribute it.

Tararua—Takapuwahia.—At a general meeting held at Porirua on the 26th October, 1875, to determine who were the Natives beneficially interested in the occupation and rents of the reserves at Takapuwahia, it was decided that Wi Parata Stubbs and Raiha Puaha were the rightful owners of a piece of land adjacent to Section No. 108, lying between the Wellington Road and the Porirua Stream, and comprising about 83/4 acres; also that the rents of Reserves 1 and 2, let to Mr. King, should be divisible amongst twenty-seven named adult Natives and one child. The Natives beneficially interested in the Kumuore Reserve, Nos. 77, 88, 97, comprising 300 acres, at Makara, have placed the land with the Commissioner of Native Reserves for administration. The reserve is let to Mr. J. Bryant at £30 a year.

Komanga.—The Native Land Court having defined the interests of the Natives claiming, rent from this land, a re-arrangement of the leases became necessary. By agreement with the Ngatitoa, it has been arranged that Mr. Whitehouse, who has improved the land, shall have a renewal of term for twenty-one years, from 1st January, 1876—for the southern portion at £54 for first year, and £60 for remainder of term; and with the Ngatitama, that he shall have the northern portion for a similar term, at £40 a year. These arrangements give an aggregate rental of £100 a year, against £50 a year hitherto.

Sections 120 and 121, Hutt Valley.—These sections, comprising 197 acres were purchased by the Governor in 1851, in order to supplement the land available in the Hutt District for the use of the local Natives. They were let to Hemi Parai and others, on the condition that as soon as the amount of rent paid by them into the Treasury equalled the purchase-money the land should become absolutely theirs. In 1867 the full amount had been paid in. A difficulty was occasioned by the decease of some of the Natives, and the relative extent of share being undetermined. This having been got over, the land was proclaimed a Native reserve by Order in Council, on 17th August, 1876, and a Crown grant issued under "The New Zealand Native Reserves Act, 1856," to Hemi Parai, for the whole of the land. Deeds of conveyance of similar date with the grant were executed by Hemi Parai to the several Natives or their assigns who had subscribed the purchase-money, the land having been previously surveyed by me into twelve separate parcels for them respectively.

Manawatu—Palmerston North.—Suburban Sections 218, 219, and 220, of one acre each, have been let by public tender to H. S. Palmerson, at the following rate per section: First seven years, £1 per annum; second seven years, £1 10s. per annum; and £2 per annum for remainder of term of twenty-one years. Lessee to fence, plough, sow with grass, and erect on the land one cottage value £100, or two cottages value £50 each, within seven years. James Mitchell's public tender to rent Section 276, of one acre, for twenty-one years, has been accepted. The rent is to be £1 a year for first seven years and £1 10s. for remainder of term. He is to lay down grass, and leave on ground, a cottage of value of £50. Mr. Mitchell's term commences 1st June, 1876, and Mr. Palmerson's on 1st April, 1876. These reserves, with others at Palmerston mentioned in my report of last year, were purchased about ten years since for the Natives of Waiwhetu, with money derived from the sale of Native Reserves Nos. 1 and 4 at Wainuiomata. The latter were original reserved "tenths," but were too swampy for Native use. As with the advance of the Palmerston District the reserves became valuable and were let, it became necessary to determine who were the persons entitled to participate in the rents. A general meeting was therefore called, by Gazette notice, of all claiming to be interested beneficially in the reserves. On the 14th September last a full meeting of the local Natives took place in Wellington, when it was unanimously agreed that the following twenty-two persons were those entitled to share equally in the rental, namely: Huhana, Ramari, Karepa, Tini Wiremu, Paratene te Poho, Wi Hapu Pakau, Meri Pararaki, Epiha Karema, Hamuera, Miriana, Ripeka, Mohi, Hare Parata, Mohi Puketapu, Pitama, Maraia te Ua, Ihaia Porutu, Tipene, Hori Ngaukaka, Karena te Hau, Miri Kauamo, and Herapiko. It was also agreed that the Commissioner of Native Reserves should administer the trust, paying the money to Ihaia Porutu for distribution.

Pipitea Street—Part of Section 543.—A new lease has been granted, with the consent of the Governor in Council, to James Holt for this improved property. The former ground-rent was £12 per annum. By arrangement a professional valuator was called in, and on his valuation £18 a year was fixed as the rent on the new lease, for a term of twenty-one years from 1st July, 1875. The lease, has since been transferred to Mr. W. Freeman. For another portion of this reserve, comprising twenty-five perches, the Governor's consent in Council was obtained to a new lease, for a term of twenty-one years, to J. E. Smith, at a rental on a valuation of £6 a year, in place of £3 a year paid formerly. The following reserves in the Wellington District have been sold by the Natives. They were awards of Colonel McCleverty, and not under the control of, the Government, namely: Opau, near Cape Terawhiti—Section 12, containing sixty-six acres, to Mr. R. C. Cook for £33; and Section 14, of sixty acres, to Messrs. H. and W. Cook for £30. These lands are poor and broken, only fit for grazing purposes.

Pipitea Pa.—Subdivision No. 23 they have sold to Mr. W. Ebdon for £120. No. 11, containing 19½ perches, they have sold to Mr. J. Barry for £115; and No. 13, containing 20 perches, to Mr. J. Walden for £216. For sanitary and other reasons it was desirable that these pa lands in the town should cease to be Native property. The propriety of investing the proceeds of the sales was urged on the vendors, and in some instances successfully. The following lands not under Government control the Natives have been assisted to let, namely: Subdivision 14 of Pipitea Pa was let to Mr. John Styles, for twenty-one years, at £20 a year for first seven years, £25 a year for second seven years, and £30 a year for remainder of term. No. 15 was let to same tenant, for twenty-one years; at £20 a year for first seven years, £30 a year for second seven years, and £40 a year for remainder of term. No. 20 was let to Mr. D. Egan, for £40 a year for first seven years, £50 a year for second seven years, and £60 a year for remainder of term. No. 22 was let to the same tenant for twenty-one years, at £10 a year for first seven years, £15 a year for second seven years, and £20, a year for remainder of term. Honana te Puni has placed with Commissioner of Native Reserves the northern portion of No. 23, containing 33½ perches. It has been let to Mrs. Salmon for £20 a year.

Hutt District—Part of Section 20, containing 4, acres 3 roods 17 perches, has been let to Mr. D. Everest, for twenty years, at £12 a year for first eight years, and £22 a year for remainder of term.

Te Aro.—The following town acres, near Luxford's farm, Te Aro, have been let, after advertisement, to the highest tenderer, namely: Sections Nos. 864, 893, 1,098, 1,099, and 1,100, to G. W. Schwartz Mr, at a rental of £10 a year.

Plans.—In accordance with the direction contained in the 23rd clause of "The Native Lands Act, 1873," 189 plans of Native reserves have been made in this office during the year for the use of the district officers under that Act.

I attach a debtor and creditor account of receipts and expenditure for the period from 1st July, 1875, to 31st May, 1875.

CHARLES HEAPHY, Commissioner of Native Reserves.

Wellington,

31st May,-1876.

No. 139.Mr. ALEXANDER MACKAY to the UNDER-SECRETARY, Native Department.

Forwarding Draft of a New Native Reserves Bill. Wellington, 16th August. 1876.

SIR,—

I have the honour to inform you that, in conformity with the instructions contained in your message of the 11th ultimo, requesting me to draft a new Native Reserves Bill, certain alterations in the Act of 1873 have been prepared for embodiment in a fresh measure to be passed this session, with a view to remedy the unworkable character of the aforesaid Act. I append a copy of the proposed alterations, and beg to offer the following explanation of the principles and object thereof:—

It is generally admitted by those who have made themselves acquainted with the provisions of "The Native Reserves Act, 1873," that it is altogether too cumbrous in its operation for the practical and satisfactory administration of the Native reserve property throughout the colony. In the first place, clause 6 provides that an officer should be appointed under the name of "the Native Reserves Commissioner," and constituted a corporation sole. Under clause 8 this officer is invested with certain powers in regard to the estate to be placed under his charge, and under clause 11 the property is vested in him. By section 7 a Board of Commissioners is created, without whose consent no dealing can be effected with any portion of a Native reserve; and clause 19 superadds the necessity of the assent of the Governor being obtained to validate all dispositions of land that may be agreed on by the Board, thereby creating further difficulty and delay in the transaction of business, besides troubling the Governor and his Advisers with matters of local character, of which they can have but little knowledge, however clear the circumstances of each case are explained; while, at the same time, it lays the Government open to the accusation of favouritism in event of a lease being sanctioned in favour of a political supporter in preference to a person holding opposite views.

It will be seen, by the foregoing review, that the Commissioner to be appointed under the Act of 1873 would be placed in a very anomalous position, and that the restrictions placed on his actions are incongruous with the position he occupies in regard to the property. In the first place he is clothed with high powers, and then suddenly denuded of them by making his actions subordinate to a Board of Commissioners, of which he is to be a member with merely co-ordinate authority. The Act, moreover, admits of three modes by which the administration of the property may be impeded. (1.) The Board may be composed of individuals disinclined to subordinate themselves to the object which it is their business to effect; or, on the other hand, it may consist of person too pliable a nature. (2.) The Commissioner, as trustee of the estate, might refuse to indorse the action of the Board in the event of his being placed in the minority. (3.) The Governor might withhold his assent, under clause 19, to the issue of leases sanctioned by the Board.

Another grave objection is the constitution of the Board of Management. Besides opening a way to private designs, it does not effect the object in view—i.e., to give the Natives a voice in the management of their property. It would simply clothe A, B, and C, of the Native race, with the power to deal arbitrarily with the property of tribes to which they neither belong, nor have any sentiment in common. Had the Act of 1873 been brought into effective operation, this intermeddling with lands of other tribes by the Native members of the Board would have had the effect of rousing tribal jealousies; the Natives, as a race, being most impatient of interference in regard to landed property.

The Act of 1873 makes no distinction between the several classes of Native reserves which are clearly distinct in their nature and in respect of the rights which attach to them—namely, lands which are vested in the Governor, subject to the provisions of existing Acts, which have either been reserved by the New Zealand Company, in accordance with their scheme of colonization in the original settlements founded by them, or set apart by the Government for Native purposes, but over which the Natives have no control; and lands excepted from sales by the Natives which have come under the operation of "The Native Reserves Act, 1856," with the consent of the owners, or land of the same class which may hereafter be brought in the same manner under the operation of any law then in force for the administration of Native reserves. In regard to the latter class of lands, the persons beneficially interested might reasonably claim a fair voice in the management of properties so appropriated, and in the application or apportionment of the income derived from them; but, in regard to the former class of reserves, the handing over of these land to the management of the Natives would have been a violation of the principle on which they were originally set apart—i.e., that they should be held in trust, and administered by the Government for the benefit of the families of the ceding tribes.

In preparing the alterations for the amending Act, the whole of the reserves be effected by it have been classified, and a distinction made between lands over which the Natives have no control and lands over which it may be considered advisable to give them a voice in the management. A distinction has also been made in respect of lands which do not come under the operation of the Act, in order to clear up any doubt that might arise as to how certain classes of lands will be effected.

The Assembly, in passing the Act of 1873, having declared its belief that it was advisable that the Natives should have voice in the management of their lands, this right has been extended to them in the case of reserves of the fourth and fifth classes; but, in place of effecting this by Board of Management composed of three Natives and a European Commissioner, it is proposed to abolish the Board, and give the Commissioner to be appointed power to issue leases for any term, not exceeding twenty-one years for agricultural purposes, with the assent of the persons beneficially interested; and, with the same assent, to execute leases for building purposes for sixty years, subject to regulations to be made by the Governor. This will give the Natives concerned a direct voice in the management of their lands, without the intervention of a Board composed of persons holding views probably inimical to the interests of the owners of the land.

It may not be considered out of place to point out that the principle involved in regard to the intervention of the Native owners may probably be found to operate prejudicially to their interests by interfering with the bonâ fide occupation and improvement of the property, besides placing the Natives concerned at the mercy of designing persons having in view their own aggrandizement. The mode proposed also embodies an opposite principle to the law in operation in England in regard to the administration of landed property belonging to persons under a disability. In the case of lands belonging to an infant the guardian in socage can execute leases for years, and transact all affairs in his own name without any intervention or direction of the infant; the view being that the guardian derives his authority from the law and not from the infant; but, to prevent any abuse of such authority, the law requires the guardian to account to the infant on his coming to the age of fourteen. The Court of Chancery is also empowered to authorize leases of settled estates to take effect in possession or within a year from the making—for twenty-one years as to agricultural purposes, forty years as to mining and like leases, and for ninety-nine years as to building leases; and, in order to reduce expense, the Court may vest the power in trustees.

It has been contended of late that it is not expedient, in regard to the Native reserves, to keep the Natives in a state of pupillage, but that the management should be placed in their own hands. The proposition is no doubt a desirable one provided it could be carried out satisfactorily: but it will probably be conceded, on the matter being viewed dispassionately, that the Natives of the present day, although very much advanced in knowledge, can scarcely be considered competent to deal satisfactorily with large and Valuable estates in which the interests of a large class of European tenants are involved. In England the owners of settled estates under the control of the Court of Chancery are not looked on as being under a state of pupillage, because their estates are managed through the intervention of trustees. It will probably be found, by experience, that the most satisfactory and beneficial mode of dealing with the class of Native reserves that will be affected by the Act is to place them under the absolute management of individual trustees, who, without the power of alienation, might make such arrangements for letting them—subject to regulations to be made by the Governor in Council—as would secure the largest pecuniary return for the beneficiaries, to whom they should be required to account, as well as to the General Assembly.

In place of the powers conferred on the Governor under clause 19, it is proposed that the Commissioner should have power to issue leases for certain terms and purposes, subject to regulations to be issued by the Governor, instead of the needless reference of every lease to the Governor in Council. The advantage of empowering the Commissioner to issue leases, subject to certain restrictions, instead of by the mode prescribed by the Act of 1873, is obvious: the question becomes entirely severed from political influence; and, whilst the administration of the property would be subject at regular intervals to a thorough scrutiny, the officer having charge of the estates would be free from that series of references and interferences at every step which paralyses business. It will no doubt be generally admitted that the system for administering these trust estates should be simple, and free from all cause of unnecessary delay and uncertainty; for, if the procedure is to be made tardy or costly, or clogged by the necessity of referring frequently to the seat of Government, and especially or references backwards and forwards, it will most surely fail in its object—i.e., of utilizing those lands to the best advantage—as no bonâ fide occupant would care to subject himself to such a vexatious ordeal.

It is proposed, in regard to the issue of leases for building purposes, that, instead of making them at once for a term of sixty years, power should be given to issue leases renewable for three separate periods of \ years, subject to the payment during the term thereby to be granted of the best and most beneficial yearly rent to be incident to the immediate reversion of the premises that can reasonably be had at the making of such lease. This system, while securing a lengthened term to the occupants, will give an opportunity for periodically reassessing the rent at a sum more proportionate to the increased value of the property than could be obtained if, the lease was issued at once for the full term of years. It is quite impossible in a young country, where the value of, property fluctuates to the same extent as it does in New Zealand, to fix a fair rental for a lease to be issued presently for a term of sixty years. If an attempt to do so was made, it would probably result in one of two things—either in an exceptionably favourable or unfavourable arrangement for the persons concerned. In the one case, the owner would suffer a loss by his property being let at too low a rental; in the other, the tenant would suffer through an oppressive rent. In some respects long leases may be considered disadvantageous to the owner, but the system proposed above would subserve the interests of both landlord and tenant.

A new feature has been introduced into the provisions of the new Bill—namely, the power conferred on the Governor, with the consent of the persons beneficially interested in land let on long leases, to convert the renewable leasehold tenure into a tenure in fee, subject to the payment of an annual rent-charge in perpetuity, in cases where it would be beneficial so to do. The advantage of this plan, if adopted, would be the fixity of tenure secured to the tenant, coupled with the security of a certain and ascertained income in perpetuity to the owner. It is a more preferable mode to selling the land and investing the proceeds in other investments, as the persons beneficially interested would have a paramount security over the property for the payment of the annual rent-charge.

It is proposed, amongst other changes, to repeal clauses 35, 36, 37, 38, and 39 of the Act of 1873, empowering the Governor to appoint competent persons to ascertain the assent of the owners to bring land under the operation of the Act, and to make, it compulsory that all transactions of this nature shall be done through the Native Land Court. It is also further provided that, before any land is brought under the operation of the Act, a scheme of management shall be framed setting forth the wishes and intentions of the owners in regard to the future administration of such land. The Court is also required to determine the proportionate quantity to which each or all of the owners are severally entitled, with a view to assist the Commissioner to determine the proportion of income payable to each; and it is also further provided that, in all cases where doubts may arise in respect of the persons beneficially entitled to the proceeds accruing from any lands under the operation of the Act, it shall be the duty of every Native Reserves Commissioner to refer the question of succession to the Court.

It is proposed, also, to repeal clauses 45 and 46, and make other provisions in lieu thereof; also clauses 48 and 49, as the provisions contained therein usurp the functions of the Native Land Court, and are a repetition, to a certain extent, of clauses 89, 90, and 91 of "The Native Lands Act, 1873." Should it be deemed advisable that such power should be granted by the Assembly, it would be better to authorize the Court to deal with the cases comprised in the aforesaid clauses, and for that purpose the necessary provisions might be tacked on to the Native Grantees Succession Act proposed to be passed this session. Clauses 52 and 62 are also to be repealed.

With regard to the regulations to be made by the Governor under the provision of the Act, it is highly important, for the management of the Native reserves estates, that general directions should be laid down for the guidance of the officers in whose custody the properties may be placed, so as to introduce a regular principle of managing them for the future. I beg therefore to submit the following points for consideration. The general principles upon which the Native reserves ought to be let are as follow: That the lands should be let with a view to secure an immediate return, combined with the creation of a permanent and respectable property at the best improved rent which can reasonably be obtained at the time, the sufficiency of rent to be governed by the consideration on whom the onus of repairs or the cost of improvement is thrown; keeping in view also that the requisites of a good tenant are to be regarded as well as the mere amount of rent to be received. The length of leases granted ought to vary with the description of property proposed to be placed on the ground, or the uses to which it is devoted.

The following scale may serve as a general guide, subject to such variations as local circumstances may require, viz.: (1.) A lease for twenty-one years to be granted for arable or pastoral purposes, conditionally that the tenant makes permanent improvements on the property, within seven years from the date of his lease, to the value of £1 for every acre of such land. The whole of the property to be improved and cultivated during the currency of the term, and left enclosed with a substantial fence. The rent to represent a fair percentage, all circumstances considered, upon the estimated value of the land at the date of granting the lease. (2.) A lease for building purposes for twenty years, renewable for a further period of twenty years, with covenant to build and keep in substantial repair wooden houses to the value of years' purchase of the annual rent, if the tenant before the expiration of the first term should have erected wooden buildings of the required value, or have expended such sums in the improvement of any building which may be standing on such premises which shall be considered adequate to the required value. (3.) A lease for twenty years, renewable for two further periods of twenty years, provided the tenant shall erect buildings of brick or stone, to the value of years' purchase of the annual rent, during the currency of the first term. It should also be laid down as a general rule that the trust will not undertake to repair or improve or receive any such improvements at valuation at the expiration of the lease.

Some such terms as the above might constitute the general rules, but many cases would require to be considered separately and upon other grounds; and it will be especially necessary, in dealing with all existing arrangements, to take each case upon its own merits, and treat it as fairness and equity may require.

In the case of the tenants on the Native reserves in Westland, but more especially in regard to the tenantry at Greymouth, the above rule will have to be faithfully observed in respect of the implied right of renewal, as they have always been led to understand that a renewal of their leases would be granted them, at a moderately increased rent, at the end of the subsisting term, depending on the amount of annual rental hitherto paid. On the faith of this they have erected substantial buildings and improvements to the value of over £40,000, besides raising money for town improvements. This last expenditure, coupled with the outlay needed for other municipal works, has necessitated their levying a tax equal to 10 per cent. on the annual value of their properties. It will be easily understood, therefore, that the Act of 1873 caused considerable uneasiness to the tenants at Greymouth as to how the Board of Management would deal with the question of extended leases, as it was well known that the Natives to be elected for the position must be chosen from the persons who had openly stated their intention was to take possession of the property at the termination of the existing leases. It was looked on by the tenants as a grave injustice, and to a certain extent as a breach of faith with them, after having been led to suppose from the first that the estate would always be administered by the Government, that the Act permitted the handing-over of large and important interests to the mercy of two or three inexperienced Natives, who had no knowledge of the laws of property, and who were unable to appreciate equity. There is little doubt that if the Act of 1873 had been brought into operation the effect would have been most injurious to Greymouth, owing to the uncertainty that would have been created in regard to the renewal of existing leases: the consequence of this would have been that, instead of the tenants being inclined, as they now are, to erect a permanent class of buildings of brick and stone, provided they can obtain a longer term of lease, no further improvements would have been undertaken, and the buildings already erected would have been suffered to fall into decay; as it stands to reason that, if a tenant's interests in his improvements terminate with his tenancy, it cannot be expected that anything would be spent on the property towards the close of the term which would be of benefit to it.

These remarks point out that security of possession to the tenant is indispensable to the improvement of the property. It therefore follows that it is to a system of long leases that attention should be directed, as it is clear that the tenant could not invest money or improve the property unless he held a certain permanency of tenure for a sufficiently continued length of occupation to enable him to recoup the money he had laid out.

It is important that some basis of operation should be laid down for determining the amount or rent to be charged for the various descriptions of leaseholds to be dealt with, so that the fancy or caprice of individual officers may not be allowed to thwart the interests of either intending tenants or persons who may be entitled to renewals. No rule can be laid down with any degree of accuracy with respect to the adjustment of rent, but some general principles could be defined for the guidance of persons whose duty it would be to assess the property. It is unquestionably a most desirable object, although a matter of considerable difficulty, to ascertain the proper rent which premises, whether let for building purposes or farms, will bear in different situations, so as not to deprive the owner of a just remuneration on the one hand or oppress the tenant with too much rent on the other.

With regard to the rent of household property already in occupation and erected at the expense of the tenant, the amount of future rental could be ascertained by making an estimate of the original cost and adding a fair percentage upon the money expended if built within a certain time; and after the building had stood for so many years a certain percentage should be deducted. It will also be necessary to ascertain the value of the premises with and without the improvements in cases where the outlay has been made at the expense of the tenants, as it would be inequitable to make the tenants pay for what they themselves produced, without the lease had been made on those conditions. In England twenty years is the usual time for allowing a percentage upon the amount expended in the erection of buildings. The percentage allowed ranges from 5 per cent. to 7 and  $7\frac{1}{2}$  per cent., and the deduction is usually at the rate of  $2\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. In New Zealand a building constructed of the ordinary timber in use would require a good deal of repairs in ten years, especially buildings in gold-fields towns, many of which are of a very flimsy character. The rate of depreciation during the first few years is not so rapid as it is towards the end of a long period, say fifteen years; the rapidity of decay would of course depend upon the class of timber used and the degree of attention paid to the up-keep.

The fairest arrangement for assessing the amount of rental to be charged for an extension of the leases would be to arrange that an assessment of all buildings or other improvements erected or situated upon sections within the Native-reserve portion of the Town of Greymouth should be made before a renewal is granted. The value of the section without the improvements should also be estimated at the same time, as a basis for ascertaining the amount of rent. In event of any one but the occupant obtaining the renewal, the incoming tenant should be required to pay the original lessee the amount of valuation placed on the improvements; provided that the occupant had erected or made the buildings or improvements on the land in question, or shall be the representative or assignee of the person who had erected or caused to be erected or made such buildings or improvements. Two modes would have to be adopted in the Town of Greymouth. In the business part of the town, where the rents have ruled high from the commencement, the improvement made by the tenants ought not to be considered in calculating the rental to be paid for an extension of lease, as it would be manifestly unfair to make the tenant pay for improvements made at his own expense; but the case would be different in the back portion of the town. There the improvements may be considered the property of the trust, and should be included in any assessment to be made for the purpose of determining the future rent of the premises, the land having been let at a low rental with a view to encourage occupation, and to enable the tenant to repay himself for the outlay incurred in clearing and improving the property.

One mode in use in England for ascertaining the rent which farming land will bear is to calculate the gross value of the produce derived from the land and divide it into three parts: to set apart one portion for tillage and other incidental expenses, another for the maintenance of the tenant and family, and to consider the third, after deducting tithes and assessments, as the proper rent to be paid. In the case of grazing land, the expense of labour being much lighter, the proportion to be allowed for management would be smaller in order to allow a proper amount of rent for the landlord. Another mode of determining rent is to deduct all the expenses and outgoings, together with the maintenance of the farmer and his family, from the gross produce, to allow 10 per cent. upon the capital employed, and to consider the remainder as rent. Another and more recent mode is to select an acre of the best arable land on the farm, to value the gross produce as well as the labour attendant upon it over a period of four years, and, after taking an average of the profit, to deduct therefrom 10 per cent. for the farmer's stock and capital, the remainder being the rent. The same plan is adopted with regard to an acre of the worst land, and, when the rent of the best and worst land on the farm is thus found, the rent of the intermediate qualities of soil will be readily ascertained: the whole being then added, an average taken of the whole farm will give the rent per acre.

In order to fix the proper rent it is essential to inquire into local circumstances, such as the quality of the land, its capabilities for cropping, and the proportionate quantity of stock it will carry per acre; its contiguity to market; the value of produce; the amount of taxes to be paid, and whether to be borne by the lessor or lessee; the expense of labour; and whether the land lies compactly and is approachable by good roads. In India the Government has always been considered the owner of the soil, and the actual cultivator pays a rent or tax for the use of the land. The amount of rent paid by the tenant-farmer to the Government is fixed at the average money-value of half the average produce, after deducting cost of cultivation. For purposes of assessment the soils are divided into classes and subclasses: of the former there are 5, and of the latter 34. The first are classed as alluvial, ferruginous, calcareous, and arenaceous. The average yield per acre of staple grain crops is ascertained by careful experiment, and about one-fifth is deducted to compensate for the chance of a bad season. The average market price for twenty years, less 8 to 20 per cent. for dealers' profits, is then calculated, and, after estimations of cultivation expenses, half the net profit is taken as the amount due to Government. Allowance is also made for distance from market.

In justice to the original tenants on other Native reserves in Westland, as pioneers of settlement, or to the persons who have since purchased their interests, a renewal of the leases should be granted them at a rate of rental consistent with fairness, irrespective of improvements. The property being indebted for its improvement entirely to their capital, it follows, therefore, that the law by which the ownership of improvements follows the ownership of land would, in this instance, be in the highest degree unjust and inapplicable. In the case of these reserves, the tenants have improved the property on the full reliance of getting an extension of lease at the expiration of the subsisting term, the understanding being that, as the intention is to encourage the occupation of these lands in perpetuity with a view to secure a fair pecuniary return for the benefit of the persons beneficially concerned, there would be no difficulty in obtaining a renewal; yet on a change of management, without a definite arrangement is made with them to that effect, the land in all probability would be reassessed, when the best properties would have the rents raised, the land in fact being worth more in consequence of the tenants' improvements.

The proposition to put leases up to auction will be found as a rule to operate very injuriously to the beneficial occupation of land, as it offers no encouragement to occupiers to improve, in consequence of the insecurity of tenure beyond the subsisting term. Experience has shown that bonâ fide occupants of land are very rarely induced to bid at auction for leases without calculation, and the reason for this is quite obvious to practical men. The practice, if resorted to simply means that it enables persons of the speculative class—without any interest in the matter—to bid for leases, to the detriment of others who are more equitably entitled to consideration.

It is maintained by writers of the present time that there is too much of the old feudal felling still remaining in the relation between landlord and tenant. They maintain that the proper state of things is that it should be purely a pecuniary arrangement; that the landlord should let his land for a certain period and rent; and that there should be no trace of any other connection remaining than that which necessarily arises from mere business relations between them; in fact, that a fair bargain, honestly carried out on both sides, is the sum of duty reciprocally due between them. This view of the matter would probably meet with strong opposition from persons who regard tenants as merely the retainers or dependants of the owners of the land.

Besides the general regulations to be made by the Governor under the Act of 1873, it is highly important that power should be given to enable special regulations to be made in certain cases; as for instance, the Greymouth reserve, this property having been occupied and improved by the tenants under exceptional circumstances.

The main advantages to be secured to the tenants by the proposed regulations would be—The renewal of existing leases, at a rent proportionate to the increased value of the land, for a maximum term of twenty years, without a covenant to build, provided the buildings now situate on the land, representing the value to be fixed of the amount of improvements to be made during the term thereby to be granted, are deemed to be sufficient. In cases where the occupants are desirous of expending large sums of money on the improvement of their holdings in erecting durable buildings of brick and stone, the option should be given to take leases renewable for three periods of twenty years; both descriptions of tenure to be subject to a condition that the lessee, on application within a reasonable time, will grant to his sub-tenant a renewed lease for a proportionate term, at a rent increased by the amount of the increased rent of the original lease; the tenant-in-chief to have the pre-emptive right to the renewal, and, failing his acceptance, the second tenant to have the next right, conditionally that the improvements made at the expense of the tenant-in-chief—or by the sub-tenant in pursuance of any arrangement on that behalf—should be paid for at a price to be fixed by impartial assessment. The same rule to apply to the case of other tenants, until each had exercised their right of choice. In cases where the sub-tenant has made the improvements, and does not secure a renewal of his lease, the person coming into possession to pay for the value of the improvements made by such tenant, provided no allowance was made in the conditions of the lease. In that case, the value of the improvements should be paid to the person beneficially entitled. The chief object in letting these lands being to secure a present income for the persons beneficially interested, rather than a prospective advantage, it follows, as a matter of course, that the tenant in occupation at the expiration of the subsisting term—in cases where an equitable rent has been paid over the whole term—should, in event of not securing an extension of his lease, be entitled to the value of the improvements from the incoming tenant, provided such improvements have not been made in pursuance with some arrangement or obligation in that behalf. In the case of agricultural holdings, the outgoing tenant's interest in improvements is protected by the Imperial statute (14 and 15 Vict., c. 25) in force in the colony.

It will no doubt be admitted that one of the main objects to secure, with a view to beneficial occupation, is to make the title to land as simple as possible, and its transfer easy; by these means the value of all landed property would be prodigiously increased. For the sake of uniformity, and in order to facilitate the preparation as well as reduce the expense of executing the necessary leases for the occupation of the Native reserves, it would be advantageous in the interests of the tenants if a printed form of lease containing the usual covenants was prepared for use, with sufficient blanks for names and descriptions, and for the addition of special clauses if necessary. It will be found that the more liberal and simple the stipulations contained in the lease the better they will answer the purpose and advance the interests of all concerned, besides greatly enhancing the security the tenant has to offer for the use of money lent to him for the improvement of his leasehold.

Amongst other matters it would be advisable also to provide, in regard to the assessment of rent, that, should the tenant feel the amount fixed to be oppressive, he should have the option of referring the matter to the arbitrament of two impartial persons to be chosen in the usual way, the cost of such appraisal to be borne by the applicant. This would finally prevent an oppressive rent being fixed, and preclude the possibility of the officer having charge of the estate being the sole judge, in case of any diversity or difference occurring between himself and the tenant. One of the grievances complained of against absenteeism is that the agents too often have no good feeling towards tenants, but strive only to raise as large sums as possible for their principals, without regard to consequences.

I have, &c.,

ALEXANDER MACKAY, Native Commissioner.

The Under-Secretary, Native Department, Wellington.

Auckland.

THE Lot No. 176, at Remuera, containing eight acres, has been let on lease to Garrett Barry, for twenty-one years, from 1st January, 1877, at £10 a Year, and £5 paid in advance. This land is the property of Raiha Puaha, of Porirua, having been purchased as an investment for her late father, Rawiri Puaha. Lot No. 8, of Section 16, Remuera, Containing five acres, has been let by the year to Thomas Morrin, at a rent of £5. This land was purchased as an investment for the late chief Te Wharepu, of Waikato, and is the property of Ponui te Wharepu.

Waiuku.

Preparatory to the issue of new grants for thirty-seven reserves, under the provisions of "The Waiuku Native Grants Act, 1876," several surveys have been made by the Commissioner, of subdivisional boundaries, roads, and burial-places. The old grants were, pursuant to the Act, cancelled by Order in Council on the 1st June, 1877, and new grants in the terms of the Act are in course of preparation. Several surveys of small reserves, in fulfilment of old promises, have also been made by the Commissioner, preparatory to the confiscated block being handed over to the local administration. In conformity with the provisions of "The Waiuku Church of England Site Crown Grant Act, 1876," a Crown grant has been prepared for trustees for 1 acre 2 roods 20 perches of the Native reserve at the dragging-place, in the Village of Waiuku.

Wellington.

Otari.—At the desire of the Public Petitions Committee of the House of Representatives on the petition of J. and R. Kilminster, and at the direction of the Hon. the Native Minister, I purchased from Raniera Pokowaenga and others, of the Ngatitama, at Taranaki, fifty acres of the Otari reserve, situate between Kaiwhara and Makara, for the sum of £150. The Messrs. Kilminster had by mistake built a house on and improved about fifty acres of the reserve, believing it to be their own land. The sum, which was a reasonable one, was supplied by Mr. J. Kilminster, to whom a conveyance of the fee-simple of the land has been made by the Natives. The reserve is one entirely in the management of the natives. The Civil Commissioner (Major Brown) gave valuable assistance in arranging the payment.

Hutt.—I have purchased for the sum of £6 18s. the railroad, site, comprising 1 acre 1 road 27 perches of land in Section 121, Upper Hutt—a private estate of Hemi Parae and others.

Pitone.—A block of 6 acres 2 roods 20 perches, in Sections 1, 2, and 3, at Pitone, was necessary to the purposes of the Wellington and Masterton Railroad, for workshop sites, &c. The negotiation was very protracted; eventually the sum of £662 10s. was accepted, and a conveyance executed by Henare te Puni and others to the Queon for the land.

The above purchases are all on lands over which the Natives have entire control.

The Natives have sold the following reserves, also in their own management, to private parties:—

Ohariu.—No. 16, subdivision of Block 113, containing sixty acres, for £30, to R. C. Cook, on the 22nd May, 1876; and No. 10, of sixty acres, to Messrs. Cook, for £55, on the 7th September, 1876. The land, which is poor and precipitous, is near Opau Bay.

Tinakori.—No. 8, Orangi Kaupapa, containing 3 acres and 7 perches, to E.H. Hunt, for £100. No. 9, Orangi Kaupapa, Same area, to E. H. Hunt, for £100.

Hutt.—No. 5, Te Mome, containing 11 acres 2 roods 8 perches, to Mr. J. Barber, for £250. Section 120 (part of), from Hemi parae to J. C. Mabey, for £276 15s. 6d.

Wellington City.—Te Aro Pa, Lot No. 10, containing 22½ perches, to F. P. and A. Simeon, for £25 a year during life. Lot 3, Containing 19 perches, to J. O'Shea, for £300. Lot 23, containing 6 perches, to J. Ashdown (a half-caste relative of grantee), as a free gift.

Leases have been arranged for the Natives of the following lands, viz.:—

Johnsonville.—Section No. 9, containing 152 acres, to James Futter, for twenty-one years, at £106 a year.

Ohariu.—Native reserve, comprising parts of Sections 7 and 8, containing 145 acres 1 rood, for twenty-one years, to Thomas Bould, at a rent of £108 18s. 9d. a year for seven years, and £123 9s. 3d. a year for remainder of term.

The Natives have themselves let the following reserves, viz.:—

Pipitea Pa.—Lot No. 6, containing 20 perches, to Mr. W. Ebdon, at £10 a year for seventeen years.

Te Aro Pa.—Lot No. 3, 19 Perches, to Mr. C. L. Hart, for twenty-one years, at £30 a year. Lot No. 5, 6 perches, to Mr. C. L. Hart, for twenty-one years, at £5 a year. Lot Nos. 6 and 9, containing 3 perches and 29 perches, for twenty-one years, at £15 a year, to Mr. C. L. Hart. Lot No. 11, containing 3 perches, for twenty-one years, for £15 a year for the first seven years, and £25 a year for the remainder of term, to Messrs. Ross and Thompson. Lot No. 27 (part of), for twenty-one years, at £30 a year for the first fourteen years, and £40 a year for remainder of term, to C. O. Clayton.

Tinakori.—Lot No. 10, Orangi Kaupapa, containing 3 acres and 7 perches, for fourteen years, to Mr. D. Williams, at £13 a year.

Hutt.—Section 36 (part of), 4 acres and 20 perches, for five years, at £20 12s. a year, to Mr. T. Baxter. Section 1 (part of), 3 acres, for twenty-one years, at £20 a year, to A. P. Stuart. Section 58 (part of), 3 acres and 34 perches, for twenty-one years, at £6 a year, to Mr. W. R. Welch. Section 58 (part of), 5 acres 2 roods 10 perches, for ten years, at £5 a year, to Mr. W. R. Welch. Lot No. 16 (part of), Pitone, containing 2 acres 3 roods 14 perches, for twenty-one years, at £20 a year, to Mr. D. Everest.

Otari.—Part of the Native reserve, containing 30 acres 1 rood 2 perches, to Mr. F. Rumsey, at £15 and £20 a year on a term of twenty-one years.

Ohariu.—About ten years since Paiuru Rangikatata was promised a Crown grant for twenty-five acres in section 12, Ohariu Valley, on condition of his building a cottage and residing there. The conditions having been performed, the grant has been issued to him.

Tauranga.

Te Papa.—The Native reserves Nos. 14 and 114, in the Parish of Te Papa, containing 159 acres 2 roods 20 perches, have been let, after advertisement, for twenty-one years, to R. C. Jordan, at £25 a year. This section is much cut up by roads crossing it, which deteriorates form its value as a farm, and has, until lately, prevented its letting.

All the reserves under my management having now been let, mostly on twenty-one years' leases, and the work of the department brought into system and simplified, I have been able to recommend that my salary as Commissioner of Native Reserves should be reduced. This has been done—from £500 to £100 a year—taking effect from the 1st of April last. I append a debtor and creditor account of my receipts and expenditure for the year.

I have, &c.,

CHARLES HEAPHY, Commissioner, Native Reserves.

The Under-Secretary, Native Department,
Wellington,

7th July 1877.

Schedule

The DEPUTY SURVEYOR-GENERAL to the Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY.

Respecting Insertion of the Ten-per-cent. Clause in Native Deeds. Surveyor-General's Office, Auckland, 3rd April 1854.
SIR,—

With reference to your letter of the 31st ultimo, requesting to be informed on what occasion and under what authority the clause was inserted in the Native deeds undertaking, on the part of the Crown, that 10 per cent of the proceeds of the sale of land shall be applied to Native purposes, I have the honour to report that the occasion was upon the first negotiation for the Hikurangi Block, and the authority is that of His Excellency the Governor-in-Chief given to the Surveyor-General. A copy of the clause, as delivered by His Excellency to the Surveyor-General, is enclosed.

I have, &c.,

READER WOOD, Deputy Surveyor-General.

The Hon. the Colonial Secretary.

Enclosure.

COPY of an ADDITIONAL CLAUSE ordered by His Excellency the GOVERNOR-IN-CHIEF to be inserted in the NATIVE CONVEYANCES of LAND to the CROWN.

"It is further agreed by the Queen of England on her part that there shall be paid for the following purposes—that is to say, for the founding of schools, in which persons of our race may be taught; for the construction of hospitals, in which persons of our race may be tended; for the payment of medical assistance for us; for the construction of mills for us; for annuities for our chiefs, or for other purposes of a like nature, in which Natives of this country have an interest,—ten per cent., or ten pounds out of every hundred pounds, out of any moneys from time to time received for that land when it is re-sold."

A true copy.

READER WOOD, Deputy Surveyor-General.

Surveyor-General's Office,

3rd April 1854.

Minute.

As Mr. Commissioner McLean has arrived in this district, the best course, I think, will be at once to relieve the, Surveyor-General from the duty of making purchases of land from the Natives, and to instruct the Commissioner to make purchases, absolutely and unconditionally; but not to make any arrangements which might, be looked upon as an evasion or an infringement of the New Zealand Constitution Act, or of the Land Regulations of the 4th of March, issued by Governor Grey.—WM. SWAINSON, Attorney-General. 26th April, 1854.

No. 2. The Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY to the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.

In reference to the Five-per-Cents introduced into Deeds of Sale. Government House, Wellington, 20th December 1855.

SIR,—

I have the honour, by direction of His Excellency the Governor, to request you to be good enough to report, for his information, on the nature of the [unclear: arrangement] made by the late Governor, Sir G. Grey, by which 5 per cent. from the proceeds of certain lands has been reserved for the Natives who originally sold the land to the Government. I am also to request you to state to what extent such a contract is now in force, in what provinces, and over what lands, and whether any sum due on that account is included in the £13,000 estimated by you as necessary to complete purchases of land already made. His Excellency would also wish to know whether a contract of that kind is now being made in Native land purchases; and, if so, His Excellency is of opinion that it should not be repeated in future negotiations, and requests you to be good enough to issue instructions accordingly.

I have, &c.,

W. GISBORNE, (For the Colonial Secretary.)

D. McLean, Esq., Chief Commissioner.

Chief Commissioner's Office, Wellington, 16th January 1856.

THE blocks of land upon which 5 per cent is payable in the Wellington Province are,—(1) Block No. 1, west side of Wairarapa Lake, estimated in all at 200,000 acres; but out of this there can be considered as immediately available for sale not more than 20,000 acres; (2) Block No. 2, east side of lake, 27,000 acres; (3) Block No. 3, McMaster's Run, containing of saleable land, say, 20,000 acres; (4) Block No. 4, Tauherenikau, 8,000 acres; (5) Wilson's Run, on the coast, 7,000 acres; (6) Manawatu Block, 16,000 acres; (7) Part of Block No. 1, 7,000 acres; (8) Waiorongo, 6,000 acres; (9) Tautane, 8,000 acres; (10) Wharekaka, 11,000 acres; (11) Part of Whareama Block, 4,000 acres; (12) At Ahuriri, 6,000 acres: total, 140,000 acres. It is not possible, until an actual survey is made, to give any more correct estimate of the extent of land which will, within the next ten years, be sold out of the blocks bearing 5 per cent.; but, in the absence of such surveys, the above statement is as near an approximation as I can furnish.

DONALD
MCLEAN, Chief Commissioner.

NOTE.—I consider, from what I know of the various districts, that the above estimate is a very fair one.—F. D. BELL, Commissioner of Crown Lands.

No. 4. The CHIEF COMMISSIONER to HERBERT S. WARDELL, Esq., R.M.

Wairarapa.—Respecting the Five-per-Cents on Sale of Land. Native Land Purchase Department, Auckland, 6th June, 1861.

SIR,—

At the date of purchase of certain lands in the Wairarapa District a clause was inserted in the deed of conveyance guaranteeing to the Native sellers that the sum of 5 per cent. of the net profit of sales by the Government should be appropriated for their benefit by certain persons to be appointed by the Governor of New Zealand. I have the honour to inform you that, in accordance with this promise, His Excellency the Governor has directed me to request that you will, in conjunction with Mr. Malcolm Frazer, enter upon an investigation of the question in order to the fulfilment of the terms above referred to. The Commissioner of Crown Lands and Receiver of Land Revenue at Wellington will be able to afford you much necessary information; and a statement of particulars, together with the amounts which have from time to time been advanced to the Natives, will be supplied to you per steamer "Stormbird" on her return to Wellington.

I have, &c.,

DONALD
MCLEAN, Chief Commissioner.

Herbert S. Wardell, Esq., R.M., Wairarapa.

No. 5. The CHIEF COMMISSIONER to H. S. WARDELL, Esq., R.M.

Wairarapa.—Further Information on the Five-per-Cents supplied. Native Land Purchase Department, Auckland, 07th June, 1861.

SIR,—

With further reference to the question of 5 per cent. on profits arising out of the sale of certain lands in the Wairarapa District, adverted to in my letter of yesterday's date, and by which it was intimated to you that further particulars would be supplied for your information and guidance in effecting a settlement with the Natives, I have the honour herewith to transmit to you—(1) A memorandum showing the blocks upon which the 5-per-cents are chargeable; (2) A copy of the clause in one of the deeds of conveyance, dated 1st September, 1853, showing the purposes and objects of this arrangement; (3) A statement by the Accountant of this department showing the sums of money which have been already advanced to the Natives on account of the Five-per-Cent. Fund. His Honour the Superintendent of the Province of Wellington will be requested to instruct the Commissioner of Crown Lands and the Receiver of Land Revenue to afford you their assistance and co-operation, as they are in possession of all the information as to the extent of land sold upon which the 5 per cent. is chargeable, and Mr. Frazer will be enabled to distinguish as to the boundaries of each block subject to this charge.

You will be good enough, in carrying on this investigation, to confine yourselves to the question of the amount chargeable upon each block, together with a statement of the total sum due to the Natives under the promise made to them as a part of the terms of purchase of the blocks herein referred to. The disposal of the money thus realized will be an after consideration, and subject to special instructions from His Excellency the Governor.

I have, &c.,

DONALD
MCLEAN, Chief Commissioner

Herbert S. Wardell, Esq., R.M., Wairarapa.

No. 6. The CHIEF COMMISSIONER to H. S. WARDELL, Esq., R.M.

Wairarapa.—£260 paid in Support of Native School at Papawai. Native Land Purchase Department, Auckland, 19th June, 1861.

SIR,—

The sum of £260 advanced on the application of the Bishop of Wellington in aid of the Papawai School having been charged against the Five-per-cent. Fund accruing out of the sale of certain blocks of land in that district (Wairarapa District), and it being necessary that any charge on that fund should be made with the concurrence of the Natives interested, I have the honour to request that you will be good enough to ascertain from the Natives whether they fully concur in the appropriation of the above-named sum of £260 to the purpose specified by the Bishop of Wellington.

I have, &c.,

DONALD
MCLEAN, Chief Commissioner.

H. S. Wardell, Esq., Wellington.

No. 7. The CHIEF COMMISSIONER to the COMMISSIONER OF CROWN LANDS, Wellington.

Wairarapa.—Respecting the Five-per-Cents on Lands sold. Native Land Purchase Department, Auckland, 7th June, 1862.

In acknowledging the receipt of your letter of the 4th February last, enclosing an approximate return of the gross receipts for land sold within the blocks subject to the 5-per-cents at Wairarapa, I have the honour to state that I quite agree with you that it would be desirable to have some fixed datum as to the deductions to be made for survey; and that proposed by you, under Sir George Grey's regulations of March, 1853—namely, of an allowance of five acres for every hundred acres surveyed—appears quite reasonable. Beyond survey expenses, I do not consider that any further deductions should be made, nor do I perceive that it is contemplated by you that such should be the case. The Natives disposed of their land at a much cheaper rate in consequence of their being promised so much of the proceeds, the sums accruing have not been paid to them annually, and, as they expect a considerable amount in the shape of 5-per-cents, any further deductions from the amount they are to receive would occasion disappointment, and they could not understand why any deductions beyond the actual expenses of survey should be made. The Whareama Block, to which you refer in your letter, is Block No. I., on which Mr. Meredith's homestead is situated. The estimated extent of the block is about four thousand acres.

I have, &c.,

DONALD
MCLEAN, Chief Commissioner.

Wm. Fitzherbert, Esq., Commissioner of Crown Lands, Wellington.

No. 8. EXTRACTS from NATIVE DEEDS of CONVEYANCE. Auckland.—Ten-per-Cents secured to Natives.

EXTRACTS from Native deeds of conveyance securing for the benefit of the original owners 10 per cent. of the proceeds of the sale of certain lands in the Province of Auckland:—

Piako Block.—Situated on the Piako River. "The boundaries are these: On the east," &c. "It is further agreed to by the Queen of England on her part that there shall be paid for the following purposes—that is to say, for the founding of schools in which persons of our race may be taught, for the construction of hospitals in which persons of our race may be tended, for the payment of medical attendance for us, for the construction of mills for us, for annuities for our chiefs, or for other purposes of a like nature in which the Natives of this country have an interest—10 per cent., or ten pounds out of every hundred pounds out of any moneys from time to time received for this land when it is resold." Dated 5th November, 1853. Amount paid to the Natives, £50.

Hikurangi Block (Manukau District).—Akitai, Ngatiwhatua, and Ngatiteata Tribes. Ten-per-cent. clause, the same as that in the last-mentioned deed. Dated 10th November, 1853. Payment to Natives, £1,100.

Te Pae o te Rangi Block (Manukau District).—Kawerau Tribe. Ten-per-cent. clause, same as the former. Dated 18th March, 1854. Payment to Natives, £800.

Te Pu o Tahinga Block (Manukau District).—Akitai and Ngatiwhatua Tribes. Ten-per-cent. clause, same as the former. Dated 23rd March, 1854. Payment to Natives, £100.

Pukapuka Block (Remuera, near Auckland).—Ngatiwhatua Tribe. Ten-per-cent. clause, the same as that in the former deeds. Dated 17th March, 1854. Payment to Natives, £270.

Remuera.—Paora and chiefs of Ngatiwhatua Tribe. Ten-per-cent. clause, the same as that in the former deeds. Dated 22nd March, 1854. Payment to Natives, £500.

Hunua Block (Opaheke District, Drury).—Ngatitai Tribe. Ten-per-cent. clause, the same as in the former deeds. Dated 30th March, 1854. Payment to Natives, £900.

Ruakaka Block (Whangarei District).—"Now, we, Pou te Karoro, Te Manai, and all our tribe," &c.: "10 per cent. of the proceeds of the sale of this land to be expended for the benefit of the aborigines." Dated 16th February, 1854. Payment to Natives, £350.

Mangawhai Block (Whangarei District).—"It is further agreed that 10 per cent. of the proceeds of the sale of this block of land by the Queen is to be expended for the benefit of the Natives:" Dated 3rd March, 1854. Payment to Natives, £1,060.

No. 9. The CHIEF COMMISSIONER to the Hon. the NATIVE MINISTER.

Wairarapa.—Recommending that Mr. Commissioner Cooper be appointed to arrange about the Payment of the Five-per-Cents. Port Napier, 31st December, 1862.

SIR,—

I have the honour to request that an authority may be granted to send Mr. Cooper to the Wairarapa, to arrange with the Natives for the settlement of the moneys due to them as 5-per-cents. The Wairarapa having formed part of Mr. Cooper's district as Land Purchase Commissioner, I conclude that he is well qualified to undertake the duties. The first step to be taken is to ascertain the quantity of land sold out of blocks subject to the 5-per-cents, and it may be more convenient, in cases where the whole block is not disposed of, to pay the Natives a fixed amount for any future claims they may have under this head. It is probable I may meet the Superintendent of Wellington, in a few days to discuss this and other questions connected with the purchase of land.

I have, &c.,

DONALD
MCLEAN, Chief Commissioner.

The Hon. the Minister for Native Affairs.

MEMORANDUM. for the Hon. the MINISTER for NATIVE AFFAIRS.

Wairarapa.—Respecting the Five-per-Cents.

I FORWARD the result of the inquiries of Messrs. Swainson and Fitzherbert into the question of the Wairarapa Five-per-cent. Funds. I forwarded them on the 2nd instant to the Superintendent for remark, and his Honour has to-day returned them to me without remark. I suggest that, as a first step, the voluminous papers be at once forwarded to the Auditor-General for examination and report.

WALTER MANTELL.

Wellington,

8th May, 1863.

Memorandum.

In reference to the advances stated to have been made to Natives on account of the 5-per-cents (amounting to £896 1s. 7d.), I am of opinion that all presents to Native chiefs, and all sums paid on account of lands other than those of the original blocks, be struck out as being payments not chargeable on the fund, according to the terms of the original grants, and that the sum of £260 for school purposes be charged to the fund for school purposes.—CHARLES KNIGHT, Auditor.

No. 11. The ASSISTANT NATIVE SECRETARY to Mr. Commissioner KEMP.

Wairarapa.—To arrange the Five-per-Cent. Question with the Natives. Native Office, Wellington, 21st October, 1870.
SIR,—

I have the honour, by direction of Mr. McLean, to request you to proceed to Wairarapa to arrange the long-standing 5-per-cent. question with the Natives of that district. You will probably find it necessary to give some notice of the time and place at which you will hold a meeting, in order to give all parties interested time to attend. The Government wish you, if possible, to make arrangements with the leading chiefs to receive the amount still due, leaving them to distribute it among their following in such manner as they may deem fair and proper. It should be explained to the chiefs that their claim to this allowance has never been lost sight of by the Government, as they must know from the several advances that have from time to time been made to them on account of these moneys. Mr. McLean concludes that you have armed yourself with all necessary information on the subject of this question, and feels assured that your intimate knowledge of the Wairarapa Natives will enable you to bring this long-pending question to a satisfactory and final conclusion. I enclose the copy of a letter addressed to Mr. Wardell, R.M., requesting him to render you every assistance in the matter on which you are engaged.

I have, &c.,

H. HALSE, Assistant Under-Secretary.

H. T. Kemp, Esq., Wellington.

Mr. Commissioner KEMP to the ASSISTANT UNDER-SECRETARY, Native Department.

Wairarapa.—Reporting the Payment of £2,000 on account of the Five-per-Cents due. Wellington, 16th November, 1870.

SIR,—

I have the honour to make the following report for the information of the Hon. the Native Minister, in reference to the payment of the sum of £2,000 on account of 5-per-cents due to the Natives of Wairarapa:—

- Having, through you, received Mr. McLean's instructions on the 21st of October, I started from here on the 22nd, and, after a most unfavourable journey, arrived at Greytown on the evening of the same day.
- Notices having been already sent round by the chief Ngairo, at Mr. McLean's request, the Natives began to assemble on Monday, the 24th, but it was not until the 28th that the Natives from the coast arrived; and, after giving them a day's rest, the meeting was formally opened on Saturday, the 29th, the Town Hall having been engaged for the occasion.
- In the interval, however, I had held several important semi-official conversations with the different claimants interested, and in this way had an opportunity of ascertaining their opinions and testing their views with reference to the long-looked-for payment.
- The meeting having been formally opened by Mr. Wardell, who, as Resident Magistrate of the district, presided, I availed myself of this early introduction to bring before the chiefs and people generally the important fact that the "koha," introduced by Mr. McLean into some of the early land purchases, was a term embracing many advantages which he then contemplated, and, agreeably with the interpretation afforded by their own language, really implied other benefits accruing from or arising out of the arrangements which had then been made between the Government and themselves, and that under these circumstances they were now invited to take a more enlarged view of the measure, and not to confine it too closely to the mere money payment. I was led to adopt this course from the fact that their hopes in the latter case would very likely meet with some disappointment; and I added, in support of this assertion, that I had myself, after an absence of twenty years, returned to see these provisions in great part realized, and that they were, in common with their neighbours and friends, joint holders of property which otherwise must have remained a comparative wilderness and waste. These few remarks were accepted by them in good spirit, and I believed paved the way to a friendly negotiation.
- The sittings were resumed from day to day until Wednesday, the 2nd, when, after several addresses on the part of the chiefs, it was unanimously agreed to appoint a select committee to sit on the evening of the same day, with a view to bring the matter to a final settlement.
- In the course of the debates I explained to them the views of the Government generally, and that for the future it was proposed to make the payments as they accrued, every three or five years, and in this way to supply them with a simple and intelligible return of what might become due on each block; that up to the 30th June, 1869, a considerable sum had accumulated, but that from that amount certain sums had to be deducted on account of mills, schools, &c., intended in the first instance for their common benefit, but which had unfortunately proved to be, in a great measure, and from many unforeseen causes, a comparative failure, thus leaving in their favour a balance of something over £2,000.
- The objection raised to the deduction of this amount was very strong indeed, especially with regard to the amount charged against the mills, which they protested against on the ground that they were always understood to have been gifts from the Government, and as an especial acknowledgement for the willing manner in which, at the request of Sir George Grey, they had, while enjoying a large annual rental, relinquished that income for the public good, and transferred the land to the hands of the Crown.
- The Committee met at 7 p.m. by appointment, and, after a long but earnest discussion, it was at length decided to propose that the sum of £2,000 be accepted, on the understanding that simple and approximate returns be furnished to them of the lands sold in each block to the 30th June, 1869.
- This resolution on the part of the chiefs having been communicated to the Hon. the Native Minister on the day succeeding, it was approved, and the money received at Featherston on Saturday, the 5th.
- On Monday, the 7th, the Natives all assembled in the Town Hall, when it was announced that the money had arrived, and that it would now devolve upon the people as a body to say by whom, as representing the several blocks, the different amounts were to be received, bearing in mind at the same time that many of the original sellers have died, and that others, perhaps, had left the district. This arrangement occupied the remainder of the day, and on Tuesday morning, by adjournment, the parties appointed to receive the money came forward in the presence of the people and signed the receipts, one small amount for £100, on account of Masterton, alone remaining. This was done on the day after, and the arrangements finally completed.
- Looking at the length of time that had elapsed; the interval in the dates of some of the deeds; the complication of returns; the payments made at different times in advance, without reference to any particular block; the belief of the Natives that a very much larger amount was really due out of the land sales: these all contributed to render the possibility of satisfying the whole of the claimants a somewhat difficult and onerous duty. In this, however, I think we have succeeded, and it is only due to the chiefs to say that, as soon as the annoyance and irritation consequent upon finding that the amount had fallen so far short of their expectations had subsided, they united with me in doing their share of the work, by seeing that the division and subdivision was fairly and equitably carried out. To Mr. Wardell I am exceedingly indebted, not only for his advice and co-operation throughout, but for the local knowledge he was so well able to supply (socially and politically as bearing on the question), without which the apportionment of the money might have led to annoyance and discord among the Natives. I trust, therefore, that the arrangements thus made will, as a whole and in detail, meet with the Native Minister's approval.

- Finally, the Natives urge that for the future no advances whatever may be made to any one on account of this fund, and that the time for any future payments may be so fixed at Greytown and Masterton as to come within the season when a better supply of food can be obtained, without cost or inconvenience to Government or themselves.

As this has been the largest meeting of the kind in this district since the foundation of the colony, it gives me satisfaction to report that no serious instance of disorder occurred, and I noticed with pleasure that the settlers and Natives seemed to be living united and in harmony with each other. I beg to attach herewith an abstract of the sums paid on each block, with receipts for the whole amount furnished from Wellington, all of which have been duly signed and witnessed.

I have, &c.,

H. T. KEMP.

H. Halse, Esq., Assistant Under-Secretary, Native Department.

Enclosure.

ABSTRACT of BLOCKS over which the FIVE-PER-CENTS have been paid in the DISTRICT of WAIRARAPA, to the 30th of June, 1869, as per Receipts herewith attached.

Nos. 1 and 7, Purakirae, £250; No. 2, Turanganui, £200; No. 3, Tuhiterata, £200; No. 4, Tauherenikau, £430; No. 5, Pahaua, £250; No. 6, Manawatu (Makakahi), £100; No. 8, Whareama (No. 1), £110; No. 9, Makoura (Masterton), £100; No. 10, Wharekaka and Pouhangina, £250; No. 11, Whareama (No. 2), £110: total, £2,000.

Report on the Payment of Balances on the Wairarapa Five-per-Cents. Wellington, 31st December 1873.
SIR,—

I have the honour to report that, in pursuance of your instructions, I have paid the Natives of the Wairarapa the balances of 5-per-cents due to them on the 30th September last. These payments, relating to accounts that have been running from fifteen to twenty years, render it, perhaps, necessary to recall the circumstances (well known, however, to you) under which the liability arose. I may premise, then, that previous to the year 1853 large tracts of land in the Wairarapa had been rented by the settlers as runs direct from the Natives. This practice was in contravention of the provisions of the Land Purchase Ordinance. It was desirable that settlement should be on a more regular basis, and many of the tenants felt the inconvenience of their precarious tenures. Accordingly, in 1853 a vigorous effort was made by the Government to obtain land at the Wairarapa. Many large blocks were purchased, the payment being made to extend over a period of several years. In 1860 the Commissioner was thus able to report the completion of the purchase of 957,864 acres, the area including most of the rental holdings; but as the extinction of the Native title involved the sacrifice of the rents that the Natives had previously enjoyed, it was agreed between the Chief Land Purchase Commissioner (with the sanction of the Government) and the Natives that in addition to the purchase-money paid down, 5 per cent. of the net proceeds of land sales within certain of the blocks should revert to them or be expended in their benefit. The blocks bought under this agreement were the following: Turakirae, comprising 66,760 acres; Turanganui, 30,253 acres; Tuhitarata, 20,900 acres; Wharekaka and Puhangina, 28,398 acres; Moroa and Tauherenikau, 61,400 acres; Makoura, 2,291 acres; Whareama (No. 1), 11,583 acres; Whareama (No. 2), 12,931 acres; Pahaua, 107,000 acres; Manawatu, 45,550 acres: in all, 387,066 acres. In fulfilment of the agreement an account was entered at the Treasury, by which 5 percent. of the net proceeds (the expense of surveys having previously been deducted) was carried to the credit of a separate trust fund for the benefit of the Native sellers.

In 1869 the liability of the Province of Wellington, existent and prospective, for the payment of the 5-per-cents from its land revenue; was commuted by the payment of the sum of £1,200 to the General Government. In the first instance certain expenses of schools and the gratuities given to chiefs were, in virtue of agreement, charged against this fund; but, for reasons that it is beyond the scope of this report to specify, it was found proper to place these charges against other funds. The Natives had freely given up a considerable income in rents; and, as it was not desirable that they should have cause to regret their act, as few deductions as possible were consequently made from the amount that had accumulated. It must not be considered from this that the Natives were underpaid for their land: such does not appear to have been the case, and in a document attached to this report it will be seen that they now admit having received "a high relative price" for their lands. From time to time sums of money were drawn by different chiefs, and flour-mills were given or built for them. Unfortunately, in one instance, where the Natives were given the purchase-money for a mill, the intention was not advantageously carried out by them.

In 1870 Mr. Commissioner Kemp paid the Natives the sum of £2,000 on account. He did not, they state, furnish them with any accounts, or inform them of the balances which remained. Two other sums have been paid since that date.

On receiving your instructions to pay the Natives what was owing, I found that; up to the 30th September, 1873, the amount at credit of the account in the Treasury was £596 3s. 9d. I left Wellington with that amount on the 26th November, and, after transacting some Trust-Commission business at Masterton, met the Natives at Greytown, on the 5th December where the chief Manihera te Rangitakaiwaho, who had been directed to assist me, had collected the various chiefs of the sellers. Mr. Wardell, R.M., kindly presided. I found that certain Europeans had been exercising a pernicious influence with the Natives, in misrepresenting the object and extent of the deductions that had been made from the gross proceeds. The Natives found that the amount I had with me (£596 3s. 9d.) was very small in comparison with the sum of £2,000 paid to them in 1870; and, as land had risen in value, population was coming in, and the place prospering, they could not understand how the amount could be so small. Their counsellors had pointed out these things, but had not told how the income must necessarily be a decreasing one, as the balance of unsold land became annually less, or how the high prices ruling were on private, not Government, land sales. Mistrusting, then, to some extent the accounts, a committee had been organized to scrutinize my figures in regard to areas sold and moneys paid. The committee consisted chiefly of members of the old Hauhau party, and had, as their spokesman, a man who had been active a short time since with Henare Matua at Hawke's Bay and elsewhere. I was not sorry at their determination to attack the accounts vigorously, as I felt assured that the eventual result would be a better acquaintance with the subject than the younger Natives at present had, and a clearing-away of some causes of dissatisfaction. I found it convenient to prepare a debtor and creditor account, block by block, treating each purchase as a separate transaction. The Natives did not at first understand this method; several of the chiefs being interested in a plurality of blocks, and desiring to be paid upon them collectively. The inferior Natives, who were only interested in one block, however, saw the advantage of distinct accounts, and now all desire that the accounts may be rendered to them in such manner in the future.

Turanganui and Turakirae.

These two blocks are clubbed together because upon them, in common, certain advances had been made—sets-off in the account of the 5-per-cents—payable to the Natives of the Lower Valley.

The accumulation of "koha" on these blocks to 30th September, 1873, together with £77 10s., proceeds of sale of machinery, amounted to £856 16s. 7¼d., against which there were sets-off as follows: Payments to Raniera, £78; ditto for purchase of mill and dressing-machine, £300; ditto by Mr. Kemp, £450: total, £828.

Balance, £28 10s. 7¼d.

There was also a charge of £150 against Turanganui in the early accounts, but not in the more recent. The sum had been given to Raniera, and used by him in paying his debts without the tribe deriving benefit therefrom. There was considerable opposition to any advance for this mill being charged as against "koha." The mill, they said, had never been of service to the people; it had lain in Bethune and Hunter's store, they averred, until liable to £40 as a charge for storage, and was sold at a price below its proper value. The Upper Valley Natives maintained that Raniera had appropriated the proceeds on the eventual sale of the machinery. It was, however, no business of theirs, and I repressed the interference; they were, moreover, wrong. The mill it appeared had been sold in Wellington to the Hon. H. Russell, M.L.C., and Mr. John Russell was in possession of the sum of £77 10s., the net proceeds.

In respect to the Turakirae Block, Manihera and Wi Kingi claimed "koha" for Taita, Mangaroa, and Pakuratahi, stating that the purchase extended over those lands, and even to the source of a stream falling to the West Coast. They produced Mr. J. McKenzie, who stated that at a meeting in 1853, at Turanganui, he heard Sir George Grey tell the selling Natives that the 5-per-cents should extend over those lands. I resisted this, stating that, although their claim to certain land at the Upper Hutt, previously bought of Ngatitama and Ngatiawa, might have been extinguished by the purchases and payments made in 1853, yet it could never have been intended that 5-per-cents could be paid for the Hutt, which, had been sold by the New Zealand Company long previously. On obtaining a copy of the deed from Wellington, it was found that they were in error, the Rimutaka Range being the boundary.

Tuhitarata.

This is one of the Lower Valley blocks. On account of Manihera and his brother Eruera being amongst the sellers, and their having had nothing to do in the matter of the mill advance to Raniera, it was determined to charge that advance to the debit of Turakirae and Turanganui only.

The total accumulations of "koha" to 30th September, 1873, amounted to £265 4s. 2d.; the payments on account to £200; balance, £65 4s. 2d.; which sum I paid, giving a copy in Maori of the account current.

Wharekaka and Puhangina.

On this purchase the accumulation of 5-per-cents amounted to £566 12s. 3d., and advances to £255, leaving a balance of £311 12s. 3d. The committee, unable to question anything on the credit (Government) side of the account, attacked the debtor side, and employed a surveyor to check the areas stated to have been sold, and on which the calculations were based, with the area known to be sold on the ground. This occupied three days, and, at the termination of that time we were informed that "the difference found was too slight to be of any account." The money was then taken, and receipts signed in Maori and English, a marginal plan being drawn on each-receipt, to prevent the possibility of any future misapprehension as to locality.

Moroa and Tauherenikau.

The accumulation of "koha" on this purchase amounted, according to returns, on 30th September, 1873, to £1,027 8s. 1½d.; the charges against the Natives to £366 17s. In November, 1870, Mr. Kemp paid £430 to the sellers, but did not make any specific deduction for the above charges. Manihera and the other Natives interested objected to the set-off of £366 17s. on the following ground: (1) That they had never received the money; (2) that the accounts should have been furnished to them at the time, or, certainly, at last payment; and (3) that the charge for mills, of which this was one, had been promised to be wiped off in the account against them. To the first of these I was able to show that £150 of the money had been asked for in writing by Manihera, and that the sum of £366 17s. had remained constantly in the accounts, while other charges had been wiped out. In reference to the second reason, I was able to offer no sufficient excuse. In reference to the third, I showed that the original cost of mill had been wiped out of the account, but that the charge of £366 17s. was for repairs after the earthquakes of 1855, and was not affected by the circumstances that caused the remission of the charge for the erection. After a long discussion, I was enabled to maintain this charge as a set-off.

In the returns of land sold, as received from Commissioner of Crown Lands previous to leaving Wellington, no account has been taken of about 14,000 acres of sold land, supposed to be within this block, and to lie between the Waiohine and the Waingawa Rivers. Before this matter could be settled it was necessary to establish, on the ground, the exact position of the boundary of the Moroa purchase, which had never been done by survey. On the 9th of December, in company with Mr. T. E. Young, I went over this boundary, tracing it out on the plan according to the Native names in the deed of cession. We obtained, the services of Hori Taha—a Native well acquainted with the locality and the old names—to point out the positions, while Matiha Mokai and Roimata went to check Hori Taha's accuracy. The tracing attached, marked A, shows, in red, the boundary thus defined. By this it appeared that 14,602 acres had been sold within the limit, and that a further sum of £348 2s., (net 5-per-cents) was due upon it. I obtained this money, and paid it to the Moroa Natives on the 16th instant.

In 1853 the chiefs Manihera te Rangitakaiwaho and Wi Kingi Tutepakehirangi, principal owners of the Moroa District, made a free gift of a block of land to Chief Commissioner McLean, "in consequence of the satisfaction they felt at the manner in which Mr. McLean had conducted land purchases in the vicinity, and the high relative price he had paid to all of them for the adjacent lands." The means of surveying this piece of land were not at the time at command, and, for want of an accurate knowledge of its figure and area, the execution of a deed of gift was deferred until the matter was lost sight of. Nearly all the contiguous land became Crown property by purchase, and this piece, being on either side of the main road from Tauherenikau Bridge to Greytown, was included in a, sectional survey and granted by the Crown. Although given, the land was yet to yield "5-per-cents." Seeing that, in taking receipts for the 5-per-cents, an opportunity presented itself of obtaining a formal ratification of the free gift, and the Natives being well inclined, I drew up, in conjunction with Mr. E. S. Maunsell, licensed interpreter of Greytown, the attached document. (B), by which the two chiefs above mentioned ratify their gift, and fifteen others, principal people of the district, confirm it. The marginal plan attached shows the boundaries-as given by Manihera to me. The area comprised is 5,000 acres. The total accumulation of 5-per-cents on the Moroa and Tauherenikau Blocks was thus £1,375 10s. 1½d.; the advances made were £796 17s.; leaving a balance of £578 13s. 1½d. due to the Natives, which I paid them.

Makoura Block.

The last sales in this block took place in 1861, and the 5-per-cents amounted to £54 8s. 3d. This exhausted the area of the block, and with it the possibility of further accumulation of "koha." The Natives were, on the 4th January, 1863, paid the sum of £54 8s. 3d. In November, 1870, Mr. Kemp paid the sum of £100 on 5-per-cents in this block. The Natives attributed this payment to the high price at which land has been lately sold (privately) in Masterton, and looted to me to make a similar payment to them as Mr. Kemp had made. After a very long and tedious discussion, I caused them to understand the real position of the account and the terms of the contract, and they ceased to ask for payment. I do not show this block in my account current, as I had no payment to make on it; and, by the sale of all its land, it has for some years passed from the list of 5-per-cent. blocks.

Whareama Block No. 1.

On this block I paid the sum of £27 1s. 3d. Mr. Kemp, in 1870, had paid the sum of £110, and the Natives looked for a similar amount from me. On going into the accounts, however, I was able to show them that I was paying all that was due.

Whareama Block No. 2.

On this block the total amount of accumulated 5-per-cents was, in 1870, £111 16s. 1d.; Mr. Kemp paid £110, and £9 15s. have accrued since, thus leaving a balance of £11 11s. 1d., which I paid. The Natives could not understand how so small a sum was at their credit, and were a long time examining the accounts before they were satisfied.

Pahaua.

On this block the accumulations to the 30th September, 1873, amounted to £484 10s. 10½d., and the payments to £350 only; but I found an item on a letter in Dr. Featherston's handwriting, showing that £60 was lent to the late chief Wereta, one of the sellers, in 1862, and I required that it should be regarded as a set-off. After some considerable discussion this was allowed, but great opposition was raised to the payment, in 1872, of £100 to Te Hei, who was not, they stated, authorized to receive it. This chief woman was at Hawke's Bay, and no one appeared to speak for her. With a great deal of difficulty I induced the Natives to agree to the sum of £45 out of the £100, the decision as to the remainder to stand over until they can have Te Hei face to face with them. There is a sum of £39 0s. 10¾d. recently accrued on "koha" that I have yet in hand, and I propose that it should be detained until the matter is satisfactorily settled.

Manawatu Block.

Up to 30th June, 1869, the accumulations of 5-per-cents were £88 19s. 4d.; the money paid on account, £54 4s. 11d. Mr. Kemp paid £100, leaving the Natives in debt to the Government in the sum of £65 5s. 7d. The Crown Lands Department had omitted to send in returns of the land sold by the province to the General Government for Scandinavian settlers; hence the sum of £142 10s. had not been carried in the Treasury to the credit of the fund. Finding this out while on the ground, I was enabled to represent the circumstance, and eventually to obtain the money. £79 7s. 2d. was now available for the Natives, who, however, demanded £100, urging the large amount—£3,000 for 4,000 acres—that had been received since last payment of "koha," and the impropriety of their being charged with the sum of £54 4s. 11d. paid to Ngatuere by Hon. W. Mantell's directions so far back as 1863, and respecting which they ought to have received accounts before last payment in 1870 instead of now. This was the most difficult matter of all to settle. Ngatuere's name does not appear amongst the sellers of Manawatu, and it was alleged that he had received the money for private purposes, and not for distribution amongst the sellers. Ngatuere did not appear able to satisfy the meeting; and although the money was eventually taken, and in good temper, yet some of the recipients expressed an intention of inquiring further into the matter.

The excitement caused by the disturbance near Otaki, and subsequently the death of Manihera's sister, very much delayed the proceedings. In pursuance of the expressed wish of the Natives of the Upper Valley, I paid the 5-per-cents for that locality at Masterton. I am happy to say that when the system of accounts was understood, and copies of the accounts current, in Maori, given in respect to each distinct block, all obstructiveness and opposition ceased, and Hikawera, the advocate or spokesman of the Committee, aided me in completing the work, and assisted Mr. Maunsell and myself in obtaining the confirmation of the free gift. With the exception of the outstanding matter of £55, which could not be settled owing to Te Hei's absence at Hawke's Bay, there is now an undisputed and balanced account for each block to the 30th September, 1873, being the day to which each is worked up. The uncertain boundaries of the free-gift land and the Northern Moroa are defined on the sectional plans. The vexatious mill debts at Papawai and the Lower Valley are cleared off, £666 17s. being established and carried to the (Government) credit side of the account. The sum of £60, not in previous accounts, lent by Sir George Grey's direction to the late Wereta Tainui, has been recovered from his people, and £77 10s., proceeds of the sale of machinery to Hon. H. Russell in 1870, obtained from that gentlemen's agent and paid to the Natives whose property it was.

I have to express my sense of the very valuable services of Mr. T. E. Young, who was with me as interpreter, and by whose aid many difficulties that beset the whole subject were cleared away. Mr. Carroll, who succeeded Mr. Young, was very useful, and is, I think, an excellent interpreter.

I have, &c.,

CHARLES
HEAPHY, Commissioner, Native Reserves.

The Hon. the Native Minister.

Report on the Payment of the Auckland Ten-per-Cents. Wellington, 29th May, 1874.
SIR,—

Pursuant to instructions received from the Hon. the Native Minister, I proceeded to Auckland on the 25th of March last for the purpose of paying the Native sellers of the blocks mentioned below the sums that had accrued to them as 10-per-cents of the proceeds of land sales, in accordance with the terms of the respective deeds of cession.

The sums that had thus accrued up to the 1st April, 1874, were: Upon Remuera, £1,348 9s. 10d; Paioterangi, £609 14s. 6d.; Hikurangi, £1,653 7s. 2d.; Puatahinga, £432 10s.; Ruakaka, £473 16s. 10d; Mangawhai, £419 13s. 2d.; Hunua, £889 18s. 7d.: total, £5,827 10s. 1d.

There was a similar contract entered, into with the sellers of the Piako Block, in the Thames District, but no land had been sold there.

The contract under which the liability for payment of 10-per-cents occurred was contained in the following words: "It is further agreed by the Queen of England, on her part, that there shall be paid for the following purposes—that is to say, for the founding of schools in which persons of our race may be taught, for the construction of hospitals in which persons of our own race may be tended, for the payment of medical attendance for us, for annuities for our chiefs, or for other purposes of a like nature in which the Natives of this country have an interest—10 per cent., or ten pounds out of every hundred pounds, out of moneys from time to time received for land when it is resold."

The only payments that had ever been made out of the Ten-per-cent. Fund (which had been kept separate at the Treasury) were the following: 1862.—Construction of Orakei Bridge, £538 17s. 5d. and £586 10s; unaccounted for, £20: total, £1,145 7s. 5d. The Orakei Bridge was built in 1862, to connect the peninsula of that name with Remuera, a suburb of Auckland. The largest Native settlement in the district was at Orakei, and the sellers of Remuera consented that a large portion of the cost of the bridge should be charged against the 10-per-cents. Unfortunately, the records of the transaction and all the vouchers for the disbursements save one were lost at the sinking of the "White Swan" steamer.

Remuera.

At the meeting held with the sellers of Remuera, I placed the accounts before them, and explained the nature of the charges for the bridge. The absence of the papers made it very difficult to make clear the circumstances that had occurred so far back as 1862. The charge for the bridge amounted to £1,125 7s. 5d., and the total money that had accrued to £1,348 9s. 10d., of which sum it was very desirable that about £400 should be appropriated for school and hospital purposes. Thus, if the bridge were paid for, the Natives would have nothing to receive. But the result of careful inquiry revealed that the other section of the Ngatiwhatua Tribe living on the West Coast, between Manukau and Kaipara, had derived considerable benefit from the bridge. They came frequently to Orakei, and even had interests inland there I therefore proposed that, of the sum of £1,125 7s. 5d. for the bridge, £586 10s. should be charged to the Hikurangi, Paioterangi, and Puatahinga Blocks, on the West Coast. This was agreed to by all concerned: the sum of £404 16s. 2½d. was set aside for hospital and educational purposes, and £46 12s. 5d. appropriated (very willingly on the part of the Natives) to the cost of the management of the fund. Finally, I paid Paul Tuhaere and Te Hira the sum of £356 13s. 9d., and have £1 10s. left in hand.

Paioterangi.

On this West Coast block there had, on the 1st April last, accrued, the sum of £609 14s. 6d. Of this I proposed that £239 15s. 6d. should be devoted to Native schools and hospital purposes, and after a long discussion it was agreed to, the Natives asking that the schools might be established at their settlements on the West Coast.

For the Orakei Bridge £130, 3s. 5d. was set aside, with £20 8s. for the expenses of management. Ultimately, the sum of £211 16s. 0½d. was paid to the Natives, leaving £7 11s. 6d. in hand to meet a possible claim.

Hikurangi.

To April 1st, 1874, the 10-per-cents accrued on this block amounted to £1,653 7s. 2d. It was agreed, after an exhaustive discussion of the whole subject, that £361 13s. 7d. should be deducted to pay for the bridge, and £57 7s. for expenses of management. I required that £645 16s. 9½d. Should be devoted to hospital and educational purposes, which was agreed to, Natives asking that the schools should be established at their villages. The sum of £588 9s. 9d. remained for distribution to the sellers and their representatives.

On the deed of cession of Hikurangi are the signatures of the Waiuku chiefs Te Katipa and Aihepene Kaihau. On my proposing to set aside some money for these Natives it was opposed strenuously by the Ngatiwhatua sellers, who asserted that they had no right as owners of the sold land, but had only been paid some money on account of the murder of a relative there. Aihepene Kaihau and Te Katipa's heirs are now in the King country, and until they can have an opportunity of stating their case I propose to retain the sum of £100 14s. 7d., which will cover the outside limit of their claim. I paid the sum of £487 15s. 2d. amongst Te Watarauhi's people and the original territorial owners of, Hikurangi.

Puatahinga.

This block also lies on the West Coast. To the 1st of April, 1874, there had accrued the sum of £432 10s. The Natives, who fairly represented the original vendors, agreed, after full discussion, that £94 13s. should be charged to the bridge account, and £14 17s. to expenses of administration. They also consented to £168 18s. 6d. being kept for schools and hospitals. The sum of £154 1s. 6d. was then divided amongst those who had sold the land, the survivors of the deceased vendors, Paul and Te Watarauhi, allotting the money. Of the sum last named, £50 on this block and £30 on the Hunua were, at my instance, handed over to Colonel Balneavis and Dr. Goldsbro', the legal guardians of the sons of the deceased chief Isaac Takaanini, who are being educated at the Auckland Grammar School.

Ruakaka.

On this land, which lies between Whangarei and Waipu, there had, on the 1st April, 1874, accrued the sum of £473 16s. 10d. I went to Whangarei to meet the persons interested in the 10-per-cents, but they were so dispersed at Native meetings and gum-digging that I could make only a few payments. The chief Taurau, and those who were present, representing the sellers, agreed to £236 18s. 5d. being appropriated to education and hospitals, and £16 5s. 4d. to the expenses of administration. This left £220 13s. 1d. for distribution amongst the Native sellers. Finding that the Natives did not come to Whangarei, I convened a meeting for Mahurangi—a central place for the scattered people interested in this and the Mangawhai Block,—but they did not meet me there. Ultimately I found in various places a few more of those interested, and made payments to the extent of £35, but found it necessary to leave with Mr. Robert Mair, at Whangarei, and the Rev. Mr. Gittos, at Kaipara, blank receipt-forms to be signed by certain indicated Natives, to whom I can remit the respective amounts that have been decided upon. I may state that the Ruakaka Natives had entirely forgotten the stipulation relating to 10-per-cents.

Mangawhai.

This was a very difficult case to deal with, there being no less than fifty-eight parties to the sale, the majority of whom were dead, but whose descendants had to be found: the money to be divided—£419 13s. 2d.—the smallest of all. These people failing to appear at Whangarei and Mahurangi, I met the principal of their chiefs at Auckland and other places, and they agreed to deal with the money in the following manner—namely: to appropriate to schools and hospitals £209 16s. 7d.; to expenses of administration, £14 6s. 6d.; and to presents, £195 10s 1d.: total, £419 13s 2d.

The chiefs Adman Karaka and Eranihi Paikea, principal men in the sale, gave me valuable assistance in allocating the amounts to the respective claimants. They had all quite forgotten the circumstance of the stipulation, and expressed their gratification at the Government having taken care of their interests. In this case, after paying £68 to those present, I had also to leave blank-receipt-forms with Mr. Commissioner Kemp, the Rev. Mr. Gittos, and Mr. R. Mair, to be signed by the absent Natives, to whom I promised to remit the amounts decided on.

Hunua.

On this block, which lies immediately to the east of Drury, there had accrued, to 1st April, 1874, the sum of £889 18s. 7d. On assembling the Natives interested in this block, a difficulty occurred: the chief Hori Whetuki (Long George), of the adjacent Wairoa Valley, appeared and declared that his claim—a considerable one—to the Hunua had never been extinguished. He further said that he was absent from sickness at the time of the sale, and that his friends had not attended to his interests. He now demanded such a share of the 10-per-cents as would be equivalent to the share he ought to have originally received. Of course the claim involved a long discussion; but from the evidence of disinterested persons, and the admissions of those who had sold the land, it appeared that the claim was a valid one. Honetana and the other sellers were consequently induced to hand over to Hori Whetuki a share of the money divisible amongst them as large as that which he ought to have received at first. Hori then signed a receipt for the 10-per-cent. money as one of the sellers of the Hunua Block, and all parties were satisfied.

In this case; also, I had to keep back some money for two Natives who are at present in the King country. It was argued by the people present, in this case as at Hikurangi, that such Natives, by having thrown off their allegiance to the Queen, or from having become Hauhaus, had disentitled themselves to participation in the money now being paid—in fact, that their interests ought to be confiscated in favour of the more loyal of the sellers. I told them that the idea could not be entertained: the absentees had kept to their side of the contract, and the question of their faith or place of residence could not be considered. Opposition then ceased, and it was agreed that £444 19s 3½d. should be set aside for the schools to be established and for hospital purpose, and £30 11s. for expenses of management. This left £414 8s. 3½d. to be divided amongst them. I paid £364 8s. 3½d. and retained £50 to meet any claims that absentees in the King country or elsewhere may make good.

The total amount set aside to cover expenses of administration of fund, which includes passages to Auckland and back, visits to Whangarei, Mahurangi, Waikato, &c., is £200 7s. 3d.; for schools and hospitals, £2,351 1s. 4d.; for distribution to Natives, £2,149 3s. 11d. Of the last above sum, £1,677 14s. 8d. has been paid, and £472 19s. 3d. is in the fund, and available for distribution when certain claims are decided on and certain receipts obtained.

It was not, by the terms of the several contracts, necessarily incumbent to obtain the acquiescence of the Natives to the partition of the fund as above mentioned, but I considered it judicious to obtain it to prevent possible dispute hereafter, while I indicated that it was not to form a precedent to govern any future payments. The general effect of what has been done has, I think, shown that the Government keeps faith in respect to its obligations, however negligent and forgetful the Natives may occasionally be of the interests of themselves and those who will succeed them.

I have to express my thanks to Mr. George Brown, whose services as interpreter were kindly placed at my disposal by Mr. Commissioner Kemp, and who was very useful in explaining the accounts.

CHARLES HEAPHY,

Commissioner of Native Reserves. The Under-Secretary, Native Department.

P.S.—Accounts and receipts are appended.

STATEMENT of EXPENDITURE of Sum of £2,340 19s. 4d., advanced to Commissioner of Native Reserves, on Interest, to pay Auckland Ten-per-Cents.

Paid Remuera Natives, £356 13s. 9d.; Hikurangi Natives, £487 15s. 2d.; Paioterangi Natives, £211 16s.; Puatahinga Natives, £154 1s. 6d.; Hunua Natives, £364 8s. 3d.; Ruakaka Natives, £35; Mangawhai Natives, £68—£1,677 14s. 8d.; balance paid to Public Account, 30th May, 1874, £663 4s. 8d.: total, £2,340 19s. 4d.

CHARLES HEAPHY, Commissioner, Native Reserves.

Schedule.

On the Nature of Land Tenure. Akaroa, 15th. August, 1843.

SIR,—

In reply to your letter dated the 19th November, 1842, I have the honour to communicate to you the information which I have been able to collect relative to the nature of the tenure whereby lands are held among the Natives.

Original Immigration.

According to Native tradition these Islands were first inhabited by the present race, who left their own country—one of the Polynesian Islands—on account of some national disturbance. This probably happened, between five and six hundred years ago. Several canoes are said to have sailed about the same time to seek new lands. Part of them only reached this shore, and the spot where each was finally drawn to land was taken possession of by the crew, who spread themselves from that centre over the more fertile districts, till they became a numerous tribe. In confirmation of the truth of this it is worthy of remark that each of the grand divisions into which the Natives of the Northern Island may be divided has its own characteristic dialect; and it seems probable that the term "waka" (canoe), which is also used to denote these primary divisions, has reference to this origin of the tribe.

Division of Tribes.

At the present day these waka are divided into many distinct "iwi," each of which is again sub-divided into hapu, or smaller communities. These iwi, although descended from common ancestors, have, through quarrels respecting their lands and women, imbibed hatreds to each other which keep them in continual feuds, forgotten only for a while; when assailed by a common enemy they unite for mutual protection, as the tribes of Waikato did when attacked by Ngapuhi.

Division of Lands.

The territory claimed by a waka is subdivided again into districts, each of which is claimed by an iwi. These are again variously apportioned among the different hapu and families of chiefs.

Town and Suburban Allotments.

In the immediate vicinity of a pa the land is more minutely subdivided amongst its inmates, nearly every person having his own small cultivation-ground or holding some spot in common with other members of his family.

Difficult to purchase.

This circumstance would render it very difficult for Europeans to purchase lands once so occupied, even though the pa may have been deserted for many years, as every man whose ancestors cultivated there will expect his claim to be satisfied.

Landowners.

The chiefs are the principal landholders. Every individual person, so far as I have been able to learn, has his own estate which he has inherited from his branch of the family, and which he cultivates as he pleases.

Descent of Property.

The sons of a chief may during his lifetime select kaingas (farms) from their father's estate; but the larger portions are cultivated in common by the different members of the family. When a daughter marries a small farm is generally given to her, which however reverts to her brothers should she die without issue. On the death of the father, the eldest son chooses some part of the land for himself; the others do the same, the daughters obtaining only so much, as their father or brothers choose to leave them.

This order of things is sometimes changed in case the elder brother is of a quiet disposition, and his younger brother happens to be a toa (a. turbulent fellow). The latter will then grasp the bulk of the property to the exclusion of the rest, even during his father's lifetime; and he is, in the opinion of his tribe, entitled to respect for this show of spirit. The husband of a sister is at liberty to do the same if he can. The other members of the family then sink to the condition of "tutua," or insignificant persons, retaining only their right to their kaingas or cultivation-grounds.

Ngatiwhakaue.

Ngatiwhakaue, perhaps the most important tribe in the Island, seem to carry to a great extent this system of raising one member of the family at the expense of the rest.

Hereditary Title, and Rights by Conquest.

A chief, when speaking of the title by which he holds his lands, never fails to make a distinction between those which he has inherited from his ancestors and those which he or his ancestors have obtained by conquest. Over the former his right is universally recognized. The latter appear to be tenable only so long as the party in possession is the more powerful. The claim which he advances is, however, quite characteristic of the people—viz., that they are the utu, or compensation for the death of his relatives who perished in the fight. It is from purchasing lands the right to which is thus contested by two hostile parties, either of whom will gladly avail himself of an opportunity to sell independently of the other, that Europeans have unwarily fallen into so many difficulties.

Disputed Lands.

Besides the lands thus held there are large districts on the borders of different tribes which remain uncultivated. These "kainga tautohe," or debatable lands, are a never-failing cause of war till one party has lost its principal men. The remnant then cease to have any political importance, and are reduced to the condition of mere cultivators of the soil, being contemptuously styled "toenga-kai," or offal.

Family Contentious.

When a dispute arises between members of the same tribe as to who is the rightful owner of a piece of land, the principal persons on both sides meet together to discuss the affair. Their pedigrees are traced, and the ancestor from whom either party claims is declared. Any proof that an act of ownership (such as cultivating, building a house, setting pit-falls for rats, or erecting eel-weirs) was once exercised without opposition by one of these ancestors, is considered sufficient evidence of the right of his descendants to the land. I have been present during such discussions, but have never known them terminated in an orderly manner, nor have I since learnt that any advance had been made thereby towards settling the question.

I have &c;

EDWARD SHORTHAND, Sub-Protector, East District.

G. Clarke, Esq., Chief Protector of Aborigines.

No. 2. The CHIEF PROTECTOR to the Hon. the COLONIAL SECRETARY.

On the Native Tenure of Land. Protector's Office, Auckland, 17th October, 1843.
SIR,—

Referring to your letter of the 15th December, 1842, requesting me to furnish information of the tenure by which the Natives hold their lands, I do myself the honour to submit the following remarks, founded upon my own observation and experience, and the reports furnished to me by the junior members of my department, for the information of His Excellency the Officer Administering the Government.

The time, place, the number of families who first landed on the shores of New Zealand, and whether such landing was effected only at one period and at one particular spot, or at different times and different places, are questions involving much uncertainty, and will, I think, be esteemed unimportant to the present subject of inquiry. The Natives universally acknowledge one common origin; and the fact of their speaking one language, with very trifling variations of dialect, and observing the same customs, corroborates it. Different places, both on the East and West Coasts, are claimed by different tribes as the spot where the canoes of their ancestors first landed, and all agree that "Maui" was the name of their great progenitor. The "tohungas," or wise men, pride themselves on being able to trace the genealogy of their families up to "Maui;" some reckoning as far as twenty-six generations, which, allowing thirty years for each generation, would make the period of their landing about seven hundred and eighty years ago, or in the year 1063.

From a very early period the whole of New Zealand seems to have been divided into districts accurately defined generally by mountain-ranges or rivers, and must have been well known by the accurate description they have given to every little creek, valley, promontory, and bay throughout the Island, the names of which have been handed down by tradition from generation to generation, and which will continue to define the territorial rights of the chiefs descended from the early proprietors.

If, as is the general impression of all who have given their attention to this subject, the Natives immigrated at different periods, we have at once a clue to the origin of titles. Each migration landed, subdued, and laid claim to a certain district now claimed by their posterity; and each party most probably acknowledged a leader, either nominated or assuming such character by superior powers, who would naturally be considered as the first chief of the iwi or tribe. Their children, and a portion of the iwi or tribe who might attach themselves to each particular child, may be considered as giving rise to the different hapu or lesser tribes; who, although a part of the original family, would form a separate and distinct community, uniting, however, in time of war to repel the common enemy, but claiming and exercising independent interests in the soil in time of peace. This at once brings me to the relation in which one tribe stands to another, the nature of their titles, and the causes of quarrel between the hapu as well as the general wars with the common enemy.

To illustrate this subject I will take the northern division of this Island, which is called the residence of the Ngapuhis: that is to say, the Natives living between the North Cape and Whangarei would be invariably styled Ngapuhi by the inhabitants of the Thames and Waikato. Nevertheless the district includes numberless hapu or smaller tribes with independent interests, and not unfrequently at war with each other. The Thames Natives, on the other hand, are known to the Ngapuhi as a body by the name of Ngatimaru; but they are divided amongst themselves into four or five considerable tribes, and these again into many hapus who unite for the common weal. Again, bravery in war and consequent power and rank as a chief will not always determine the individual a land proprietor: a man may be a great general, but a small landholder. From hence numberless mistakes have arisen amongst Europeans, who have thought themselves especially safe in purchasing land from a powerful chief, supposing that he must of necessity be a large landed proprietor; whereas he may have assumed most of his territorial rights, and the titles by which he claims may not only be disputed but rejected. It is astonishing what pains have been taken by Europeans with Native warriors to persuade them that, as conquerors, they had larger territorial rights, and ought to assert and obtain them by any means, however contrary to Native usages; and in not a few instances large deposits have been given to these chiefs by Europeans for lands thus claimed by assumption.

At what time the boundaries of the districts of the respective chiefs of the Island were defined as we now find them, it is impossible to ascertain; but I think, from the statements of the most respectable chiefs, it may be inferred that the general division of this country was made at least two centuries ago. The Ngapuhi, notwithstanding their extensive conquests, obtained within the last twenty-five years, still confine themselves to their ancient territorial rights, and the Ngatiwhatua, although oftentimes defeated and almost annihilated, still assert their claim to the territorial possessions of their ancestors.

It is then, I think, evident, that the chiefs of every tribe and hapu, as well as the head of every family belonging to the tribe or hapu, have distinct claims and titles to lands within their respective districts. At the same time it must be remembered that they have joint interests in many of the lands. The particular claims of the chiefs, hapus, and families are to lands either subdued or brought into cultivation, or upon which they have exercised some act of ownership — lands where they have been accustomed to procure flax or erect their weirs for catching eels, or where they have built a substantial house: in such cases they claim a particular property; none but the person so claiming can give a title to the land; nor can he be dispossessed thereof. He may forfeit his right by accidentally killing a neighbour, by adultery, or by migrating to a different tribe and district. In either of the former cases the land is taken possession of by the injured party, whose title is recognized as good by the tribe in general; in the latter case the possession reverts to the relatives of the emigrant. With the exception of these cases of forfeiture they descend from father to son in regular succession; the eldest son inheriting his father's rights, the younger brother claiming also a portion. In the event of no issue from the elder brother the property reverts to the second son of the family, and this continues in the line of the brother or brother's children.

If a chief has a large family, they are each early taught to acquire an individual or particular property both in the soil and its produce, by the following plan: As soon as a child is able to plant a potato he is provided by his parents with a basket of seed, a piece of land is prepared he plants his basket of seed upon it, and has henceforth an exclusive claim not only upon the produce but on the land itself, which ever after is considered to be his property. Sometimes a slave is set apart to provide for a child from his infancy, and to him the basket of seed is intrusted. By this procedure a double object is effected. The children are early habituated to habits of industry, and provision is made for their maintenance in some measure independent of the parent; but at the same time it must be confessed that the plan tends very much to weaken parental authority, and creates a premature spirit of independence in the child, who is not only maintained and clothed out of the produce of his own land, but from the same source derives a fund which procures him his gunpowder, implements of agriculture, &c.: in short, it is the seed of his own and his family's future prosperity. In this way families hoe and cultivate their own ground, enlarging their cultivations from time to time, thereby establishing an indisputable title to such lands as their special and particular property.

In other respects their claims and titles become more general, the hapus and families claiming in common with the principal chiefs what may be very properly termed their waste lands; but even here they must be able to substantiate some sort of title which is considered equitable, such as having been the first discoverers, having kindled their ovens, built canoes, or exercised some such other act of ownership which gives them the preference over these lands. The families have, in common with the chiefs, the right of keeping pigs, gathering flax, shooting or snaring pigeons, catching rats, ducks, kiwi, digging fern-root, &c., or of gathering the natural productions of the woods and open country for the purpose of food &c.; every individual of the tribe having and exercising these privileges in common, but still acknowledging the rights of some family or individual member of a family to dispose of such property—that is, as president, head of the family, or chief of the tribe or hapu, to make the first proposal for such an alienation—yet they would not consider the purchase valid without the consent of the majority of the principal men of the tribe, and of the payment for the same every individual would expect to receive his appropriate share. Lands that are thus possessed in common, involving the interests of so many claimants, are exceedingly difficult to purchase, and may be reckoned as among the most fruitful sources of quarrels and disturbances. It frequently happens that two Natives, equally interested in the same lands, disagree on the question of its disposal: one is willing and anxious to sell, the other is not, and numberless animosities originate from this source.

This common right and title to property is not confined exclusively to land, but embraces almost every other description of property. A canoe generally belongs to a family, and sometimes to a hapu, in consequence of each individual assisting in its formation or advancing a portion of his property for its payment. A cow or horse may have twenty claimants; and it was not an uncommon thing a few years ago for an axe or a spade to belong to three or four individuals, and a musket, to ten or twelve, each individual having contributed something towards the purchase of these articles. A blanket, bought with the proceeds of a child's farm, would be recognized as the property of the child, although appropriated to the use of the parents, and any attempt to alienate such property without the concurrence of all concerned would be resisted as unjust and oppressive; and the buyer, even supposing him to have given double the value of the property, would be considered equally culpable with the other. No people in the world are more particular than the Natives on these subjects, and more especially in regard to their lands; and, in order to avoid quarrelling, furrows or watercourses are usually formed in their family cultivations, in order to divide and designate particular property; and on the same principle, and for the same reason, if a little more distantly related, and these cultivations are adjacent to each other, a dividing lot of uncultivated land will be left, or a small patch of wooded land to which both parties have an equal claim, but which neither dare destroy for fear of exciting suspicion of encroachment and thereby generating a quarrel. Between distant tribes there is universally a much larger space of common unoccupied property left for the same purpose, and but very few tribes are neighbourly enough to venture to cultivate on the opposite banks of the same river unless they are desirous of collision. Such are their natural jealousies on this subject; hence it is no uncommon thing to find a space of some miles of uninhabited and uncultivated country forming the grand division of the district.

To obtain a specific title to lands which are held in common, there must be, as I observed before, some additional circumstances to support such pretensions, as subduing and appropriating, or exercising any particular act of ownership upon the land in question: the first discovery of a tree, the shooting of a pigeon, constructing an eel-weir, digging fern-root, making a Native path or foot road, the accidental loss of a friend on such spot, receiving a wound or recovering from sickness at such place—all or any of these acts give an undeniable right to special property in land heretofore considered common; and, frivolous as the origin of such titles may appear in the estimation of civilized nations, I very much question whether better could be produced to a vast deal of our own possessions. Surely if the first discovery of an island, whether inhabited or not, is admitted as establishing a valid claim to some of the most important countries in the world, the Native title; founded both upon discovery and possession, is still more apparent; and their usages in the acquirement of special titles are the most natural and reasonable that can be adduced by any nation or people.

The changes that have taken place upon the Island during the last century do not appear to be very important. The Ngapuhi, as a body, still claim the northern part of the Island, the Ngatimaru the Thames, the Waikato Natives their district, and so on throughout the Island. Nevertheless they have been continually at war with each other, and many changes have taken place in the internal divisions of the country. Sometimes a tribe has been defeated and driven to the extreme of its district, yet always returning and eventually claiming the same territory. Twenty years ago there was not a Native on the Thames in consequence of Hongi's wars; they were driven into the interior; not a native of Waikato was to be seen within a hundred miles of Auckland, nor a vestige of the Ngatiwhatua Tribe, as an independent people, to be discerned: but since then the Ngatimaru have returned to this part of their district, the Waikato to the Heads of Manukau, and the Ngatiwhatua to Waitemata and Kaipara. From these facts it appears pretty evident that conquest, unless followed by possession, forms no title. Were the Ngapuhi to claim the right of selling or exercising the sovereignty over the Districts of the Thames, Kaipara, or Waikato, in virtue of their former conquests, their pretensions would be treated as contemptible and absurd; and so distinctly is this principle recognized that I have no doubt that any attempt to support and maintain the validity of titles derived from conquest only, would be met by a most determined resistance, even if attempted by Her Majesty's Government. I have known slaves tenaciously maintaining their territorial rights while in a state of captivity, but I never knew a master to claim by virtue of his slave, or attempt to advance any pretensions founded upon the capture of a landed proprietor; but I have had large offers of land for sale by Natives who are still in captivity, and have been warmly reproved by these men for doubting the validity of their titles.

As I have already observed, great changes have taken place in the internal regulations and divisions of the districts, and in many cases lands have completely changed owners; but in every case that I can recollect possession has followed immediately upon conquest. There is scarcely a spot in the Bay of Islands but has changed masters—where the conquered either amalgamated with their conquerors or retired to a distinct part of their possessions. By the latter step they maintain their independence, and still claim all the lands not actually in possession of their conquerors; but by the former they only claim what they cultivate specially, and in common with their conquerors, but conceding to them the precedence. In this way Paroa, Kororareka, Whangarei, and the North Cape have completely changed hands, and are now possessed by different tribes from those who held them twenty years ago.

Tribes who live upon the borders of districts commonly intermarry with their neighbours on either hand, and are very often neutral in wars which occur between the two tribes to whom they are related. If the invasion comes from the right, they fly to the district of their invading relatives, and are generally employed in negotiating peace with those on the left, and invariably afford protection and shelter to refugees; but they claim no right to territory in virtue of their offices of kindness, not even if the defeated party who flew to them for succour should become amalgamated with their tribe. For instance, Tirarau, Matiu, and Parore, who are Ngapuhi chiefs, sheltered a great number of the Ngatiwhatuas, who fled before the victorious Hongi, and for many years they lived and cultivated together; but neither of these chiefs claimed the land of their protégés. Several sales of land about Kaipara belonging to the Ngatiwhatua were effected during the time the parties lived together, but reference was always made to those who had placed themselves under protection, and their title as the original owners of the soil invariably acknowledged. Nevertheless the price or consideration given for the land would be divided amongst both parties, protectors and protected; but the purchaser would have no valid title to the land who bought it of the protectors irrespective of the protected. Again, in gratitude for services performed, a piece of land might be presented by such parties to their protectors, who would thenceforth claim in virtue of the gift; but, on the other hand, land allotted by the protectors to those who fled to them for protection for the purposes of cultivation would not be considered as alienated—the protected only claiming so long as they cultivated. Neither would they be consulted in effecting a sale of the land, excepting upon those precise localities which they had in actual occupation. In the event of such cultivation being abandoned it would revert to the person who granted it, unless he married and resumed it as the dowry of his wife; it would then be hers and descend to her lawful heirs, but in default of issue of her body it would revert to his family.

By intermarriages chiefs sometimes claim in distinct districts, in which case it is usual to send a child of the family to the spot to maintain his father's or mother's territorial rights. In this way the Ngapuhi chief Moka, who had a large family by his slave wife from Whakatane, sent one of his sons to take possession of the property claimed through his wife. The child's title would be immediately acknowledged, although the father himself would not be allowed to lay claim to an acre. Te Uira, who was a Ngapuhi chief, but living in Hawke's Bay, sent up his son to the Bay of Islands to take possession of his property; the claim was universally admitted, and he has since sold several portions of the land undisputed. But, if the parent neglects to take possession or maintain his child's title by sending some branch of the family to the spot, I very much question whether the grandchild could maintain or make good his title.

The claim to Taranaki by the Waikato Natives is good so far as they have taken possession; but they did not wholly succeed in driving the Natives out of that district, who maintained their independence by resorting to the different pas along the coast. I should therefore consider the principal right to the land at Taranaki still vested in the original inhabitants.

Again, the titles of the tribes about Port Nicholson to the land in the Taranaki District cannot be wholly extinct if they have kept up a friendly intercourse with the residents. Rauparaha, who conquered and took possession of part of this country, would, in connection with his followers in the vicinity of Cook Strait, have large claims, but his title would no doubt be disputed by the original proprietors so soon as they were in a position to maintain their claim. A tribe never ceases to maintain its claim to the land of its fathers, nor could a purchase be considered complete and valid without the concurrence of the original proprietors. If a conqueror spare the lives of the conquered, and they thenceforth become amalgamated with his own tribe, he infallibly secures his own title, uniting the claims of the original possessors with his own. A striking instance of this sort occurred in the northern part of the Island. The chief Hongi, in selling a portion of land to the Church Missionary Society for a mission-station, acted upon this principle. The original proprietors were greatly reduced as a tribe, and were driven from many portions of their district by Hongi's people. Peace being restored they amalgamated themselves with their enemies. Hongi, in order to secure his title and to show his respect for the customs of the Natives, upon receiving the price of the land in question presented the whole to the most influential chief of the reduced tribe to secure his approbation of the sale, which by this means was accomplished, and the payment was, as a matter of course, returned to Hongi. The same chief, Hongi, was urged to give up a small piece of cultivated ground to a Mr. Stack as presenting a more eligible site; but, though he wished much to oblige his friends the missionaries, and was in the best position for doing so, being by far the most influential chief of the northern portion of the Island, he distinctly stated that he could not do it: if the missionaries wanted the land they must treat with the people who cultivated it, to whom alone it belonged. I mention these facts to show how very tenaciously they maintain their customs and usages on all subjects connected with their lands; so much so that a title would be considered doubtful if, during the negotiations for the sale, objections against parting with it were overruled by the importunity of the buyer. The Natives cannot stand against the importunity of those they deem their friends, and never fail to say in such a case that a consent was extorted from them. The person who makes the first proposal to alienate a piece of land is in the most disadvantageous position, and on him is thrown all the blame in case disputes arise. Possession of land, even for a number of years, does not give a right to alienate such property to Europeans without consent of the original donor of the land; but it may be continued in the possession of the descendants of the grantee to the latest generation.

The foregoing are some of the most important features of the nature of the tenure whereby Natives hold their lands, and embrace all the most prominent points of information contained in the remarks of the gentlemen of my department who have reported to me on the subject.

I have &c;

GEORGE CLARKE, Chief Protector.

The Hon. the Colonial Secretary.

No. 3. MEMORANDUM from the CHIEF PROTECTOR of ABORIGINES on the TERRITORIAL RIGHTS of NATIVES when in CAPTIVITY.

MEMORANDUM for His Excellency the Governor, showing that the New Zealanders do not forfeit their territorial rights by being carried into captivity or becoming captives.

- The wife of Moka, one of the principal chiefs of the Bay of Islands, was a captive from Whakatane, of the Whakatohea Tribe. She had several children by Moka, the eldest of which was sent to Whakatane by his mother, to claim her territorial rights. His grandfather and uncles all acknowledged the equity of the claim, and the lands are held in trust for the children by their uncles. Had the chief Moka presumed to have claimed an acre of these lands in virtue of conquest the claim would have been treated with contempt.
- Puhe, a Ngapuhi chief, captured the daughter of a respectable chief in the vicinity of the East Cape; he afterwards married her, and had a family by her. In consequence of some disagreement with his tribe, she advised him, and ultimately prevailed upon him, to leave his tribe and proceed with her to the East Cape to live upon her lands, where they at present reside were this chief to assume a right to these lands, grounded upon conquest, it would cost him his life. By his wife's consent and that of her friends he resides there; he is looked upon as an alien, and considers himself in the light of a voluntary exile.
- Pata, a respectable chief from Maungatautari, near Waikato, was taken captive by the chief Tareha, of the Bay of Islands. Pata offered to sell to some Europeans a tract of country which he claimed near Waikato; doubts were expressed as to the validity of his claims, he being a captive. They were expressed to his capturer Tareha, who seemed astonished at the objections grounded upon his being a captive. Pata has since returned to take possession of these lands, and is now living thereon.
- In the year 1839 the following captives, who had been living some years as such among the Ngapuhi chiefs—viz., William Hakopa, Abraham Koroka, Edward Wana, James Waiapu, with others whose names I do not now remember—these Natives all returned to their respective lands at East Cape and Poverty Bay; they retain their rank as chiefs, claiming their landed property. Many of them are ornaments to Christianity.
- A number of Natives, captives from Tauranga, Bay of Plenty, have from time to time returned to their friends, and their territorial claims have never been disputed by their countrymen on the ground that they were once captives.
- I could add largely to this list were it necessary, in instances of the like usages amongst the Thames tribes, the Waikato, and other tribes, showing the return of the Natives from captivity, and their being placed in the same position they were in before their captivity. The cases I have alluded to all took place before the colonization of New Zealand, and long before anything of the New Zealand Company was known.
- I have refrained from naming cases in connection with the New Zealand Company's settlements, although I have a distinct recollection of some cases in point there. In their first settlement a young man named Davis, a landholder now living at Wellington, was a captive from Ngapuhi, and his influence has often been used by the gentlemen of Wellington in times of trouble.

GEORGE CLARKE,

Chief Protector Aborigines.
1st October, 1844.

MEMORANDUM by the NATIVE SECRETARY on the NATIVE TERRITORIAL BILL.

IN reference to some of the provisions of the Native Territorial Bill, I beg to submit the following observations:—

The change contemplated by this Bill would confuse the Native mind; disturb existing treaties with them, cause new complications in reference to title, and very much increase the difficulty of obtaining land in blocks of sufficient extent to promote systematic English settlement. Nothing will complicate or retard the purchase of land from the Natives so much as the existence of different modes for its acquisition. Land is now being acquired in large quantities; the Native title to the whole of the available land in the Wellington Province, except about 1,000,000 acres, is already extinguished; large blocks contiguous to each other are being acquired at a moderate cost in the Auckland Province; and it does not appear that a change, which would induce speculation and competition in acquiring only isolated spots of the best land, would tend to a peaceable settlement of the country. It is true that the Bill proposes certain restrictions and prohibitions; but when a spirit of speculation in land is once created and sanctioned, by legislation it would become a most difficult and invidious task for the Government in many cases to enforce such restrictions. The Natives themselves, who are much interested, do not desire any change, excepting, perhaps, a few who are deeply involved in debt, and who would make any sacrifice to be relieved from their creditors. It would not, therefore, be just to compromise the interests and wishes of the people generally for the sake of those few. It is well ascertained that the New Zealand tribes regard their land as national property, the cession of which, when decided on, they prefer making as a national act to Her Majesty, even while they are aware that the sums to be realized by such cessions are inconsiderable. Nor do they generally attach so much importance to the pecuniary consideration received, for land held by them in common, as to the future consequences resulting from its alienation. The limits and restrictions imposed by this Bill, together with the charge of 10s. per acre on all land when transferred to, Europeans, would be regarded by the Natives as an unfair interference with their rights, and an unjust exaction of money for land to which they had established a valid title at their own expense.

For these and other reasons which might be adduced, I consider the Bill in its present shape open to serious objections, inasmuch as the first object proposed by it—that of accurately defining Native title—might be attained without attempting to modify such title in the manner therein contemplated; and the second object proposed by it—viz., that of facilitating the acquisition of land by persons settling in the colony—is one for which existing arrangements fully provide.

The foregoing are the objections I have to offer to the first Bill of which a draft has been referred to me I have now to offer some observations on the second Bill which is before the House of Representatives.

Much of what I have already stated with regard to the first Bill is also applicable to the second. The 8th clause provides that "The Native Districts Registration Act, 1858," may have jurisdiction over lands to which the Native title is extinguished.

No part of the Bill contains any such provision; the clauses referred to are contained in the Native Districts Regulation Act. But the jurisdiction of the Circuit Court can only arise under regulations approved of by the Governor in Council; it is therefore absolutely discretionary with the Executive whether such a jurisdiction shall ever be created.—C.W.R.

I do not consider that jurisdiction should be given to a Court composed of a promiscuous Native jury to adjudicate on the conflicting questions of territorial rights that may be referred to it as it is evident that the New Zealand chiefs would not abide by the decision of Courts the members of which might in many instances be the slaves of the chiefs on whose rights they were called upon to pass judgment. The confidence with which the Natives refer to the Governor for the adjustment of such questions should not be in any way shaken or disturbed. The charge of 10s. per acre (vide 11th clause), on alienation to Europeans, is open to the objections I have pointed out in the previous Bill, and the proposal to expend the money within the district in which such alienation takes place is calculated to benefit not so much the Native seller as the European purchaser. The limitation in clause 12 would be destructive to the operation of an Act which, if found beneficial in its tendency, should not, I submit, be subject to such restrictions, inasmuch as only a fractional part of the Native population could then avail themselves of it; whereas all Acts having reference to the territorial rights of the Natives should be general, impartial, and admit of extended operation.

If found beneficial, the Act might of course be extended. It appears unreasonable to insist that the Colonial Legislature shall altogether abandon its control over a subject which on all hands is admitted to be one of great difficulty and magnitude. It is not questioned that the limit of area imposed by the Bill—viz., 50,000 acres per annum—amply suffices for all present requirements of the Native population.—C.W.R.

Having thus stated my objections to the Bills referred to, I submit herewith some suggestions on which a Bill might be framed to meet the present requirements for issuing Crown titles to Natives.

Auckland,

25th June, 1858.

Minute by Ministers.

In general reply to this memorandum, it is sufficient to state—First, that the greater part of the arguments used by the Native Secretary apply to a draft Bill never introduced or even approved of by Ministers, to which the Native Secretary was quite unjustified in referring; secondly, that the Native Secretary concludes by recommending a plan substantially identical with, indeed copied in all its provisions from, the Bill introduced by Ministers and reserved for Her Majesty's assent, but destitute of any safeguard against the rashest actions on the part of the Executive. The points of real difference between the Ministers and the Native Secretary are discussed in memorandum of the former dated 29th September, 1858.—C.W.R.

MEMORANDUM by the NATIVE SECRETARY on the INDIVIDUALIZATION of NATIVE LANDS.

Auckland, 28th June, 1858.

It being desirable that provision should be made in certain cases to effect a partition of land held in common by the Natives as tribes, with the view of enabling the Government to issue Crown titles to individual Natives, and that preliminary steps should be taken for this purpose,—Firstly. It should be ascertained that the parties claiming such land are the real owners thereof, and that they are desirous of making such partition. The said owners should then prefer a request in writing to the Governor that a Crown grant of such land be issued to each or any of the said owners, setting forth also in writing in what manner they are agreed to partition such land. It should thereupon be lawful for the Governor, if he deems it advisable, to appoint Commissioners to investigate such claim and report thereon. Secondly. It should be the duty of these Commissioners to inquire into, ascertain, and set forth the situation, boundaries, and estimated extent of the said land; the names of the persons who are the owners thereof, or who may have any claim or interest therein; and the proposed partition of the same, together with any other particulars which may be calculated to assist the Governor in determining on the propriety of issuing a Crown title. Thirdly If, upon the consideration of such report, it shall appear to the Governor that it is desirable that the said land or any part thereof, should be dealt with in this manner, the Governor may direct that a survey and accurate description of the boundaries of the land be prepared, at the expense of the owners, by a surveyor to be appointed or approved of by him. Fourthly. When it is established to the satisfaction of the Governor that such Natives are entitled to such piece or parcel of land as joint owners thereof, and that it shall appear desirable that such land shall be granted to such Native owners respectively in severalty, then it shall be lawful for the Governor, upon such lands being ceded by such Native owners to Her Majesty for that purpose, to cause a subdivision thereof to be made in accordance with such proposal as aforesaid, and to make a Crown grant thereof in the usual form to each such owner and his heirs and assigns in fee-simple: provided, however, that if it shall appear to the Governor to be desirable in any particular case to restrict the alienability of the land comprised in any such grant, it shall be lawful for him, by the provisions of such grant, to restrict in such manner and to such extent as he shall see fit the alienation thereof. The grant should not issue until the Government is reimbursed for the expense attending such inquiry and partition as aforesaid. Every such grant should be considered a good, valid, and effectual conveyance, &c.

Half-castes of the aboriginal native race may be deemed to be persons of the Native race for the purposes of the Act. It should also apply to any individual Native claiming to be the sole owner of any piece or portion of land. In connection with the subdivision or partition of Native land it would be also desirable to empower the Governor, if solicited by all the parties concerned, to cause disputed boundaries between tribes to be fixed and defined, as a means of obviating or terminating such disputes.

DONALD MCLEAN.

Minute by Ministers.

This is virtually a proposition to enable the Governor to waive the Crown's right of pre-emption in favour of Natives to any extent which he may deem fit. It appears obvious that all the material objections urged by the Native Secretary against the Ministerial measure apply with vastly-increased force to his own proposal.

Individualization of Native Title.—Native Territorial Rights Bill.

THE Native Territorial Rights Bill affects the most difficult and delicate question with which the British Government in New Zealand has to deal; and the Legislature, in touching on it, has shown a corresponding caution.

The subject has two aspects: the one relating to the civilization of the Natives, the other to the promotion of the settlement of the country by Europeans. Ministers hold that these two objects, truly viewed, are ultimately inseparable. The purpose of the measure is, however, to place in the hands of the Government a new and powerful instrument for the civilization of the Natives, and by no means to increase the immediate facilities for the acquisition of land by the Europeans. It is notorious that the most frequent and bloody Maori feuds arise, and have always arisen, from disputed title to land.

The four existing quarrels which have been referred to have all this origin, and others that could be mentioned are at this moment smouldering. It is equally indisputable that the communistic habits of the aborigines are the chief bar to their advancement. Separate landed holdings are indispensable to the further progress of this people. Chastity, decency, and thrift cannot exist amidst the waste, filth, and moral contamination of the pas.

In order to strike at the root of these evils, the Bill provides—first, for the ascertainment and registry of tribal title; secondly, for the issue of Crown grants to individual Natives of lands ceded for the purpose by their respective tribes.

The propriety of making at least an attempt to provide means for the extrication of Native title from its present entanglement, for reducing it to fixed rules, and for subjecting it to the jurisdiction of regular tribunals, can hardly admit of a doubt. Even if it appeared that such an attempt might involve a certain amount of risk, that surely ought not to deter a great Christian Power from some effort to avert the shame and the sin of remaining, what Her Majesty's representative in these Islands is at this moment, the passive witness of murderous affrays between Her Majesty's subjects, almost under the guns of her garrisons. But no such risk is really incurred. The interference of the Executive Government to adjust land disputes remains under the Bill purely optional. The Bill throughout all its provisions is permissive, and the plan must by no means be confounded with the compulsory registration of Native title, provided for by the Royal Instructions of 1846. Ministers are aware that good can only be effected by proceeding with the greatest caution. They desire nevertheless to make a timely step in advance, as being not only the justest but the safest course—as the surest means of avoiding future complications. This is a case in which it would be found that "a forward retention of custom is as turbulent a thing as an innovation."

The grants to individual Natives will effect a gratuitous transmutation of the Native title of occupancy into an English fee-simple. It is a difficult question whether lands so granted should or should not be alienable to Europeans. Perhaps no general rule can be laid down. In some cases it might be desirable to secure the heirs of a spendthrift chief against the effect of his extravagance. In other cases no sufficient reason might exist for withholding the full powers of ownership. It has, therefore, been left discretionary with the Government to impose restrictions on alienation. Occasionally it is probable that the power of restraining alienation might be usefully employed to prohibit acquisitions of land by Europeans in remote districts. At all events, it will be seen that, under the provisions of the Bill, the Government retains undiminished its present power of checking dispersed settlement of the country by Europeans. Although the measure was not framed with any direct view to colonizing objects, it cannot be doubted that the proposed registration of Native title (too long neglected) would facilitate the operations of the Land Purchase Department, and the acquisition, by cession from the tribes, of fresh territory. At present there are no fixed rules whatever as to what shall be recognized as valid claims to share in the money paid for the surrender of the Native right. Absurd and vexatious disputes constantly attend the negotiations of the department, and are only settled by a large expenditure of colonial funds.

Under the second division of the Bill a small extent of lands might come into European hands by purchase from the Native donees. Upon all such transactions the 11th section imposes a tax of 10s. per acre, payable by the purchaser. The fund thence accruing, it is provided, shall be expended in public works and improvements on the land or in its neighbourhood. Ministers consider that it is by no means desirable that such purchases should become, at present, the favourite mode for the acquisition of land by European settlers; and the amount of the proposed tax is designedly placed sufficiently high to prevent many such transactions taking place. Ten shillings per acre is the ordinary price of waste lands in all the provinces of the North Island, and the amount of the tax will consequently operate differentially in favour of the ordinary mode of purchase.

So long as the loan for the extinction of Native title holds out, and it is possible to obtain a cession of tribal rights over considerable tracts of country through the operations of the Land Purchase Department, it appears preferable that the European settler should purchase of Government rather than of Natives holding Crown grants. At the present rate of expenditure the loan will not, however, last more than five or six years, and an immense area will be left still subject to the Native title. It therefore behoves those who direct the affairs of the country to look forward and consider of a substitute for the present system, which at the expiration of that period may be capable of being worked on an extensive scale, and may supply the two essentials—land and a Land Fund. The best plan which has suggested itself to the present Advisers of the Crown is that the Native title, being first carefully ascertained by proper officers, should be gradually commuted into English fee-simple; that the land should remain unburdened whilst in Native hands, but that a tax should be paid by the European purchaser, and that its proceeds should be devoted to the improvement of the country. The present measure, in its secondary aspect of a colonizing measure, may be regarded as a cautious experiment of such a plan on a very small scale. If found to work well the principle might in future years be extensively acted upon.

Objections to Native Territorial Rights Bill discussed.

It now becomes necessary to advert specially to certain objections which have been raised to the Bill under consideration. The first is that the power of issuing grants to Natives is vested in the Governor in Council, instead of in the Governor solely, thereby necessitating the concurrence of the Responsible Ministry of the day. This is alleged to be a departure from the terms of His Excellency's memorandum of the 15th April, 1856, establishing Responsible Government. By the memorandum of the 15th April, 1856, the Governor reserves to himself the right of acting upon his own responsibility, in opposition to the advice of Ministers, upon Imperial questions, including questions affecting the relations of Government with the Native tribes. Obviously the memorandum could only affect the existing powers and prerogatives of the Crown. It was not competent to the Governor to stipulate as to the conditions under which new and extraordinary powers should be conferred by the General Assembly upon the Executive, nor did His Excellency attempt to do so.

Looking at the question as one of abstract constitutional principle, no Ministry could propose to intrust a power vitally affecting the relations of the settlers and Natives, and the pecuniary resources of the colony, to the discretion of a single individual, however elevated his position, who must commonly possess only a limited experience and a transitory interest in the affairs of the country. Even in a Crown colony acts of so high a nature are often required to be done with the advice of the Executive Council. It appears surprising that the General Assembly could by any person be expected to make over, without any guarantee for its exercise in accordance with public opinion, a power greater than was ever intrusted by the Imperial Government to the Governors of this colony; but a power which, it is not forgotten, was by one of those officers illegally assumed, and employed in a manner of which the evil effects have not, after a lapse of fourteen years, entirely passed away. Ministers feel assured that the Colonial Legislature could never be brought to sanction the concession of such an unlimited discretion, more especially considering the effect of its possible abuse upon the future produce of the territorial revenue, and the heavy liabilities of the colony to the Home Government and the public creditor. The power is virtually a power over the public purse, which, to a limited extent and under due guarantees, the General Assembly has shown itself willing to concede to the Executive for the good of the Natives, but which it is in vain to expect it will ever absolutely alienate.

The second objection taken to the Bill, which it seems requisite to notice, is that the imposition of of payment upon alienation to Europeans is an unjust exaction from the Native donee. To this it is answered that no Native is obliged to take a grant, or, having obtained one, to sell it to a European. By accepting the grant the Native's position is vastly improved, even though the power of alienation should be altogether withheld. But there is another sufficiently obvious fallacy in the objection. It is assumed that the acreage-tax reduces, pro tanto, the purchase-money. It is overlooked that the tax is applicable to the improvement of the land sold, and thereby increases its value in most cases to a greater amount. The sum payable into the Treasury is no part of the price of the land. It is the price of the improvements. But what really lies at the root of this objection is a doctrine so mischievous and unfounded that it requires special notice. It is asserted that the Native is really entitled to an absolute grant in fee-simple of whatever territory his tribe may think fit to make over to him in severalty, however extensive, and that to refuse such a grant—at least to impose any condition which does not operate for the sole and exclusive benefit of the Natives—is unfair. To make the Crown's right of pre-emption productive of a Land Fund—either in the way in which it is now made productive, viz., by means of sales of land ceded to the Crown at a low rate and disposed of at an increased price, or by the proposed tax on alienation—is regarded as essentially unjust to the Natives, who, it is thought, ought fairly to receive the whole purchase-money. In accordance with this view, the difference between the price paid to the Natives and the selling price of land has sometimes been represented to be a contribution by the Natives to the revenue of the colony, entitling them (if justice were done) to the expenditure, for purely Native purposes, of a largely-increased proportion of the colonial funds. And, as to the present system of purchases, it is regarded as nothing less than a systematic fraud practised by a civilized Power upon its ignorant subjects. This doctrine, it will be seen, reduces the Crown from the possession of a substantial power over the whole territory of New Zealand—which power it is bound to employ for the benefit of all its subjects—to the condition of a bare trustee for the Maoris. But the Crown's right of pre-emption (which no officer of the Crown, at least, will venture to question) was reserved avowedly for colonizing objects—i.e., to enable the Government to promote and systematize the settlement of the country. The exercise of the power for these objects, even if inconsistent with the pecuniary interest of the Natives, could not be reasonably objected to on their behalf. The Natives have always fully understood and acknowledged the right of the Crown to impose such terms as it pleases upon its own European subjects who seek to settle the country. But it has already been demonstrated that it is altogether a mistake to suppose that any pecuniary interest of the Natives is interfered with by the employment of the Crown's right for the purpose of raising a revenue in the way proposed. The enhanced price received by the Government is really the price, not of the land, but of the improvements which the Government undertake to execute out of what are improperly called its profits. This is strictly true as to the country as a whole, though it may not be so of every hundred acres of land sold. The enhanced value of the land is due to the immigration and public works which the Colonial Land Fund has been the means of carrying on.

The notions above combated arise from a narrow view of Native interests which those who devote an exclusive attention to Maori questions appear, unfortunately, somewhat apt to contract. The affairs of New Zealand can only be successfully administered on the basis of a hearty belief in the real identity of the interests of the two races. In a large view it is quite as important to the Native as to the European that the resources of the colony should not be crippled by the destruction of its Land Fund. And, if the possibility of diverting the territorial revenue of the Northern Island into the pockets of the Natives were a reality, instead of a glaring economical fallacy, it is certain that such an accession of wealth to men only partially emerged from complete barbarism would speedily prove their ruin. The real effect of acting upon such doctrines would be to hand over large tracts of country to a class of land-jobbers, destitute of the means of rendering their purchases available. The traffic in the lands would fall into the hands of a set of middle-men, whose transactions and connections with the Natives—not always of a lawful or reputable character—gave them special influence. Intending immigrants, learning that land was no longer attainable except through private hands, and that the country lay unimproved, would be deterred, and the hope of a regular colonization would be not merely deferred, but destroyed. In short, it will appear that the proposition of the objectors to the Bill to confer on the Governor an unlimited power of granting lands to the Natives, which shall be alienable to Europeans without any payment into the Colonial Treasury, is simply asking the Colonial Legislature to authorize and invite a renewal of Governor Fitzroy's proceedings on the issue of the well-known "penny-an-acre Proclamation" of 1844, and thereby to endanger at once the peace and public credit of the colony, and the prosperity of all Her Majesty's subjects within its limits.

To avoid a tedious detail of minor objections to the Bill, Ministers transmit herewith copies of memoranda by two of the permanent officers of the Native Department who disapprove of the measure, and suggest one of the character which has already been indicated. The few comments which Ministers feel it necessary to make on these memoranda appear in the margin of the copies. Ministers would regret that Her Majesty should be advised to withhold assent to this Bill, chiefly because that course would deprive the Executive of the colony of a useful engine for the civilization of the Natives; but they conceive that the absence for a time of any legislation on the subject, though prejudicial, would be infinitely preferable to the highly dangerous and unconstitutional measure which it has been proposed to substitute for the Ministerial Bill.

C. W. RICHMOND.

29th September, 1858.

No. 7. SCHEME for the PARTITION and ENFRANCHISEMENT of LANDS held under NATIVE TENURE. [F. D. Fenton's "Observations, 1859."]

CROWN grants cannot, except in rare instances, be issued even in cases where sole and unencumbered ownership is clear and undisputed, for the Native owner will not accede to a proceeding which infers that his own title is imperfect. The instrument of primary assurance must therefore be in the nature of a certificate testifying that the parties named therein are the owners of the lands therein described. It is further premised that no certificate should be issued until due inquiry has made it clear that the right parties have been discovered, and that no adverse claims are outstanding.

Inasmuch as the dignity of the Crown will be as much concerned in defending the title under a certificate when issued by itself as under a Crown grant (if such could be made), time should elapse between the award of ownership made in pursuance of the inquiries hereafter explained, and the issue of the instrument which certifies to it, and during that interval certain acts of ownership should be done and committed. In the meantime the whole conduct of the investigations and the responsibilities of them, as well as the duty of maintaining the award, should be thrown upon the Maoris, so that the dignity of the Crown should in no case be compromised or its interference be needed. This principle has already been recognized by the Legislature in the recent measures for providing civil institutions—viz., "The Native Circuit Courts Act, 1858," and "The Native Districts Regulation Act, 1858." For this purpose and with this view the investigation must be purely local. Indeed, it is very questionable whether the suspicions of the people will allow them to permit the adjudication of their lands in purely European Courts, or otherwise by purely European machinery.

No machinery can be invented more admirably adapted for the performance of the duty of investigation of the ownership and the partition of the common lands of the country than the species of Court-Leet and Great Court-Baron recently created by "The Native Circuit Courts Act, 1858." The proceedings must be authoritative. Negotiation and diplomatism will have no force and no public support.

The process of legalizing tenure may be as follows: At each Courthouse established under the last-named Act will be deposited a book of record for the purpose of registering therein the names of owners who have been recognized, and the boundaries of the land of which they have been decreed the owners. Any tribe, subdivision of a tribe, or individual desiring to have their or his land defined by metes and bounds and registered in the Court-roll must give notice of such desire to the Native Magistrate (called in the Act a Native Assessor) of the locality, specifying in such notice the names of the claimants and the description of the land. If, after discussion between the European Magistrate and the Native Magistrate, there appears to be no matter in the claim likely to create political difficulties, the Resident Magistrate causes the claim to be entered on the Court-roll and affixed to the door of the Courthouse, and circulated in such other ways as will give publicity thereto, adding also a notice to the public that adverse claims must be immediately sent in to him, delivered to the Native Magistrate of the locality. If no adverse claims appear, or such only as admit of adjudication, notice is given to all the parties, and affixed to the door of the Courthouse, that on the day named in such notice the title to the land will be investigated. If, however, the adverse claims sent in appear likely to create undue excitement or insuperable difficulty, no immediate day of hearing will be fixed by the Resident Magistrate, but notice must be given that the matter is adjourned for the present. On the day of hearing (not being a Court day), the Resident Magistrate causes an uninterested jury to be summoned, after the manner of the constitution of a criminal jury in "The Native Circuit Courts Act, 1858." He, with the Native Magistrates of the locality (unless interested, when others must be sought), and the jury, hears the speakers or witnesses in the Courthouse, first of the claimants and then of the opponents, and in fact conducts the case as an inquiry before the Commissioners under an Act for enclosing lands of common would be conducted in England. At the conclusion the jury (assisted, if necessary, by the Resident Magistrate) gives a verdict that the claimant is entitled to the land, or otherwise, as the case may be, or that the land be divided among the contending claimants. In the latter case the Resident Magistrate and Native Magistrates, assisted by the jury, proceed to make partition of the land, and in any case cause all sufficient posts and boundary-marks to be set up. The proceedings and the verdict are entered on the Court-roll, signed by the Court and all the parties. A copy of this roll will be evidence of Native title, and will be the title-deed. In case a tribe, having had their land enrolled, desire that it be further divided amongst subdivisions, or again amongst individuals, the same process must be followed, and record similarly must be made. All subsequent alienations, or change of ownership by descent or otherwise, must be presented by a jury at a Court-Leet, and entered on the rolls, the previous copy being surrendered, and a fresh one issued. Thus will be established a very tractable tenure, resembling the copyhold or base tenure of England, each district of a Court representing a manor.

Whenever land is proposed to be alienated to a pakeha a certificate of title from the Crown can be issued with ease to the Native proprietor, whose name appears at the time on the rolls of the Court as the owner, all doubt as to title and boundaries having been removed by the foregoing operations. On the transfer of this certificate to the purchasing pakeha, and the issue of a Crown grant to such purchaser, must be paid the sum due to the Crown for the release of its right of pre-emption, a right which cannot at present be foregone, as by the recent Imperial Act the whole territorial revenue is mortgaged to the Crown. In case "The Native Territorial Rights Bill, 1858," receives the Royal assent; the payment for this release of the pre-emptive right must be at the rate of 10s. per acre, but for many reasons it appears to the writer that a sum calculated ad valorem on the purchase-money would be far preferable. The expense of the survey, which would on the occasion of this final extinction of Native rights become necessary, would be a simple matter of bargain between vendor and purchaser. It would, however, be far better if Native surveyors were educated in the manner proposed elsewhere, specially for the performance of the duty of surveying common Native lands. A class of educated Native surveyors would smooth away many difficulties.

F. D. FENTON.

Auckland,

1859.

No. 8. REMARKS on MAORI AFFAIRS.[Notes on Maori Matters, 1860.]

It would appear that some four hundred years since a considerable body of barbarians, originally derived from the Malay race, found their way from the islands of Polynesia, where they had been temporary sojourners, to the shores of New Zealand—a country then probably void of inhabitants—established themselves there, and received accessions to their numbers by fresh immigration from the same source. They arrived here in canoes, the pilgrims occupying each canoe being associated by the ties of kindred, forming a number of families with a common name and common ancestry. On landing they took possession of the unoccupied soil, not in mass, nor in the name of one people or nation, nor individually, but in small aggregations of kindred families, clans, or tribes, some of which, either at the outset or in process of time, were subdivided again into hapus or septs.

The tribes not being united together under any common head or sovereign, but being socially and politically—as far as they had any polity—independent of, and often hostile to, one another, each tribe would have, de facto, in a rude way, within the limits of the territory occupied by them, the same sovereignty, substantially, which a civilized nation acquires, according to the law of nations, over an unoccupied country of which it has taken possession: that is to say, they would not admit the right of any other tribe or individual, as long as they were in possession, to interfere with their enjoyment of the land or to meddle with their internal economy; but they would regulate the domestic affairs of the tribe, and their relations with other tribes, according to the will of their own sovereign or quasi-sovereign power. That sovereign power, though vague and undefined, seems to have been vested in the whole body of the freemen of the tribe; for, although various classes of persons were recognized, and much stress laid, socially, on the dignity of birth, there does not seem to have been any distinct subordination of rights and duties or privileges of freemen, inter se. Slaves were the personal property of their captors: that is, their owners could give them away or take their lives without being subject to punishment or censure, and slaves had no kind of civil rights, although they often lived with their captors on a footing almost of apparent equality.

It would appear that, of the attributes of sovereignty, the administration of justice (as far as there was any beyond mere reprisals) and the right of declaring war, as well as the power of temporary alienation of land belonging to the tribes, were all vested in the tribe generally, and, although often exercised by chiefs or tohungas, were so exercised with the consent, either express or tacit, of the whole tribe. But the original tenure, by occupation, was one which could be maintained by a tribe only so long as they were strong enough to prevent another tribe from depriving them of it; for there was no tribunal, external or common to all the tribes, to which appeal could be made, nor does there seem to have been any compact or understanding, express or implied, that if one tribe should disturb another in its occupation the general body of the tribes should protect the occupier or punish the assailant. Therefore the right of occupation was always liable to be superseded by force, and acquisition of territory by conquest was recognized by all the tribes as rightful, possession (other than by sufferance) being the evidence of the right.

In speaking, therefore, of the right of a tribe to land, it seems plain that, for all purposes external to the tribe itself, it means its power of keeping possession; and the interest of the tribe in the land is neither more nor less than its aggregate possession, through families or individuals, of the lands which they were allowed to enjoy, and, by the whole tribe, of those lands, forests, fisheries, &c., which they all enjoyed in common, such possession not being merely by the sufferance of a conqueror, and having been acquired by occupation or conquest: There seems to have been no recognition of a power of alienation in perpetuum by one tribe, or individual of a tribe, to another tribe, or individual of another tribe; though land seems to have been lent or exchanged for a time by one tribe to another. And when a man of one tribe married a woman of another, he was generally allowed to enjoy the land in which she had an individual interest, within her tribe, during her lifetime. There does not appear to have been any mode of making or enforcing contracts, or obtaining justice as between different tribes. In short, as between tribes, or individuals of different tribes, might seems to have constituted the only right known to the Maori people.

On looking, into the internal economy of the tribe, we find that there were some rights pretty definitely ascertained, while others were very vague. As before noticed, the distinction between the classes of free men do not seem to have been well defined, nor do their distinctive functions. Much misconception and many fallacious reasonings on this subject, which seem to have been prevalent, may be fairly attributed to mistaken assumptions with respect to the rights, privileges, and powers of the persons called chiefs. The word "chief" has been used in a very vague and ambiguous manner. Chieftainship seems, in truth, to have amounted to little more than a prestige accorded by a tribe to individuals, which gave to its possessors an influence and control over the tribe in proportion to the personal respect which they could command. Great stress was laid on birth, and the ariki, the lord or head chief of a tribe, was the person of highest birth, and was estimated accordingly; the rangatiras following him according to the distinction of their descent. These were naturally looked to as leaders in war or in council; but, apart from the deference paid to their position, there does not seem, except in time of war, to have been any definite authority, privilege, or duty assigned to them, except that of a species of vaticination and oracular uttering of traditional lore by the ariki and the tohunga, accompanied, in the case of the ariki, with the painful isolation of the tapu. Not birth only, but personal superiority also, either physical or oratorical, seems to have been enough to induce a tribe to treat the possessor as a chief; but the low-born chief held his honour only for his life, and did not necessarily transmit chieftainship to his posterity. If the man of highest birth proved unequal to his work in time of war, men of lower birth acquired the influence and ascendancy of a chief, and were acknowledged as such. A chief of great influence, and confident of the power he had over his tribe, would often act for it almost without consulting the general body; and if a principal and influential chief was sure of the assent of the men of the highest birth and character, he might count upon that of the mass of the people. Chiefs were, then, simply the chief men of a tribe or hapu, and their functions in time of peace were few and unimportant. When war began they naturally became more important, and the chief had more power. An unpopular chief of great birth would not be a representative man, and tribes often repudiated the acts of such chiefs; and, conversely, when a man of no birth or position proposed or did an act for the tribe they would adopt and ratify it if it suited their views. In time of peace the relation of the principal or any other chief to the tribe was not in any way like that of a sovereign to his subjects or a feudal lord to his vassals; but in war-time the head chief—whether he was the hereditary head or a successful adventurer who had gained prestige—would necessarily have much of the authority of the imperator. The lord chief (ariki)—who combined the functions of priest and chief—seems generally to have been allowed by the tribe, on acquisition of territory by conquest, to take the first choice of land for usufructuary possession; and after him the rangatiras, according to their rank by birth; the tutuas, or general body of free men, getting what they could in the scramble for their own usufructuary occupation. As families increased and cultivations were exhausted, fresh appropriations of this kind would take place within the general territory of the tribe. The portions of land so adopted and appropriated—at all events after they had been cultivated by the possessors—became the property of the individual occupier as against all other persons of the tribe, whether chiefs or commoners. This usufructuary right, though not alienable to strangers or to other persons of the tribe, descended by inheritance, as of right, to the children or other kindred of the occupier; and, in case of a woman marrying into another tribe, her husband, as has before been remarked, often enjoyed her right for his life.

It has been recently stated that a kind of fiduciary interest in land was sometimes vested in a chief for the benefit of others, such as widows and orphans belonging to the tribe. But such a practice looks very much like the result of European suggestions, and is scarcely consistent with the older habits of the people. If any such custom was generally recognized by the Maoris, it probably amounted to no more than this: that some chief was intrusted with the duty of seeing that land, which had been appropriated with the consent of the tribe for the purpose of allowing certain persons to occupy it by the sufferance of the tribe, was used for that purpose, in which case the occupation of such persons would really be the occupation of the tribe, and no title or right would devolve by inheritance on the heirs or kindred of the persons so permitted to occupy.

No accumulation of personal property by a man, beyond the produce of his cultivation and his own handiwork, ever took place, and there was no contract of sale; even barter was carried on by the clumsy mode of reciprocal presents.

Violations of any right of property, or of any right known to the Maoris, were punished or remedied either by reprisals or by an award of compensation, enforced either by appeals to superstitious fears, or persuasion, or force. There seems to have been no specific tribunal, but the general body of the tribe concurred in an award made by the tohungas, the priestly depositories of the oral traditions of the tribe, or by the ariki, and enforced by threats of punishment by evil spirits and the tyrannical, and embarrassing process of the tapu. The rangatiras, too, sometimes persuaded the offender to submission by oratorical appeals to the examples of bygone times.

What special authority, if any, the head chief possessed in a civil capacity, as distinguished from the rangatira, does not seem clear; and it is doubtful whether any privilege or right was awarded to him, except the concession in many cases of the first choice of land, and the deference paid to his position, supported by the tapu. There was a vague idea of power, influence, right, quasi-sovereignty or lordship, derived from the tribal acquisition of the land, called the "mana" of the land—the shadow as distinguished from the substance; but even if this mana was vested in the head chief or in other chiefs, which is improbable, it does not seem to have given them any beneficial rights or any power of disposal or control over the property in the land without, or contrary to, the assent, expressed or implied, of the body of the tribe. The customs about this and many other of the matters referred to were by no means uniformly the same in all tribes. When a chief gave slaves, whom he had taken, leave to hold land, he expected from them, and they brought to him, certain produce or work as tribute, in respect of the mana; but, though free men also used to make presents to the chiefs, these were merely complimentary, were not demandable of right, and were almost always returned.

To sum up then: There was no general government or general intertribal polity among the Maori tribes of New Zealand. They had no common head, no common tribunal, no common interests. The government of tribes—if their customs can be called by such a name—corresponded with no known type among civilized peoples. There were some features of monarchy, more of aristocracy, and many of republicanism; but the combination was not definite nor capable of assimilation to any known constitution of civilized society; nor was the government merely patriarchal. Their notions of property of any kind were the vaguest; nothing approaching to regular commerce existed. The origin of the interest of tribes and individuals in land was communistic, and the enjoyment of it in some degree communistic—the one acquired by force, the other at the mercy of external force. There was no practice of alienation of land by individuals at all, except indeed the indirect alienation for a life of the usufruct of a portion of land belonging to a woman who married into another tribe, and no "out-and-out" alienation even by a tribe; but slaves and others were allowed to hold lands by the sufferance of conquerors who retained in themselves the mana of the land, while the usufruct was in the occupier. The customs and practices, the acknowledged rights and duties, were by no means uniform or definitely settled; they differed or were modified by circumstances at different times in different tribes; and the absence of other customs; such as the ordinary modes of alienation of property in civilized communities, before Europeans came to the country, are to be accounted for by the consideration that the circumstances of the people made the customs they possessed convenient, advantageous, or necessary, according to their narrow views and limited knowledge, while they had never theretofore felt the want, the importance, or the convenience of those which they lacked.

The character of the people it is not very easy to delineate both justly and completely, composed as it is of elements so diverse. Brutal and savage to excess during the excitement of war, they were yet capable of actions which would not have disgraced the chivalry of Europe. Grossly immoral with respect to the intercourse of the sexes before marriage, they yet treated the marriage-tie with much respect, and its violation with severity. Quick in apprehension, and of lively wit, they could yet hardly master the first elements of arithmetic. They were both generous and treacherous, good-natured and vindictive. They were very superstitious, and yet had but little imagination. They had little or no fear of death, and yet they seemed to need physical excitement to stimulate their courage to action. Their arts were few and rude. They were not nomadic, but much attached to the soil which they or their fathers had occupied or conquered; and all their differences, according to their own proverb, were about women and land.

From the first discovery of New Zealand by Tasman, some two hundred years after the settlement of the Maori immigrants, down to the later visits of Captain Cook, a century after, the amount and nature of the intercourse between the New Zealanders and strangers does not seem to have been such as to cause much modification of their habits, although the first ideas of external commerce must have been suggested to their minds, and the probability of their deriving substantial benefits from the repeated visits and the settling of pakehas in the country may have occurred to them.

The introduction of fresh varieties of animal and vegetable food, superior to the ordinary provisions to which they had been accustomed, was probably the first great step towards material civilization; and the increasing acquaintance of the Maoris with white men, proving that the latter were not only not necessarily hostile to them, but were able and willing to teach them many useful and pleasant arts and to give them command of many previously undreamed of comforts and luxuries and mechanical and warlike contrivances, induced them at first to tolerate, and then to encourage, the regular intercourse, and afterwards the permanent settlement, of whalers and others who visited the coasts. They seem to have evinced no jealousy or predisposition against an amalgamation of races, or the formation of temporary or permanent connections between the pakehas and the women of their own race and tribes, but, on the contrary, to have encouraged such unions. As Europeans began to settle in the country, and naturally desired to acquire land for occupation and cultivation, the Maoris discovered that they might now use their land in a way to which they had hitherto been unaccustomed, by exchanging parts of it for the now much-coveted blankets, axes, tobacco, and, above all, firearms and gunpowder of the stranger. Thus a new kind of transaction, not formerly recognized by the general customs of the Maori race, sprang up, and alienation of land was introduced de facto.

About the character of the earliest land sales probably but little trustworthy evidence is attainable. Whether individuals of a tribe practically arrogated to themselves the right of disposing of the portion of land which they occupied with the consent of their tribe, and which, if not alienated, would have descended to their kindred, I am not aware; but it seems probable that the common men did not do so. Chiefs, or persons calling themselves chiefs, seem to have engaged in such transactions; but whether they claimed or assumed a right to sell the portions which they individually occupied, or more than they occupied for their own benefit, without the consent of the tribe, or acted in the name or in the interest of the whole tribe, with its express assent, or an applied assent, on which they counted in respect of their personal influence, does not seem very clear. In many cases it is likely that they assumed to act for the tribe or hapu, and gave up to the persons entitled to occupy the lands portions of the goods received for it. Indeed, it is probable that there was very little principle or system in these transactions. Sometimes the Maori would try to cheat the pakeha by pretending to sell land to which he had no title; sometimes, and perhaps more often, the European would try to cheat the Maori by giving him comparatively worthless articles for large tracts of land; sometimes there was a common intention of each to take advantage of the other; and often, no doubt, unprincipled Europeans obtained, for ulterior fraudulent purposes, what they knew to be sham titles, with the signatures, or rather marks, of chiefs, sometimes filling in the boundaries of the land supposed to be sold according to their fancy after the so-called execution of the conveyance. It is believed that the principal disposers of land in those days were persons who had no titles, or only defective ones; and persons with only an ostensible but no real title were the most forward to enter into negotiations with the Europeans.

The alienation of land to strangers being a thing quite new to the Maoris, it is probable that many of the tribes or chiefs who parted with it really believed that they were giving the purchasers only a temporary usufructuary interest, either a life interest or some other estate, such as lawyers call a particular estate, leaving the reversion of the fee, as it were, and the mana or ultimate quasi seigniorial right over the land in the tribe. But whatever right one party may have intended to grant and the other to acquire, undisturbed possession by the party purchasing gave a sort of title by acquiescence; and if the purchaser alienated to others in his lifetime, or on his death devised the land to another, and the second purchaser or devisee took possession, and his possession was not at once disturbed when it came to the knowledge of the Natives formerly interested, that would seem strong evidence that the person in possession had a right to the land recognized by such Natives.

The enclosing of land by a purchaser, too, seems to have been always taken as such an assertion of a right to it that Maori proprietors formerly interested in it were deemed, by acquiescing in it, to have acknowledged that all their title was gone.

The practice of disposing of the possession and enjoyment of land is not of the whole property and title to it, became thus established, not according to any fixed specific principle, but simply according to the dictates of convenience on the part of the seller, regard being had to the probability of the alienee not being disturbed in the possession. The more regular sales, however, were probably conducted in such a way as to recognize the communistic principle, the chiefs who personally engaged in the transaction acting for themselves and the tribe, or for persons of the tribe who claimed a share of the produce of any given sale.

While these rude beginnings of commerce were taking place, a mightier instrument of civilization was in the course of introduction, the one best fitted to throw down the strongholds of barbarism and superstition, to establish the intercourse of widely differing races upon a safe basis, to prepare the way for their amalgamation and ultimate fusion, and for securing the highest blessings of modern civilization. Through the labours of devoted missionaries belonging to various Christian bodies the Maoris, in an almost incredibly short space of time, learned the folly and wickedness of many of their old superstitions and the habits connected with them, and accepted with avidity the promises made to them by their now spiritual advisers and guides of better things for the present life as well as for the future.

Although it may be true that many of the new professors of Christianity among the Natives were merely professors, and that with others their new religion was only a newly-adopted superstition, there were, doubtless, many who became as sincere believers and acted as sincerely on their belief as the majority of professing Christians in civilized countries; and, whatever may have been the amount of sincere faith among the new converts, the doctrines and practices of Christianity had, at all events, made very large numbers ashamed of some of their former customs (cannibalism among the number), had given them new notions of morality and justice, and suggested to them the blessings and advantages of peace. The introduction of Christianity paved the way for the abolition of slavery. The missionaries often made the manumission of slaves a condition precedent to baptism, and the converts gave conclusive evidence of their sincerity by voluntarily depriving themselves of one of the principal evidences of rank and personal distinction among their people. The old cumbrous and superstitious practices of the tapu, which had been the chief means of holding their rude society together, were necessarily modified, where not entirely superseded, on the introduction of Christianity. The spiritual prestige, and consequently a great portion of the influence, of the arikis and tohungas was necessarily destroyed, and as yet nothing else in the shape of internal government was substituted for it.

The introduction of firearms naturally tended to make the Maoris even more quarrelsome than formerly for a time, and their wars for a time more sanguinary than before; but, as the spirit of Christianity was developed, and individual movable property was acquired by industry and by commerce in land and its fruits, and in other products of labour, the importance of peace became more manifest. Large quantities of land came into the possession—the undisturbed possession—of Europeans. Many Englishmen, some of them men of character, some of no character at all, were settling on the shores of New Zealand.

Meanwhile the Maoris, who had much communication with the English settlers, began to desire to put themselves under the protection of the British Crown, while unprincipled land-purchasers were naturally opposed to such a course (and some honest ones also), and the missionaries, probably jealous lest their good work should be interfered with by a concourse of English adventurers, were generally hostile to colonization, and apparently desirous of keeping up a marked distinction between the races. Ministers of the English Crown, having before them the reports of sad results of the extension of English dominion in other quarters of the world, and fearful lest they might become accessories to the extermination of the Maori race by establishing an English colony among them, and failing to perceive that English subjects would settle in the country in numbers without the leave of the Government, and would merely be likely to do much more mischief to the aboriginal inhabitants than if their settling was recognized and regulated by the Government, not only abandoned the claim to the sovereignty of New Zealand, which had on several occasions been asserted by the British Crown, but recognized the independence of certain tribes by providing them with a common flag—a proceeding which appears scarcely dignified unless they were prepared to guarantee the independence of such tribes, as an aggregate body or nation, against other powers. Notwithstanding the reclamations of English settlers and the expressed wishes of many of the Natives, the English Government could not for a long time be induced to take any steps towards adopting New Zealand as a colony, or giving their protégés the benefits of civil institutions, which might counteract the mischiefs attending the uncontrolled intercourse between them and English subjects, many of questionable character, and might aid in developing and rendering permanent the good work of the missionaries, and in educing the civil and social advantages for which that work was the best preparative. The so-called confederation of a few northern tribes or chiefs, apparently arranged by a British Resident who was the agent of the British Government in the business of the flag, never acquired any consistency or constitution which could support the suggestion that any delegation of sovereign authority, or of interest of any kind, had been deliberately ceded by the component tribes to the aggregate body; or that the component tribes by reason thereof became less independent of each other than they were before; and, whatever may have been the intention of the British functionary, there is no pretence for saying that any national union or confederation was in fact effected by the ceremony of the flag. The enterprises of private associations of Englishmen—and whether they were conducted on defensible principles or not it boots not now to inquire—and the fear lest they should assume rights and privileges inconsistent with the prerogatives of the British Crown and public law, and probably the apprehension that New Zealand might be colonized by some other European Power if England were to refrain much longer, at last forced the Ministers of the British Crown, though with expressed reluctance and in a persuasive rather than imperative manner, to establish the Queen's authority in the Northern Island upon the principle of cession, in the Middle and Southern Islands by occupation, and thus to create a British colony throughout the territory so acquired.

The candid inquirer having now arrived at as definite ideas as he could reach with regard to the origin, customs, polity, and rights of the aboriginal race, and the modifications thereof, and the new practices introduced up to the time of the establishment of the colony, would stop for a while to consider the leading features which ought to characterize the policy of a wise, farsighted, just, and humane sovereign in establishing a colony among such a people. And surely, if extermination of the aboriginals was to be guarded against and their interests kept steadily in view, the fusion of the two races into one people, with one language, one religion, one government, one body of laws, with common rights, privileges, and duties, ought to be the great object of such a policy. The cumulative experience of other colonies and dominions of the British Crown seems to have established beyond doubt that coloured races, kept separate and distinct from the British race in the same territory, always deteriorate and diminish. But, inasmuch as an attempt to force European and English habits, laws, observances, and duties immediately and suddenly upon such a people as the Maoris must necessarily defeat its own object, provision must be made for a transition period during which the indispensable preparatory processes for the ultimate fusion of races, and for the complete development of British government and British institutions throughout the whole colony and population, must be prosecuted with vigour and discretion.

To establish a colony in New Zealand on the understanding and with the view that the two races should be prevented from fusing themselves—by guaranteeing to the Natives the maintenance of their own old barbarous customs, which would effectually prevent the development of commerce and civilization among them—would deprive them of many of the advantages to be derived from the colonization enjoyed by the Europeans, would arrest them in that upward career—physical, intellectual, and moral—on which they had already entered, and would surely have been contrary to humanity, justice, and wisdom. To deal with them as if they were, and were to remain, an independent people, on an equal footing with the English Crown, and only to be bound by treaties of alliance for mutual convenience in the joint occupation of one geographical territory, would be simply ridiculous. They were not, and could not be in any such sense as to make such an arrangement rational or possible, an independent people. They had no common bond of union. Each tribe had such independence only as it could keep by its own tomahawks or muskets; and all that could have been meant by the recognition of the independence of the flag-tribes was that England did not claim a right of sovereignty over them, but abandoned all such claim as it had formerly assumed.

But now the time had come when it was manifest to settlers and Maoris and Ministers that this independence must cease; that the Maoris wanted the protection of British laws and British power against British settlers, and British settlers wanted justice and British government among themselves and against Maoris; and a wise, humane, and just policy suggested that the British Crown should make some such proposition as this to the Maori people of New Zealand: "Englishmen are settling in great numbers among you; they are purchasing land from you; they often cheat you. As they increase more and more in numbers you will be more and more exposed to their dishonesty, and more and more at their mercy. You know what you have already gained, and may guess how much more you may yet gain, by the commerce and the arts that have been introduced by Englishmen among you; you begin to feel a want of protection for the pursuits of peace, and to be aware of the folly of constant wars. If, then, you will give up all pretence of independent sovereignty, and become subjects of the British Crown on the same footing and terms as its other subjects, you shall have substantially all the rights and privileges of British subjects—that is, protection for life, limb, liberty, property, and character; and more especially your beneficial interest in the land to which you are so attached: your lawful possession of it shall not be interfered with against your will, either by Europeans or by Maoris not having any superior right to it. In fact, the land which you (each tribe or individual) formerly held, subject to the chance of its being taken from you by a stronger tribe, you shall now hold under the protection of the British Crown. Your interest in it will now become permanent and fixed; but you shall be at liberty to dispose of what you do not want—that is, when all persons beneficially interested in land are willing to dispose of it they shall not be prevented from doing so by the interference of others. You are really giving up nothing except rights of sovereignty, which you did not formerly possess, either aggregately or separately, in any definite form. You are only promising obedience to the laws which are to be the guarantees of all your rights, and are to give you wholesome and elevating substitutes for your old vague, barbarous, and unsatisfactory usages."

In carrying out these principles and performing these promises in their true spirit, it would be necessary to have respect to the feelings and prejudices of the people, and not to introduce even the most important and advantageous institutions in a way to create antagonism and to excite apprehension. Thus, although the individualization of property, both movable and immovable, would be a necessary step in civilization, and necessary to give the Maoris all the rights of British subjects, yet it might not be desirable, in the first instance, to give a private member of a tribe a right to alienate his own beneficial interest in the land which he occupied out of the tribe without their consent, because the tribe might, till a later stage in the process of amalgamating the races, feel vexed and jealous at seeing Europeans sitting down on land interspersed among the occupations of the tribe. By degrees, however, the Maoris would practically learn that this was a real good instead of a disadvantage.

One of the most important features—perhaps the most important—of a wise policy would be to educate the then rising and the succeeding generations with a special view to the fusion of races, teaching them, as the first and greatest preliminary, the language of the civilized people. The translation of the Holy Scriptures into the Maori tongue was an indispensable step towards the first christianizing of the Natives; but the use of the Maori tongue at all in the education of Maori children, after the establishment of the colony, would be contrary to good sense and a wise policy: it would be tending rather to shut than to open the gates of knowledge and civilization to the rising generations, and to postpone the great and noble work of making from the two races one Christian, civilized, English-speaking people, partaking in common of the benefits of British rule, British institutions, British commerce, arts, and literature. In this matter a British Government ought to act paternally, using the best means of persuasion and other incentives, if need were, to insure the general or universal education of Maori children in the English language.

In the department of justice the administration of the criminal law should be introduced at once when and where there was power of carrying it out without resistance, and where it was understood. Homicide, malicious injuries, and knowing violations of such rights of property as should have become fully intelligible to the Natives, ought at once to be put down by the Criminal Courts, the administration of justice itself being rendered a means of education, and affording a strong practical proof of the sincerity and truthfulness of the British authorities in their original professions. During the transition state the less formidable violations of the rights of property might be dealt with with some reference to the Maori doctrines of compensation. As regarded civil suits among themselves, it would be some time before the Maoris would find their way on such matters into English tribunals, but when they had done so justice would require that, during the transition state, Maori customs should be taken into consideration in determining the rights or duties of Maoris as among themselves, till at length the time should have come when, by the increasing amalgamation of the races, the Maoris would be affected with knowledge of the British laws, and must be taken to have acted and contracted with respect to them.

Though the institution of slavery still existed to some extent, the law ought to make no distinction, as to its protection, between freeman and slave. The murder or violent ill-treatment of a slave should be made the subject of criminal punishment; but there would be no just reason for granting to slaves, in occupation of lands by the sufferance of their captors or owners, any rights to such lands in derogation of the rights of those who suffered them to occupy. In the transition state, besides protecting the lives and persons of slaves, there would be little necessity for interfering between them and their former owners; and it might be expected that, on intertribal wars ceasing and Christianity developing itself, slavery would gradually disappear altogether, there never having been any custom of external traffic in slaves between the Maori tribes and strangers.

While the Native population were thus from the beginning put in possession of the broad rights and privileges of British subjects, and made amenable to the criminal law, and such other laws as they should gradually come to understand, they would be acquiring the intelligence necessary for enabling them to exercise privileges granted to, and duties imposed upon, certain sections of British subjects, such as the right of taking part in the election of legislators and the duty of assisting as jurymen in the administration of the law. As long as any reference to Maori customs was admissible in the administration of justice, or to define rights and interests for the purpose of the acquisition of land held by Maoris, it would be necessary to have some tribunal with a Maori element in it which should insure the best information and judgment upon the customs and understood rights of the people.

In order to protect the Maoris themselves against the rapacity and dishonesty of European speculators, as well as to establish a system of land titles uniform, simple, and practical, the British Government would insist that all its European subjects should take their title to land through the Crown, and also that those Maoris who should buy lands after the settlement of the colony should do the same, facilities being further given to the Maoris to define their own land and get Crown titles for them. To carry out this system a right of pre-emption, or rather of exclusive original purchase, should be given to the Crown. In the exercise of this right the Crown would give to the Maoris such sums as they should be willing to take and as should be reasonable under all the circumstances, reserving for itself the right to sell the same land again to any purchasers, either European or Maori, with the additional advantage of a title to it by Crown grant, at such advanced price as would leave a revenue to the Crown to be devoted to the purposes of good government and the promotion of the common interests of both races. Of this, as of other branches of the revenue, a due proportion ought to be devoted to the special purposes of Maori civilization. Improved cultivation of lands, improved dwellings, improved personal habits, ought to be encouraged by precept and example, by pecuniary and other assistance.

The character and feelings of the people ought to be thought of, especially during the transition state. They ought to be protected against temptations to fall into bad habits of Europeans, such as intoxication, and to relapse into habits of quarrelsomeness and violence, such as would be fostered by the acquirement of arms and ammunition. They ought to be made gradually to attain to such confidence in the law and in the honesty of the Government as to consider the acquisition of means of defence or attack against or upon their European neighbours as unimportant and unnecessary. The higher families and chiefs—those who had formerly enjoyed the greatest estimation and respect—ought to be treated with marked distinction and consideration, and in every legitimate way conciliated, so that they might feel their real loss of influence as little as possible, might not lose their self-respect, and might be heartily inclined to use all the influence still left to them in the promotion of the objects of the Government. The chiefs themselves would not appreciate this tribute to their hereditary and personal importance more than the mass of the common men of their tribes would do.

Tribes having common occupation of lands and individuals (if necessary, with the consent of their tribes) ought to be encouraged to sell as much land as they did not require for their own usufructuary purposes; but they ought not to be encouraged to denude themselves entirely of all interest in land, inasmuch as persons formerly possessed of land, after selling the whole of it and expending the purchase-money, might be discontented, might lose their self-respect, become turbulent and troublesome, and finally have recourse to lawless practices, and establish a dangerous class in the community.

Firmness, combined with conciliation; action, legislative and administrative, founded on fixed principle, and never at variance with such principle, though tender and sensitive to the prejudices and circumstances of the people; a treatment during the transition period such as a wise, just, humane, and experienced parent would adopt towards children who had been left theretofore without parental care and subject to evil influences—would be the leading characteristics of a policy which should redound equally to the true well-being of the Maori and to the lasting honour of the British people.

I. D. McLEAN, Chief Commissioner for the Purchase of Native Lands.—1860.

THE Governor was most anxious that some means should be devised by the chiefs of the conference to define tribal boundaries, and make such a subdivision of property among tribes, families, and individuals as would secure to them their landed rights on a more certain foundation than now existed. The chiefs present were all aware that land was the main source of many of their difficulties, occasioning loss of life and affecting the property of both races. No fixed law on the subject could be said to exist, except the "law of might." It was true various customs relating to Native tenure existed, but these were not in any way permanent, and the endless complications of such customs were eventually resolved into the law of might. Paora, one of the Ngatiwhatua chiefs present, had stated that one law did not exist with the Europeans and Natives about land. This was true, inasmuch as the Native has no fixed law to regulate the rights of property. How, therefore, could it be expected that one law should prevail? The European has a law to guide him on this subject; the Native has no well-defined law. The Governor had long thought of this subject, and availed himself of the present conference of chiefs to place his own views before them, in the hope that they would co-operate with him to devise such a measure as would simplify Native tenure, and enable them to leave the land they inherit in the quiet and undisturbed possession of their children. Scarcely a year passed without our hearing of war about land in some part of New Zealand. At Tauranga the Natives had been fighting very lately; also at Whakatane, Tunapahore, Upper Whanganui, Hawke's Bay, Ngapuhi, Te Ihutaroa, and now at Taranaki. It was asserted by some that these wars had been occasioned by Government land-purchases. This was untrue. The Government used every endeavour to prevent quarrels in conducting the purchase of land; and at those districts throughout New Zealand where no land had been purchased, such as Te Ihutaroa and other places with which the Government did not interfere, bloody feuds were carried on between the different tribes from time to time. Powerful tribes took possession of the land by driving off or exterminating the original inhabitants. Those in their turn drove off other less powerful tribes. The conqueror enjoyed the property while he had the power of keeping it. None were certain how long they could occupy the land in peace. It was true that Christianity introduced a different state of things. By its influences the conquered were permitted to re-establish themselves on the lands of their ancestors. In process of time, however, the conquered encroached too far on the formerly-recognized rights of the conqueror, occasioning up to the present day much bitterness of feeling between the two classes of claimants. Tribes vary in their customs about land, but after all their various customs are liable to be superseded by the law of might. He would not detain them longer, but wished them to consider this message well before they expressed an opinion on it.—[Speech at the Conference of Native Chiefs, July, 1860: in "Maori Messenger."]

You will remember being examined in writing by a Commission issued by his Excellency in 1856: one question put to you was, "Has a Native a strictly individual right to any particular portion of land, independent of the tribal right over it?" I find among the answers in the negative "McLean." Is that you, and was that your report on the question?—I am the Mr. McLean, and that is the reply which I made.

What do you mean by tribal right?—I suppose it means the right of a tribe.

Will you describe the meaning of tribal right in regard to the transfer of land?—It varies so much in different parts of the country, I should wish to know what particular part of the country you refer to, as the custom which prevails in one place does not in another.

What is the general rule?—There are very wide exceptions.

Is the rule or exception wider?—The exception is the wider.

When a hapu alienates, who represents it, and is the consent of all its members necessary?—In some tribes the different hapus must be consulted, in others the chiefs; much depends upon the personal character of the latter. I did not say that hapus or subdivisions of tribes had not a right of transfer of property. The various hapus or families which compose a tribe most frequently have the right of disposal, but not always; the custom varies.

How do you discover what the rights of the parties are?—You must discover them by inquiry of the people in the district where the land is situated, and elsewhere.

If Patukakariki is the head of the Ngatihinga, could an individual sell without his consent?—A certain number of claimants could sell, but not invariably without his consent.

What proportion?—a bare majority?—I cannot say. It would depend on the locality, the people, and the boundaries.

Then the sum of your evidence is this: that there are no settled rules or principles guiding alienation of land, and that in such matters the exception is wider than the rule?—The Natives have no fixed rule. The custom varies in different districts.—[Evidence at the Bar of the House of Representatives, August, 1860: Sess. Paper E.—No. 4.]

II. Bishop of New Zealand.—1860.

The Native land title is simple enough in its origin, but, from obvious causes, extremely complicated in its actual state. In its theory it is this: A few leading chiefs, with a small body of children and retainers, arrive at different parts of the Island, and make a rough partition of the territory among themselves by natural boundaries of mountains and rivers. These families grow into tribes, each possessing the patrimony derived from its ancestors. To preserve this inheritance unimpaired was a primary object of their care. To this end two restrictions were necessary—(1) Upon the right of alienation, and (2) upon the liberty of marriage. The case of the daughters of Zelophehad is strictly analogous to Maori usage. "If they be married to any of the sons of the other tribes of the children of Israel, then shall their inheritance be taken from the inheritance of our fathers, and shall be put to the inheritance of the tribe whereunto they are received. ... Let them marry to whom they think best; only to the family of the tribe of their father shall they marry." Other reasons may be assigned for these restrictions, such as the right of the tribe to require service from all its members, the necessity of keeping up their own numbers, and of preventing strangers from acquiring landed property to be used to the injury of the tribe.

There is reason to think that an independent right to alienate land without the consent of the tribe, is unknown in New Zealand. On the other hand, in the ample territory which each tribe at first possessed, there was probably much freedom of choice in the particular spot which each member might wish to cultivate. This spot became his own by right of occupation, and, in the absence of all forms of conveyance, descended to all his children and grandchildren, sons-in-law, and daughters-in-law, till the right, which was at first personal, became complicated by a multitude of claims. In the neighbourhood of fortified places these plots of ground, from the necessity of the case, were as minute as cottage gardens near a populous town; and it may be taken for granted as a general rule that in such cases every acre of land will contain ten or twenty plots, and for every plot there will be ten or twenty claimants, as I have repeatedly found. In such cases also, for the sake of mutual protection, the right of the tribe to control the alienation of land to foreigners would be most rigidly enforced.

Three points then seem to be clear on this subject—(1) That there was originally a distinct owner for every habitable spot in the Northern Island; (2) That these claims have become complicated by the obvious causes of inheritance and marriage, without forms of conveyance or bequest; (3) That these rights of ownership, whether in one or many joint proprietors, were not alienable without the consent of the tribe.—[Memorandum to the Governor, May, 1 860: in Sess. Paper E.—No. 1.]

III. Sir WILLIAM MARTIN, late Chief Justice of New Zealand.—1846.

So far as yet appears the whole surface of these Islands, or as much of it as is of any value to man, has been appropriated by the Natives, and (with the exception of the part which they have sold) is held by them as property. Nowhere was any piece of land discovered or heard of [by the Commissioners] which was not owned by some person or set of persons. ... There might be several conflicting claimants of the same land; but, however the Natives might be divided amongst themselves as to the validity of any one of the several claims, still no man doubted that there was in every case a right of property subsisting in some one of the claimants. In this Northern Island, at least, it may now be regarded as absolutely certain that (with the exception of lands already purchased from the Natives) there is not an acre of land available for purposes of colonization but has an owner amongst the Natives according to their own customs.....

For the most part the boundaries of property are well defined. In the immediate neighbourhood of such pas as are at present inhabited, land is often minutely subdivided; each separate piece belonging to some one person, who cultivates either alone or jointly with some member of his family. The same is the case in the neighbourhood of old pas, even though they may have been abandoned for many years. The titles of the former cultivations are remembered and maintained by their descendants.

Where the acts of appropriation, in some past generation, were of a less public nature, or took place a long time ago, the titles of the present claimants are of course much more difficult of proof. Out of cases of this kind the greater part of the existing disputes have arisen. Each of the claimants endeavours to prove some act of ownership exercised without opposition by one of his ancestors. Acts commonly alleged are—cultivating, building a house or catching rats on the land, setting an eel-weir, cutting down a totara tree in the forest for a canoe, &c. These claims, in the ordinary course of things, become sufficiently complicated, but are rendered much more so by the introduction of another set of claims which arise out of rights of conquest, enforced in very different degrees in different cases. Boundaries between different pieces of property have been often indicated by the Natives incidentally, without any question put or any previous reference to the subject, in spots now remote from any habitation of man: for example, on the edge of the forest between the Whauganui River and Tongariro; on the highest peak of the Aroha; at a stream in the heart of the wood between Tauranga and Rotorua. But between territories of different tribes there are often found tracts of land which are called kainga tautohe or (literally) debatable lands.

The lands of a tribe do not form one unbroken district, over which all members of the tribe may wander; on the contrary, they are divided into a number of districts appertaining to the several sub-tribes. Each sub-tribe consists of the descendants of a common ancestor (whose name it generally bears), who was in former times the conqueror or in any other way the recognized owner of the district. These smaller districts are in many cases numerous, and for the most part are sufficiently well defined. Within each of them the families or members of the sub-tribe are free to range, both to take the natural products of the soil and to cultivate for themselves such portion of it as they may choose. There is no paramount or controlling power either in the tribe or in the sub-tribe, to restrain or to direct the exercise of this right of appropriation; each family or freeman may use and appropriate without leave of any. It is indeed a rude form of property, a natural stage in the progress towards the more complete appropriation of the earth's surface in the way familiar to ourselves. But still, every right which exists, whether in one person or in more, is truly a right of property, and there does not, in this state of things, exist anything which can be correctly likened to a right of sovereignty as understood among us.

Mr. Spain says, in describing the Port Nicholson District: "There are seven divisions or families of a tribe, each claiming separate lands of their own, and certain rights and privileges, which are sometimes wholly denied, and at others only partially admitted by the rest." Again, speaking of the same district: "In a place so thickly populated as I have before described this to be, the boundaries of the parts of the district belonging to each tribe or family are generally pretty well ascertained and admitted between them. As a proof of this I may mention that in the case of Native reserves great difficulty has been found in getting Natives belonging to one family to go on a reserve made within the boundary of the land belonging to another family, although it has been fully explained to them that the reserves are made for the benefit of the Natives generally, and not for any particular tribe or family. They cannot understand this; and in several instances that have fallen under my notice they have positively refused to cultivate a Native reserve so situated, although at the time in actual want of a spot to grow their potatoes upon." ... The New Zealanders have been in the constant habit of resisting even to blood any encroachment upon their territorial rights. They are not less disposed to resist now. For their determination on this point there are two reasons: (1.) That these rights (whatever names our lawyers may give them) are of great value to the Native, as has been shown. They, like other men, are naturally disposed to retain, by force if necessary, that which they know to be a benefit to themselves. (2.) That every tribe sees, in any successful encroachment upon its territory, a peril to its own independence and even to its existence as a distinct tribe. An extreme jealousy on this point appears to be the natural result of their condition, and may with truth be described as the "passion" of this people. This has been a main cause of desolating wars. There is a common proverb, "He wahine, he oneone, i ngaro ai te tangata" [women and land are the destroyers of man]. The pride of each tribe centres in its power to maintain its own possessions against aggression. This spirit in the Native people is closely akin to one which, if we were speaking of ourselves, we should describe as patriotism..... In New Zealand the claims to land are numerous; the claimants often live far apart from each other; and the people are especially slow and deliberative in settling the terms of a bargain. To make a good bargain there are needed length of time, publicity, and knowledge of the Native language. When these requisites are found, purchases of land in New Zealand may be and in a large number of cases have been, made as safely at least as in England.— [Pamphlet of 1846.]

IV. Archdeacon MAUNSELL.—1840.

The land does not, generally speaking, belong to one individual, but chiefly to the tribe. Often there will be only one main proprietor or take (root) as they denominate him; but if he be not a chief of rank the head man will take upon him to dispose of the spot. Often, and more frequently, there will be many take, and one of them will sell without consulting the others. There are other difficult points connected with this question—e.g., a tribe will give a spot of land to another, either as a marriage portion or to induce them to reside, &c. The former are still take, but the latter may, if they like, sell; only they generally hand over the payment to the former, reserving to themselves the honour attendant on the transfer. The latter again, if they be powerful, will sell without consulting the former; all being regulated by the relative power of the two parties. At the same time, I consider that to a valid document both parties names should be attached. Neither is it a difficult matter to satisfy the others when the main take (if he be a man of rank) has given his consent.—[Letter from Rev. R. Maunsell, quoted in Evidence before the House of Commons, 1840: Parl. Papers, 3rd August, 1840.]

V. BOARD OF INQUIRY: Major NUGENT, late Native Secretary; Mr. LIGAR, late Surveyor-General; Mr. DALDY; and Mr. T. H. SMITH, Assistant Native Secretary.—1856.

It appears that the title or claim to land by tribes arose from occupation, dating sometimes from remote periods, and from more recent conquests, followed by occupation either by themselves personally or by remnants of the conquered people. That this title existed no longer than it could be defended from other tribes. That the boundaries were in some cases clearly defined and admitted by adjoining tribes, but that in many others they were quite the reverse, and were causes of constant quarrels. That narrow belts of land, as being claimed by two tribes, could not have been occupied by either without causing an appeal to arms. That there is no part of the country which is not claimed by some party or another. That, as land is inherited in the female line, the constant intermarriages between the tribes led to the descendants by such marriages having claims to land in more tribes than one. That it frequently happened that one tribe gave land within their own limits to the members of another tribe for assistance rendered in times of danger, which gifts were held most sacred. That claims to land were made by one tribe and admitted by another as compensation for the murder of a chief thereon, or other injury. That an accidental death of a chief on the land of another tribe gave his family a claim to it. It will therefore be seen that no tribe has, in all instances, a well-defined boundary to its land as against adjoining tribes, and that the members of several other tribes are likely to have claims within its limits.

Each Native has a right, in common with the whole tribe over the disposal of the land of the tribe, and has an individual right to such portions as he or his parents may have regularly used for cultivations, for dwellings, for gathering edible berries, for [unclear: ring] birds and rats, or as pig runs. This individual claim does not amount to a right of disposal to Europeans as a general rule, but instances have occurred in the Ngatiwhatua Tribe, in the vicinity of Auckland, where Natives have sold land to Europeans under waiver of the Crown's right of pre-emption, and since that time to the Government itself. In all of which cases, no after-claims have been raised by other members of the tribe, but this, being a matter of arrangement and mutual concession of the members of the tribe called forth by the peculiar circumstances of the case, does not apply to other tribes not yet brought under its influence. Generally there is no such thing as an individual claim, clear and independent of the tribal right. The chiefs exercise an influence in the disposal of the land, but have only an individual claim like the rest of the people to particular portions.

Since the introduction of Christianity the Natives have gradually emancipated their slaves taken in war, and by their return to their former possessions they have become a new class of claimants.

When the Natives first came into contact with Europeans, in the relative position of sellers and buyers of land, the evidence of which before the Board extends as far back as the year 1822, it has been shown that the Natives, in disposing of their lands, intended only to convey a title similar to that which they, as individuals, hold themselves—the right of occupancy. They did not imagine that anything else could be wanted. Their desire for Europeans to settle among them was very great, and in selling a piece of land to one of these early adventurers they not only were prepared to hold his title, such as it was, inviolate, but considered his personal safety a matter of the deepest interest. He in fact was considered as one of the tribe among whom he had cast his lot. They soon, however, ascertained, when a knowledge of their language had been sufficiently acquired by the Europeans, that this sort of tenure was unsatisfactory, and in all subsequent transactions of the kind gave written titles in perpetuity, with the right of transfer.—[Report to Governor Gore Browne: in Sess. Papers 1856.]

VI. Rev. J. HAMLIN, Church of England Missionary.

It would be difficult at this distant period to state precisely what gave the first Maori emigrants to this country a title to land on their landing on its shores. The following, however, appear the most reasonable, and are in accordance with what the Natives themselves affirm to be the fact. [Here instances follow of occupation, &c.] Occupation gave a title to land in those early times, but occupation alone, without some other claim subsequently, did not. Mere occupation does not give a valid title. In cases of occupation without claim the occupant generally made some acknowledgement to the owner, in food or some other way, answering to our leases and rentals; but he had no right to sell.

Conquest alienates the land, but it has its quibbles. Conquest and occupation give a valid title to land. Conquest without occupation is doubtful. If the conquered party return, occupy, and hold the land from which they were driven, the land is theirs. Hence the Tamaki land still remained in possession of the Thames Natives, though driven from it by Hongi; but they did not consider their occupation of it safe, and therefore sold it. If the conquered people return to their land by permission of the conqueror, the land does not become theirs unless a transfer of the land is made to them by the conquerors. But all these acknowledged Native rights were by might often set aside, and arbitrary power ruled.

"Mana." The term mana in reference to land I have occasionally heard, and have asked the question, "He aha te mana o te whenua?" and have received this answer: "Aua hoki, ma te pakeha." The answer implies that the term as applied to land had its origin in a mistaken conception of the meaning of Native words by Europeans. The term as applied to land is scarcely heard of in some districts. In the few instances in which I have heard it used, its meaning is synonymous with tikanga, which expresses ownership, or delegated authority by the owner to sell, to manage the business, or to be the spokesman, as we employ an auctioneer or solicitor.

In the Bay of Islands, where land purchases were first made, the Native of every degree of rank sold his land without reference to any other authority. It sometimes happens that the Natives will advise that the signature of a person of rank be added to a deed, who has little or no claim to the land purchased; but this, I think, is done with a view to conciliate the person, knowing that such persons can and often do create disturbances if their names are left out, as they would consider they had been slighted. As a closing remark, I may say that I have not been able to discover that any such thing as "manorial right," distinct from ownership in a greater or less degree, has been lodged in the chief of a district, in the chief of a tribe, or in the chief of a hapu, or in any other person of the aborigines. And if there is such a thing as "mana o te whenua," it is a certain invisible, indescribable something to which the pakeha may attach a meaning wholly at variance with that which a Native may affix to it. Manorial rights, as Englishmen understand them, are foreign to the Natives, and if they have any such ideas they must have acquired them from Europeans.

It may be observed that scarcely any of the land of the aborigines of this country can be said to be the exclusive property of one individual, though the descent through which the party can trace their claim to the land they hold is by a single person. This person can sell if he likes without the consent of his party; the party selling without his consent would be a hoko tahae. This absence of the individualization of property seems rather attributable to the state of the country than to any defect in the line of descent. Circumstanced as the Natives have been, they say one individual cannot hold his land against the attacks of enemies; therefore, for security, peace, and safety, it was necessary to give all the branches of a family a participation in the possession, though the individualization of the descent is clearly recognized.

Tribal rights, or any uniform course of action or general plan for their guidance in the management of their lands or other affairs, I have not found to exist amongst the Natives of this country, nor do I believe they have any such plan or general rule. Each party or tribe seems to have been guided by existing circumstances in the management of their affairs.—[Paper on Native Tenure, not before published.]

VII. Mr. SPAIN, formerly Her Majesty's Commissioner for determining Titles to Land in New Zealand.—1846.

Although a tribe might have marched through a country, conquering all the Natives and occupying the ground over which they passed, yet if they failed to retain the lands so conquered in their possession, and allowed the former owners still to occupy it, or to return immediately afterwards, and cultivate it without interruption for a period of years, in that case the consent of the conquerors to a sale to the Europeans, without that of such resident Natives, could not be admitted by me as a valid purchase. And I know of no rule laid down as binding upon or generally adopted by the nations of Europe, in colonizing a new country peopled by aboriginal inhabitants, which would justify the taking of land from the actual occupiers and cultivators of the soil without their consent. On the contrary, I had the honour to quote, in my last despatch, the very opposite doctrine, as laid down by De Vattel. ...

I have set it down as a principle in sales of land in this country by the aborigines, that the rights of the actual occupants must be acknowledged and extinguished before any title can be fairly maintained upon the strength of mere satisfaction of the claims of self-styled conquerors, who do not reside on nor cultivate the soil: in short, that possession confers upon the Natives of one tribe the only and real title to land as against any of their own countrymen; and that the residents, whether they be the original unsubdued proprietors, the conquerors who have retained their possession acquired in war, or captives who have been permitted to reoccupy their land on sufferance—in all cases the residents, and they alone, have the power of alienating any land.....

It appears to me that those Ngatiawa who, having left [Taranaki] after the fight sought for and obtained another location, where they lived and cultivated the soil, and from fear of their enemies did not return, cannot now show any equitable claim, according to Native customs or otherwise, to the land they thus abandoned. Had they returned before the sale, and, with the consent of the resident Natives; again cultivated the soil without interruption, I should have held that they were necessary parties to the sale.

During my residence in this country, in the execution of my commission for a period of between three and four years, I have taken every opportunity of ascertaining by every means in my power all Native customs respecting the tenure of land; and, in my decisions, I have endeavoured in every instance to respect them, where certain; and, where doubtful, or not clearly ascertained, I have allowed justice, equity, a common-sense view, and the good conscience of each case, to supply their place.

Bearing all these points in mind, I am of opinion that the adoption of a contrary doctrine to that which I have just laid down would lead to very serious consequences, not only as regards titles to land between the aborigines themselves, but also as between them and the Europeans.....

The question, then, which your Excellency has raised, turns upon whether slaves taken in war, and Natives driven away, and prevented by fear of their conquerors from returning, forfeit their claims to land owned by them previously to such conquest. And I most unhesitatingly affirm that all the information that I have been able to collect as to Native customs, throughout the length and breadth of this land, has led me to believe and declare the forfeiture of such right by aborigines so situated. In fact, I have always understood that this was a Native custom fully established and recognized; and I never recollect to have heard it questioned until your Excellency was pleased in the present instance to put forward a contrary doctrine. Since that time I have made every further inquiry in my power amongst competent and disinterested persons, whose testimony has fully confirmed my original opinion.

I am fully of opinion that the admission of the right of slaves, who had been absent for a long period of years, to return at any time and claim their right to land that had belonged to them previously to their being taken prisoners of war, and which, before their return and when they were in slavery, had been sold by the conquerors and resident Natives to third parties, would establish a most dangerous doctrine, calculated to throw doubts upon almost every European title to land in this country, not even excepting some of the purchases made by the Crown; would constantly expose every title to be questioned by every returned slave who might assert a former right to the land, let the period be ever so remote; and would prove a source of endless litigation and disagreement between the two races, a result which must soon stop the progress of civilization amongst the Natives, so essential to their amelioration.—[Reports to Governor Fitzroy: in Parl. Papers, 8th April, 1846.]

VIII. Mr. GEORGE CLARKE, formerly Chief Protector of Aborigines.—1844.

If, as is the general impression of all who have given their attention to this subject, the Natives emigrated at different periods, we have at once a clue to the origin of titles. Each migration landed, subdued, and laid claim to a certain district now claimed by their posterity. Each party would most probably acknowledge a leader, either nominated or assuming such character by virtue of superior prowess, who would actually be considered as the first chief of the iwi or tribe. His children, with a portion of the iwi or tribe who might attach themselves to each particular child, may be considered as giving rise to the different hapu or lesser tribes. His children and those who attached themselves to them formed different hapus, who, although a part of the original family, would form a separate and distinct community, uniting, however, in times of war to repel the common enemy, but claiming and exercising independent interests in the soil in times of peace.....

Bravery in war, and consequent power and rank as a chief, will not determine the individual to be a great landowner. A man may be a great general and a small landowner; hence numberless mistakes have arisen among Europeans who thought themselves especially safe in purchasing land from a powerful chief.....

The chiefs of every tribe or hapu, as well as the head of every family belonging to the tribe or hapu, have distinct claims and titles to land within their respective districts. At the same time it must be remembered that they have a joint interest in many of the lands. The particular claims of the chiefs, hapu, or families are to lands either subdued or brought into cultivation, or upon which they have exercised some acts of ownership—as lands where they have been accustomed to procure flax, or erect weirs for eels, or where they have built a substantial house. In such cases they claim a particular property. None but the person so claiming can give a title to the land, nor can he be dispossessed thereof. He may forfeit his right by killing, adultery, or migration to a different tribe and district.....

In this way families hold and cultivate their ground, enlarging their individual cultivations from time to time, thus establishing an indisputable title to such lands as their special and particular property. In other respects their title is more general: the hapu and families claiming in common with the principal chiefs what may be termed their waste lands. But even here they must be able to substantiate some sort of title, such as having been the first discoverers, kindled ovens, built canoes, or exercised some other act of ownership which gives them the preference over such lands. The families have, in common with the chiefs, the right of keeping pigs, gathering flax, snaring pigeons, catching rats, ducks, digging fern-root, &c.; every individual of the tribe having these privileges in common, but still acknowledging the right of some particular family or individual member of a family to dispose of such property—that is, as president, head of the family, or chief of the tribe or hapu, to make the first proposal of alienation; yet they could not consider the purchase valid without the consent of the majority of the principal men of the tribe.

Lands that are thus possessed in common, involving the interests of so many claimants, are exceedingly difficult to purchase, and may be reckoned as among the most fruitful sources of their quarrels and disturbances. It frequently happens that two Natives, equally interested in the same lands, disagree on the question of its disposal. Numberless animosities originate from this source.....

To obtain a specific title to lands held in common, there must be some additional circumstances to support the pretension: first discovery of trees, shooting pigeons, constructing eel-weirs, digging fern-root, making a road, receiving a wound, losing a friend, recovering from sickness—all or any of these acts give an undeniable right to special property in land heretofore considered common.....

Conquest, unless followed by possession, gives no title. Were the Ngapuhis to claim the right of selling or exercising the sovereignty over the districts of the Thames, Kaipara, or Waikato in virtue of their former conquests, their pretensions would be treated as contemptible and absurd: and so distinctly is this principle recognized that I have no doubt that any attempt to support and maintain the validity of titles derived from conquest only, would be met by a most determined resistance, even if attempted by Her Majesty's Government. I have known slaves tenaciously maintaining their territorial rights while in a state of captivity; but I never knew a master to claim by virtue of his slave, or attempt to advance any pretensions founded on the capture of a landed proprietor. I have had large offers of land for sale by Natives still in captivity, and have been warmly reproved by these men for doubting the validity of their title.

Great changes have taken place in the internal regulation and division of districts, and lands have completely changed owners; but in every case possession has followed immediately on conquest. The claim to Taranaki preferred by the Waikatos is good so far as they have taken possession; but they did not wholly succeed in driving the Natives out of that district, who maintained their independence by resorting to different pas on the coast. I should therefore consider the principal right to land in the Taranaki District still vested in the original inhabitants. Again, the titles of the tribes about Port Nicholson to land in the Taranaki District cannot be wholly extinct if they have kept up a friendly intercourse with the residents. Rauparaha, who conquered and took possession of parts of this country, would, in connection with his followers in the vicinity of Cook Strait, have large claims; but his title would no doubt be disputed by the original proprietors so soon as they were in a position to maintain their claims. A tribe never ceases to maintain their title to the lands of their fathers, nor could a purchase be considered complete and valid without the concurrence of the original proprietors. If a conqueror spares the lives of the conquered, and they thenceforth become amalgamated with his own tribe, he infallibly secures his own title by uniting the claims of the original possessors with his own.

Possession of land, even for a number of years, does not give a right to alienate such property to Europeans without the consent of the original donor of the land, but it may be continued in the possession of descendants of the grantee to the latest generation.—[Report to Governor Fitzroy: in Parl. Papers, 29th July, 1841]

IX. Archdeacon HADFIELD.—1860.

Are you acquainted with the nature of the Native tenure of land?—I ought to express some diffidence in replying to that question, but I may observe (in reference to the tenure acknowledged by Natives of the southern half of this Island, with which I am acquainted) that there is little or no difficulty on the subject.

What opportunities have you had of becoming acquainted with the subject?—The opportunities I have had of becoming acquainted with the subject arose from the fact of my having resided for four years in a Maori pa in which there were from five to six hundred men. My attention was particularly called to the subject at that time by the constant disputes about the purchases of land made by the New Zealand Company in Cook Strait. I was frequently applied to by Mr. Commissioner Spain to assist him in elucidating Maori customs about land. I may further state that after the collision at Wairau I made it part of my business to inquire into the subject, and after careful inquiry I came, in 1845, to a conclusion on the subject, which the experience of the last fifteen years has not tended in the slightest degree to alter.

State what you think to be the rights of the tribe in respect to land belonging to it.—I think that the right of each tribe to lands extends over the whole of the tribal territory, and entirely precludes the right of any other tribes over it. Such absolute tribal right may be classed under two heads: First, the territory which has been in the possession of the tribe for several generations, and to which no other claim had been previously known; secondly, the territory acquired by conquest, occupation, or possession.

State what you understand to be the rights of individual members of the tribes in respect to land.—I believe that the rights of the individual members of the tribes are limited to those portions of the lands of the tribe which they have either cultivated or occupied, or on which they have exercised some act of ownership which is acknowledged as such by the tribe. I must be understood to mean that their title to such lands was simply that of holding for their own use and benefit. Their right was a good holding title as against every other member of the tribe. They might exchange land among themselves, but no one could alienate without the consent of the tribe. In the year 1845 I drew up a paper on the tenure of Native lands, which I gave to Sir George Grey, who promised to return it. He told me he sent a copy of it to the Colonial Office. He did not return the original to me: I understand that it was burnt with other papers at Auckland.

What do you understand to be the rights of the chief of the tribe in respect to land belonging to the tribe?—While looking over some papers a few weeks ago, I accidentally discovered my original pencil notes, which formed the rough draft of the paper on this subject to which I have just alluded, which I now produce, and with the permission of the Committee will read as they must be conclusive as to what my opinion as to individual title was in 1845: "The chief of the tribe, since he has no absolute right over the territory of the various hapu, nor over the lands of individual freemen of his own hapu, cannot sell any lands but his own, or those belonging to the tribe which are undoubtedly waste lands: nor can he do this in opposition to the opinion of the chiefs of the hapu of the tribe, if they consider the territory; and thus the independence of the tribe, impaired by so doing. Allowing this very questionable right of the chief to alienate any part of the territory of a tribe, it can scarcely be allowed to any chief of a hapu, even should he act in accordance with the various individuals of the hapu. It must be remembered that a tribe, however subdivided into hapu, is one, and cannot allow its integrity and strength to be impaired by the independent act of one hapu, which it is bound to identify with itself in all things, and to protect, if involved in any quarrels or difficulties. These remarks are more decidedly applicable in the case of ordinary freemen [tutua], who cannot alienate that land which is absolutely their own for all practical purposes, but is not to be disposed of in a manner contrary to the supposed interest of the tribe. There can be no doubt on this subject." The notes which I have now read to the Committee imply that the chiefs have power over some portions of the land. Fifteen years ago I set it down as a questionable right or power; I view it in the same light now. I limit such right of chiefs to deal with lands obtained by conquest only, and do not consider that it extends to any land which has become vested in the tribe by long possession. I wish to guard myself, in reference to what I am saying on this subject, by premising that I am speaking of tenure to land as it existed prior to the establishment of the British Government in the colony, and not since that event. The chief of a tribe must be regarded as holding his position by a double title. His first title must arise from his undoubted descent through a long line of well-known ancestors from the original head of the tribe. His second title depends on a more democratic principle: that is, he must be the acknowledged and the elected head of the tribe. The chief is the representative of the territorial right of the tribe, not because he is descended from numerous ancestors of noble blood, but because he has been acknowledged as such on account of his personal qualifications and influence, and has in fact been recognized as the guardian as well as the mouthpiece of the rights of the tribe. I have no doubt whatever on this subject. I understand that whatever rights to land existed previous to the Treaty of Waitangi among the Natives are still rights with them, being guaranteed by that treaty. I investigated Maori title to land irrespective of the influence which may have been exercised by the Government, and eight or ten years previous to the establishment of British sovereignty.— [Evidence at the Bar of the House of Representatives, August, 1860: in Sess. Papers E.—No. 4.]

X. Mr. SWAINSON, late Attorney-General of New Zealand.—1859.

From time immemorial land has been the principal cause of quarrel amongst them; and, with their independent spirit and sensitive jealousy as to their territorial rights, they soon began to regard with mistrust the introduction of British rule. Their territorial claims are not confined to the land they may have brought into cultivation: they claim and exercise ownership over the whole surface of the country, and there is no part of it, however lonely, of which they do not know the owners. Forests in the wildest part of the country have their claimants. Land apparently waste is highly valued by them. Forests are preserved for birds, swamps and streams for eel-weirs and fisheries. Trees, rocks, and stones are used to define the well-known boundaries. Land is held by them either by the whole tribe, or by some family of it, or sometimes by an individual member of a tribe. Over the uncultivated portions of territory held by a tribe in common every individual member has the right of fishing and shooting. When any member of a tribe cultivates a portion of the common waste he acquires an individual right to what he has subdued by his labour; and in case of a sale he is recognized by the tribe as the sole proprietor. If undisposed of by sale, it generally descends from father to son. And even the power of disposing of land by will, orally expressed at the point of death, is recognized among them. A certain man had a male child born to him, then another male child, and then a third male child: he also had daughters. At last, being at the point of death, his sons and daughters and all his relations assembled to hear his last words, and to see him die. And the sons said to their father, Let thy mouth speak, oh father, that we may hear your will, for you have not long to live. Then the old man turned towards his younger brothers, and spake thus: Hereafter, oh my brothers, be kind to my children. My cultivations are for my sons. Such or such a piece of land is for such or such a nephew. My eel-weirs, my potato-gardens, my potatoes, my pigs, and my male and female slaves are all for my sons only. My wives are for my younger brother.' Such is the disposition of a man's property. It relates only to the male children. The custom as to the female children is not to give them any land, for their father bears in mind that they will not abide on the land. They may marry husbands belonging to another tribe, not at all connected with their parents family; therefore no portion of land is given to them. Not so the male children: they stand fast always on the land." Such is the account given by an intelligent New Zealander of the customs among them as to the disposal of landed property.—[Swainson's New Zealand, 1859, p. 150.]

XI. Mr. Busby, formerly British Resident at New Zealand.—1860.

I have read much of "manorial" and "seignorial right," of "tribal right," and even of "feudal right," in relation to the Maori tenure of land. Persons use these expressions with ideas more or less distinct attached to them, taking it for granted that corresponding ideas exist in the minds of the Maoris. The Rev. Mr. Hobbs lately showed that the words "mana" and "rangatira," which are the words in the Maori language supposed to represent the ideas of right and of authority, represent no such ideas in the minds of the Maoris. In fact, the ideas must exist before words to represent them are called into existence. I question whether many of the Maoris are better informed on such points now than they were at the time of the Treaty of Waitangi, but it is very certain that at that time no Maori entertained the idea of a "right" existing in one party which implied an obligation upon all other parties to respect it: no one conceived the idea of authority carrying with it the corresponding obligation of obedience. Such rights and obligations are the creation of law, and cannot subsist without it. The Maoris had no law but the law of the strongest.

It is certain that the Maoris had no fixed rule to guide them in the disposal of their land. It was a commodity to which no exchangeable value had ever been attached—a transaction for which no precedent existed; and, as in other things, the weak were overborne by the strong and impudent. Those who, according to our rules of lineal descent from the common progenitor, ought to have had most to say in the matter, had often the least. This shocks our ideas of right, but it came as a matter of course to them. Nevertheless there are ideas attached to the possession of land which may well be called instinctive. When a man has felled the forest, and fenced in and cultivated a portion of land, he has established a right against all other persons, which is at once felt to be as natural as that of a man to his own children, and is precedent of all law. And great injustice may be done to individuals who hold such a possession if they are prevented from selling it by a supposition that what we call a superior right exists in some other person, that right being nothing more, in the minds of the Maoris, than the exercise of an arbitrary power by those who have strength and arrogance enough to assume it.—[Letter in "Southern Cross" Newspaper, July, 1860.]

XII. Rev. Mr. BUDDLE, Superintendent of the Wesleyan Mission.—1860.

"Mana" of the chiefs. This word means authority, power, influence. It was originally applied to persons and their words or acts, not to land. A chief whose authority or influence enabled him to gather together an army for war was he tangata [unclear: whai mana]*—*a man possessing mana. Commands readily obeyed are *kupu whai mana—*words having influence. A promise faithfully kept and duly performed was mana: *Kua mana te kupu a te Kawana—*The Governor's word has been fulfilled. This word has of late been used in reference to land, and now we hear of the *mana o te whenua—*the mana of the land. What distinct idea is attached to it, is difficult to say. The disputed land at Waitara is claimed by the Maori King party because the King's maua has reached it: *Kua tae te mana o to matou Kingi ki reira—*The mana of our King has gone there. And wherever this mana is gone the land is held as inalienable without the King's consent. Kia mau te mana o te whenua is another expression now in frequent use*—i.e., Hold fast the mana of the land. What does it mean? This is altogether a new application of the term; perhaps it has been adopted in consequence of the Queen's sovereignty over the Island having been translated as the Queen's mana. But it certainly did not originally mean that which is now claimed for it—viz.*, a chief's "manorial right." This use of the word was not heard until this Maori-King movement originated it.

It is by no means clear that any such custom as "manorial right" ever obtained among the Native tribes*—*was either claimed by the chiefs or ceded by the people originally. A man took possession of territory by the strength of his arm and rested his claim on his conquests. "Na tenei," he would say, stretching out his arm, "By this I obtained it." Or he claimed it in consequence of having cultivated it. What reason could exist originally for such rights? Land sales were things unknown. If land exchanged hands it was not by sale but by conquest—by might disregarding right. Apropos to this subject, a Waikato chief, who was adducing reasons for the King movement, remarked, "hoko tahae" (dishonest sales of land) was one reason. A chief offered land to Government and, because he was a chief, it was taken for granted the land was his own; "but," he added, "you must not suppose that every chief, because he is a great man with a great name, is a great landowner. There are many great chiefs who have no land, and therefore have no right to sell." How does this accord with manorial rights? Take another fact. One man at the great meeting at Ngaruawahia drew a circle around him and said: "This is mine; let no man interfere with me. I am on my own land, and shall do what I like with my own." Another asserted the same right, and declared his intention to sell what he pleased when he returned from the meeting. Did these men acknowledge the chiefs' manorial rights? Take another fact. Potatau himself sold a block of land to the Government a few years ago, and received a deposit of £50, but the sale has never been completed, because the men who had cultivated the block deny his right to sell, though he is principal chief of the tribe, and refuse to allow him to do so. Manorial rights are imaginary rights when claimed for New Zealand chiefs.—[Pamphlet, Origin of the King Movement, 1860.]

XIII. Mr. EDWARD SHORTLAND, formerly Protector of Aborigines.-1844.

The spot where each canoe (of the migration) was finally drawn to land was taken possession of by the crew, who spread themselves from that centre over the more fertile districts till they became a numerous tribe. Each of the grand divisions under which the Natives of the Northern Island may be classed has its own characteristic dialect, and it seems probable that the term waka (canoe), which is also used to denote these primary divisions, has reference to that origin of the tribes. At the present day these wakas are divided into many distinct iwi, each of which is subdivided again into hapu or smaller communities. The territory claimed by a waka is subdivided into districts, each of which is claimed by an iwi. These, again, are variously apportioned among the different hapus and families of chiefs. In the immediate vicinity of a pa the land is more minutely subdivided between its inmates, nearly every person having his own small cultivation-ground, or holding some spot in common with other members of his family. This circumstance renders it difficult to purchase lands once so occupied, even though the pa may have been deserted for many years, as every man whose ancestors cultivated there will expect his claim to be satisfied.

The chiefs are the principal landholders. Every individual, however, as far as I have been able to learn, has his own estate, which he has inherited from his branch of the family, and which he cultivates as he pleases. The sons of a chief may, during his lifetime, select kaingas or farms from their father's estate, but the larger portions are cultivated in common by the different members of the family. On the death of the father the eldest son chooses some part of the lands for himself; the others do the same; the daughters obtaining only so much as their father or brothers choose to leave them. This order of things is sometimes changed in case the elder brother is of a quiet disposition and the younger brother happens to be a toa, or turbulent fellow. A chief, when speaking of the title by which he holds his lands, never fails to make a distinction between those which he has inherited and those which he or his ancestors have obtained by conquest; over the former his right is universally recognized, the latter appear to be tenable only so long as the party in possession are the most powerful. The claim which he advances is, however, quite characteristic—viz., that the lands are the utu or compensation for the death of his relations who perished in the fight. It is from purchasing lands the right to which is thus contested by two hostile parties, either of whom will gladly avail himself of an opportunity to sell independently of the other, that Europeans have unwarily fallen into so many difficulties.

Besides the lands thus held, there are large districts on the borders of different tribes which remain uncultivated. These kainga tautohe (debatable lands) are a never-failing cause of war till one party has lost its principal men. When a dispute arises between members of the same tribe as to who is the rightful owner of a piece of land, the principal persons on both sides meet together to discuss the affair: their pedigrees are traced, and the ancestor from whom either party claims is declared; and proof that any act of ownership (such as cultivating, building a house, setting pit-falls for rats, or making eel-weirs) was once exercised without opposition by one of their ancestors, is considered sufficient evidence of the right of his descendants to the land. I have been present during such discussions, but have never known them terminate in an orderly manner, nor have since learnt that any advance has been made thereby towards settling the question.—[Report to Chief Protector: in Parl. Papers; 29th July, 1844]

XIV. Mr. JOHN WHITE, Interpreter in the Native Office.—1859.

In order to be better understood, before speaking of the tenure, a glance may be given at the manner in which the migrations took possession of and portioned out their newly discovered country. It is generally admitted among the Natives of New Zealand that the chief Kupe, who came in the canoe "Matahourua," was the first. He took possession of the country from Whanganui to Patea. Turi, in the canoe "Aotea," came next; he took from Patea to Aotea. Next were the canoes "Te Arawa" and "Tainui;" they took the land from East Cape to Cape Colville, where Tamatekapua, chief of the "Arawa" canoe, died. The chiefs Ruauru and Toroa came next in the canoe "Matatua," and took Rotorua Lakes. The "Tainui" canoe, commanded by Hoturoa, came on from Cape Colville to Tamaki and took all the country east from Cape Colville to Mangawhai, west from Manukau to Whaingaroa. The Ngapuhi canoes were next—"Mamari," "Riukakara," and "Mahuhu." The first went to Hokianga River, and took the land from Maunganui to Ahipara. The Riukakara went to Whangaroa, and took the land from Mangomui to the Bay of Islands. Mahuhu (Ngatiwhatua) took the country from Mangonui, round the North Cape, to Ahipara. The "Wakatuwhenua" canoe came next and took Cape Rodney. The chief Manaia, in the "Tokomaru" canoe, took Taranaki; the ancestor of the Ngatiawa came in this canoe. The canoe "Kurahaupo," commanded by Ruatea, landed near East Cape and took all the land from the point taken by Arawa round the East Coast to Port Nicholson. The canoe "Takitumu" (or "Horouta"—fast sailer), commanded by Tata, first landed at Turanga, but proceeded southwards, crossed Cook Strait, and took possession of the whole of the Middle Island. Thus all the lands in the North and Middle Island were taken possession of on the arrival of the canoes. The boundaries claimed by this right of discovery did not long remain. Some time after the Arawa and Tainui migrations had settled, a chief of the Tainui went overland to the Bay of Plenty and burnt the canoe "Te Arawa." This was the cause of the first Maori war.

Most of the tribal boundaries lay along the highest ridges; and, as these were the resort of the rat, every chief became acquainted with the exact boundary of his lands. Where a creek was the dividing boundary this was occupied with eel-dams, not made of wickerwork that might be carried away by a flood, but of such construction that generations might pass and each put the eel-baskets down by the carved and red-ochred totara-post which its ancestors had placed there. Where the dividing boundary between two tribes ran along a valley, landmarks were erected, generally of cairns, to which names were given.

There is not an inch of land in the Islands which is not claimed, nor a hill nor valley, stream nor forest, which has not a name. The boundary was liable to be altered, as when land was taken by conquest or was given by a chief for assistance rendered by another tribe in war; or when land, given to the female branch of a family, reverted to the male branch; or where land was ceded to a tribe for a specific purpose, and with certain restrictions, the tenure being conditional on the terms being fulfilled.

Hereditary tenure was thus: The claim was grounded on the right of the grandfather or grandmother, not of the father, mother, brother, or other immediate kindred. There have been cases where a chief, on his death-bed, portioned out his land to each of his children. The sons' claim is, in all instances, derived from the grandfather. The eldest son of the senior branch in the male line is chief of the tribe and exercises sole authority as guardian for his people against the encroachments of other tribes; but all the offspring, descendants from the male branch, have an equal right in the lands of their progenitors. No matter how distant the relationship, they all, so long as they can trace their origin up to the same ancestor—provided a family war has not occurred and thereby divided the tribe—claim an equal right to the lands owned by that ancestor. The title in the female line does not expand to the same extent: the granddaughter of a chief has an equal claim to the lands of her grandfather with that of her male cousins, and the claim continues good to her grandchild; but, on the death of that grandchild, the land reverts to the male line. This custom holds good for the following reason, which is assigned as its origin—namely, that were it not upheld the intermarriage of chiefs' daughters with members of other tribes would soon so complicate and curtail the tribal claims that an invitation would be held out to adjoining tribes to attempt by conquest to despoil them of their territory.

If a family war takes place in which a tribe becomes divided (which has frequently occurred) a division of the tribal lands takes place. The lands of a tribe were portioned out according to the number of families of which it consisted, and were claimed by each family as its own; nor did any one meddle with it or occupy the land of another family unless by express permission. Still, those portions were not the exclusive property of each family. But this only applies to the lands originally settled by the first migrations, not to lands which have been acquired by conquest, gift, or utu for curses or other injuries. Land is claimed by families, and the object of the chiefs in pointing them out was to prevent tribal disputes, and to allow each part of the tribe to have a portion of land over which it could exercise the exclusive right of cultivation, fishing, snaring birds, catching rats, or obtaining fern root. Moreover, this portioning-out of the tribal lands caused emulation in the different families as to the produce gained by each for the use of the tribe. The individual claim to land, therefore, does not exist among the New Zealanders, according to our acceptation of the term. The right to land taken by conquest rests solely on the conquering party actually occupying the taken district, to the utter exclusion of its original owners or other tribes. If a portion of the conquered tribe escaped, the claim held good to as great an extent as they had courage to occupy; and if they could manage to keep within their own tribal boundary, and elude the enemy, their right to the whole of the land held good: hence the meaning of a sentence so often used by old chiefs in their land disputes, I ka tonu taku ahi i runga i toku whenua—My fire has ever been kept alight upon my land. Again, if a tribe was conquered and became extinct, with the exception of slaves taken by the conquerors, these slaves might by purchase recover their tribal lands, or they could if liberated return to them on condition of allegiance to the conquerors, rendering them assistance in war, and paying a tribute, for a time, of their produce. [Here follow numerous instances of other complicated claims:] When land was given by one tribe to the leader of another tribe for assistance in war, it did not vest in that leader: the relatives of chiefs killed in the war had a claim. It was also necessary that the land should be occupied and possession retained.

The war in the Bay of Plenty, which has been continued to the present time between certain chiefs, also originated in a like cause (disputes of title). The contending parties are all of one tribe and spring from one ancestor, but by intermarriage some have a more direct claim than others; the descendants who by intermarriage are related to other tribes have made an equal claim to lands over which they have but a partial claim, and resistance to this has been the cause of the war. Disputes of this kind are not easily unravelled. I believe that, were it possible to teach the Maoris the English language, and then bring them into some Court, allowing each contending party to plead his cause in such a dispute as I have mentioned, not according to English law but Maori customs, both sides would, according to Native genealogy and laws, make out their respective cases so clearly that it would take a Judge and jury possessed of more than human attainments to decide the ownership of the land.— [Lecture at the Mechanics' Institute: written in August, 1859.]

XV. Rev. J. A. Wilson, Church Missionary.—1860.

As much controversy has arisen since the commencement of the present war concerning the right by which land is held among the aborigines, I beg to offer a few remarks illustrated by facts which at an early period in this country fell under my personal observation when acting as an agent of the Church Missionary Society. I refer to the purchase of land in four different localities in order to form missionary establishments.

The Natives of New Zealand assert their claim to lands on the following grounds: First, hereditary claims, which are the best; second, lands obtained by conquest, third, lands the titles of which are disputed or doubtful. These last claims are chiefly owing to marriage and intermarriage with other tribes. These various claims are either individual or tribal.

It is not within my reach to refer to the exact dates attached to the transactions I shall notice, the original deeds being in possession of the Government; yet I may mention that the first of these purchases was made at the Thames, at a place named the Puriri, about 1835. I was myself one of a small band of missionaries (four in number) who in the latter end of 1833 made the first attempt to christianize the Natives in this part of the Island; the Church Missionary Society having hitherto confined their efforts to the Bay of Islands and its neighbourhood.

The land on which the station at the Thames was formed was obtained from a woman named Tini. We found it was at her entire disposal either to retain or to sell it at pleasure, and no chief attempted to use the slightest control over her. The payment, which at that period consisted chiefly of clothing and ironware, &c., was arranged by herself, assisted by others. Part she took for herself; the rest was distributed among the tribe to which she belonged, or sent as presents to other tribes.

The Puriri having proved both unhealthy and inconvenient, about two years afterwards a second place was bought nearer to the sea. This also was sold by the same person. In this second purchase the following difficulty occurred, which will throw some light upon Native usage in the transfer of land amongst themselves. It was known that a chief named Koinaki and his clan were living by sufferance on the place she wished to part with, and, according to Native custom, there was no right existing that could eject them. It was at the option of these people to remain there for generations, or even till the tribe became extinct; on the other hand, those in possession had no power over the land, either to alienate or to dispose of it in any way. If they left it voluntarily, or were driven away in war, and the place lay desolate for any length of time, it was not in the power of the tribe who had left it to put any second party in possession, but it at once reverted to the hereditary heir. To get over the present embarrassment Tini made presents to Koinaki and his people, in consideration of which they withdrew from the land.

The next instance I shall observe on was the purchase of land for a missionary residence, &c., in the interior. In 1835 the Rev. Mr. Brown and myself formed a missionary establishment at Matamata, and we were desirous to secure land for a village, &c. Our houses were built, and part of the ground cleared and fenced before we made any direct application to Waharoa, the chief of all the Matamata Tribes. This person had no compeer in the surrounding districts, and was feared by all, from the banks of the Waikato to the Lakes of Rotorua. As the missionaries had been invited by this chief to Matamata, and were now living under his protection, they supposed it merely necessary to apply to him in order to be put in possession of the land they occupied. He told them, however, that the land was not his, and that he could not sell it; but, he added, he had land of his own opposite the pa (Native fortification), and that they should have that. This the missionaries declined, for, though only a mile distant, yet, as the pa might at any time be attacked and endanger the station, they preferred remaining on the site already chosen. The old chief, pressed by their importunity, consented at last to speak to the proprietor, Paringaringa, and shortly afterwards brought him to the settlement. He was a young man, and owned land in the vicinity of Matamata. He readily agreed to sell the place, and having arranged the price, he afterwards returned with his mother and one or two others, who at once removed the property to their own dwelling, without making any distribution to others. Waharoa, who was present, took two spades from amongst the different articles more as a token of friendship than a right, and the purchase was concluded.

Other instances might be cited, but these appear sufficient to prove that, according to the primitive usages originally existing in this country, such a law as positive personal right to land was acknowledged.

But before quitting this subject to noticing tribal ownership, I shall take the liberty to insert a remark made by a Taranaki Native, who a short time since accompanied me down the waikato. I had observed to him that a number of the people in a tribe we had just passed were saved from instant death through the interposition of two Europeans about twenty-five years since, but that they had forgotten their benefactors. My companion for some time pulled on in silence; at last he said; "The Maori does not forget an obligation of this kind any more than the pakeha. The Europeans you speak of could not have been recognized, or they would not have been allowed to pass on without a welcome." Then, in order to illustrate the gratitude of his countrymen, he continued: "If, in former times, a rangatira (freeman, or gentleman) was dangerously wounded in battle, and was on the point of falling into the hands of the enemy; if, at such a moment, he was rescued by the valour of others, and who afterwards carried him to his home, his first thought after his recovery was, 'What can I give to my friends? I have no riches, but I have land. I will give them land. And he acted accordingly.'"

The two next cases I shall refer to relate to tribal claims. The first purchase was made by the missionaries at Tauranga, in the Bay of Plenty, during my residence among them. The land on which the station is situated was bought from the whole tribe of Ngaiterangi, the chiefs receiving payment before the people, which was by them divided according to the right of claim. The last I shall speak of was at Opotiki, eighty miles to the eastward of Tauranga, and situated in the same bay. This station was formed and conducted by myself alone for the first twelve years. The land at Opotiki was tribal, and belonged to a number of small clans who were jealous of each other, and always at variance. As it was not easy to adjust and divide the property given in exchange to the satisfaction of a thousand such claimants, I give the stipulated equivalent, which consisted of clothing, cattle, horses, ironware, and money, &c. (£300), to six or seven chiefs, and they arranged the distribution.

Thus, though in widely different parts of this country, we find the observance of the same rights; and I believe it will be found that the above precedents form the basis of the tenure by which lands are held amongst the aborigines.—[Letter to Governor Gore Browne, September, 1860.]

Auckland, 3rd December, 1860.

- His Excellency's reply to Mr. Fortescue's despatch of 27th August, 1860, deals so thoroughly with the question of the territorial rights of the Native chiefs that little is left to be said on the subject.
- The main question proposed by Mr. Fortescue is, whether or not there exists, in the chief or tribe, "a right, distinct from one of property, to assent to or forbid the sale of any land belonging to members of the tribe, in cases where all the owners are willing to sell."
- The answer to this question must be sought for in the history of land purchases since the settlement of the country by Europeans, and not in fanciful deductions from what is known or conjectured about the original state of the New Zealand tribes.
- The settlement of the country, and the establishment of British sovereignty, of necessity effected a great change in the status of tribes and individuals of the Native race. The New Zealand tribes, in their original state, were so many separate nations. The assumption of the sovereignty of the Islands, under the provisions of the Treaty of Waitangi, extinguished these separate nationalities, together with the rights flowing out of them. At the same time the treaty saved all proprietary, as distinguished from national, rights, and (subject to Her Majesty's right of pre-emption) confirmed to the Native landowners the power of alienation which they had already begun to exercise.

- It is very doubtful whether, previously to the arrival of Europeans, the aborigines had any notion at all of the absolute alienation of territory. Certainly they did not regard land as a marketable commodity; and whatever alienations may have taken place amongst themselves were of a totally different character from such as followed upon the settlement of the country.
- The alleged right of restraining alienation cannot be deduced from the practices of a time when the tribes were little nations constantly engaged in mutual hostilities, and when such a thing as a sale of land, in our sense, had not been heard of; and it would be foolish to seek precedents for the regulation of dealings with Europeans in the usages of a period when there were no Europeans in the country. The right of alienation was a novelty unprovided for in the whole tribal economy, and the conditions of the exercise of the right were, of course, novel also. The subject, therefore, can receive no real illustration from the investigation of the Native ideas and customs prior to the advent of Europeans, but the inquiry to be made is simply this: whether or not the alleged right of control has been recognized or asserted since the settlement of New Zealand. If not, no such right can be supposed to exist.
- The land purchases made of the Natives of New Zealand are divisible into two great classes: First, those made of leading chiefs, representing whole tribes (iwi); secondly, those made of sub-tribes (hapus), or of families or other comparatively small groups of individuals.
- The former class of purchases comprises those cases in which a large unoccupied territory has been disposed of by the conquerors, as in the instance of the sale of the Middle Island by the Ngatitua chiefs, and of Taranaki by Te Wherowhero and his brother.
- In most, perhaps in all, of the cases belonging to the second class the land sold has been territory actually divided amongst, and appropriated by, the different hapus or families of the tribe. By far the greater number of purchases belong to this class. All the purchases made to the north of Auckland, whether by Government or individual Europeans, belong to it; so do the purchases made of the Ngatikahungunu in the Hawke's Bay District and the Wairarapa Valley, of hapus of the Waikato Trib in the neighbourhood of Whaingaroa, or Raglan, and, of the Ngatiawa at Port Nicholson and in Taranaki.
- Neither class of purchases affords any precedent of the exercise or assertion of the supposed right. In sales of vacant territory the principal chiefs have themselves been the vendors. In sales of occupied territory an absolute and unquestioned right of alienation has always gone along with the right of occupancy, which is generally exclusive in certain hapus or families, and not common to the whole tribe.
- It thus appears that the unrestricted right of alienation has in practice accompanied the right of property, whether subsisting in the tribe or in any smaller Native community, and that no seigniorial or tribal right of controlling sales by the Native owners has ever been exercised, or in anywise asserted, since the commencement of land purchases in New Zealand. His Excellency's Responsible Ministers are therefore of opinion that the main question proposed by the Secretary of State should be answered in the negative.
- Whilst arriving at this conclusion respecting a matter of fact, Ministers desire to guard against being supposed to maintain the opinion that such practical influence as the principal chiefs may hereafter attempt to exercise in the matter of land sales ought to be disregarded. The distinction between right and power is still faintly drawn by the Natives themselves; and—dealing with them as in some sort a foreign Power—it will be generally prudent to respect any authority and influence established amongst them de facto, without too nice an inquiry whether that authority and influence exist strictly de jure. The political power of the chiefs is still great, and the jealousy of European progress on the increase, so that it is probable that in many cases the influence of the chiefs may be employed to check the exercise by Native landowners of those independent rights of alienation which they have hitherto enjoyed. Such a use of the political authority of the chiefs certainly ought not to be encouraged; at the same time it would often be imprudent to press the completion of a purchase in the face of the opposition of any important chief nearly connected with the Natives offering to cede territory.

Wiremu Kingi's Claim to Waitara.

- 13. As regards the remaining question whether the particular claim of William King to interfere with the sales in the New Plymouth District was such as it would, on any ground, have been right or politic to admit, the Governor's despatch has exhausted whatever still remained to be said. His Excellency's Ministers feel that it cannot be necessary for them to do more than to state; summarily, their own views. They think that any such recognition would have been unjust to the Native proprietors, and, seeing that W. Kingi's pretensions and intrigue have for years convulsed the district, to the European settlers also; that it would have been an abandonment of the principles laid down and acted upon by successive Governments for the settlement of the Ngatiawa claims at Taranaki, and a violation of the express promise made to the assembled Natives at New Plymouth by the present Governor in March, 1859; that, far from putting an end to it, it would have aggravated the feud which has already occasioned so much bloodshed amongst the Natives, and has so frequently disturbed and imperilled the settlement of New Plymouth; that it would have rendered the intervention of the British Government to establish peace in the district more difficult, but would by no means have obviated the ultimate necessity for such intervention: in fine, that it would have been, under the peculiar circumstances of the case, the dereliction of a plain duty, and an act of weakness unattended by any advantage beyond the postponement of a difficulty which must have soon recurred in some aggravated form.

C. W. RICHMOND.

On "Seignorial Right."

MY LORD DUKE,—

Government House, Auckland, 4th December, 1860.

I have the honour to acknowledge, and beg to express my best thanks for, Mr. Chichester Fortescue's Despatch No. 55, of the 27th August last.

- 2. I am desired in that despatch to furnish a full report to your Grace upon "the question of an alleged right, distinct from one of property, existing in the chief of a tribe, to assent to or forbid the sale of any land belonging to members of the tribe, in cases where all the owners are willing to sell, and how far such a right has been, or ought to be, recognized by the Crown." And I am also desired to give you my own views, and all the information in my power, on "the further questions whether there are reasons, apart from the Treaty of Waitangi, in favour generally of the recognition of such a right, and whether they justify the claims of Wiremu Kingi upon the present occasion."
- 3. I am afraid that, in the endeavour to give an answer to these questions, I shall have to ask for your Grace's attention at much length. They involve, in reality, an examination of the Native tenure to land generally, and specially of the Ngatiawa title at Taranaki of the status of the chiefs before and since the establishment of British sovereignty; of the principles which have guided successive Governors of New Zealand on the Taranaki question; of the proceedings immediately connected with the purchase at Waitara last year; of the misrepresentations that have been spread abroad respecting those proceedings; of the relation between Wiremu Kingi's insurrection and the Native-King movement and land league; and, lastly, of the present aspect of the subject with reference to the special questions raised by your Grace.
- 4. In submitting my own opinions on these subjects, gathered as they are from events that have occurred during a period of more than twenty years, I have desired to say nothing which was not either within my own knowledge or supported by some reliable authority. In order that these authorities should be placed before you in a readable shape, I have caused them to be printed separately as an appendix to this despatch, with distinct references to the publication in which each can be found.

I. *The Native Tenure.

- 5. In order that your Grace should see how various are the views which have been entertained on the subject of the Native title to land, I have collected all that I could find to be deserving of attention; and I submit for your perusal extracts from the opinions of—(1) the Bishop of New Zealand; (2) Sir William Martin, late Chief Justice; (3) Mr. Busby, formerly British Resident; (4) Archdeacon Maunsell; (5) Mr. Clarke, formerly Chief Protector of Aborigines; (6) the Native Board of 1856, comprising the then late and Acting Native Secretaries, and the Surveyor-General; (7) Mr. Spain, formerly Her Majesty's Land Claims Commissioner; (8) Rev. Mr. Hamlin, Church Missionary; (9) Mr. Swainson, late Attorney-General; (10) Archdeacon Hadfield; (11) Mr. Shortland, formerly a Protector of Aborigines; (12) Mr. White, for the last ten years Interpreter in the Native Office; (13) Rev. Mr. Buddle, Superintendent of the Wesleyan Mission; (14) Mr. McLean, Chief Commissioner for the Purchase of Native Lands; (15) Rev. J. A. Wilson, Church missionary.

- 6. Of the eighteen persons here named, nine were in this country before the establishment of British sovereignty, and have maintained to the present time the closest relations with the Native race; five more have been in New Zealand for between eighteen and twenty years; and the other four, who are no longer in the colony, were all from their official position necessarily called upon to form a judgment on the question of Native tenure.
- 7. The result of all these inquiries has certainly not been to present a very clear idea of what Native title is, and still less of what it is not. Chief Justice Arney said in the Legislative Council the other day, "I have found much inconsistency and contradiction, but no novelty, and have derived this consolation— namely, of reflecting that little as I know of the Native title, or of the (so-called) Maori law of real property, the generality of people, even of the learned, the periti, know little more."
- 8. At the same time I think there is no reason to doubt that, notwithstanding the variety of rules in different localities and among different tribes, the title to land among the Natives of this country was a tribal rather than an individual title. The individual right to possess whatever portion of land was subdued by the labour of each member of the tribe was undoubtedly recognized and transmitted by descent from generation to generation; but the right to alienate land so held was one the exercise of which was restricted by the obvious necessity of maintaining the unity of the tribe, of securing its right to service from each member, and of preserving its land from going into the hands of strangers. It is doubtful, indeed, whether the right to alienate land in perpetuity was well understood among the Natives before the European settlement of the country.
- 9. I now beg to submit to your Grace a few of the opinions which have been given on both the tribal title and individual right.

See ante, No. 9.

"Generally there is no such thing as an individual claim, clear and independent of the tribal right.", "Each Native has a right in common with the whole tribe over the disposal of the land of the tribe, and has an individual right to such portions as he or his parents may have regularly used for cultivations, &c. This individual claim does not amount to a right of disposal to Europeans, as a general rule." "The land does not, generally speaking, belong to one individual, but chiefly to the tribe." "Land is held by them either by the whole tribe or by some family of it, or sometimes by an individual member of a tribe." "It may be observed that scarcely any of the land of the aborigines of this country can be said to be the exclusive property of one individual; though the descent through which a party can trace their claim to the land they hold is by a single person. This person can sell if he likes without the consent of his party; the party selling without his consent would be a hoko tahae (dishonest sale).... This absence of the individualization of property seems rather attributable to the state of the country than to any defect in the line of descent. The individualization of the descent is clearly recognized." "The lands of a tribe were portioned out according to the number of families of which it consisted, and were claimed by each family as its own, nor did any one meddle with it or occupy the land of another family without express permission." "For the most part, the boundaries of property are well defined. In the immediate neighbourhood of such pas as are at present inhabited, land is often minutely subdivided, each separate piece belonging to some one person.... There might be several conflicting claimants of the same land; but, however the Natives might be divided among themselves as to the validity of the several claims, still no man doubted that there was in every case a right of property subsisting in some one of the claimants." "In this way families hold and cultivate their ground; enlarging their individual cultivations from time to time, thus establishing an indisputable title to such lands as their special and particular property.... All or any of these acts give an undeniable right to special property in land heretofore considered common." "The chiefs are the principal landholders: Every individual, however, so far as I have been able to learn, has his own estate which he has inherited from his branch of the family, and which he cultivates as he pleases." "The head teacher of the tribe is about to be admitted to holy orders, which led me to ask whether he had a claim to any land which might be available for his maintenance. I was immediately informed of the exact spot, and of the grounds of his title.... Let the [Ngatiawa] tribe be once assembled in undisputed possession of its ancient territory, and let each freeholder's claim be duly investigated, and a Crown title granted to each as an individual proprietor, with full power to dispose of his land by sale, lease, or bequest... I desire to see each Native landowner secured by a Crown grant for his own individual property.... Every one of these 340 men [Ngatiawas] believes himself to be a proprietor of land in this district.... These instances appear sufficient to prove that, according to the primitive usages originally existing in this country, such a law as positive personal right to land was acknowledged." And, lastly, I beg to refer to extracts of a paper, known to have been written by one of the Interpreters in the Native Office, containing instances of sales effected by Natives at various times without reference to the chiefs.

- 10. But whatever may be the true theory of Native tenure, as a theory, there is nothing more certain than that there exist among the Native tribes themselves no fixed rules by which the practice of the Government in its dealings with them for land could be guided. Mr. McLean, whose experience extends over more than twenty years, and who has bought more than twenty millions of acres for the Crown, in his evidence before the House of Representatives last August says (I give the substance of his answers): "The tribal right varies so much in different parts of the country, I should like to know what particular part of the country is referred to, as the custom which prevails in one place does not in another. There are very wide exceptions to any general rule, and the exception is wider than the rule. In some tribes the different hapus (families) must be consulted, in others the chiefs. The various hapus which compose a tribe most frequently have the right of disposal, but not always. You must discover the rights of the parties by inquiry of the people in the district where the land is situate and elsewhere. The Natives have no fixed rule. The custom varies in different districts. In the Ngatiawa Tribe a family of three or four people has been regarded as empowered to dispose of its common property: they have enjoyed this right for the last eighteen years."
- 11. Again, Mr. Busby, formerly British resident, says: "It is certain that the Maoris had no fixed rule to guide them in the disposal of their land;" and the Rev. Mr. Hamlin: "All these acknowledged Native rights were by might often set aside, and arbitrary power ruled. ... Tribal rights, or any uniform course of action or general plan for their guidance in the management of their lands or other affairs, I have not found to exist among the Natives of this country, nor do I believe they have any such plan or general rule. Each party or tribe seems to have been guided by existing circumstances in the management of their affairs."
- 12. But, above all, I beg your Grace's attention to the speech delivered by Mr. McLean to the conference of chiefs at Kohimarama, and contradicted by none, in which he says: "No fixed law on the subject [of their lands] could be said to exist, except the law of might. It was true that various customs relating to Native tenure existed, but these were not in any way permanent; and the endless complications of such customs were eventually resolved into the law of might. .... The Native has no fixed law to regulate the rights of property. The European has a law to guide him on this subject; the Native has no well-defined law. .... Powerful tribes took possession of land by driving off or exterminating the original inhabitants; these in their turn drove off other less powerful tribes. The conqueror enjoyed the property while he had the power of keeping it."
- 13. And in order to illustrate the difficulties in the way of laying down fixed rules, I beg leave to give your Grace a few instances of conflicting opinions:—
- 14. The conflicting authorities here quoted furnish a satisfactory answer to an accusation constantly preferred against the Native Department, that, in extinguishing Native title, they are guided by no fixed rules, but have, with apparent caprice, dealt with chiefs in one place and with proprietors in another. No one of my predecessors has ventured to lay down any precise theory on the subject of Native tenure, nor could I pretend to do so; on the contrary, I have endeavoured to follow in the path traced out by them, and have studied to preserve as much consistency and uniformity of action as circumstances will permit in all dealings with Native proprietors. I now propose to prove to your Grace that my dealings with the Ngatiawa Tribe have formed no exception to this rule.

II. The Ngatiawa Title at Taranaki.

- 15. In order rightly to understand the position which the Governors of New Zealand have uniformly assumed in reference to the title of the Ngatiawa at Taranaki, it is necessary to remember that they were a conquered, broken, and scattered tribe, and that the fairest and most fertile country in New Zealand, their ancient inheritance, was a deserted wilderness at the time of the European colonization.
- 16. About thirty years ago the great chief Te Rauparaha persuaded a large force of the Ngatiawa, Ngatiraukawa, and other tribes, to assist him in his wars with the original inhabitants of both shores of Cook Strait. The Waikato Natives, taking advantage of their absence, suddenly invaded the Taranaki District, and took Pukerangiora, a large pa on the Waitara River (the same pa which there is now reason to think the insurgents intend to fortify and try to hold), capturing or destroying nearly two thousand of the inhabitants. They then attacked Ngamotu, near the present site of New Plymouth, but without success, and returned to their own country. They never repeated their attack, though they frequently threatened to do so; and the remnant of the Ngatiawa Tribe, finding themselves too weak to oppose effectually any renewed invasion from Waikato while their principal warriors were absent with Rauparaha, migrated with their women and children, and rejoined their relatives at Otaki, Port Nicholson, Queen Charlotte Sound, and other places, where they took possession of and cultivated the soil, and where their title was afterwards admitted, by reason of such occupation, against Rauparaha and others who claimed the land by right of conquest.

- 17. Thus the Ngatiawa Tribe had either voluntarily migrated on conquering expeditions to other lands, or had left in dread of the Waikatos, or had been driven by force out of their ancient territory, and had completely abandoned it. When the first white men went there there were only sixty people living in the whole district north of the Sugarloaf Islands, and for a long time subsequent to 1840 they had not much more than a hundred acres in cultivation. In the expressive language of two of their chiefs, in a letter to the people of Taranaki, "All was quite deserted; the land, the sea, the streams and lakes, the forests, the rocks, were deserted; the food, the property, the work, were deserted; the dead and the sick were deserted; the landmarks were deserted."
- 18. Now, when the British sovereignty was proclaimed in New Zealand, we found (notwithstanding the desolating wars which had taken place for years throughout the Islands) certain great tribes in the full possession of their tribal territories. Thus the Ngapuhi in the North, and the Waikato and Ngatimaniapoto in the centre and West Coast, held their ancient inheritance still; and, in our dealings with them since the Treaty of Waitangi, we have generally recognized not alone their tribal right in cases of sale, but the influence of their principal men in assenting to or preventing sales. No Government, for instance, would have thought of making a purchase at Ngapuhi, or at Waikato, in the teeth of the veto of great chiefs, such as Tamati Waka Nene and Potatau te Wherowhero. On the other hand there were a few tribes which had been so broken and scattered by conquest and otherwise that, with reference to them, the British Government has from the first neither recognized the tribal right in case of alienation, nor permitted the exercise of a veto on such alienation by the chiefs. Of these was the Ngatiawa of Taranaki.
- 19. I do not propose to discuss the question whether the Government of this colony was right or wrong in denying to the Ngatiawa Tribe at Tarauaki the status which they would have recognized in unconquered tribes. It will be sufficient for me to show that they have done so in successive acts and decisions since the foundation of the colony, and that in the course I have pursued I have simply adhered to the principles and policy of my predecessors, Governor Hobson, Governor Fitzroy, and Governor Sir George Grey. I shall presently establish this, I cannot doubt, to the perfect satisfaction of your Grace.

III. *Status of the Chiefs.

- 20. There can hardly be a doubt that, prior to the establishment of British sovereignty, the power of a chief in his tribe depended as much on his courage and skill in war and his ability in council as on rank by birth or on territorial possessions. It often happened that the most powerful chief was a small landholder. Their law was the right of the strong arm. Mr. Busby, writing in 1837 to the Governor of New South Wales, tells us what kind of rank the chiefs had in those days: "To those unacquainted with the status of a Native chief it may appear improbable that he would give up his own proper rank and authority. But, in truth, the New Zealand chief has neither rank nor authority but what every person above the condition of a slave, and indeed the most of them, may despise or resist with impunity."
- 21. But the kind of authority which the chiefs exercised in reference to land may be gathered from the following extracts from the authorities whom I have already quoted: Sir William Martin said in 1846: "There is no paramount or controlling power, either in the tribe or in the sub-tribe, to restrain or direct the exercise of the right of appropriation [of land]. Each family or freeman may use and appropriate without leave of any." The Board of 1856 said: "The chiefs exercise an influence in the disposal of land, but have only an individual claim, like the Test of the people, to particular portions." Archdeacon Hadfield, in 1845, said: "The chief of the tribe, since he has no absolute right over the territory of the various hapus, nor over the lands of individual freemen of his own hapu, cannot sell any lands but his own, or those belonging to the tribe which are undoubtedly waste lands."
- 22. I take the preceding opinions because they were given years ago, and have nothing to do with the present state of things. Since the insurrection which has unhappily broken out at Taranaki a great effort has been made by many persons to claim for all the chiefs, and in all circumstances, a paramount authority in the sale of land; such a power, in short, as Mr. Fortescue describes—"one distinct from the right of property, to assent to or forbid the sale of any land belonging to the tribe." Various names have been given to this right. It is called by the Bishop of New Zealand and some of his clergy a "seigniorial right," by others a "manorial right," by others a "feudal right." I wish to show your Grace that the universal exercise of any right of the sort is by no means admitted or even understood by persons extremely well qualified to form an opinion.

- 23. Mr. Busby says: "I have read much of 'manorial' and 'seigniorial right,' of 'tribal right,' and even of 'feudal-right,' in relation to the Maori tenure of land. Persons use these expressions with ideas more or less distinct attached to them, taking it for granted that corresponding ideas exist in the minds of the Maoris. I question whether many of the Maoris are better informed on such points now than they were at the time of the Treaty of Waitangi; but it is very certain that at that time no Maori entertained the idea of a right existing in one party which implied an obligation upon all other parties to respect it. No one conceived the idea of authority carrying with it the corresponding obligation of obedience. Such rights and obligations are the creation of law, and cannot subsist without it. The Maori had no law but the law of the strongest..... There are ideas attached to the possession of land which may well be called instinctive; and great injustice may be done to individuals who hold such a possession, if they are prevented from selling it by a supposition that what we call a superior right exists in some other person, that right being nothing more in the minds of the Maoris than the exercise of an arbitrary power by those who have strength and arrogance enough to assume it."
- 24. The Rev. Mr. Hamlin says: "I have not been able to discover that any such thing as manorial right, distinct from ownership in a greater or less degree, has been lodged in the chief of a district, in the chief of a tribe, in the chief of a hapu, or in any other person of the aborigines. And if there is such a thing as mana o te whenua (mana of the land) it is a certain invisible, indescribable something to which the European may attach a meaning wholly at variance with that which a Native may affix to it. Manorial rights, as Englishmen understand them, are foreign to the Natives, and if they have any such ideas they must have acquired them from Europeans."
- 25. Archdeacon Hadfield says: "The notes I have now read imply that the chiefs have power over some portion of the land. Fifteen years ago I set it down as a questionable right or power: I view it in the same light now. I limit such right of chiefs to deal with lands obtained by conquest only, and do not consider that it extends to any land which has become vested in the tribe by long possession."
- 26. Mr. Buddle says: "It is by no means clear that any such custom as 'manorial right' ever obtained among the Native tribes; was ever claimed by the chiefs or ceded by the people originally. A man took possession of territory by the strength of his arm, and rested his claim on his conquests. 'By this,' he would say, stretching out his arm, I obtained it.' .... Manorial rights are imaginary rights when claimed for New Zealand chiefs."
- 27. And I would request your Grace's attention to the following further extracts on the meaning of the term mana, which has become a household word since the insurrection. "Mana of the chiefs. This word means authority, power, influence. It was originally applied to persons and their words or acts, not to land. The word has of late been used in reference to land, and now we hear of te mana o te whenua (the mana of the land). What distinct idea is attached to it, is difficult to say. The disputed land at the Waitara is claimed by the Maori-King party because the King's mana has reached it: Kua tae te mana o to matou Kingi ki reira (The mana of our King has gone there); and wherever this mana has gone the land is held inalienable without the King's consent. Kia man te mana o te whenua (Hold fast the mana of the land) is another expression now in frequent use. What does it mean? This is altogether a new application of the term: perhaps it has been adopted in consequence of the Queen's sovereignty over the Islands having been translated as the Queen's mana. But it certainly did not originally mean that which is now claimed for it—viz., a chief's 'manorial right.' This use of the word was not heard until the Maori-King movement originated it." "The term mana in reference to land I have occasionally heard, and have asked the question, 'He aha te mana o te whenua?' (What is mana of the land?), and have received this answer: 'Aua hoki; ma te pakeha' (I don't know; it is the white man). The answer implies that the term as applied to land had its origin in a mistaken conception of the meaning of Native words by Europeans. The term as applied to land is scarcely heard of in some districts."
- 28. But whatever may be the precise idea which is now entertained under the designation of "seigniorial right," "manorial right," or "feudal right," it is an extraordinary thing that among all the authorities I have quoted, so far as I have seen their opinions made public, it was never mentioned before this war. Surely, in the way it is now claimed by the apologists of Wiremu Kingi, it is in the nature of a sovereign right; and Sir William Martin wrote in 1846: "Every right which exists, whether in one person or in more, is truly a right of property; and there does not in this state of things exist anything which can be correctly likened to a right of sovereignty, as understood amongst us."
- 29. The question really is, Was such a right guaranteed to the chiefs of New Zealand by the Treaty of Waitangi? Mr. Busby, who negotiated the Treaty, absolutely denies it. I do not find that Governor Hobson, who made the Treaty, anywhere admitted it. And the interpretation originally given to the Treaty is clearly shown in the following evidence of Archdeacon Maunsell before the recent Select Committee of the House of Representatives on Waikato Affairs: "You recollect the time when the Treaty of Waitangi was entered into between Governor Hobson and the northern chiefs: did you assist the Government in any way to obtain the consent of the Waikato chiefs to that Treaty?—I did: I induced the Waikato people to consent to it.—Were you aware as to what was their understanding at the time of their cession of sovereignty to the Queen, as contained in the Treaty?—That they retained the rights over their lands, but that the Queen had power to make laws. —Do you know what are the views now entertained by the Native-King party with reference to the meaning of that Treaty?—I do not.—Are you aware whether any of the chiefs who agreed to that Treaty are now connected with the King movement?—I am not.—Do you recollect a sort of State visit made by the old King (Potatau) to Lower Waikato some time in the beginning of the present year?—I do.—Were you present at an assembly held at Waiuku on that occasion?—I was.—Did you deliver an address to that assembly in which you expressed your interpretation of the meaning of the terms of the Treaty which relate to their lands; and, if so, will you state to the Committee what you then said to the Natives on that subject?—I said that they ought to allow each man to do what he liked with his own land, that their right to their land was secured to them by the Treaty of Waitangi, and that no king ever interferes with his people when they wish to sell land."

IV. Acts and Decisions of former Governors of New Zealand.

- 30. I beg now, to call your Grace's attention to the uniform action that has been taken by successive Governors of New Zealand in the matter of the Taranaki land question since the establishment of the Queen's sovereignty in these Islands.

Proceedings of Governor Hobson.

- 31. I have described the condition to which the Ngatiawa Tribe had been reduced by successive conquests and migrations, and the abject state of the remnant which still remained at Taranaki in 1840. It was in this state of things that Governor Hobson made his purchase of the Taranaki District from the great Waikato chief Te Wherowhero, who had some time previously accompanied him to Kapiti. Writing to the Secretary of State, in December, 1841, the Governor gave the following description of the transaction, and of the position which Te Wherowhero assumed in it: "Te Wherowhero claims the country as his by right of conquest, and insists on it that the remnant of the Ngatiawas are slaves; that they only live at Taranaki by sufferance, and that they had no right whatsoever to sell the land without his consent. In illustration of his argument, he placed a heavy ruler on some light papers, saying, 'Now, so long as I choose to keep this weight here, the papers remain quiet, but if I remove it the wind immediately blows them away: so it is with the people of Taranaki;' alluding to his power to drive them off."
- 32. The deed of sale was executed in January, 1842: the boundaries included all the country from Tongapourutu, north of the Mokau River, to the Ngatiruanui country south of the Sugarloaves, comprising the whole of the Waitara District. It does not appear that Governor Hobson obtained any formal cession of their rights from the Ngatimaniapoto chiefs, who, with Te Wherowhero, were the joint conquerors of the Ngatiawa; but Tamati Ngapora, Te Wherowhero's brother, told me not long since that the Ngatimaniapoto got the whole payment, and that his brother was very angry, and said he would have been satisfied with even a blanket as a token of recognition. During his visit to the Ngatimaniapoto chiefs at Kawhia in April, 1842, Governor Hobson acquainted them with his purchase, and gave them permission to occupy a part of the land within the boundary, distinctly warning them at the same time that they were not to interfere with the European settlement at New Plymouth, and desiring the Resident Magistrate there to point out to them the English boundary.
- 33. In this transaction it is clear that Governor Hobson in no way admitted the right of the Ngatiawa Tribe to the country they had abandoned, nor any right of chieftainship, nor any right on their part to forbid the sale: but, on the contrary, recognized the European settlement, and claimed to have extinguished the aboriginal title by his purchase from the Waikatos.
- 34. In order clearly to ascertain the completeness of that purchase it will be necessary to examine the evidence of the Waikato title by conquest. I am aware that it has been held to be a rule in Native tenure that conquest without occupation gives no sufficient title. The doctrine has been laid down very distinctly and decisively, though it is held to be doubtful on good authority; but, for the present purpose, it is not necessary that I should controvert it. The question, then, is narrowed to this: whether or not the Waikatos retained possession or occupation of Taranaki after their conquest.

- 35. Though the doctrine has been broadly laid down as above stated, it is nowhere said what degree of possession and occupation is sufficient to establish a complete title. In the case of Taranaki, Chief Protector Clarke in 1843, while admitting that the title of the Waikato conquerors was good so far as they had taken possession, held that the chief right was still vested in the Ngatiawa Tribe as the original inhabitants; but in the case of Wairau, in the Middle Island, just after the massacre in the same year, he held that the title lay wholly in Rauparaha and the Ngatitua Tribe as conquerors of the district, though, so far from occupying the country, they were (both before and after the massacre) settled on the north shore of Cook Strait, and had only an insignificant cultivation in Cloudy Bay. Thus, in one case, the principal right was said to remain with the conquered tribe which had wholly abandoned its territory, while in the other it was said to vest in the conquerors who had never resided in the country they had subdued.
- 36. I willingly admit that the degree of occupation of Taranaki retained by the Waikatos has been much contested. It is barely recognized by some authorities, and denied by another. On the other hand the weight of testimony is decidedly in favour of their possession and occupation. Chief Protector Clarke and Commissioner Spain both admit it; and the aspect of the question is clearly shown by Chief Commissioner McLean in his speeches to the Waikato chiefs at the Ngaruawahia meeting this year, as well as in his speeches at the Kohimarama Conference, and in his evidence before the House of Representatives: "You also [Waikato] sold it to us in all its boundaries; therefore I say that land has been fully ceded and given into our hands in open daylight..... Waikato has taken up arms to hold that which their own chiefs gave to the Europeans, spreading it forth for their acceptance in the light of day and under the shining sun of heaven..... Had it been territory not previously touched or broken into, it would have been different; but this was not the case..... The land has been consumed; it cannot return to its original state any more than the ashes of a dead fire can be rekindled. This statement is not a new one; it was made by me [here] at Waikato, and the old chief who has just died [Potatau] fully admitted its truth. Referring to it he said, 'It is correct.' .... Now, in accordance with your customs, this land was completely forfeited and gone. Of the men who once possessed it some had been brought as slaves to Waikato; some had gone to Kapiti. It was a complete abandonment of a conquered territory." The Waikato title to Taranaki was universally admitted by the Natives; at the time of the conquest many acts of ownership over the soil had been exercised by them. The land was divided among the conquering chiefs; the usual custom of putting up flags and posts to mark the boundaries of the portions claimed by each chief had been gone through. Any occupation of the land by the Ngatiawa at that period was entirely out of the question, but those Natives who were released from slavery from time to time were permitted by Waikato to occupy; but those who had fled to the south were not allowed to return, and they were distinctly warned that if a return were attempted it would be the cause for fresh war against Ngatiawa. The Waikato right was thus established as a right of conquest, and was fully admitted by the Ngatiawa themselves, who, on each occasion when they sold a portion of land, at Taranaki, sent a part of the payment to Waikato as an acknowledgment of conquest or of the right of mana possessed by the Waikato chiefs as their conquerors. In this view of the question it is quite evident that the Ngatiawa title had been superseded by the right of the conquerors.
- 37. But the most conclusive evidence is furnished by the Waikato chiefs themselves so long ago as 1844. When Mr. Protector Forsaith was sent down to Taranaki by Governor Fitzroy he had interviews on his way with the Waikato and Ngatimaniapoto chiefs, who expressly asserted their title and desired him to warn the Ngatiawas of it. "You are now going to Taranaki; listen to our parting words: That land is ours. We claim it by right of conquest, and some part of it by possession. We hold the late Governor's permission to locate any of the lands at Taranaki provided we do not go south of Urenui. Go and tell the Ngatiawas that the Waikato chiefs remind them that the land is theirs, and advise them to settle their dispute with the Europeans, or the Waikatos will settle it for them."
- 38. Another important proof of the validity of the Waikato title is afforded by the fact that, when Wiremu Kingi finally decided to return to Waitara in 1848, he did so by the express permission of Te Wherowhero, thus recognizing the right of the latter to the district as conqueror, and illustrating a practice not infrequent among the New Zealanders as a means of reconciling feuds and securing quiet occupation of land about which the tribes concerned might have been at war.
- 39. And I beg to add to this the further testimony, given to myself by the Waikato chiefs Tamati Ngapora (half-brother to Potatau) and Te Katipa, who absolutely maintain to this day the right of Waikato to sell Taranaki to Governor Hobson: and the evidence of the Rev. Mr. Buddie and Rev. Mr. Whiteley, missionaries who have resided at Taranaki and have been twenty years in the colony, which has just reached me.

Award of Commissioner Spain.

- 40. I need not trouble your Grace with any account of the troubles which accompanied, as might have been foreseen, the return of the absentees and manumitted captives of the Ngatiawa. From 1841 to 1844 there occurred a series of disputes which kept both races in a state of chronic irritation and excitement. At last, in May, 1844, Mr. Spain, Her Majesty's Commissioner for determining Titles to Land, held his Court at Taranaki for the investigation of the case.
- 41. The circumstances of that officer's award must be too familiar to your Grace to require any detailed reference to them. Mr. Spain disallowed altogether the claims of the Ngatiawa captives and absentees, and gave judgment for the issue of a grant to the New Zealand Company for sixty thousand acres, including the whole of Waitara. This award was reversed by Governor Fitzroy, as will be presently stated; but after careful reconsideration Mr. Spain remained of the same opinion, and formally reiterated the judgment he had given on the spot. In doing so he laid particular stress on the fact that no claim had been asserted on behalf of the absentees, though he afforded every opportunity to the Protector of Aborigines, who specially represented the Native interests during the investigation, to adduce such evidence, as was admitted by that officer in his address to the Natives; and he called attention to the further important circumstance that, if the Protector had entertained the idea of the Ngatiawa captives having any just or equitable claim to the land, he ought to have brought forward such claim and urged its recognition, whereas his speech afforded abundant proof that he then held no such doctrine. And in support of this view, Mr. Spain quoted the opinion of the Rev. S. Ironside, a Wesleyan missionary of acknowledged experience and intimate acquaintance with the Taranaki question, who strongly deprecated any payment whatever being made to the Ngatiawas.
- 42. The reports of Protectors Clarke and Forsaith, made immediately after delivery of the Commissioner's judgment, in no way impugned his decision or suggested its reversal: nevertheless the Governor reversed it, as I now proceed to state.

Proceedings of Governor Fitzroy.

- 43. The delivery of Mr. Spain's judgment caused a great excitement among the Natives, and numbers of them appealed at once to the Governor. In particular, Wiremu Kingi, who was on the spot at the time, wrote a letter on the 8th June, the day of the judgment, to which I beg to call your Grace's attention. He there declares that not a single man of the Ngatiawa Tribe received payment from the New Zealand Company, but only men of the Puketapu and Ngamotu Tribes. This would be false, even if there were any foundation for the distinction attempted to be drawn between the Ngatiawa and the Puketapu and Ngamotu people; but there is no manner of doubt that these were hapus or families of the Ngatiawa equally with the Manukorihi branch to which Kingi himself belongs. I shall by-and-by have to remark on the significant fact that Wiremu Kingi, though present at the time, asserted no claim whatever before Commissioner Spain.
- 44. Immediately on receiving the remonstrances of which I have spoken, Governor Fitzroy decided on going himself to Taranaki, and meanwhile sent down Protectors McLean and Forsaith, with the Rev. Mr. Whiteley, to prepare his way with the Natives. These gentlemen arrived overland almost simultaneously with the Governor, who held his inquiry at New Plymouth on the 3rd of August, 1844. The Waitara Natives, by that time numbering about two hundred and fifty, were with difficulty persuaded to attend the Governor at all, and only did so on seeing that the Waikato chief Te Pakaru, whom Mr. Whiteley had brought down to assist in settling the question, instantly complied with the summons. This was a signal mark of the respect with which we are told that chief was treated by the Ngatiawa people as one of their conquerors.
- 45. I beg leave to request your Grace's perusal of the report of the proceedings at that inquiry, which was published by authority in the Native language after the manuscript had been corrected in English by Governor Fitzroy himself. The following extracts, however, clearly state the principles on which the Governor proceeded: "I have no wish to fight," said the Governor. "One great work I have to do; it is this: I will not permit one man to behave ill to another..... My work is this: to carefully settle the question about the land; and I will arrange it thus: I will not consent to the pakehas being expelled; the matter must be left with me. I will not agree to your molesting the pakehas, nor will I allow the pakehas to molest you. I will insist upon quiet being maintained. If you do not listen I will bring soldiers, that quiet may be kept..... Now, this is the Governor's opinion: that all the Natives at Taranaki should go to their teachers or to the Protector of the district who lives among them, and state the names of their places; and the Protector will write down the names of the owners and their estates, whether belonging to man, woman, or child. And if such owner agrees to sell his place on reasonable terms it will be purchased and he will receive payment..... Mr. McLean has been left by the Governor as a Protector for you; he will arrange about your lands. Be kind to him and attentive to what he says; and point out your respective possessions correctly; do not quarrel; do not say, 'All this is mine; all that belongs to me;' but mark it out quietly, and do not encroach on any other person's possession, but let every man point out his own. Do you ask why we are thus to take down the names of your places? It is to prevent future mistakes. You have heard that no land will be taken unjustly. If you sell it to the Europeans, well; but you must be careful each to sell his own property, and then he will receive the payment himself."

- 46. Your Grace will observe that in this manifesto Governor Fitzroy, first, required that the existing disputes should cease; second, distinctly recognized the individual right to sell; and, third, expressly promised to purchase the land of any individuals willing to dispose of their rights.
- 47. In order that these rights might be ascertained, forms were prepared of schedules to be filled up by the claimants, and inquiries were at once set on foot among the various sections of the tribe. Having so far quieted the prevailing excitement, Governor Fitzroy returned to Auckland, promising to return in two months and make a final settlement of the dispute. The result of these inquiries was not encouraging. At Waitara Mr. McLean found the Natives still resolved not to sell; and, indeed, he admits that they did not consider themselves empowered to negotiate without the consent of several absentee chiefs still residing at Kapiti, who owned the greater portion of the land.
- 48. In November, 1844, the Governor returned, as he had promised, to give his final decision. Certain proposals, made jointly by Protector McLean, Protector Forsaith, and the Rev. Mr. Whiteley, were submitted to His Excellency and adopted by him as the basis of that decision. In Mr. Forsaith's report of the transaction dated 23rd November, he distinctly says: "These suggestions have been so far approved by His Excellency that his decision has been based upon the general principles they embody: the modifications required in their practical application to the existing dispute will doubtless be made fully apparent in the more detailed report of Mr. McLean."
- 49. I beg your Grace's special attention to the following extracts from those proposals: "Let a block of land be marked out, bounded on the south by the Sugarloaves, and on the north by the Waiwhakaiho River, running back as far as the Company's surveys have been extended, or still further inland if mutually agreeable, which would comprise an area of 7,150 acres..... Let a definite sum be fixed as a fair and equitable price for this block, at a certain rate per acre; from which deduct the amount of payment which any of the present claimants may have received from the Company, the unpaid resident Natives receiving their proportionate shares, and the residue lodged in trust for the absentees, who should have notice that, unless their claims were preferred and substantiated within a given period (say twelve months), they would be considered forfeited. Such award should be final and absolute."
- 50. It is then quite clear that in these decisions, as in the previous proceedings of Governor Hobson, neither the tribal right of the Ngatiawa, nor any "seigniorial right," nor any chieftain right to forbid a sale, was recognized by Governor Fitzroy; but that, on the contrary, he, in accordance with his pledge two months before, admitted the individual right of ownership; which, however, was hardly acknowledged in the proposed block. Seven thousand acres were to be laid off, whether the absentee claimants were willing to sell or not; a price per acre was to be fixed by the Government, whether the Natives agreed to it or not; and the absentee owners were to come in and prove their claims in twelve months or have them absolutely and finally forfeited. It is material to observe that Governor Fitzroy professed to admit the rights of the Ngatiawa "in all their integrity;" and we have in these decisions conclusive evidence of what he considered those rights to be. It is true that the proposals were specific only as respected the block between the Sugarloaves and the Waiwhakaiho, a river about five miles north of them; but the country was just as much part of the ancient possession of the Ngatiawa as the Waitara, and what was justice in one case would have been justice in the other.
- 51. I shall presently show that the principle here laid down by Governor Fitzroy in the first Government purchase was exactly followed by Governor Grey; and I beg leave to remark that, in allowing Te Teira and his people to sell their own land at Waitara, I did no more at Waitara in 1860 than Governor Fitzroy thought it consistent with the Ngatiawa rights to do at New Plymouth in 1844, and had expressly pledged himself should be done.

Proceedings of Governor Sir George Grey.

- 52. The decision come to by Governor Fitzroy did not result in a cessation of disputes. The Government had to accept a block half the size originally fixed. The Ngatiawa chief Moturoa, from Wellington, put in a claim to Borne country, which was claimed by another section of the tribe; this section claimed part of the payment which another branch of the tribe was to receive; the claimants flew to arms, and blood was all but shed. A striking account of these occurrences, and of the condition to which the right of chieftainship had been degraded in this broken and scattered tribe, is given by Mr. McLean in his official report of 17th December, 1844.

- 53. Soon afterwards, Wiremu Kingi, who had returned to his place at Waikanae, announced his intention of returning to Waitara with his people, and offered to sell Waikanae to the Government. The proposal was discouraged by the Superintendent of the Southern Division and by the District Protector, who reported that "their claim was of a doubtful character; that the whole of the tribe had not consented to remove, as it was still uncertain whether the Ngatimaniapoto and Waikato would allow them to resume the territories they were many years ago obliged to surrender; and lastly, but particularly, that Te Rauparaha desired him not to recommend their claims as valid." The proposal was referred to Governor Fitzroy, who minuted upon it "Read.—R. F., 30th October, 1845," but does not appear to have given any directions upon it.
- 54. In the meantime the Governor had, in a memorandum to the Secretary of State, briefly reported his disallowance of Mr. Spain's award. The information he gave was not satisfactory to Mr. Gladstone, then Colonial Secretary, who sent out instructions to Governor Grey to endeavour to give effect to the award unless he should have seen reason to believe that its reversal was a wise and just measure.
- 55. The Native insurrection of 1846, in which it is only just to say that Wiremu Kingi bore arms on our side, had interrupted his plans for returning to Waitara; but upon peace being made they were revived, and he accompanied Sir George Grey in the visit which His Excellency paid to New Plymouth in February, 1847, with the special object of settling the land question.
- 56. On the 1st and 2nd March the Governor held meetings with the Ngatiawa chiefs, and announced his decision. The principle of it was identical with that adopted by Governor Fitzroy. The following extract from his despatch of the 2nd March, 1847, is submitted to your Grace, in which you will find that Sir George Grey expressly says his plan was "in fulfilment of the promises of his predecessor:" "Upon taking a review of the whole of these circumstances, together with our isolated and weak position in this portion of New Zealand, the only arrangement I thought could be advantageously made was, to acquaint the Natives that I should order, in the first place, that the most ample reserves for their present and future wants should be marked off for the resident Natives, as well as for those who were likely to return to Taranaki; but that the remaining portion of the country in that district should be resumed for the Crown, and for the use of the Europeans; that, in the fulfilment of the promises made by my predecessor, the value of the resumed land, in its wild and defenceless state, should be assessed by a Commissioner, and that a Court should then be appointed to inquire into the Native titles to the whole, or portions of the district so resumed; and that those Natives who established valid claims to any parts of it should receive the corresponding portions of the payment to which they would be entitled. But very few of the Natives seemed disposed to assent to this arrangement; but they distinctly understood that it was my intention to enforce it."
- 57. And the following extracts from his instructions to Mr. McLean at the same time show the precise mode in which the Governor meant the plan to be carried out: "It is proposed to evade, in as far as practicable, the various difficulties which have arisen under these conflicting circumstances, by in the first place reserving to the several tribes who claim land in this district tracts which will amply suffice for their present and future wants; and, secondly, resuming the remaining portion of the district for the European population; and, when the extent of the land so resumed has been ascertained, to determine what price shall be paid to the Natives for it; this amount not to be paid at once, but in annual instalments extending over a period of three or four years, at the end of which time it may be calculated that the lands reserved for the Natives will have become so valuable as to yield them some income, in addition to the produce raised from those portions of them which they cultivate. If possible, the total amount of land resumed for the Europeans should be from sixty to seventy thousand acres. A grant of this tract of land will then be offered by the Government to the Company. The price paid for any portion of land should not, under any circumstances, exceed 1s. 6d. per acre, and the average price should be below this amount. The greatest economy on this subject is necessary. This arrangement should be carried out, in the first instance, with those parties who have given their assent to it, including the Natives who have offered a tract of land for sale to the south of the Sugarloaves. Where land without the block awarded by Mr. Spain is now acquired, and required for immediate use by the Company's settlers, sections must be surveyed for them. Those Natives who refuse to assent to this arrangement must distinctly understand that the Government do not admit that they are the true owners of the land they have recently thought proper to occupy."

- 58. At first the Ngatiawa chiefs resisted this decision, but shortly afterwards it seems Governor Grey had reason to believe that Wiremu Kingi meant to submit, for he informed the Secretary of State that he had ascertained that "the whole of the Ngatiawa Tribe, with the exception of one family of it, the Puketapu, had assented to the arrangement, and that several European settlers had already been put in possession of their lands,"
- 59. I have thus shown that, as in the proceedings of Governor Hobson and Governor Fitzroy, neither the tribal right in the Ngatiawa, nor any "seignorial right," nor any chieftain's right to forbid a sale, was admitted at Taranaki by Sir George Grey, and that in the arrangement he proposed he intended to fulfil the promises made by his predecessor. But Sir George Grey certainly went a step farther than Governor Fitzroy; he refused to recognize, as a matter of right, either tribal right or individual ownership. Eeserves were to be laid off for the Natives, the residue of the land was to be resumed by the Crown for the European settlers, a price per acre was to be fixed (not higher than Is. 6d. per acre), and those Natives who did not choose to come into the arrangement were distinctly warned they would not be admitted to be the rightful owners of the soil at all. I beg leave once more respectfully to remind your Grace that, in simply allowing Te Teira and his people to sell their own land, I did no more at Waitara in 1860 than Governor Fitzroy thought it consistent with the Ngatiawa rights to do in respect of New Plymouth in 1844, and than Governor Grey thought it consistent with the same rights to do in respect of the whole boundaries awarded by Commissioner Spain.

Ngatiawa Migration from Kapiti in 1848.

- 60. But Governor Grey had been deceived in the belief that the whole of the Ngatiawa Tribe acquiesced in his decision. It was soon evident that: Wiremu Kingi was as much bent as ever on returning to Waitara. He pretended to be anxious not to act in opposition to the Government; but pressed on Major Richmond the offer of Waikanae, his anxiety on this head being caused by the scarcely-concealed intention of the Ngatitaoa Tribe to seize on the land at Waikanae the moment he left it.
- 61. The Governor, hearing that canoes were being built at Port Nicholson for the migration, sent peremptory orders that they should be dismantled, and, if necessary, seized and destroyed; and these orders and a memorandum recorded by the Superintendent show clearly that at that time it was seriously in contemplation to prevent the migration by military force. But Sir George Grey, desirous of trying a last effort to come to terms with Wiremu Kingi, made a further proposal of certain conditions on which he would permit him to sell Waikanae and come up to Waitara. The basis of this proposal was that Wiremu Kingi should settle on the north bank of the River "Waitara, and should "relinquish all pretensions to any lands on the south bank"(where the block purchased by me is situate). "Upon all pretensions being at once relinquished to all lands to the south of the Waitara, the Government will, without further inquiry into such pretensions to these lands, admit that, from the prompt settlement they are making of this question, the Natives are entitled to such compensation as may be agreed on between themselves and the officers of the Government. The Government will then also recognize and permit them immediately to dispose of their claims at Waikanae and Totaranui for such compensation as may be agreed on. The compensation in both cases to be paid in annual instalments, spread over a period of not less than three years."
- 62. Thus your Grace will perceive that even in this proposal Sir George Grey carefully refused to recognize either the tribal right or any "seignorial right" in Wiremu Kingi, and treated his claims as mere "pretensions."
- 63. Wiremu Kingi agreed to the condition of locating himself on the north bank of Waitara. At the end of 1847 offers to sell Waitara were made to Government; and just before the migration in the early part of 1848, Mr. McLean went to Kapiti, any purchase of Waitara being kept in abeyance till all the claims should be clearly ascertained. At a large gathering of the Ngatiawas on that occasion, Wiremu Kingi distinctly agreed to go on the north bank: "Let me return thither, and I will then, consider the matter [of the sale]. When I get there, ono side of the river shall be yours and the north side mine, whence I can look out for the Waikatos in case that tribe should meditate an attack upon us." This was publicly stated by Mr. McLean at the Kohimarama conference, adding: "That was his word, which is retained in the memories of myself and others here present who heard what passed between us."
- 64. Further evidence of his intention is afforded in a proposal which he made to Te Teira. "When Wi Kingi thought of returning to Waitara he sent to Teira and, said, 'Let us return to Waitara; you take one side, I will take the other, as Waikato gives us permission to return.' "
- 65. Under, these circumstances the Government no further opposed the return of Wiremu Kingi, and the migration took place in April, 1848. On reaching Taranaki he went to reside at his ancestral place near the Manukorihi Pa on the north bank, which bears the same name as the section of the Ngatiawa Tribe to which. Kingi belongs. His own claims and those of his immediate followers were represented by the best possible evidence—that of his own brother—to be almost exclusively on the north bank; and it was stated, to Mr. McLean, who several years before had, in company with Kingi's brother, travelled over the district, when the respective claims of the different hapus were pointed out to him, that even on the north bank Kingi's ancestors had been but comparatively recent occupants.

- 66. And the chief Ropoama te One, at Queen Charlotte Sound, when Mr. McLean was investigating the Waitara purchase, said that Kingi's land was on the north bank: "I [McLean] said to him, 'Waitara is offered for sale.' Ropoama asked, 'By whom?' I inquired of him, 'Is it King's?' He replied, 'No; his land is on the other side of Waitara.'" But as some of the Waikatos under Rewi and other chiefs were even then (1848) cultivating in the vicinity, and Kingi was in fear of an invasion from that tribe, he asked permission of Tamati Raru, Teira's father, to build a pa upon the piece of land on the south bank, now sold to the Government, which permission was granted.

Further Events from 1848 to 1859.

- 67. The immediate fruit of Sir George Grey's arrangement in 1847 was the acquisition of the Grey Block, immediately adjoining the Fitzroy Block of 1844. In the early part of 1848, just before Kingi's migration, the Bell Block was acquired. I desire, in connection with this last purchase, to bring three things to the notice of your Grace.
- 68. In the first place the land was bought from the chief Rawiri Waiaua and a part of the Puketapu section of the Ngatiawa Tribe, in the teeth of the most determined opposition from the chief Katatore and others of the same family.
- 69. Secondly, Wiremu Kingi, who was at Whanganui at the time on his way up with the migration from Waikanae, put in a claim to the land, which was met in the way thus described by Commissioner McLean in a speech to the conference of chiefs at Kohimarama: "He met me on this side of Whanganui, and said to me, 'Do not give the payment for Mangati. I am willing that it should be sold, but I have a claim on it; let the payment be kept back until I arrive there; when I am there let it be given.' I replied, 'It is well, William.' Some months afterwards I called together all the people of Puketapu and other places to receive the payment. William King was also invited to be present to witness the payment. He came; and when the goods had been apportioned but among the several divisions of tribes I looked to see what portion was assigned to William King. None appeared; he got nothing. I therefore came to the conclusion that William King had no claim at Mangati."
- 70. Thirdly, the purchase of the Bell Block received in 1855 the unqualified approval of the Bishop of New Zealand, who, in his pastoral letter to the members of the Church of England at New Plymouth, said: "This happy result may fairly be attributed to the judicious manner in which the purchases were completed. ... The whole business, conducted with the greatest fairness and publicity, was concluded to the satisfaction of both Native and European."
- 71. In further pursuance of the same plan, the Omata Block, the Tataraimaka Block, the Hua Block, the Tarurutangi Block, and other smaller pieces of land, were successively acquired under the immediate control and supervision of Commissioner McLean, who says, "The whole of the purchases previously made at Taranaki had been effected on the same principle as the present one from Te Teira—namely, that of acquiring the land from the different clans and subdivisions of clans which came in from time to time to offer it." No such thing as a seignorial right was ever recognized either in Wiremu Kingi or anybody else. No general tribal right or right of chieftainship was allowed to interfere with the rights of the several hapus or families to dispose of their lands to the British Government. At first the resident Natives objected that "it would not be right to entertain the claims of the absentees who forsook the land, and took no part in defending it against the Waikatos." But in every one of the purchases a portion of the payment was reserved for the absentees who had any claim, and these payments duly appear in the public accounts.
- 72. I will not prolong this despatch, which I fear your Grace will think has already reached an unreasonable length, by more than a passing allusion to the bloody feuds among the families of the Ngatiawa which succeeded the return of Wiremu Kingi, or to the disgrace to the British name and authority by murders perpetrated in open day on public highways of a British settlement and almost under the guns of the Queen's garrison, which led to my issuing a Proclamation that any renewal of such scenes within our territory would be repressed by force of arms. These are amply detailed in the papers duly transmitted to the Colonial Office, and presented to the General Assembly in the last four sessions. But a single instance of the ferocity by which these feuds were marked is exhibited by the manner in which Wiremu Kingi—who not very long after was writing to the Ven. Archdeacon Hadfield, "We are residing here in great grace of our Lord Jesus Christ"—proposed to treat his enemies: "A short time since when the position of Ihaia seemed desperate, and when his principal opponent, Wiremu Kingi, had evinced a determination to slaughter, without regard to sex or age, the inmates of the Karaka Pa, a memorial was addressed to His Excellency the Governor, praying him to rescue these unfortunate people." Ihaia has never recovered from the sufferings he underwent at that time, and remains to this day a broken man, covered with sores; but his courage and faithful loyalty to the Queen are as conspicuous as ever.

V. Proceedings of Governor Gore Browne in relation to the Purchase at Waitara.

- 73. It was in the hope of putting an end to the dreadful scenes which had been enacted for so many years at Taranaki that I held a meeting of the Ngatiawa chiefs at that place in March 1859, and made a public declaration of my intentions for the future. I then laid down the principle that, while on the one hand I would buy no land the title to which was in dispute by its rightful owners, I would not permit either chiefs or people to forbid the sale of land by such members of the Ngatiawa Tribe as were willing to cede their own land to Her Majesty. The scene which took place when Te Teira, upon my accepting his offer of land subject to investigation of title, laid a parawai mat at my feet in token of the cession of his rights, must be, familiar to your Grace; but for graphic descriptions of it I beg leave to refer your Grace to the addresses delivered by Mr. McLean at the great meeting of Waikato chiefs in May last and at the more recent conference of chiefs. At the conclusion of the first-mentioned address many of the Waikato chiefs were heard to say, "The speech of Mr. McLean was quite straight; great was its light.
- 74. Te Teira's right was disputed before me by no one but a man named Paora; on the contrary, the cry arose "Waitara is gone." But though Wiremu Kingi did not venture to contest in that assembly of chiefs the right of those whose representative Te Teira was in the offer, he expressed his determination to forbid the sale: "William King, before addressing the Governor, said to his people, 'I will only say a few words and then we will depart;' to which they assented. He then said; 'Listen, Governor Notwithstanding Teira's offer, I will not permit the sale of Waitara to the pakeha. Waitara is in my hands; I will not give it up; ekore, ekore, ekore—I will not, I will not, I will not. I have spoken,' and, turning to his tribe, added, 'Arise, let us go'— whereupon he and his followers abruptly withdrew."
- 75. This was not the first time he had informed me of his determination to prevent any sales of land at Waitara. In a letter he addressed to me on the 11th February, 1859, about a month before my visit to New Plymouth, he said: "Do you hearken to our runanga [village council] respecting the land. The boundary commences, &c. I have therefore written to the Governor and you to tell you of the ruuanga of this new year, which is for withholding the land, because some of the Maoris still desire to sell land, which causes the approach of death. It is said that I am the cause, but it is not so; it is the men who persist; they have heard, yet they still persist. If you hear of any one desiring to sell land within these boundaries which we have here pointed out to you, do not pay any attention to it, because that land selling system is-not approved of. This is all."
- 76. Now, it is very material to examine this letter, because it affords conclusive evidence of the character of Kingi's claim, and a clue to all his subsequent proceedings. He claims a right over all the land between Mokau and Waitaha—a (distance of more than forty miles. Now, the Waitaha Stream is the northern boundary of the Bell Block; to the north of it the Puketapu branch of the Ngatiawa have large possessions. The chief of that section of the tribe is Mahau, who would never for a moment recognize a seigniorial right in Wiremu Kingi over his lands; who is in arms with us, and who, in the exercise of his undoubted proprietary rights, came to an arrangement with Te Teira as to a dividing boundary, and would, with his people, resist any claim of Wiremu Kingi's in 1860 as they successfully resisted his claim to the Bell Block in 1848. In like manner the claim of Kingi to the whole territory, extending forty miles north of Waitara, is so utterly preposterous as to require no notice here. I allude to his letter, because it was an open declaration of the purpose of the Taranaki land league, of which I shall presently speak, and because it set up, just before my visit to Taranaki in 1859, precisely that kind of claim and no other which a month after he raised when Teira's offer was publicly made.
- 77. Immediately after the meeting of March, 1859, I directed that, a formal notice should be sent to Wiremu Kingi, Te Patukakariki, and the other chiefs of Waitara, informing them of Teira's offer, and inviting them to send in any claims they had. On the 12th of April I caused a second letter to be written to Kingi, in which I specially warned him thus: "The Governor's rule is, for each man to have the word as regards his own land: that of a man who has no claim will not be listened to." The reply I received, dated 25th April, says: "I will not agree to our bedroom being sold (I mean Waitara here), for this bed belongs to the whole of us. Do you hearken to my word. If you give the money secretly, you will get no land for it. You may insist, but I will never agree to it. Do not suppose that this is nonsense on my part; no, it is true for it is an old word; and now I have no new proposal to make, either as regards selling or anything else. All I have to say to you, O Governor, is that none of this land will be given to you—never, never, not till I die."

- 78. There is an expression in this letter which has been much relied upon as conveying a distinct notice of proprietary right. Much ingenious argument has been used to give the word "bedroom" peculiar force. It is urged that Kingi refers in a touching manner to the ancient birthplace of his people, the cradle of his race, which, according to immemorial usage, was invested with a specially sacred character. "In order to dispel this illusion, it is only necessary to say—first, that the birthplace of Kingi's immediate ancestors was at Manukorihi, on the north bank; and, second, that the word in the original Maori letter is peti ruma, a corruption of the English word "bedroom," and devoid therefore of the remotest connection with any Native tradition or sentiment.
- 79. But the question of any proprietary right having been asserted in this or any other letter of Wiremu Kingi's is conclusively set at rest by his own public admission, openly made in the presence of his people on the 29th November, 1859, to the District Commissioner: "William King avowed his determination to oppose the sale, without advancing any reason for doing so; upon which I put a series of questions to him, which I called upon the Rev. Mr. Whiteley to witness.—Q. Does the land belong to Teira and party?—A. Yes, the land is theirs, but I will not let them sell it.—Q. Why will you oppose their selling what is their own?—A. Because I do not wish for the land to be disturbed; and although they have floated it, I will not let it go to sea."
- 80. At the same time the Commissioner, in accordance with directions from me to that effect, read out the boundaries, and appended the following notice to the description: "If any other person can prove that he owns any part of the land within the boundaries above described, his claim will be respected, and he will be allowed to retain or sell the same as he may think proper."
- 81. An attempt has been made to interpret Wiremu Kingi's answers in a non natural sense. I allude especially to the endeavours of Archdeacon Hadfield and the Rev. Riwai te Ahu to explain what Kingi meant to say. But this was exposed in the masterly speech of Chief Justice Arney, delivered in the Legislative Council on the 29th August last, of which I beg leave to invite your Grace's perusal: "I am aware that I shall be told that the words in Maori have a profound and hidden meaning, not intelligible to the unlearned. And when we have applied our simple faculties to apparently plain expressions, some recondite Maori scholar tells us, Oh, if you knew the habits of thought of the Native mind, you would discover that those expressions convey a meaning very different from the plain import of the words themselves.' To be sure, the scholars themselves may differ upon the interpretation; but, Sir, His Excellency is compelled to act upon the light afforded to his own understanding. Was it then too much to expect that even Wiremu Kingi, lofty and proud, and ancestral chief as he may be, should have condescended, during the interval between March, 1859, and March, 1860, to state the meaning of his conduct? But no; after twelve months of sulky defiance he treated the interview proffered by her Majesty's Representative with scorn.... I do not understand those gentlemen who find in such conduct and language an intelligible claim of right to land, or any other declaration than a declaration of war."
- 82. But, if Wiremu Kingi failed then, and has failed ever since in establishing a proprietary right, this cannot be said of the people whom Te Teira represented. The weight of testimony is in favour of their rights I select the following, because your Grace will prefer the evidence of Native chiefs to the statements of the Europeans. At the Ngaruawhia meeting last May, Kapesehira said: "I accompanied Wi Tako on his return from Waikato. We saw Ihaia and Teira Teira asked, For what purpose have you come?' We replied, 'To inquire about the mat [the parawai that Teira deposited at my feet in March, 1859], and to take the truth back to Waikato' I went to Wi Kingi and said, 'I have come to inquire about the mat.' He replied, 'The report is correct. I looked on in silence.' I said, 'That was your error. You ought to have taken it away.' 'I did not,' he replied; 'I simply threw a word at the Governor, and said, "I will not give you my land." I did not take up the mat, but I spake my word. The pakeha wants our land, but this war is about your Maori King. Don't listen to the pakeha, but bring your flag to Waitara. Go back and clear them out; send them all back to England.'" Te Wetini Taiporutu said: "If the Governor's money was laid down for the land at Waitara before came under our law, then he is right." This chief, one of the head chiefs of the Ngatihaua, was killed at Mahoetahi the other day. Heta, of Ngatihaua, said: "Make haste hold the land: thought was Teta's, hold it." At the conference at Kohimarama, Hohepa Tamaihengia, an Otaki chief, said: "In my opinion Teira's piece of land is his own, and he has a right to sell it to the Governor. I condemn Wiremu Kingi." Hukiki, another otaki chief, said: "I will now express my views about Taranaki When Teira sold his land and laid down the parawai as a pledge, Wi Kingi did not come to take up the challenge, but went away." Hetaraka Nero, a Waikato chief, said: "When the land was offered for sale, Mr. McLean investigated the title according to the custom of land purchase. The nature of Te Teira's claim induced the Governor to side with him; then Wi Kingi was grieved, evil sprang up in his heart, and he declared war with the Governor." Arama Karaka, a Kaipara chief, said: "The land belonged to Teira and Wiremu Kingi. Te Teira parted with his portion." Tamihana te Rauparaha, an Otaki chief, well known in England, said: "That land belonged to Te Teira. He inherited it from his ancestors. When they resided at Kapiti no boundaries were fixed. The pakehas came, bringing the gospel and peace: then the slaves were liberated. It was only when he returned to Waitara that Te Teira became acquainted with the boundaries [possession] of his ancestors. ... Now let us approve of the course pursued by Te Teira. He sold the land under the light of day. He gave a parawai as a covering for this land. William King did not take it away so as to repudiate Te Teira's claim to the land."

- 83. The Rev. Riwai te Ahu, in his letter to the Superintendent of Wellington (so much relied upon by the apologists of Wiremu Kingi), distinctly admits: "For instance, Mr C. W. Richmond writes—Taranaki, March, 1860—which has been heard by everybody—'Teira's title has been fully investigated, and is perfectly good; there is no one to deny his title.' Yes, his title is good to his own pieces within the boundaries of that land—two or three pieces. Our title is equally good to our own pieces; some have one, or two, or three, or four within that block."
- 84. And Archdeacon Hadfield himself says. "Teira's father is indeed the owner of a small portion of the block."
- 85. The question, therefore, narrows itself simply to this: How much or how little land Te Teira and the other chiefs, who joined with him in the sale to Her Majesty, owned. It was to ascertain this that I desired to make the survey, which was forcibly interrupted by Wiremu Kingi. As Katatore had done before him in 1844, "he would not consent to any information being given as to land, or individual portions pointed out, fearing it might prejudice his assumed influence."

VI. Misrepresentations of the above Proceedings.

- 86. Your Grace will not expect that I should notice any misstatements out of the numbers that have naturally enough been spread abroad since the insurrection broke out, except such as may appear in documents which have been sent to me for transmission to the Colonial Office. I wish, however, to notice a few of those which appear in a letter which I saw for the first time in a newspaper a few days ago, purporting to be addressed to your Grace by Archdeacon Hadfield, from Otaki, on the 29th May last.
- 87. The Archdeacon states that he is informed that the petition of the Natives of Otaki for my recall was, "through some alleged informality, detained, thus furnishing another instance of the difficulty experienced by the Natives in obtaining any remedy for an act of injustice." The petition reached me on the 19th April, and on the 28th of the same month I informed your Grace that I had received it, and would forward it, after making inquiry as to its authenticity, by the next mail. Accordingly I did forward it by the next mail—viz., on the 25th May.
- 88. The Archdeacon asks if it will be believed that (the survey having been attempted on 20th February) martial law, dated Auckland, 25th January, had already been placed in the hands of a subordinate officer to be used at his discretion. This has been explained in my Despatch No. 64, 28th June, 1860; but I may here state that the only use or object of martial law was to enable the Officer Commanding to call in the settlers, and subsequently to embody them for the defence of the town, should it prove necessary to do so. Not to have provided for such a possible contingency would have been most culpable. Martial law was applicable to the settlers alone. Indeed, the Maoris in Taranaki have never recognized our law at all, so that a suspension of it could not affect them in any way. Lieutenant-Colonel Murray, to whom this power was intrusted, had received the same power in 1858 and did not use it, so that there was no reason to doubt his discretion.
- 89. The Archdeacon says "The question at issue is simply this: Is a Native chief to be forcibly ejected from his land because an individual member of his tribe tells a subordinate land agent that it is his, and not the chief's, and that agent believes him? The Governor says 'Yes;' the chiefs say 'No.'" In answer to this I can only say it is not true that I have forcibly ejected Wiremu Kingi from his land. It was known from the first that he had a small portion of land on the south bank of Waitara River; this was left out of the survey; and if Kingi had any further proprietary claim, it was expressly saved by the memorandum I have quoted above.

- 90. Archdeacon Hadfield says: "Some years before the establishment of the-British Government in New Zealand, a large portion of the tribe migrated to the southward to Cook Strait, for the purpose of being near whalers and obtaining English goods. William King was one of this party." The migration had certainly no such peaceful character: the evidence of the Protector of Aborigines in 1844 is clear that it took place for purposes of conquest. A further migration took place under terror of the Waikatos, and "at the time of the invasion," says Governor Fitzroy, "by far the greater number of the Ngatiawa, with their principal men, were absent on a hostile excursion in the south."
- 91. Again: "But they [the Waikatos] never held possession of the land, and consequently never acquired any title to it." But their possession, occupation, and cultivation have been proved above to have existed, and the title to have been maintained.
- 92. Again: "William King, it will be observed, was never conquered or driven from his land." The fact is, he ran away from it; and went back by permission of the conquerors and of Sir George Grey.
- 93. Archdeacon Hadfield says: "I deny that any investigation whatever deserving that designation has ever taken place. The Chief Commissioner did not investigate the claim." Now, in answer to this grave charge, I beg leave to refer your Grace to the following testimony by the Chief Commissioner: "But we did not take the land at once. You say we were hasty, but we were not. Eight months passed over before the bargain was closed. We inquired of all the people, and could not find any rightful claimants but Teira and his friends. We said, 'If Wi Kingi has a piece in this block, we will not have it; we will leave it outside.' Do not say, then, that the Governor made haste to buy it; he took time enough to investigate the claim. You have said that one man sold the land, but there were seventy persons consenting to the sale." "Before leaving Taranaki I instructed the Land Purchase Commissioner there to investigate carefully the claims to this piece of land, and not to proceed hastily in the matter. He has since been constantly engaged in inquiring into the question of title, William King also being present at the meetings and admitting that the land belonged to the sellers. After the talk about the Waitara, crossed the straits to Arapaoa, and saw that section of the tribe which is with Ropoama te One. I mentioned that a portion of the Waitara had been offered. I recited the boundaries, and asked, 'Does that land belong to King?' The reply was, 'No; if it was on the other side of Waitara his claim would be just, but this side belongs to us; let us have the payment.' .... They pressed the matter, and a third time they asked me to give them the payment. I replied, 'Wait until the question is properly settled.' Afterwards they agreed to this. The names of these Arapaoa people who have claims at Waitara are Ropoama te One, Ripeka, Ngawheua, Herewini, Ihaka, Te Retimona, Timoti, Anaru, Haimona, Henare Rupuha, Arapere, Hamiora, Tohi, Pirihiara, Nata, Rakira, Eruera te Rangi, Whiroa, Te Rei, and others. These people consented to the sale. It was I who delayed the matter, wishing that the claims should be investigated upon the land of their forefathers."
- 94. I beg to remark that one of these speeches, addressed by Mr. McLean to the assembled chiefs at Ngaruawahia and Kohimarama, was delivered within a few days of the date of Archdeacon Hadfield's letter, and the other a few weeks after. The following are extracts from the Chief Commissioner's evidence at the bar of the House of Representatives: "With reference to the particular block under consideration, the claims of the actual owners were carefully inquired into. Notice was given publicly at the time of the purchase to such absentee claimants as were known to have a right to the soil. It was not considered necessary to go about the country to rake up claims, or to induce Natives to prefer them. It was well known that, when any block of land was offered for sale, there was no hesitation on the part of claimants to come forward to receive that portion of the proceeds to which the extent of their claims might entitle them. The sale of any land in the country soon becomes known throughout it from one end to the other, and it is often found that a hundred fictitious claims are adduced when the actual owners altogether do not exceed thirty or forty persons. There has been a great deal said about unsatisfied claims in different parts of the country, but my own conviction is that many of those claims have been manufactured. At all events, I found that in the course of a few months after the time of the first offer of the land and my notification of it to the tribes at the South several parties were adducing claims who had never previously done so. It is notorious that if any Native thinks he has any chance of obtaining money for land it is an easy matter for him to assert a claim. During the investigation which took place, and while the difficulty was being adjusted, I felt convinced that the claims then preferred by these conflicting parties were substantially good, and that in fact the sale must be proceeded with, or otherwise the Natives who had offered the land would be treated with great injustice. The officer whom I instructed to conduct the negotiations (Mr. District Commissioner Parris) was requested to persevere in his inquiries into the matter from time to time; not in any way to hasten the arrangement, but to give full opportunity to opposing claimants to come forward and state their ease. He not only did this, but he also took a great deal of trouble in visiting, as far as lay in his power, every part of his district, to make sure that there should be no substantial claim overlooked. I have already stated that there was a public notification from myself, inviting all persons who had claims to bring them forward, in order that they might be carefully investigated. No fresh claims were recorded, however; no rights were shown by the Natives who opposed the sale, except the right which the land league conferred upon them, that of claiming land everywhere, and of opposing the sale of land everywhere. There was no urgency displayed in this matter, no desire to hasten it, but ample time was given to all parties to put forward their claims; and not only was there ample time given, but claims were solicited and hunted up in every direction in Taranaki itself. Yet, with the exception of the two tribes who sold the land on the banks of the Waitara, and another tribe on the banks of the Waiongana, who were joint claimants to a part of the block, no substantial claims were put in. If I were to say that no other claims were adduced I should be wrong, but I mean no substantial claims, no claims that could be recognized by the Government, or which would be regarded by the Natives as valid. Certainly one man told me that his grandfather had once lived a short time on the land, and that he therefore expected compensation. Another told me that in one of their fights he was wounded and suffered great inconvenience there, and therefore thought it was right that he should have some consideration now that the land was sold. Now, this is the class of claims of which I have just been speaking, which it is clearly the duty of the Government to resist, as otherwise it would be an utter impossibility to carry out any purchase of land without defrauding the real owners. By compensating this class of claimants the real owners would be deprived of what they are fairly entitled to, and merely because the Government chose to recognize fictitious claims of this character. The chief Ropoama, who offered to dispose of his claim, was recognized as the head of the hapus or subdivisions of the Ngatiawa Tribe who owned the land and sold it. He holds a high position among his people, and is much respected by the Europeans. On several occasions it was contemplated by the Natives of Waitara to invite him there, and to live among them as their chief, to keep peace and order in the tribe. In this arrangement Wiremu Kingi (about whose chieftainship we have heard so much, and who undoubtedly was a chief of the section of the Ngatiawa at Waikanae) acquiesced. No actual payment, or promise of payment, was made to the Natives at Queen Charlotte Sound at that time. When they informed me that they had agreed to sell the land, my reply to them was that they had better wait until matters had been finally arranged at Waitara, as I should not feel myself justified in concluding the purchase with them till then..... Having arranged with them that they should be paid after matters were settled at Taranaki, I left Ropoama's place for Wellington, where I notified to the Natives what had taken place with reference to Waitara. I had previously ascertained the names of the Wellington claimants to the land. I consulted them about it, and made similar arrangements with them to those which I had made with Ropoama, that they should be paid when the block was settled for at Taranaki. I believe that one or two of Ropoama's people were at Waikanae at that time, and he promised to see them on their return, and to endeavour to arrange matters with them with respect to their claims. It has been recently stated that, in addition to these persons who are known and recognized as the actual owners, claimants are to be met with at the South as numerous as a swarm of bees; but I think that those who say so would find very great difficulty in establishing anything beyond mere assertion of right to the land comprised in the Government purchase. Knowing how scattered the claimants were, and the difficulty of getting them all together in any one place at any one time, I was a long time pursuing investigations before I myself came to the conclusion that the purchase was quite satisfactory; but the more I inquired into the case, and came into contact with impartial Natives residing at a distance, and having no particular interest in the locality, the more I became satisfied that the purchase was a good one."

- 95. But the complaint is that the investigation was not by some Court. "What is demanded by the Natives," says the Archdeacon, "is an impartial Court, in which their respective claims can be stated, and before which they may bring evidence to be received on oath. Nothing short of an inquiry conducted on such principles as these can be considered an investigation of their titles to land." In reference to this, the Chief Justice, in his speech to the Legislative Council which I have before quoted, said: "On the present occasion it is enough to say that if Wiremu Kingi had any title, tribal or otherwise, he owes it to himself that his title was not recognized; seeing that the purchase from Te Teira and others was not hastily concluded, and that, while His Excellency's conduct was marked by patient and thoughtful reserve, he was met not only with defiance, but contempt..... But, Sir, when I assert that His Excellency was forced into this war by circumstances beyond his control, I look a little beyond this isolated purchase of Teira's land. I ask in what condition His Excellency found the Native race. And when it is said that Kingi's dispute should have been referred to some tribunal, I ask, What tribunal? If you tell me 'To the Commissioners,' I ask, What Commissioners? If Kingi had been summoned before some tribunal, and had, as assuredly he would have, refused to come, what then?" And Mr. Swainson, in his speech in the same debate, said: "I do not mean to say that if any such tribunal had existed the Native disturbances at Taranaki would never have arisen; neither do I make the remark in disparagement of the present Ministry."

I believe that the present Government is no more to blame for the want of such a tribunal than the Governments who have preceded them. I am the more careful to make this statement, because the Governor has been blamed, but as I believe unjustly blamed, for not having submitted the claims of Wiremu Kingi to a Court of law."

- 96. But when such a tribunal was in existence, when the opportunity was before him of giving "evidence on oath" with respect to his claims, Wiremu Kingi did not avail himself of it. Why did he not, being on the spot at the time (as I have proved above) tender his evidence before Commissioner Spain, whose Court was precisely such a tribunal as is referred to? What he would not do in 1844 he would not have done in 1860 or at any other time—namely, appear before any tribunal whatever with the least intention of submitting to its decisions. And if any such tribunal had existed in 1860 he would have been met at once by this rule, stated by the Bishop of New Zealand in his evidence before a Select Committee of the House of Representatives: "I believe that it is in accordance with Native custom that any person not asserting a claim at the time of sale would be barred:"
- 97. Archdeacon Hadfield further says: "The absurdity of the procedure, not only in this particular case but in all the so-called investigations of Native titles to land, appears in the fact that up to the present time no principles have been laid down as to what constitutes a title to land." To this I oppose the fact, which I have detailed above, that the most clear and decided and uniform principle has been laid down ever since 1844 in dealing with the Ngatiawa title at Taranaki; and the opinion of one of the authorities I have quoted on Native tenure, who says: "I believe that were it possible to teach the Maoris the English language, and then bring them into some Court, allowing each contending party to plead his cause in such a dispute as I have mentioned, not according to English law but Maori custom, both sides would, according to Native genealogy and laws, make out their respective cases so clearly that it would take a Judge and a jury possessed of more than human attainments to decide the ownership of the land."
- 98. Archdeacon Hadfield says: "Still, I feel bound to express my opinion that the Governor's attack on William King was not only impolitic, but, under the present circumstances of the colony, an act of folly bordering on insanity." In answer, I beg to submit the opinion of the Chief Justice; who says: "From the moment when Te Teira offered for sale His interest in that block of land, and placed his mat before the Governor in token of its surrender, His Excellency was bound by every consideration of treaty and of justice to accept the offer to the extent and upon the conditions on which he then accepted it. I think, further, that from the moment when Wiremu Kingi, after passing with insult and defiance from the Governor's presence on that occasion; after declining for twelve months to explain the nature of his own claim (if such he had) on the grounds of his prohibition upon the sale; after resisting the survey by force; and rising with his followers in arms;—when, I say, after these same events this same chief refused even to meet His Excellency under a written promise of safety, but responded to His Excellency's forbearance only by war dances, war pas, and the murder of unarmed settlers, His Excellency had no alternative but to accept the issue thus forced upon him."
- 99. Archdeacon Hadfield has committed himself to one positive statement of fact among the many vague assertions in which his letter abounds. He says: "But with regard to Teira's right to sell, which is so positively asserted, and on the supposed validity of which a war has been commenced at Taranaki, can I expect to be believed in England when I assert, as I do unequivocally, that Teira's father, Tamati Raru, through whom alone the son could lay claim to any land, as inherited by him from his ancestors, is still living, and opposed its alienation? Teira's father is, indeed, the owner of a small portion of the block; but it would be irrelevant to the purpose of my present argument to discuss his right to sell, inasmuch as he has refused to do so, and co-operated with William King in opposing his own son up to the very commencement of hostilities."
- 100. In answer to this positive assertion of fact, it is only necessary to say that the Archdeacon's letter was dated the 29th May, that hostilities commenced on the 18th March, that Tamati Raru, Teira's father, signed the deed of sale to Her Majesty on the 24th February, that he was one of those who cut the boundary-line, and that he asked for and received a gun, and has constantly borne arms on his side.
- 101. I now refer to the last matter on which I shall trouble your Grace in reference to the Archdeacon's letter. Speaking of the official statement which I had caused to be circulated immediately on the breaking-out of hostilities, the Archdeacon says: "I deny the truth of all the statements. I am prepared to prove their falsity here, where evidence can be obtained." Upon the General Assembly being finally summoned for despatch of business on the 31st July last, Archdeacon Hadfield came up from Wellington. The House of Representatives, being made aware of the strong views which he entertained on the subject of the Waitara purchase, examined him at the bar of their House. Considering that on the 29th May he had committed himself in a public pledge to your Grace that he was "prepared to prove the falsity of all my statements," his evidence at the bar in August, when he had so much more time to complete his case, should have been clear, definite, and Conclusive.

- 102. The following summary of his answers on most important points requires no comment. When he is asked if he knows the position of the land in dispute, he says, "I do not know the precise boundary-line." When asked who were the owners of the land previous to the dispute, he says, "I have direct information from persons stating they are claimants; I am only giving my opinion on that information." When asked on what authority he states there are ninety claimants on the block, he says, "What I have now stated on this subject rests on the assertions of others. I am here as an unwilling witness in the case before the House, unprovided with direct proof. I am but a secondary witness. I do not know whether I fully understood the question." When asked whether Wiremu Kingi is one of the ninety, he says, "I have before stated that the right of the tribe extends over the whole of that block; therefore he is one of the claimants." When asked whether Kingi ever made a proprietary claim, he says, "I hear that he made a proprietary claim to a portion of the block." When asked what proof he has of a certain Native (Hamere) having a claim, he says, "An old man, who resided at Waitara forty years, pointed out to me when I was at Waikanae [150 miles away] portions of the land which belonged to Wiremu Kingi." When asked whether he is acquainted with the details of the negotiations for land in the New Plymouth District, he says, "I could not say that I was acquainted with the details." When asked of whom the Bell Block was bought, he says, "Principally I believe from returned slaves from Waikato; so I have been informed." Of whom the Hua Block?—"I do not know." Of whom the Taurururangi?—"I do not know." When asked if Wiremu Kingi received any payment for the Bell Block, he says, "I do not know whether he did or not." When asked the territorial boundary of the four hapus of which he says Wiremu Kingi is the head, he says, "I am not acquainted with the boundaries. I have never professed to be acquainted with the boundaries." When asked whether these four hapus have equal rights to the south bank of Waitara, he says, "I think they have." When asked if Kingi's people ever cultivated on the disputed block, he says, "I am not aware that they have cultivated any part of the land since their return." When asked whether any of their cultivations were in the disputed block, he says, "I do not know from personal knowledge." When asked where Reretawhangawhanga (Wiremu Kingi's father) had his pa before the migration, he says, "I do not know." When asked if there was a pa on the disputed block before the migration, he says, "I do not know." When asked on what authority he said there was no investigation of the absentee claims, he says, "I am quite certain none was made at Waikanae. It must be generally understood that my evidence in reference to this dispute is derived chiefly from the chief Hohepa Ngapaki and Riwai te Ahu. I have had information from others, but I limit myself to those two." When asked whether Wiremu Kingi had any opportunity offered him of stating his claim to the Government officers, or to the Governor himself, before military force was brought into action, he says, "I presume he had innumerable opportunities; he might have written by every post. He had an opportunity of meeting the Governor after the publication of martial law." After further conversation between Mr. Sewell and the witness, witness said, "I must then confess myself unable to understand the question." When asked whether prior to the dispute he had had conversations relative to the respective rights of the four hapus on the south bank, he says, "I have previously stated that I believe in the fact of the tribal right of Wiremu Kingi—having stated as much distinctly; it is a question in which I take no interest, as I think it irrelevant. I have had conversation on the subject, and I do not believe that any separate rights exist between Ngatihinga and Ngatituaho on the one side, and Ngatikura and Ngatienuku on the other; the various hapus, through former intermarriages, are so mixed up one with another that it would be impossible to give either an affirmative or a negative to a question which you can neither believe nor disbelieve; the question is perfectly unintelligible and irrelevant."
- 103. From the foregoing extracts it will be seen that, although Archdeacon Hadfield says in his letter, of 29th May, "I have hitherto felt my ground secure, dealing with facts within my knowledge," he really knew but little of the matter. Certain it is that he failed in the attempt to convince the House of Representatives that Kingi was right, for immediately afterwards the following resolution was passed, approving the policy I had pursued: "That, in the opinion of this House, the interference of Wiremu Kingi at Waitara, and his resort to force to prevent the survey of land there, rendered the measures adopted by His Excellency the Governor indispensable for the due maintenance of Her Majesty's sovereignty, and that the welfare of both races of Her Majesty's subjects peremptorily requires a vigorous prosecution of the war to a successful termination."
- 104. The Legislative Council adopted the same view, and addressed me in the following terms: "We, the Legislative Council of New Zealand, beg to assure your Excellency of our earnest desire to afford to your Excellency our most cordial support in carrying on the war now unhappily existing in a portion of this colony. Deploring, as we do, the existence of this evil, a feeling which we are persuaded is entertained by your Excellency with equal strength, we are convinced that your Excellency has been forced into this course by a series of circumstances beyond your Excellency's control."

- 105. And the conference of chiefs at Kohimarama, who best knew what the rights of the Ngatiawa people are, passed the following resolution condemning Wiremu Kingi, and justifying me; which resolution was signed by the chiefs with only three dissentients: "That this conference, having heard explained the circumstances which led to the war at Taranaki, is of opinion that the Governor was justified in the course taken by him; that Wiremu Kingi provoked the quarrel; and that the proceeding of the latter are wholly indefensible."

VII. The Relation between Wiremu Kingi's Insurrection and the Native King Movement and Land League.

- I have on so many occasions, in despatches addressed to your Grace's department during the last four years, described the various phases of the agitation which resulted in setting up a Native King and the establishment of a league among a number of tribes to forbid the further cession of Native lands to Her Majesty, that I shall confine myself to indicating here the close relation which has subsisted from the first between that movement and the insurrection of Wiremu Kingi.
- I beg, in the first place, to refer your Grace to the following account given by the Rev. Mr. Buddle, Superintendent of the Wesleyan Mission, in a pamphlet specially devoted to the origin and progress of the King movement, of the deputation which came up to Waikato from the Ngatiawa and Ngatiruanui Tribes, to hand over their lands to the King: "During 1859 two or three deputations visited the South and left the Maori King's flags at Taranaki, and with the Ngatiruanui. It is said that Wiremu Kingi te Rangitake refused to receive the flag or to join the movement; but in the autumn of the present year a deputation from the Ngatiawa and Ngatiruanui Tribes visited Waikato, intrusted with the important duty of presenting the allegiance of those tribes to the Maori King, and of handing over their lands to the league of which he is the recognized head. The deputation consisted of about sixty picked men, chiefly young men. They arrived at Ngaruawahia on the 10th of April, accompanied by Ngatimaniapoto from Kawhia, Rangiaohia, and Upper Waipa. They marched up to the flagstaff, three abreast, wearing favours to distinguish the respective tribes. On reaching the flagstaff one stepped forward, and with a clear distinct voice said, 'Honour all men; love the brotherhood; fear God; honour the King;' then turning to the train he said, 'Honour the King:' all responded by uncovering and kneeling. The leader of the Ngatiruanui then read from a memorandum-book an address beginning, 'O King, live for ever; thou art bone of our bone, and flesh of our flesh; thou art a saviour for us, our wives, our children,' &c., and went on to pledge their allegiance. The leader of the Ngatiawa then read a similar address. 'Honour the King' was again demanded, and a low salaam, and a general cry of 'Hear, hear, hear,' was the response."
- It was while this deputation was in the Waikato that news arrived of the breaking-out of hostilities at the Waitara. This fact will explain much that would otherwise be unintelligible in the speeches of the chiefs at Ngaruawahia, from which I shall presently give extracts. "The chiefs of the Ngatimaniapoto Tribe were no doubt encouraged to make their revolutionary proposals, and to use the strong language contained in their speeches, by the speeches of two Waikato chiefs, Te Wetini and Karamoa, who spoke the preceding day, when the Ngatiruanui and Ngatiawa presented their allegiance to Potatau."
- Before quoting from the Native speeches, I beg to refer to the following further particulars as to the purposes of the land league: "These opponents [to land sales] pushed their views, and sought to make it te tihanga o te iwi (the law of the tribe) that no individual or family should alienate land without the consent of the whole tribe. To make the law popular and binding, they determined on a more general meeting, and to invite all the tribes along the coast to join them in this measure..... This was the origin of the notorious Taranaki land league, which evidently contains the elements of the present King movement, which has proved so fruitful a source of dissension among the tribes of that district, caused so much bloodshed, and brought about the present collision between Wi Kingi and His Excellency the Governor. ... The land thus given over to the King is not to be alienated without his consent. This might be all fair if the party stopped here. But they resolve that no land shall be sold within their territory, even though the owner may not have joined the league. Any man, therefore attempting to sell a block of land would subject himself to summary proceedings at war; and any attempt to take possession of the purchased block by the Government would be resisted by force of arms, as in the case of the land at Waitara."
- The Rev. Mr. Morgan, Church of England missionary, who has resided twenty years in the Waikato District, writing to the Select Committee of the House of Representatives on Waikato affairs, says: "In other words, the vital question with the Maori Kingites now is, whether the King or the Queen shall possess the mana of New Zealand. Hence the frequent expressions of the Waikatos now in arms, 'We are going to fight for New Zealand. We sent the King's flag to Taranaki, and it is our duty to follow the King's flag. We are fighting for the mana of our island.' The Maori-King movement is the strength of the Taranaki war. ... This entirely depends on the issue of the present war, which, on the part of the Waikato, is a struggle for the mana of the Maori King, and not for the small piece of land sold by Te Teira at the Waitara. They only considered that small block of land as it refers to the mana of the King all lands on which his flag has been planted."

- The Rev. J. A. Wilson, Church missionary, writing to the same Committee, expresses his entire agreement with Mr. Morgan's opinions.
- At the Ngaruawahia meeting, where nearly four thousand were assembled, the following conversation took place between the chiefs Tamati Ngapora and Patene (of Ngatimaniapoto), who represented Wiremu Kingi:—Tamati Ngapora: "I wish my proposals to be disposed of Raugitake, give me that piece of land that has caused the war. Give me that piece that has been purchased and paid for by the Governor."—Patene (Ngatimaniapoto) replied, representing Wiremu Kingi, "I shall not give it up."—Tamati Ngapora: "Give it to me."—Patene: "I am under some mistake." He then planted a stick in the ground to represent Potatau and Waitara, and said, "This is Potatau; my mana stands there. After my mana rested on the land the scrofulous man arose, offered it for sale, and the Governor accepted the offer."—Tamati: "That is Potatau, is it? and this land has been handed over to Potatau, has it? Then it is mine; I represent Potatau here; and I give this land to the Governor." (Tamati was instructed by Potatau to adopt this plan.)—Patene: "For what reason do you give that land to the Governor?"—Tamati: "That peace may be restored and our trouble cease."—Paora (a chief of Ngatiwhatua) said at the same meeting: "You say that you have not seen wrong on the part of Te Rangitake (Wiremu Kingi). I have seen his wrong-doing. Letters have reached you that convict him of wrong, yet you say you have not seen it. I repeat, I have seen it, and I believe there is not a chief in Waikato that is not convinced that Te Rangitake is wrong. ... You speak of mana. What is the mana? Where is the mana? There is no such thing as putting mana on the land." —Heta Ngatihaua (the young man who made the flags that were sent Taranaki) said: "Press your words, Ruihana. Send a deputation to Taranaki; let us know when that land was paid for—before our mana reached it or after. If our mana was first, we do not let it go, but support Rangitake in his right. This shall decide his claim. The money second, the mana first—we hold it fast."—Kopara, of Ngatihaua, said: "All subjects are disposed of but one. The question is, Was the flag first or the money first? If the land was paid for before the flag reached it, the Governor is right; if not, then the matter cannot rest where it is. If the mana and flag went before, we must contend for our land."—Te Wetini Taiporutu, of Ngatihaua (the chief who was killed at Mahoetahi), said: "I wish to reply to one question. If the Governor's money was laid down for the land at Waitara before it came under our law, then he is right. But if it was paid for after the land was handed to us, I do not say what we shall do. That we keep in our pockets; I open not my mouth on that subject, but I can see the depth and height, the length and breadth of that. I lean on our flag. If the land was purchased after it became ours, then I shall show my love to Rangitake."
- At the conference at Kohimarama, Tamati Waka Nene said: "For this reason, I repeat, it is enough; cease to clamour for a king. Although some may inquire whence sprang the disturbances at Taranaki, I will declare that the evils sprang from that King (movement). Now that my Waikato friend is dead, cease to call for a king. I know full well that the evils have sprung from the King; therefore I say again, put an end to it." Tamihana te Rauparaha said: "Wiremu Kingi tries to maintain his landholding influence (mana-pupuri-whenua)—the mana of New Zealand; but perhaps one reason is jealousy of the pakeha." Hetaraka Nera said: "The Waikato people set up a Maori King. The object of this was to hold the land. When Te Rangitake heard that his own idea was being carried out, his heart rejoiced. I am speaking ill of Waikato and Wiremu Kingi. I say, that evil will increase. In these times my ears have heard indistinctly that those tribes have been acting treacherously, and the opinion respecting them cannot be concealed. This Island is filled with the evils of the Maoris." Again, Wiremu Kingi himself said to the Waikato chiefs and Wi Tako, who visited him to inquire about the purchase: "The pakeha wants our land, but this war is about your Maori King. Do not listen to the pakeha, but bring your flag to Waitara. Go back and clear them out; send them all back to England."
- The Rev. J. A. Wilson furnishes further evidence on the same subject, from three chiefs who spoke with him during a visit of two months to Waikato. Wiremu Nera te Awaitaia, one of the highest chiefs of New Zealand, said to him: "You must understand this: The war is not a struggle of the Maori with the pakeha; it is not a war with the missionary; it is not a war with the Magistrate; it is a war of the King with the Queen." Te Waru, another high Waikato chief, said: "Friend, all this fighting and plundering would not have occurred had we not made a King. This is the root of the strife. It is Waikato who fight the cause of Taranaki; the men of the soil keep at a distance, they are but slaves; we fight their battles; we are the strength of this war."—Wetini Taipututu said: "The war was not merely a contention for the land at New Plymouth, but for the chieftainship of New Zealand. Wherever the King's flag went they [the war party] would follow. If the Governor sent troops to any part of this Island they would meet them."

- And lastly, Karaka Tomo te Whakapo, from Rangiaohia, said: "You are right: those are our mottoes. Let there be no evil of any kind, no war among the pakeha, and no war among the Maoris. But let us build our pa, let us complete it. Let it be quite finished. I do not consider it completed yet. Leave the other things, the war at Taranaki for the Evil Spirit to carry on. Twice he has turned upon us, and twice we have forgiven. Let us abide by our three mottoes and wait to see if he will be strong and persevere. Our pa stands broken: listen, William, Takerei, Wetini; listen. I consider that our pa for our wives and children is not yet complete; let us finish it, dig the trenches, throw up the breastwork, and bind the fences. Look at his [the pakeha's] work in other lands; never too late, never behind time [alluding to the prompt movements and careful preparations of the Europeans]: therefore I say quickly build our pa."—Tapihana replied: "What pa is that you are building? We have built our pa, and it is broken down and stained with blood. The wealth we had collected into our bag is scattered, it is thrown out into the fern; who shall gather it up again?" (alluding to the men who had fallen at Taranaki).
- Your Grace will determine, with the preceding evidence before you, whether I was right on the 22nd March, 1860, four days after the first shot was fired in this war, in saying, "It is now clear to me that Wiremu Kingi has been encouraged in his opposition by an assurance of formidable support, and that the question of the purchase of an insignificant piece of land is merged in the far greater one of nationality."

VIII. Lastly, the Present Aspect of the Subject.

- The evidence which I have submitted to your Grace will, I feel confident, be deemed sufficient by Her Majesty's Government upon the following points: (1.) That there is reason to doubt whether any seigniorial right, distinct from the right of property, in a chief of a tribe to assent to or forbid the sale of land by the separate hapus or subdivisions of the tribe, had any existence at all among the Natives of these Islands prior to the Treaty of Waitangi. (2.) That while the proprietary rights of chiefs, families, and people were guaranteed by the Treaty, no right in the chiefs, distinct from a right of property, was thought of in the original interpretation of the Treaty. (3.) That no such right has been admitted to exist in any chief of the Ngatiawa Tribe at Taranaki throughout successive acts and decisions of every Governor of New Zealand. (4.) That Governor Hobson in 1842 recognized the Waikato title by conquest, and (through the then Chief Protector of Aborigines) took a cession of their rights. (5.) That Governor Fitzroy in 1844 admitted separate rights of ownership in the families of the Ngatiawa Tribe, and expressly promised to purchase such rights whenever they should be offered for sale on reasonable terms. (6.) That Governor Sir George Grey in 1847 refused to admit any seigniorial or even tribal title in the Ngatiawa, and determined to resume the land at Taranaki for the Crown after ample reserves should have been made for the resident and absentee Native claimants, and after a reasonable price per acre for the residue should have been offered to them. (7.) That the right of the respective hapus and subdivisions of the Ngatiawa to cede their proprietary rights to Her Majesty has been repeatedly and expressly recognized in the acquisition of various blocks of land at Taranaki during a period of more than sixteen years, and has been the basis of every cession of territory there to Her Majesty since 1844. (8.) That the acceptance by me of the land offered for sale by two hapus or sections of the Ngatiawa, representing the Ngatituaho and Ngatihinga as well as a portion of the Puketapu branches of that tribe, whose act was confirmed and ratified by a large number of absentee owners at other places, was in accordance with the precedents upon which the acquisition of land from the Ngatiawa at Taranaki had invariably proceeded. (9.) That the proprietary rights of any owner who may not have assented to this sale have been expressly saved, and that any one who has a valid claim of ownership may retain his land, or cede it to Her Majesty, as he pleases. (10.) That the insurrection of Wiremu Kingi is not a legitimate resistance to an attempt forcibly to eject him from an acre of land to which he has a just right, but is the result of a league which exists among certain tribes forcibly to prohibit any further alienation of territory to the Crown, even by the rightful owners thereof who may be willing to sell.
- I have thus answered that part of Mr. Fortescue's questions which inquires how far the existence of the seigniorial right now claimed for the chiefs has been recognized by the British Government, or justifies the proceedings of Wiremu Kingi.
- With respect to the other part of the inquiry—Whether there are reasons apart from the Treaty of Waitangi in favour generally of the recognition of such a right, and whether it ought therefore to be admitted in future transactions,—I beg to make the following brief remarks:—

- In a pamphlet which I received last night, written by Sir William Martin, late Chief Justice of this colony, he says, "This tribal right is clearly a right of property, and it is expressly recognized and protected by the Treaty. That Treaty neither enlarged nor restricted the then existing rights of property. It simply left them as they were." It is precisely this principle which has been recognized in every cession of territory since the Treaty. But it must be remembered that the ancient customs of the Natives with respect to land had been materially affected by engrafting upon them the new practice of alienation since the first irregular settlement of the country. We found that the Natives had no fixed rules applicable to all the tribes and to every locality, and we adopted as our guide in each district the customs which in that district were in force among the people themselves, where the right of alienation had followed the old right of property whether in the tribe or the family.
- To attempt now to introduce a new kind of right, distinct from that of property, would require definitions involving in practice a really insuperable difficulty. Assuming any right, distinct from a right of property in the soil, to be admitted in a chief to assent to or forbid the sale of land where the real owners are willing to sell, it would still have to be determined in whom that right should vest. The Government would first have to decide what was the tribe, and who was the chief of the tribe. Failing this they would have to decide what were the respective subdivisions of the tribe, and who were the chiefs of those subdivisions. I have no hesitation in saying that the relations between the chiefs of the several tribes of New Zealand are not such as would justify the British Government in arbitrarily coming to such decisions, and that at present it would be a simple impossibility to do so with any hope of obtaining the assent of the Native people. But, apart from this inherent difficulty, I am of opinion that for the British Government now for the first time to announce that a right would be admitted in any chief whatever, distinct from his right of property in the soil, to prohibit the cession of territory to Her Majesty by the real owners of the land, would be as unjust as it would be impolitic. It would sanction the objects of the land league, which declares that no land shall be allowed to be sold, even though the real owners should not have joined the league; it would strengthen the confederacy which based upon the league, aims at the subversion of the Queen's authority and the establishment of an independent nationality: it would effectually discourage those loyal subjects of Her Majesty of the Native race who rest upon the guarantee of their proprietary rights in the Treaty of Waitangi; and it would render all but impossible any success in the efforts which have been made during so many years to induce the Natives to convert their tribal tenure into individual property secured by a grant from the Crown.
- I can only, therefore, in conclusion, express my conviction that the proper course for Her Majesty's Government to pursue in the future is that which has been steadily followed in the past— namely, to continue to deal with the chiefs or the proprietors of the soil according to the custom existing among the Natives themselves in each particular district in which cession of territory may be in contemplation, and in the manner which best accords with the rights of property actually in force among them. I look forward, however, to the time when the Natives will be prepared for the establishment of a tribunal in which their varying customs may acquire some settled form, and to the decisions of which they will yield a peaceful submission.
- I transmit herewith a memorandum by my Responsible Advisers on the same subject.

I have, &c.,

T. GORE BROWNE.

His Grace the Duke of Newcastle, &c.

MEMORANDUM by His EXCELLENCY'S MINISTERS.

Auckland, 3rd December, 1860.

His Excellency's reply to Mr. Fortescue's despatch of 27th August, 1860, deals so thoroughly with the question of the territorial rights of the Native chiefs that little is left to be said on the subject.

- The main question proposed by Mr. Fortescue is: Whether or not there exists in the chief or tribe "a right, distinct from one of property, to assent to or forbid the sale of any land belonging to members of the tribe in cases where all the owners are willing to sell."
- The answer to this question must be sought for in the history of land purchases since the settlement of the country by Europeans, and not in fanciful deductions from what is known or conjectured about the original state of the New Zealand tribes.
- The settlement of the country and the establishment of British sovereignty of necessity effected a great change in the status of tribes and individuals of the Native race. The New Zealand tribes, in their original state, were so many separate nations. The assumption of the sovereignty of the Islands, under the provisions of the Treaty of Waitangi, extinguished the separate nationalities, together with the rights flowing out of them. At the same time the Treaty saved all proprietary as distinguished from national rights, and (subject to Her Majesty's right of pre-emption) confirmed to the Native landowners the power of alienation which they had already begun to exercise.
- It is very doubtful whether, previously to the arrival of Europeans, the aborigines had any notion at all of the absolute alienation of territory. Certainly they did not regard land as a marketable commodity; and whatever alienations may have taken place amongst themselves were of a totally different character from such as followed upon the settlement of the country.
- The alleged right of restraining alienation cannot be deduced from the practices of a time when the tribes were little nations constantly engaged in mutual hostilities, and when such a thing as a sale of land in our sense had not been heard of. And it would be foolish to seek precedents for the regulation of dealings with Europeans in the usages of a period when there were no Europeans in the country. The right of alienation was a novelty unprovided for in the old tribal economy, and the conditions of the exercise of the right were of course novel also. The subject therefore can receive no real illustration from the investigation of Native ideas and customs prior to the advent of Europeans; but the inquiry to be made is simply this: Whether or not the alleged right of control has been recognized or asserted since the settlement of New Zealand? If not, no such right can be supposed to exist.
- The land purchases made of the Natives of New Zealand are divisible into two great classes —First, those made of leading chiefs, representing whole tribes (iwi); secondly, those made of subtribes (hapus), or of families or other comparatively small groups of individuals.
- The former class of purchases comprises those cases in which a large unoccupied territory has been disposed of by the conquerors—as in the instance of the sale of the Middle Island by the Ngatitoa chiefs, and of Taranaki by Te Wherowhero and his brother.
- In most, perhaps in all, of the cases belonging to the second class, the land sold has been territory actually divided amongst and appropriated by the different hapus or families of the tribe. By far the greater number of purchases belong to this class. All the purchases made to the north of Auckland, whether by Government or by individual Europeans, belong to it; so do the purchases made of the Ngatikabungunu in the Hawke's Bay District and the Wairarapa Valley, of hapus of the Waikato Tribe in the neighbourhood of Whaingaroa or Raglan, and of the Ngatiawa at Port Nicholson and Taranaki.
- Neither class of purchases affords any precedent of the exercise or assertion of the supposed right. In sales of vacant territory the principal chiefs have themselves been the vendors. In sales of occupied territory an absolute and unquestioned right of alienation has always gone along with the right of occupancy, which is generally exclusive in certain hapus or families, and not common to the whole tribe.
- It thus appears that the unrestricted right of alienation has, in practice, accompanied the right of property whether subsisting in the tribe or in any smaller Native community; and that no seignorial or tribal right of controlling sales by the Native owners has ever been exercised or in anywise asserted since the commencement of land purchases in New Zealand. His Excellency's Responsible Ministers are therefore of opinion that the main question proposed by the Secretary of State should be answered in the negative.
- Whilst arriving at this conclusion respecting a matter of fact, Ministers desire to guard against being supposed to maintain the opinion that such practical influence as the principal chiefs may hereafter attempt to exercise in the matter of land sales ought to be disregarded. The distinction between right and power is still faintly drawn by the Natives themselves; and, dealing with them as in some sort a foreign power, it will be generally prudent to respect any authority or influence established amongst them de facto, without too nice an inquiry whether that authority and influence exist strictly de jure. The political power of the chiefs is still great, and the jealousy of European progress on the increase; so that it is probable that in many cases the influence of the chiefs may be employed to check the exercise by Native landowners of those independent rights of alienation which they have hitherto enjoyed. Such a use of the political authority of the chiefs certainly ought not to be encouraged; at the same time it would often be imprudent to press the completion of a purchase in the face of the opposition of any important chiefs nearly connected with the Natives offering to cede territory.

- As regards the remaining question, Whether the particular claim of William King to interfere with sales in the New Plymouth District was such as it would, on any ground, have been right or politic to admit, the Governor's despatch has exhausted whatever still remained to be said. His Excellency's Ministers feel that it cannot be necessary for them to do more than state summarily their own views. They think that any such recognition would have been unjust to the Native proprietors and (seeing that William King's pretensions and intrigues have for years convulsed the district) to the European settlers also; that it would have been an abandonment of the principles laid down and acted upon by successive Governors for the settlement of the Ngatiawa claims in Taranaki, and a violation of the express promise made to the assembled Natives at New Plymouth by the present Governor in March, 1859; that, far from putting an end to, it would have aggravated the feud which has already occasioned so much bloodshed amongst the Natives and has so frequently disturbed and imperilled the settlement of New Plymouth, that it would have rendered the intervention of the British Government to establish peace in the district more difficult, but would by no means have obviated the ultimate necessity for such intervention; in fine, that it would have been, under the peculiar circumstances of the case, the dereliction of a plain duty and an act of weakness unattended by any advantage beyond the postponement of a difficulty which must have soon recurred in some aggravated form.

C. W. RICHMOND.

No. 12. His Excellency the Governor to the Chief Justice and the Judges of the Supreme Court.

On the Establishment of a Native Titles Court. Government House, Auckland, 6th May, 1861.

THE Governor takes advantage of the meeting of the Judges of the Supreme Court in Auckland to beg the favour of their advice on a subject which has long engaged his attention, but which is surrounded with difficulties. He alludes to the establishment of a Court which shall have jurisdiction in and be able to dispose successfully of questions relating to land over which the Native title has not been extinguished; and he begs the favour of the Chief Justice and the Judges of the Supreme Court to give him their opinion and advice on the following points, viz.: First, whether the constitution and mode of procedure of the Supreme Court can be adapted for the investigation and determination of questions relating to Native title. If the answer to this question should be in the negative—Second, whether an efficient Court could be established for such purpose, and what should be the nature of its constitution and procedure.

T. Gore Browne.

Their Honours the Chief Justice and the Judges of the Supreme Court of New Zealand.

No. 13. The Chief Justice and the Judges of the Supreme Court to His Excellency the Governor.

On the same Subject.

SIR,—

Auckland, 9th May, 1861.

In answer to your Excellency's letter of the 6th May, 1861, in which your Excellency asks the Chief Justice and the Judges of the Supreme Court to give their opinion and advice on two points, with respect to the investigation of questions relating to Native title, we have the honour to offer your Excellency the following answers: First, we think that the constitution and mode of procedure of the Supreme Court, as it exists at present, are not well adapted for the investigation and determination of questions relating to Native title generally, although they may be sufficient for the purpose when such questions arise incidentally in the course of other proceedings. We do not think the constitution and mode of procedure of the Supreme Court can be practically adapted so as to deal with the investigation of such questions generally in a satisfactory manner, and without materially interfering with the efficiency of the Court in other respects. Even with the clement of a Maori jury introduced, and the treatment of Maori customs as matters of fact and not of law, we think that the system of pleading and procedure and the law of evidence, which bind the Supreme Court, could not be practically applied in such cases to the satisfaction and with the concurrence of particular litigants or the mass of the Native community; so that the Court would have to set aside the general law of New Zealand in those respects in order to enable it to deal efficiently with the great mass of investigations of this kind. This, we think, it ought not to be called upon to do, as the status and organization of the Court would thereby be seriously affected. Moreover, the great practical inconveniences arising from the necessity of constant interpretation, and the large portion of the time of the Court which would be devoted to these questions, and the consequent delays to which other suitors would be exposed, are, we think, palpable and all but insuperable objections to any attempt to adapt the existing constitution or procedure of the Court to the purposes of the ordinary investigation of Native title. Secondly, in answer to your Excellency's second question, we have the honour to state that we do not doubt an efficient Court may be established for the purpose indicated; but we do not feel that we possess sufficient materials, either respecting the requirements of the Native race, the policy of your Excellency's Government, or the means at its command, to be able to offer to your Excellency any specific suggestions as to the precise nature, constitution, functions, and procedure of such a tribunal. We think, moreover, the question seems so necessarily involved with political considerations, that it might be improper for us to give our opinion, as Judges, respecting matters more strictly within the duties of statesmen or politicians. But, treating the matter in the largest and most general way, we feel justified in suggesting that a competent tribunal might probably be established by the formation of a land jury, selected by lot or otherwise from members of the various tribes in previously defined districts, nominated by such tribes as competent to act in that capacity, to be presided over by a European officer or Commissioner (not being an agent of the Crown for the purchase of land) conversant with the Maori language, and assisted, if necessary, by a Native Assessor, and whose duty it should be merely to propound the questions for the decision of the jury, to record their verdict, and to administer oaths to witnesses.

George Alfred Arney, C. J.

Alexander J. Johnston.

To His Excellency the Governor. Henry B. Gresson.

No. 14. MEMORANDUM by His Excellency Governor GORE BROWNE, C.B.

On Native Affairs generally. Government House, Auckland, 25th May, 1861.

THE near approach of a session of the Assembly seems a proper occasion for the expression of my views generally on Native affairs; but, in stating them, I shall avoid details, and confine myself to an indication of subjects demanding notice and consideration.

- So long as the dangerous element contained in the King movement remains unsubdued, so long will any assistance offered to the Natives in their search for better government be received with indifference, and attended with little or no result; but when the supremacy of the Queen is fully established the first step to be taken should be the initiation of a system by which the Natives may be governed through themselves.
- I entirely agree with the House of Representatives in thinking "that institutions for the Native people ought to be based on their free assent and committed to their guardianship;" that Native territory should be divided into districts, and, if possible, one or more chiefs in each appointed to act as organs of communication with the Government; that the runanga, lawfully constituted, should have power to recommend regulations for the local affairs of the district; that measures ought to be taken for the ascertainment and registration of tribal rights.
- With this view a circular letter should be addressed to the most important Native settlements, informing them when and where the next conference will be held, inviting the tribes to send delegates empowered to express the opinion of their constituents, and indicating as many as possible of the subjects which will be proposed by the Government for their consideration. Among these subjects the following should be included:—
  - Are the Natives in properly-constituted districts willing to acknowledge any particular chief who shall be the organ of communication between them and the Governor, and to whose authority they will submit?
  - Are they willing to receive the visits of a European officer and accept his advice?
  - Do they wish that a fixed number of Assessors should be nominated by the runangas, subject to a veto by the Governor, or would they prefer that Assessors should be nominated by the Governor, as at present?
  - Will they declare the whereabouts of the hapus belonging to their tribe, and give a list of the families which compose each hapu and the names of the chiefs who represent it; and, if this can be effected, will they be further willing to register the boundaries of the land belonging to each hapu, with the names of the chiefs whom they wish to act as trustees of such land for them—an assurance being then given that no purchase would be made within those boundaries without the assent of the trustees so registered?
- The equality of rank among so many of the chiefs, and their extreme jealousy of each other, are likely to offer the most serious obstacles to the recognition of either single chiefs or Assessors; but, if it is possible to overcome these difficulties, the relations between the Government and the tribes will be much improved, and, ultimately, the administration of justice will be greatly facilitated.
- The payment of Assessors is a question of great difficulty. At present a number of men are paid £10 a year, which is not sufficient to secure their loyalty, and even the larger salaries which are given to some often create jealousies, and cause dissatisfaction. This, however, would be greatly simplified if a system of election (subject to veto) were authorized and accepted.
- Believing as I do that real civilization of the Natives is impossible so long as their communal title continues in its present form, I am most anxious to induce them to register the lands belonging to their different hapus as being a great advance towards individualization of property and the removal of disputes attending the alienation of land.
- The power to clothe Native title with a Crown grant must be delegated to some one, if we desire to see communal title really extinguished; numerous cases have already occurred—more particularly in the Middle Island—in which the want of this power has been greatly felt. If the Assembly be unwilling to confer this power upon the Governor, any legislation on the subject must necessarily be reserved for the consideration of Her Majesty's Government (vide Lord Carnarvon's Despatch No. 34, of 10th May, 1859).
- The opinion of the three Judges has been given in reference to the establishment of a tribunal having jurisdiction in disputes relative to land over which the Native title has not been extinguished. They have not entered upon details, but it occurs to me that a judicial officer (query: a Judge?) residing in Auckland should have power to issue a Commission enabling the holder to associate two Native Assessors with himself, and then to empanel a jury, as advised by the Judges. I am myself inclined to think that the decision of a Commissioner, with disinterested Native Assessors, would be safer and more likely to decide impartially than a Maori jury; but I hesitate to advise anything not exactly in accordance with the opinion of the Judges. Such a Court, however constituted, would be powerless unless both parties consent to abide by its decrees, but time and experience might give it additional influence.
- A much larger staff of European officers will be required if the Government really undertakes the civilization of the Maori people. At present the difference of language places communication with the Maoris in the hands of the religious bodies and a very small number of settlers—few of the latter being willing to enter the Native service. The consequence is that Government is dependent on a very few individuals, and in many places is almost unknown by the Natives.
- Some of the most populous districts—such as Hokianga and Kaipara—have no Magistrates resident among them; and many—such as Taupo, the Ngatiruanui, Taranaki, and the country about the East Cape—have never been visited by an officer of the Government. The residents in these districts have never felt that they are the subjects of the Queen of England, and have little reason to think that the Government of the colony cares at all about their welfare.

- In the Hudson Bay territory, and in other colonies where the Europeans have assumed the duties connected with the government of partially civilized tribes, it has been found necessary to have officers regularly trained and educated for those duties. The Government relies on these officers for information, and for the steady maintenance of the influence by which the civilization of such tribes may be permanently improved. In New Zealand the Government is, and always has been, unable to perform its duty for want of a sufficient number of agents so trained and qualified for the service required of them. In a short time many of those on whom we now depend will cease to be available, and then there will be very great difficulty in replacing them. I am therefore strongly of opinion that the Native Department should be entirely remodelled; that a Native service should be established, and that increase of pay and advancement should be offered as a reward for fidelity and efficiency. Without some such system the Government will never be able to take its proper part in establishing institutions for the Native race, or obtain any real hold upon their confidence.
- The establishment of a central school for the instruction of Assessors in the practice of the rudiments of our law is also another subject which I strongly recommend for consideration. Instruction in Maori, &c., might be given at the same institution to young men wishing to enter the Native service.
- The education of the Maoris has hitherto been intrusted solely to the religious bodies, and the effect has been necessarily confined to certain districts. There is no school at all north of Auckland. No school has ever existed in many of the most populous places—more particularly in the Ngatiruanui country—and in one school only is any attempt made to give instruction in agriculture. Government is not less bound to care for the secular instruction of its people than the Church is for their religious teaching.
- To feed and clothe the pupils, as practised by the religious bodies, would require too great an outlay to admit of general adoption; but schoolmasters, having a knowledge of agriculture, might be appointed to reside in Native kaingas. We should thus take education to the homes of the Natives, instead of bringing the children away for a short period and then leaving them to relapse into former habits when they return to their own people.
- The system of purchasing land requires alteration. I do not enter into this subject, as my views are explained in my printed Despatch No. 80, of the 29th September, 1859.
- Roads (not necessarily metalled) through Native districts are absolutely necessary for the progress of civilization and the maintenance of peace. The Assembly should, therefore, be asked to make advances for this purpose.

In conclusion, I will recapitulate my opinions briefly: (1.) Elicit the views of the Natives at the next conference, and be guided by their wishes as far as possible. (2.) If they will consent to the appointment of chiefs (acceptable to themselves) to be organs of communication with the Government, give these chiefs proper salaries. (3.) In districts where chiefs are so appointed, attach an English officer to each in order to act as his adviser, and assist him in the administration of justice. (4.) Where this plan cannot be introduced, appoint a European Magistrate to act as adviser to the runangas, and to make regular circuits through each district, accompanied by one or two Assessors. Policemen will also be required in each district. (5.) Constitute runangas legally, and allow them to make rules and elect Assessors, subject, in both cases, to approval by the Governor. The rules, when approved, to be carried out by the Assessors, under advice of the Magistrate. (6.) Divide the Native territory into geographical districts, and appoint a European officer to reside in each district, as above stated. (7.) Establish a central school for the instruction of Native assessors in the rudiments of the administration of justice, and for instructing young Englishmen desiring to fit themselves for employment in the Native service. (8.) Remodel the Native service, and increase the number of officers. (9.) Open registers for land belonging to Native communities, entering therein the names of trustees where such communities shall be willing to appoint them, engaging that the land so registered shall not be bought by the Crown without the consent of the said trustees. (10.) Pass an Act giving power to issue Crown grants in commutation of the Native tenure to land. (11.) Establish a tribunal to which resort may be had for the determination of any questions in difference relating to land between the Crown and any Natives, or between the Natives themselves. (12.) Give secular instruction (including the rudiments of agriculture) in the Native kaingas. (13.) Alter the system of purchasing land (see printed Despatch No. 80, of 1859), and for the present purchase only in districts which remain undisturbed. (14.) Make bush roads through the heart of the Native districts, more particularly through the Waikato to Taranaki, and thence to Whanganui.

Lectures on Maori Customs, &c., by Mr. JOHN WHITE. On the Tenure of Maori Lands.

THERE is no point on which a New Zealander's indignation can be more effectually aroused than by disputing his title to land. This love for his land is not, as many would suppose, the love of a child for his toys; the title of a New Zealander to his land is connected with many and powerful associations in his mind. He is not, of course, what we call a civilized man; but in dealing with him we deal with a man of powerful intellect, whose mind can think and reason as logically on any subject with which he is acquainted as his more favoured European brethren, and whose love for the homes of his fathers is associated with the deeds of their bravery, with the feats of his boyhood, and the long rest of his ancestors for generations. The New Zealander is not accustomed to law and parchment, or to wills and bequests, in gaining knowledge of or receiving a title to the land of his fathers; nor would he quietly allow any stranger to teach him what lands were his or what lands were not, what were the names of the boundaries, the creeks, mountains, and rivers in his own district. The thousand names within the limits of his hereditary lands were his daily lesson from childhood. The son of a chief invariably attended his father or grandfather in all his fishing, trapping, or spearing excursions, and it was in these that he learnt by ocular demonstration the exact boundaries of his lands, and repeatedly heard their various names. It was a custom with the Maoris in ancient times to eat the rat—a rat indigenous to this country, and caught in traps set on the top of the mountain ranges. This was a source of part of their daily food, and it was therefore, with them a point of great importance to occupy every available portion of their lands with these traps, and as most of the tribal boundaries are along the range of the highest hills or mountains, and as these were the common resort of the rat, every New Zealand chief soon naturally became acquainted with the exact boundary of his land claims. He did not, however, limit these claims to the dry land; they extended to the shell-fish; and even out to sea, where he could fish for cod or shark, or throw his net for mackerel: nor did he go inadvertently to these places, and trust to chance for finding his fishing-grounds; he had landmarks, and each fishing-ground or landmark had its own peculiar name; these to him were more than household words; his fathers had fished there, and he himself and his tribe alone knew those names and landmarks. Where a creek was the dividing boundary of his lands, this was occupied by eel-dams. These dams were not of wickerwork, that might be carried away by a flood; labour and art were bestowed on their construction, so that generations might pass, all of whom in turn might put their eel-basket down by the carved and red-ochred totara-post which their great-grand fathers had placed there. Where the dividing boundaries between two tribes ran along a valley, landmarks were put up: these consisted generally of a pile of stones or a hole dug in the ground, to which a name was given significant of the cause which gave rise to such boundary being agreed to; such, for instance, as Te Taupaki, the name given to the dividing boundary on the West Coast between the Ngatiwhatua and Tainui Tribes, which means "the year of peace," or the peaceful way in which a dispute is adjusted. This boundary has its origin from a chief of the Ngatiwhatua, called Poutapuaka, going from Kaipara to take possession of land with his paraoa or bone spear: his intention was to go along the coast as far as the quantity of food which he carried would enable him to travel, and return from the point at which his food was expended; he had succeeded in taking possession of the whole of the sandy line of coast called Rangatira, and, on arriving at the top of the hill now known as Te Taupaki, he met the Tainui chief Haowhenua. They both halted, sticking their spears in the ground, and, inquiring of each other the object of their being there, they found that they were both on the same errand, and at once agreed that this meeting-point should be the boundary dividing the lands of the tribes whereof each was the representative. The Ngatiwhatua chief at once dug a hole with his bone spear, and the boundary so established has remained to this day.

I may state, without fear of contradiction, that there is not one inch of land in the New Zealand Islands which is not claimed by the Maoris, and I may also state that there is not a hill or valley, stream, river, or forest, which has not a name, the index of some point of the Maori history. As has been stated above, the New Zealander knows with as much certainty the exact boundary of his own land as we could do from the distances and bearings given by a surveyor. But these boundaries are liable to be altered at times; for instance, when lands are taken by a conquering tribe or are given by a chief for assistance rendered to him by another tribe in time of war, or when land given to the female branch of a family again becomes, after a certain time, the property of the male branch of the family. In certain cases, also, lands are ceded to a tribe for a specific purpose, with certain restrictions, and a tenure conditional on certain terms being complied with. In order to be better understood, before I speak of the laws relating to these claims, I will give a hasty glance at the manner in which the first Maori emigrants took possession of and portioned out the newly-discovered country.

It is generally admitted among the Natives that the chief Kupe, who came in the canoe "Matahourua," was the first who took possession of New Zealand. This he did by naming all the rivers and mountains from Whanganui to Patea. Turi is the chief mentioned as having next arrived in the canoe "Aotea," and he gave names to all the rivers and mountains from Patea to Aotea. Next in point of time were the canoes "Te Arawa" and "Tainui." The former was commanded by Tama te Kapua and other chiefs, and first touched land at Whangaparaoa, a headland near the East Cape; it then coasted along, touching at various points, where the chiefs gave names to the prominent landmarks, their principal object in doing so being to take possession of the land, which they did as far as Cape Colville, where Tama te Kapua died and was buried; his people then placed themselves under the guidance of Ngatoroirangi and returned to Maketu. In the meantime, the chiefs Ruauru and Toroa, in the canoe "Matatua," had landed at Whakatane, and therefore part of Te Arawa District was taken by them from Te Awa-o-te-atua to Whangaparaoa. Shortly after which the father-in-law of Ngatoroirangi discovered the Rotorua Lakes; to his surprise he found people there, whose right to the lakes he disputed, and after a great deal of argument he succeeded in taking possession of the lakes and the surrounding country. The "Tainui," commanded by Hoturoa, came along from Whangaparaoa to Cape Colville, and came up the Tamaki River, taking possession of the district from Cape Colville to Mangawai on the east, and on the west from Manukau to Whaingaroa. The next canoes of the migration were the Ngapuhi canoes "Marnari," "Riukakara," and "Mahuhu:" the former of these went into the Hokianga River, and the people in it took possession of the land as far south of that river as Maunganui, and to the north as far as Ahipara; the Riukakara migration went into Whangaroa, and took possession of the land as far north as Mangonui, and as far south as the Bay of Islands; "Mahuhu," the Ngatiwhatua canoe, touched at the North Cape and took possession of the land not taken by the two former migrations—viz., from Mangonui along the East Coast to the North Cape, and on the West Coast to Ahipara; this migration left a number of their party at the North Cape, and the remainder came on to Kaipara and took possession of the land from Kaipara to Maunganui, on the north, and on the south to Te Taupaki. There was also, as before stated, another migration of Natives who landed at Te Waka Tuwhenua (Cape Rodney), a little to the south of Whangarei, and took possession of the land between Whangaparaoa and the Bay of Islands. The canoe contained a person who had the leprosy, from whom the major part of the migration caught the disease; leprosy is called by the Maoris tuwhenua, hence the name of the canoe "Waka Tuwhenua," the canoe of the leper, and also the point at which the party landed. Being thus afflicted, they fell into disorganization, and those who were not cut off by the leprosy became amalgamated with the adjoining tribes or migrations, and part of their land was taken by the Tainui people as far as Whangarei; the Mamari (Ngapuhi people) took the residue from the Bay of Islands to Whangarei. The chief Manaia, in the canoe "Tokomaru," took possession of the Taranaki District, which had been claimed by Turi, as I have before mentioned. The ancestor of the Ngatiawa Tribe, the most unsettled of all the migrations (as I shall presently show), arrived in New Zealand in the "Tokomaru." The canoe "Kurahaupo," commanded by Ruatea, landed near the East Cape, taking possession of the land from the point already taken by the Arawa round to Port Nicholson. The canoe "Takitumu" (or, as it was sometimes called for its fast sailing, "Horouta"), commanded by Tata, first landed at Turanga, but, proceeding southward, it crossed Cook Strait, and its crew took possession of the whole of the Middle Island. There are many other canoes with each of which are connected distinct migrations to New Zealand, but as these migrations will have to be mentioned when I speak of the customs or laws relative to the ownership of land, I would only here remark that those which I have already named show that all the land in the North and Middle Islands was taken possession of immediately on the arrival of the canoes. It was not in these Islands that the Maori became aware of the value of land, or that he first become owner of landed property, as the tradition of the occurrences which caused the migration shows; the Takitumu people, for instance, left Hawaiki on accounts of a quarrel about land. The boundaries of the districts claimed by right of discovery, as mentioned in the hasty sketch above given, did not long remain in that condition. Some time after the Arawa and Tainui migrations had settled in their own districts, a chief named Raumati, of the Tainui people, went overland to the Bay of Plenty and burnt the canoe "Te Arawa;" this was the cause of the first Maori war in New Zealand, which war resulted in the Arawa people gaining part of the Tainui lands.

I will now proceed to give the customs or laws by which a New Zealander held his land by right of birth. A Maori invariably grounded his claim on the right of his grandfather or grandmother, and not of his father, mother, brother, or any other immediate kindred. Although he had no written records to guide him in his knowledge of his ancestors and their claims, he was, nevertheless, carefully taught by his father or grandfather the history of his progenitors, and, as I have before stated, was often taken to the boundaries of his hereditary claims; so that, with a memory singularly retentive, he can not only recount the traditions of his ancestors for ten or twelve generations, but even of each branch of every family or offshoot. It is mainly on his knowledge of these that a Maori depends for proving his title, so that, in an assembly of chiefs discussing a disputed question about land, the wars that may have occurred in the tribes, their origin, and the names of the chief men who took part in them for hundreds of years, are narrated in support of either side of the argument.

As a rule, the Maori chief does not make a will; yet there have been instances in which a chief on his deathbed has portioned out his land to each of his children. The sons' claims in all instances are derived from their grandfather: the eldest son of the senior branch in the male line is chief of the tribe, and exercises sole authority over the land as guardian for his people against the encroachments of other tribes; yet all the descendants from the male branch of the family have an equal right in the lands of their progenitors, no matter now distant the relationship. They all, so long as they can trace their origin up to the same progenitor (provided a family war has not intervened, and thereby divided the tribe), claim equal right to the lands owned by that progenitor. This custom is a law amongst the Natives; but the title in the female line does not expand to such an extent. The granddaughter of a chief has an equal claim in the lands of her grandfather with that of her male cousins, and the claim continues good to her grandchild; but on the death of that grandchild the land reverts to the male line of the second generation from the male ancestor from whom they claim. This custom holds good for the following reason, which is assigned as its origin—namely, that, were it not upheld, the intermarriage of daughters of chiefs with member of other tribes would soon so complicate and curtail the tribal claims that a degrading influence on the honour of the tribe would ensue, and thus an invitation would be held out to adjoining tribes (members of which are related by marriage) to attempt by conquest to despoil them, of their territory. If a family war should occur in which a tribe becomes divided (which has frequently occurred), a division of the tribal lands takes place; but, before I show how this division is adjusted, I will allude to the mode in which a tribe asserts and maintains its rights over a large district. It was a custom to go at certain times to the utmost limit of the land claimed, and partially clear and cultivate a portion here and there. This was called uru uru whenua, and the duty devolved on the chiefs, a certain number only of whom went each time the ceremony recurred; so that when a tribal division took place that portion of the tribe which joined the chiefs who had last been engaged in the ceremony of uru uru whenua claimed the particular land where the ceremony had taken place, and the division-line was made to come as near as possible to that part situate in the centre of the whole tribal claim on which the fathers or grandfathers of each portion of the now divided tribe had last caught rats, as before alluded to. The lands of a tribe were portioned out according to the number of families of which it consisted, and were claimed by each family as its own; nor did any one meddle with or occupy the land of another family unless by express permission of the family claiming: still, these portions were not the exclusive property of each family so claiming them. But this only applied to the lands originally settled by the first migrations, not to lands which have been acquired by conquest, gift, or utu for curses or other injuries. Land is claimed by families, and the object of the chiefs in portioning them out was to prevent tribal disputes, and to allow each part of the tribe to have a portion of land over which it could exercise the exclusive right of cultivation, fishing, snaring birds, catching rats, or obtaining fern-root (which was one of the staple articles of food, and required a certain amount of care, though growing spontaneously, to bring it to the state required for food); moreover, this portioning-out of the tribal lands caused emulation in the different families as to the produce gained by each for the use of the tribe. The individual claim to land, therefore, did not exist amongst the New Zealanders according to our acceptation of that term.

The customs or laws relative to land taken in war are more complicated. A tribe in going to war had three objects in view—first, to take revenge for some real or supposed injury; second, to obtain as many slaves as possible; third, to extend its territory. A tribe seldom became extinct in consequence of war; but when this resulted the conquering tribe took all their lands, and from the slaves taken in war the conquerors learnt the boundaries of the land thus taken. But, if a portion of the tribe escaped, their claim held good to as great an extent of land as they had the courage to occupy. If, however, they could manage to keep within their own tribal boundary and elude their enemy, their right to the whole of the land held good; hence the meaning of a sentence so often used by old chiefs in their land disputes: I ka tonu taku ahi i runga i taku whenua—My fire has been kept burning on my land—meaning that other tribes in war had never been able to drive them entirely off their ancestral claims. The right to lands taken by conquest rests solely on the conquering party actually occupying the taken district, to the utter exclusion of its original owners or other tribes. Thus, in a war of the celebrated Hongi, he drove all the tribes out of the Auckland District into Waikato, and even as far as Taranaki; but, though the whole district thereby became his, yet as he did not occupy it the conquered tribes on his return to the north came back to their own lands, and we found them in occupation when Auckland was established as an English settlement. Again, in the case of a tribe which had been conquered and had become extinct with the exception of those who had been made slaves by the conquering party, these slaves could by purchase recover the ownership of their tribal rights to land, or they could be liberated and return to their own lands on a promise of allegiance to the conquerors, rendering them any assistance if required in times of war, and supplying them for the first few years after their return with a certain amount of rats, fish, and fern-root; and eventually, on presenting the conquerors with a greenstone battle-axe (the mere pounamu), they were again allowed to be called a tribe and claim the lands of their fathers as though they had never been conquered.

The claims in connection with lands given to a tribe for assistance rendered in war are more complicated than any other. Although the land was given to the leader of the tribe rendering such assistance, it did not thereby become vested in that individual leader, inasmuch as the assisting tribe were seldom alone, but had brought their allies; and if these allies had lost any of their chiefs in battle, each relative of the deceased chiefs had a claim in the land thus given, and each relative of any chief who had been killed of the tribe to whose leader the land was given had also a claim. But the complication of land claims does not end even here; it was necessary that the land given should be occupied so that possession of it be retained, and, as the assisted and assisting tribes became related by intermarriage, the tribal lands of the assisted tribe were claimed by the issue of these marriages according to the laws of which I have already spoken, so that after a few generations their respective claims not infrequently became the cause of another war. An instance of this happened about four generations ago. One of the northern tribes rendered assistance in time of war to a southern tribe, now residing not far from Auckland, and a portion of land was given to the northern tribe; shortly afterwards the daughter of the southern chief was taken in marriage by one of the chiefs of the northern tribe. The two sisters of this woman were married to chiefs of the southern tribe, and thereupon their children's claims held good; but when the time came for the offspring of the sister who had married the northern chief to give up their land, the colonization of New Zealand had commenced, and, land becoming a marketable commodity, this offspring retained their claims against all right and argument, and to this day there is a rankling feeling between the tribes concerned; and, if in this disputed land incautious dealing by Europeans took place, it would probably result in a Maori war. The war in the Bay of Plenty, which has been continued to the present day between certain chiefs, also originated in a like cause. The contending parties are all of one tribe, and spring from one ancestor, but by intermarriage some have a more direct claim than others. The descendants, who by intermarriage are related to other tribes, have made an equal claim to the land over which they have but a partial claim, and resistance to this has been the cause of the war. Disputes of this kind are not easily unravelled. I believe that were it possible to teach the Maoris the English language, and then bring them into some Court, allowing each contending party to plead his cause in such a dispute as I have mentioned, not according to English law, but according to Maori custom, both sides would, according to Native genealogy and laws, make out their respective cases so clearly that it would take a Judge and jury possessed of more than human attainments to decide the ownership of the land.

While speaking about lands claimed by conquest, I will give a few instances of land claimed by the offspring of those male or female chiefs who have been made slaves in war. It would not generally be supposed that lands disposed of at the southern end of this Island would affect any Native at the northern end of it: yet such is the case. A chieftainess, who was taken slave from the South by the Ngapuhi and other northern tribes, became the wife of a Ngapuhi chief; her claim stood in the way of completing a sale of the land, and it was not until the consent of her son by the Ngapuhi chief was gained that the land could be disposed of by the Natives residing on it; and to him, in due course of time, a portion of the payment was transmitted. Again, a chief who was taken slave from the Bay of Plenty by the northern tribes having taken a northern woman to wife, and having a family, his relatives from the Bay of Plenty made presents to the chiefs by whom he was taken, and procured his return home, but was obliged, according to Maori laws of title to land, to leave his wife and daughters with the Ngapuhi people; for if he had taken them with him they would have lost their claim to land at Ngapuhi, and would not be allowed any claim to land in the Bay of Plenty; while his son, whom he took back with him, now claims, by right of his grandfather, an equal right to the lands of the Bay of Plenty Tribe. Again, one of the northern chiefs having taken to wife a woman whom he had made slave from Taranaki, and having a son by her, his son returned to the tribe of his mother, and claimed as his right, derived from his grandfather, a share in their land, which was not disputed, because, as I have before stated, the great-grandchild in the female line has a claim to land. I remember another instance of this: a certain block of land was sold by a tribe near Auckland, and when the purchase-money was portioned out amongst the claimants a northern chief rose up and rehearsed his genealogy, by which he proved that he was the great-grandchild (in the female line) of one of the claimants of the block Sold; he thereupon, as a matter of course, received a part of the purchase-money. He was a northern chief, and had only been known to the settlers by name.

There are also other grounds on which claims are made to land. Should a chief of one tribe be killed by another tribe, the tribe of the murdered man claims the land in the vicinity where the murder took place: for instance, a chief, who had lost his canoe by drifting to sea, went along the coast to the settlement of a tribe who had been at variance with his tribe for many years, and found his canoe there, but was murdered by them. His tribe collected a war party, proceeded to the settlement, and brought away the body of the deceased chief, and in the following year went and cultivated the land. The block Whereof this cultivation formed part was afterwards sold by the original owners, and the relatives of the murdered chief received payment for the portion they had cultivated. Also, if a chief is drowned, his surviving relatives demand from the owners of that part of the river or coast where his body may be found that for a certain period no fish or shell-fish shall be collected from it. This proceeding is called a rahui, and continues until the next shark-fishing season. The owners of the shark-fisheries then collect all the sharks taken at that season and dry them, when the tribe of the drowned chief are sent for and entertained at a feast at which the sharks are all given to them. By this act the rahui is taken off, and the fish or shell-fish can thereupon be again taken from any part of the river or coast. Should the rahui be broken by the resident tribes, the relatives of the drowned chief then claim an equal right to the land. In one case a chief was drowned, and the owners of the land were called on to rahui the river, but they neglected to do so, whereupon the drowned man's relatives went and cultivated the land, and have held it ever since. In another a chief was taken in war not far from Auckland, and his bones were made into fishing-hooks and used in fishing for sharks: the relatives went and took the land near the place where the bones of the chief were thus used. A third instance took place not far south of Auckland. In a war of invasion one of the invaded chiefs was taken with his son (who was then an infant), and the bones of the father—who was killed and eaten—were used by the conquerors to catch sharks. As the son was a slave, when he was old enough he was taken out to fish, and one day while out fishing there happened to be a scarcity of shark, and he heard an old chief repeat a fishing ceremony with the addition of a name, and this being repeated many times the boy learnt the name. On arriving on shore he inquired of a fellow-slave if she knew any one of that name, and was told that it was the name of his own father. His ire was roused on learning that his father had not only been eaten, but that his bones were thus insulted. Though it is not considered an insult to eat those killed in battle, it is an unpardonable offence to use the bones as I have described. On this account the lad brooded over the discovery he had made, and eventually escaped from his masters and got back to his home. The tale he told soon collected a force of men, who avenged the insult by coming and taking possession of the district, which their tribe owns and occupies to this day. Again, if a chief when on a journey in inclement weather should require a temporary hut to be erected, the fact of his sleeping in the hut made it sacred. It was allowed to drop to pieces, but, if the owners of the district on which it was erected made use of any part of it, the chief for whose use it was erected claimed a right in the district. If a chief should have occasion to wash his head or comb his hair while on a journey, he claims a right in the district which this operation has made sacred. But it was not permitted to a chief to do this upon land belonging to other tribes on an insufficient pretence: the sickness or sudden death of a relative while on a journey is allowed to be a sufficient cause, but not the mere whim of a chief to beautify himself by washing or combing while on a friendly visit to another tribe. If a child be born in the course of a journey the child has a claim to the district. This claim is derived from what is called the kawa of the child; that is, at the birth of a child, a branch of certain trees (the ake, karamu, or hatu) is taken, part of which is tied to the child and part set in the ground; this ceremony is called te arawa: if the portion planted grows it is said the child will be a warrior. There are also other grounds by which claims to lands are allowed. If a chief be killed by a tribe on the lands of another tribe, and if the murderers are not owners of the land on which they killed the chief, the relatives of the killed chief claim the land on which the deed took place: for instance, the Ngatimaru killed a Ngatiwhatua chief on the lands of the Ngatiteata Tribe; the Ngatiwhatua therefore claim a right to the district, and to this day their claim has stood in the way of the district being sold. Again, there are certain things which if done or happening to a chief when on the lands of another tribe will, unless the tribe at once object or disallow the act or occurrence, establish a claim on the land. An instance of this occurred when a chief called Papaka (in Waikato, about three generations ago), while on a visit to the Ngatihape Tribe, by whom he was entertained as a guest, made a present of his ear-ornament to the Ngatihape chief. Now, anything worn on the person of a chief is sacred, and the presentation by a chief of an ear or head ornament is a mark of the greatest respect that can be shown from one Maori to another. Papaka was accustomed to wear attached to his ear the tail of a Maori dog, called a waro, which he gave to the Ngatihape chief, and it was accepted. Soon afterwards Papaka returned and assumed the leadership of the Ngatihape Tribe, and consequently a right to all their lands, which claim has continued good to his descendants to the present time.

The Maori is said by many to be the child of impulse. Such an opinion is not just; for it will appear to those who can enter into close conversation with him that he does not ask a question merely to spend his time or to amuse those to whom he is speaking. There is no such thing as an idle question from a Maori. Those who have observed him will agree with me that when he asks a question he does it in such a way as often to render it impossible to imagine the object for which it was asked; also, if he has to answer a question the object whereof is not clearly understood by him, he will give such an answer as will not put him in the power of the interrogator. Similarly a Maori does not give or take a present except for some predetermined reason; thus the Ngatihape Tribe, in receiving the present from Papaka, virtually bound themselves to give whatever he might demand in return. I will instance another mode of allowing a claim to be made to land: While a chief (Raukataura), on a visit from the Waikato to the Thames, was passing through the forest, one of his feathers (a kura) was torn from his head by the scrub in the road; he at once sat down, and, breaking a number of sticks, made a small enclosure round the feather; and as it is customary among the Natives for visitors from a distance to be attended by people of the district visited, and as these owners of the land witnessed the act and did not forthwith object to it, they virtually acquiesced in the claim which Raukataura thereby set up to the land, and to this day his descendants claim part of the district accordingly. Another instance of this custom may be given: One of the Waikato Tribe, whose district was famed for the eels it produced, invited a chief of another tribe on an eel-catching expedition; during the sport the invited chief was so pleased with the quantity of eels taken that he took a bunch of albatross feathers called pohoi from his ear, and cast it into the stream: as the owners of the fishery did not immediately object to this, his descendants are now allowed a claim not only to the land but to the eels taken there. Another instance of the custom occurred not many miles from Auckland. There stands in the Waitemata River a rock used as a mark in getting the exact position of a bank where shark is taken more plentifully than in any other parts of the river: a few years previous to the arrival of Governor Hobson an adjoining tribe was allowed to fish for sharks on the bank by the owners of the fishery, and the tribe to whom the permission was given were so pleased with the quantity of fish taken that they were induced to attempt to found a claim there, which they did by cutting a mark on the top of the rock; this having transpired, the owners of the district at once proceeded to the rock and obliterated the mark, thereby disallowing their claim, which has not again been made. Another ground on which claims to land are founded is the kanga or curse; to kanga or apiti a Maori chief is an offence of the greatest magnitude, or to compare a man to anything eatable, or to call a dog or a canoe or anything after his name. An offender in this respect is visited by a war-party, and if he is of another tribe, and leaves the settlement on the arrival of the war-party, it is optional for such party at once to occupy the land and become the owners of that portion of the district. Not far from Auckland such an offence was given by the Ngatimaru Tribe to the Ngatipaoa; the Ngatipaoa visited the offenders on the Waiheke Island, but, not having been able to meet the Ngatimaru there, the Ngatipaoa Tribe took part of the island and hold the ownership of it to this day.

There are also, as I have, before stated, lands which are ceded to a tribe for a specific purpose with certain restrictions; and the tenure of such lands depends on the Conditions being fulfilled. I mentioned that in certain cases in war an assisting tribe was in return for their help presented with a block of land, which became the property of all those who had relatives killed in the war for which it was given. In some instances, however, the land was not fully given to the assisting tribes; sometimes only the right of fishing or hunting was granted, and, in order that the owners of the district might keep the mana or right to the land, the tribe who had received permission to fish or hunt had to render the proceeds of their first day's sport to the owners of the land. Nor was the time for this acknowledgment optional with the giver; for on the morning of the day after the first fishing or hunting excursion certain men of the tribe were obliged to take the fish or game to the owners of the land, and the rest of the tribe were not to fish or hunt again until the present so sent was acknowledged by the return of the messenger. There are lands held on these conditions to this day. Sometimes, also, a permission was given to cultivate in consideration of a few of the best kumaras or taros being sent immediately on the crops being gathered. Lands have been used in this way by father and son for many generations. As a general law it was not allowed to bury the dead of the occupying tribe on land held by such a tenure; indeed, only one instance of this law being broken has passed under my notice; in the case I allude to, the burial having taken place with the consent or tacit admission of the owners of the land, a claim was in course of time raised upon this pretext, and the claimants even sold portions of the land to Europeans; nor was the unsold portion regained by the proper owners until after a war in which the offending tribe were driven off by force of arms.

I mentioned the Ngatiawa Tribe as being one of the most restless in former days, and tradition speaks of them as the most powerful in respect of numbers. A reference to the names of the different tribes now occupying New Zealand would show that the Ngatiawa are located in the north end of this Island, in the Bay of Plenty, at Taranaki, and on both sides of Cook Strait. As these places now occupied by them were not taken by right of discovery or by force of arms alone, there remains to be shown another custom relating to claims of land by means of which they became the owners of those districts. The progenitors of this tribe came, as I have stated, in the canoe "Tokomaru," and landed near Taranaki; but, being of a restless disposition, they shortly afterwards migrated to the Bay of Plenty, and then, after a brief stay, came down the East Coast to the Thames, and ultimately went on as far as the North Cape. In the course of their wanderings they (being the most powerful in respect of numbers) drove the other tribes out of each district which they visited; they overran all the Ngapuhi land in the north, and were the cause of that portion of the Ngatiwhatua who were located at the North Cape coming south and joining the main body at Kaipara. Having by force of numbers taken all on the West Coast to the north of Kaipara, and all on the East Coast to the north of Whangarei, they claimed it as their rightful property, not only by the law of might, but because of having buried their dead in the sacred places of the tribes of the land; for they had, according to Native law, proved the power of their own heathen customs relative to the dead to be superior to that of the tribes into whose district they had come. I may mention that the laws relative to the burial of the dead are strict; it is supposed that to bury the dead of an inferior tribe in the same place where superior chiefs are interred, without the consent of the relatives of the superior chiefs, would cause the gods of the superior chiefs to destroy the tribe of the relatives of the inferior chiefs so buried; hence the circumstance of the Ngatiawa having buried their dead in utter disregard of such consent proved an undisputed right to the district, not only by the law of force, but by that of superior rank. At the time of which I speak the northern people did not dispute the title of the Ngatiawa to portions of the land to which I have referred; nevertheless, their restless disposition again led them to migrate south, and in this migration the tribe divided, part going by the West Coast and part by the East. The chief of the West-Coast party took with him a tame lizard (kaweau), and, being now lessened in number, this party had to travel more circumspectly, being in the midst of their enemies. The New Zealanders are not more in fear of any known thing in the world than of the lizard, and this tame one effectually became the passport of the West-Coast party from the Hokianga District to Taranaki. The East-Coast party went by water, and landed in the Bay of Plenty, where they, by the same means as above described in the case of the Ngapuhi, took possession of a district which they still retain; while, of the party which returned to Taranaki, some remained there and some crossed Cook Strait and took possession of portions of the South Island. In fact, there is not another tribe in New Zealand which is more separated, and by which more land is claimed. According to the laws of tapu, the Ngatiawa hold to this day undisputed possession of each district in which any portion of their tribe is located; had any of them remained at Ngapuhi, that portion of the district which they might have thought fit to occupy in accordance with the mode in which the whole tribe originally asserted their right to the entire district would have remained in their undisputed possession to this day.

I have now given, as far as my time will allow, a sketch of the laws and customs of the Maoris in respect to their claims to land; but it must be borne in mind that I have spoken of the Maoris of the past: the present Maoris have almost become another race in that respect. Had the rules of their ancestors been kept in every instance where claims to land were in question, I can confidently say there would have been very few disputes such as have taken place since land has become known as a commodity by which the Maori can obtain money. In ancient times the boundaries of each tribal claim were so definitely marked out by the traps made to take the rat that a dispute about a boundary very rarely took place—indeed I may say never except in the portioning out of a conquered district; but since the Maori has not to wander through the forest in search of his daily food, since the old men who were accustomed to take the rat, on their own boundary-line have passed away, and since land has become an article saleable at the option of the owners, not only a deficient knowledge of the exact boundary, but also the desire of each claimant to get the greatest portion of the proceeds of the sale, causes dispute. Moreover, the claims of the more distant relatives have come to be entirely disputed, and not only the claims but even their right of relationship to the ancient owners. It will be seen, therefore, that the acquisition of a perfect knowledge of the existing tribal claims is not an easy matter where there is not the slightest help derivable from documents, where the evidence given is all oral, where the ancient traditions are less and less committed to memory, and where even the memory is frequently misled by the love of gain, and more particularly by the feelings of ancestral pride and the desire to be regarded as important proprietors, feelings which predominate to a greater extent than those of a pecuniary nature.

Upon the whole, if tribal jealousies, emanating from a continual fear of ultimate oppression by foreigners and a desire to retain nationality, are considered, there is no question surrounded with more complications than that of acquiring land from the Natives, and none so likely to involve serious difficulties between the two races which inhabit these Islands; while it is not less certain that no question exists in this country more involved in obscurity, none where more patience and prudence are required, and none where a false step involves more distrust than any interference with the laws and usages of the New Zealanders on the subject of title to land.

PART II.

In reference to the tenure of Maori land, I have intimated that I would continue the subject on the mana of a New Zealand chief and tribal rights. I must therefore revert to the past ages of Maori history, so as to define what is the influence or mana of a chief or priest, and from what derived, and to what extent it is exercised over the people.

The history of the Maoris prior to their migration to New Zealand speaks of their being associated as one people; and certain men of the tribe occupied a portion of their time in rehearsing their history in a temple, which they called whare kura. This temple was filled by their most learned men, of which there were two parties, each being a check on the other in preventing a perverted account of their past history being handed down to their children. And each party had a historical staff on which was kept their genealogy, and, as they occupied each a different side of the temple, they were called a kahui or flock. The most learned man in each kahui was the leader or chairman, who was umpire of all disputed points of history that might occur. When any set debate was to take place the people were arranged in order by the leaders of these two kahuis. Each chief in the kahui had his place assigned to him, according to the amount of knowledge he possessed; and this place was given to him by the leader of the kahui of which he was a member. This act of the leader was called ranga, or putting in order. The people, as they came to the temple in a body, were called tira, or company; and as the leader had to assign, or ranga, a place to each of his tira, he was called the rangatira, from which we derive our word in Maori for chief, rangatira.

In the course of time a quarrel in whare kura caused the people to disperse, and each family became independent of the other under the leadership of an ariki, who in all instances was the first-born of that family, the father of which had enjoyed the privilege of being a priest in whare kura. The knowledge handed down by the father to the son gave that son a certain power over the junior branches of the family; hence he was termed an ariki, from the fact of his superior knowledge. He could (a) lead or drive by that knowledge the junior or riki branches of the family—he therefore was an a-riki, a leader of the juniors.

Shortly after the dispersion of the people from whare kura, each family, under their new leadership, erected temples of similar form and structure in which they rehearsed their own genealogy, or such portion of the whole of that recounted in the old whare kura as related to themselves and those who now took part in the rehearsal of this (to them) formerly sacred lore. They required a teacher, or kai tohu tohu or tohunga; and, as in the former whare kura the most learned man in these matters took the precedence, so also in this the most learned took the leaderships; and as he had to tohu (to point out or instruct), he acquired the name of tohunga, which is now applied to a priest or any educated person. The word tohu has also another meaning, which is to keep or take care of. The whare kura of these separate families had the images of their gods in them, and these were in charge of the person whose knowledge in ancient lore entitled him to the office. From this it was said that he tohu or kept them, and hence the name tohunga. As this was his duty he was not required to work; and, being also the keeper or tohunga of the gods, he was sacred and could not be called on to perform any menial duty. Being the keeper of the gods and having a superior knowledge, of past history and events, he was better enabled to form a correct judgment in respect of anything that was for the welfare of the families whose tohunga he was; hence, also, in the event of war and in all matters relative to agriculture or fishing, the people gave precedence to the opinion of the tohunga. This leads me to the next point—viz., "mana." As I have shown the origin of the names, rangatira, ariki, and tohunga, I will now show what is the mana relative to the peculiar duties of those persons who assume these names. The past history of the Maori informs us that they date their origin from their gods, and that their superstitions are all founded on the co-assistance of these gods with their tohunga, or priest. Hence the tapu of the priest; and as all matters of importance are directed by the gods through the priest, orders or decisions must be implicitly obeyed or whakamana, so that the mana of a priest existed not on account of any natural power of his own, but of the gods. Again, in reference to the ariki, as it was the sole privilege of the first-born to be taught by the father or grandfather, all the knowledge and experience they had acquired must as a natural consequence make him wiser than his juniors. His opinion when given accordingly carries a weight with it, or mana: hence therefore the mana of an ariki.—Again, as the ariki guides by his superior knowledge, and as the tohunga guides by his intimacy with the gods, so there is a proper province for the rangatira. When any meeting takes place of the people—when a war-dance is to be enacted, or any minor point of dispute arises in the tribe—the matter is arranged by the rangatira, so far as to see that order is kept; as, for instance, that the men in the war-dance are all kapa lonu, or in regular lines, and that in a dispute a fair hearing is given to each party.

To show what tribal rights are we must still have recourse to the past history of the Maori prior to his migrating to these Islands. The Maoris who came, although related, were not of one hapu or family, but were, even some time previous to leaving Hawaiki, members of different hapus, quarrels between which were the cause of their migrating. But in Hawaiki each tribe or hapu was called a kahui, and not, as in the present day, by the name of the chief who was the leader of a family when it separated from the main tribe or iwi.

As each waka (canoe), or the people who came together, for some time after they landed maintained their unity as a people, they were called an iwi. The term iwi, therefore, means the descendants of those men who came over in one canoe, and in many cases the name of the iwi has merged in the name of the canoe in which their ancestors came; as, for instance, the Rotorua Tribes are called "Arawa," the Ngapuhi "Mamari," and so on. In my former lecture I stated the boundaries of the lands taken and claimed by each one of the migrations which came to these Islands, and I also gave many of their customs relative to their numerous claims to land. It therefore now remains to show the origin of the iwi being subdivided into hapus. In order to be enabled to point out clearly tribal right and mana of chiefs I must again revert to the land taken by the Maori on his first arriving here, and, as an illustration, I will take two districts, Arawa and Tainui. The Arawa District remains, as a whole, in the hands of the offspring of the same men who came in the "Arawa" canoe. The migration, very shortly after they arrived, dispersed over their large territory and divided into separate hapus (or families, as the word implies), and in course of time each of these hapus has taken the rank of iwi, and acts independently of any other, as though it had been of a distinct migration. Each of these is again subdivided into many hapus, the aggregate body still-keeping the whole of the district formerly taken by the Arawa. But not so the Tainui District. As I have spoken of the Arawa as an unbroken district, I will for contrast take the other extreme, that of Tainui, which district, originally of large extent, is now so curtailed that the only portion now left to the iwi of Tainui is a small portion of it— at Whaingaroa.

As I shall have to speak of all the migrations, I will at once give a general outline of the different migrations or iwis, in reference to their present tribal rights or mana over that district which their respective migrations took on their arrival here. The Ngapuhi have now more land as an iwi than the district taken by the migration of Mamari. So have the adjoining iwi, the Ngatiwhatua. The Tainui have lost all their territory save a small portion. The migration by the Aotea have but a small portion of their ancient district. The adjoining migration of Tokomaru have lost a portion of their ancient district. The old occupants of the South Island have become a mere name on the land of their fathers. The Takitumu still hold all their land. The Matatua, who took part of the Arawa District, have but part of the land first taken by them. The Ruikakara and Wakatuwhenua have lost their name as a migration in the Ngapuhi iwi, and the Mahuhu have lost their claim to the land at the North Cape.

Intermarriage has caused the loss of land to the original owners more than conquest. As more disputes on this point are caused than any other, I will at once enter on the tribal rights which arise from it. I stated in my former lecture that it was thought a point of material importance that a female given in marriage ought, if possible, to induce the husband to join her tribe so as to add to the force of her people; hence portions of land are claimed by certain tribes who reside in and claim part of a migration district, but who do not own any right of mana to be exercised by the offspring of the original migrators in whoso district they are thus located. I will instance some of these claims in each migration, and, for the sake of clearness, I will take the migrations consecutively, from the North Cape along the West Coast and round by the East Coast. There is not an instance of this sort in the Mamari migration, but there are other claims (dissimilar in origin, though in effect the same) which I will presently refer to; and similar claims also exist in the next migration district, that of Mahuhu. In the adjoining migration of Tainui there are many of the class of which I first spoke. In the Kawerau for instance, which tribe had their origin from a chief of the Aotea and Ngatiawa migration of the name of Maki marrying a Tainui woman, he became the avenger of the Tainui wrongs, and after some time the head of a hapu which now forms a distinct people, acting without any reference to the chiefs of hapus in the Tainui or Mahuhu migrations by which they are surrounded. The tribal rights of this little hapu, which does not number in all fifty men, women, and children, are not few or of minor importance to them. In the produce of the land and sea they do not pay tribute to any chief, nor could they be commanded by any adjoining tribe or hapu to assist in any act whatever, nor could a chief go to any of their fishing-grounds without their express permission. In the wars of past times they bore the brunt of the battle by themselves. In an attack made on them about forty-five years since by a Ngapuhi chief named Te Kahakaha, they did not ask the aid of any other tribe, and, although they were beaten, they neither fled from their own land, nor did they ask revenge to be taken for them by the powerful tribes of Waikato. Again, in a war anterior to the one I have just mentioned, they were so determined to hold the land of their fathers that, although few in number and unable to meet their enemy (Ngapuhi) in open fight, they built a pa on long posts in the midst of a deep swamp, and there defied the attacks of their more numerous foes; this was not done so much to baffle their enemy as to keep the mana of their land, as, being few in number, they could have escaped in the forest and mountains of their own district. I will give an instance of the extent to which this little tribe could carry their mana or tribal right, where they permitted an infringement of the customs relative to the dead. It is a custom amongst the hapus of one iwi to bury their dead in the same burial-place, and therefore each has a claim to the wahi tapu, so that any one who may visit or pass near the wahi tapu has, by so doing, incurred the displeasure of all the hapus. No one but a priest of the first rank (an ariki) could go into a wahi tapu, and (at a funeral) those who might be deputed by the ariki to accompany him to convey the corpse. But on one occasion, when I was travelling over the land of the Kawerau in company with thirteen chiefs of Waikato and three of Kawerau, we came to a wahi tapu where the bone of the Kawerau ancestors have been deposited for many generations. By permission of the Kawerau chief I went alone into the cave, in the midst of which there was built a small house of the swamp reed ornamented with flax of variegated colours, in which were the bones of *ariki*s of the tribe. At the doorway of the house, which measured altogether not more than about five by three feet, were the bones of a child, and near them a small canoe; the bones were no doubt those of an ariki child, and the canoe, his plaything, had been taken with him to his long rest. This house contained mats of different degrees of preservation, which I did not touch, and near to a large skull was an ancient Maori shark-hook. On my return to our camp I requested to be allowed to take the canoe and fishing-hook, which the ariki of the Kawerau permitted; the only condition imposed on me being that in our future progress during the journey I should be the last man in the line of march, and should carry the two curiosities myself. This was insisted on, lest the gods of the Kawerau should kill the Waikato chiefs if they followed after me with these things. Again, in the same journey, we caught an uncommonly large eel, measuring six feet nine inches long; and as we were strangers on the Kawerau territory I waited till the eel was cooked, to see if my friends, the Waikato chiefs, would render the tribute of mana of the land to the Kawerau chief. This, in time, was done by them. It is an invariable custom amongst the hapus of tribes, when they are on an eel-fishing excursion, to give any eel of uncommon size to the principal owner of the land, and the heads of all the eels eaten while the party is out are laid before the owners of the land on which the eels are caught; this is their mana of the land, and in this instance, when the eel was cooked, the head was first taken off and laid before the Kawerau chief by one of the Waikato chiefs.

The next hapu or minor iwi in the Tainui District is the Ngatiteata, a hapu of recent date, who have usurped the lands of an old Tainui hapu called Ngatikabukoka. Kahukoka, a Tainui chief, the leader of the Ngatikahukoka, and his people, occupied all the land from the south head of Manukau to the Waikato River; they were a numerous people till the time of Tamakae and Tamakou, who were brothers; the younger brother killed the elder, and the men or the elder murdered a Waikato boy for revenge, whereupon a party of Waikato chiefs came and took thpir pa, killing all in it save their own relations, who were of the Ngatikahukoka Tribe. Those saved, as payment for their rescue, gave a large block of land on the east bank of the Waiuku to their deliverers, the progenitors of the Ngatiteata Tribe. The receiving party, the Waikato, took possession of the given district; and in course of time the present Ngatiteata have taken by force the adjoining lands of the Kahukoka Tribe. Although the Ngatiteata Tribe have their origin from the Waikato ariki Tapaue yet the A Waikato chiefs have no right of mana over the Ngatiteata Tribe or land, as, in the invasion of Hongi against the Waikato, the Ngatiteata joined him in the attack on Matakiki, the Waikato stronghold. And at the present time the only claim the Waikatos make to the lands taken by the Ngatiteata from the Ngatikahukoka is in a wahi tapu near the Manukau Heads, where some of the Waikato chiefs are buried. Yet out of one of the land sales of the Ngatiteata the Waikato chief received a payment, but this was a tribal right arising from an act of the Ngapuhi in the war by Hongi; the chiefs taken at Waikato were killed, and their heads were brought to a spot called Te Kauri (on the south bank of the Manukau), and there whakatahurihuri (a superstitious Maori rite in war); and on these grounds the Waikato people had a claim of tapu, which was paid to them when the land was sold. Save these two claims the Waikatos do not claim any tribal right over the Ngatiteata land.

Again, in the Tainui District, on the Wairoa River, there has been located for a long time a little tribe called Ngatitai, who migrated here from their iwi the Ngatitai, in the Bay of Plenty. This little hapu is related by marriage to the Ngatipaoa, Te Akitai, and Ngatimaru, which are adjoining hapus and iwi but still they exercise the sole mana over the land they claim, nor do they pay tribute for their land to any chief, nor in all the land they have disposed of which they claim by conquest have they given any portion to other chiefs. In the war on Mauineina by the Ngapuhi, the Ngatitai still remained on their own land, and, although many of them were killed there by Hongi, yet when the Ngatipaoa fled to Waikato they maintained their position on the Wairoa. One instance of the maua of their land having been attempted to be infringed was repudiated by them in a manner that nearly led to a Maori quarrel. A canoe of the Ngatimaru having upset in passing in front of the Ngatitai settlement, and one chief being drowned, the Ngatimaru chief called on the Ngatitai to rahui the fishery grounds till he saw fit to take the lapu off. As the shark-fishing season was then begun, the Ngatitai sent a message that they would not catch or allow to be caught, or eat or allow to be eaten, any of the fellows with many teeth [shark] for that season," but they would not abstain from eating all other kind of fish longer than one month. But there was a principle at stake: the Ngatimaru had made a claim to some land over which one of their dead ancestors had been carried (after a battle with the Ngatipaoa) and, as this land was shortly to be paid for, the Ngatitai would not admit any claim by the Ngatimaru. If the rahui of all the fish imposed by Ngatimaru had been allowed by the Ngatitai without restricting it as they did, a money payment would have been exacted for the two claims the Ngatimaru had made when the shark rahui was taken off.

Again, in reference to the tribe which now reside at Orakei, called the Ngatiwhatua (which is a hapu of the great Kaipara Tribe, the Roroa), this hapu does not admit any tribal right to be exercised over it by the Waikato, Tainui, or Ngatipaoa Tribes. This hapti took possession of their district by force of arms from the Tainui and Ngatipaoa Tribes. All the fishing-grounds on the Waitemata River belong to them, and none of the surrounding tribes would attempt to fish on them unless permission were granted by the Ngatiwhatua; nor do they pay any tribute of fish or other thing to the original owners of the district. Although connected by marriage with the Waikato chiefs they still keep a separate and independent control of all their land, and in their numerous sales of land they gave no portion of the payment to the other tribes. This was not merely the case with regard to the original owners of the soil, but they do not even allow the parent tribe at Kaipara to exercise any control over them in reference to the land they claim here. And although, as a portion of the parent tribe, they claim an equal right with the rest of the iwi to the land of the iwi Te Roroa at Kaipara, yet, as the descendants of these men who conquered the Auckland District, they alone claim it to the exclusion of the rest of the Roroa.

The time allotted for a lecture precludes me from noticing each Waikato tribe separately. Although they now occupy what is called the Tainui District, they are not all of Tainui origin, as some of them date their descent from the original people of New Zealand, who were called by the Maori people Ngatiinokotorea. Reserving a further reference to some of them when I shall speak on the mana, I will pass on to the Aotea

District (in which the claims of the original owners have been as much curtailed by migratory movements of chiefs from other parts of New Zealand as by conquest), and to the next district of Tokomaru or the New Plymouth Natives, whose family wars have been carried on with bitter hatred on account of their numerous lines of descent from other migrations. The adjoining migrations of Matahourua, or the Taranaki and Ngatiruanui, have kept more aloof from the rest of the tribes; they are of a more savage disposition than the other people, and may be termed the only New Zealand savages of the present day; they have a slight mixture of the Rangitane people of the South Island, who are more of the Malay than any other, and this may account for their being a savage, yet cowardly people. Their district has been overrun by many war-parties, but (save a portion of the south end) they have kept their original dominion; there are, therefore, very few hapus among them who act independently of the iwi. But in the next migration of Takitumu, there are tribes who act without any reference to the Ngatikahungunu on the east, as they do of the Ngatiruanui on the west. There is in the Port Nicholson District a portion of a Waikato tribe, now called Ngatiraukawa. A quarrel of two brothers near, Maungatautari; in Waikato, was the cause of the tribe coming to open combat, and the beaten portion migrated south and eventually located in their present home: having driven off the portion of the Ngatikahungunu, they exercise the sole right as a tribe over their own district, nor do they allow any tribal right to be exercised over them by any of the Waikato chiefs to whom they are so nearly related. Again, there is the Ngatitōia in the Port Nicholson District, who were originally the owners of Kawhia, but migrated south and took all the Ngatiruanui country, and then resigned the greater portion back to the old owners, but demanded a tribute of tribal right or mana of the land to be given to them by the Ngatiruanui such as kumara and fish, which was invariably done by them to Rauparaha. The Ngatitōia though of Kawhia, do not allow any right of the iwi at Kawhia to be exercised over them, but are in the Port Nicholson District as independent as it is possible to be; on the other hand they not only exercised the tribal right over part of Port Nicholson District, but they invaded the South Island, and brought under tribute the then owners of that Island up to the time it was sold by them. I shall have again to refer to the Ngatitōia on the mana; I will meanwhile pass on to the Horouta, or Hawke's Bay people, who, though one iwi, yet are divided into many hapus acting quite independently of the chiefs of other hapus or iwi. This remark will also apply to the Ngatiporou District or the East Cape Natives, and may perhaps also extend to the Bay of Plenty. Natives; yet there is a shade of difference in some of their hapus, for they are descendants from women who came from the Hawke's Bay and East Cape Natives, and on that account repudiate any claim of tribal mana being exercised over them by the iwi in whose district they reside and of which they claim part. Passing on we come to the Thames tribes, in speaking of whom I shall have to revert to the past, in order to clear up an apparent contradiction. Previous to the arrival of Te Arawa and Tainui in New Zealand, a chief named Ruao followed Te Arawa, in which his wife, who had been taken by the Arawa navigator, Ruao, landed at Maketu, and, having met the Arawa there, after a war between Ruao and Te Arawa navigators, Ruao and party crossed inland to Matamata, and came down the Thames, taking all the land as far as Cape Colville. The Ngatiawa migration followed, and drove the Ngatihuarere, or the Ruao people from the district; and, on the departure of the Ngatiawa northward, Paeko and his followers from Ohiwa took the district. This people also were driven off by the descendants of a woman called Upokotioa, from Turanga, and who divided into the hapus of Te Tuhuke, Ngatihako, Ngatimarama, and Ngatikatarake—the iwi being the Upokotioa. Hotunui, of Kawhia, was the ancestor of Paoa, who migrated back to the Thames and founded the Ngatipaoa Tribe. Marutuahu, the son of Hotunui, was the founder of the Ngatimaru, of which the Ngatitamatera and Ngatiwhanaunga are subdivisions. The Ngatipaoa exercise the sole tribal right over their own land in the Thames, without reference to the Waikato or any other tribe; so also the subdivisions Ngatitamatera and Ngatiwhanaunga are each as independent in tribal rights of their own land from each other as they are of the Ngatipaoa.

As I have given the tribal rights of each iwi, I will now show the tribal rights of the people in respect of individual claims to land, and as a matter of course enter on those of the head chiefs first, and will again take the same line of route in each iwi as I did in the tribal rights of the iwi, and commence therefore with Ngapuhi, going round by the West Coast. The Ngapuhi, or the Natives of the north end of the Island, are, from their longer intercourse with Europeans, said to be the least like their own countrymen in reference to tribal rights of great or minor chiefs; but the very fact of their having sold more land (so far as the number of claims is concerned, these claims being so isolated and sold by so many different hapus) is the best test we can have of the seigniorial rights of first-rank chiefs over the whole tribe, or even over a section of a tribe or hapu. The Natives at the North Cape, or the Rarawa and Aupouri Tribes, are a branch of the Mamari or Ngapuhi people, and are guided by the old chief Morenga; yet in all land sales this old chief had not participated in the slightest degree, but a chief of minor importance in the same tribe (Panakareao) sold largely, even when the old chief Te Morenga was in full power. This, however, only applies to the Rarawa at Kaitia, as there was another section of this tribe at the Whangape, led by Te Pukeroa and Papahia, the former of whom did not sell an inch of land, and Papahia only participated in two sales out of many which his tribe made. Again, in Hokianga there is another section of this tribe, of which Moetara was the chief; he sold two blocks, though not as chief of the tribe, as he was but a claimant of a small portion of each of the pieces sold. These chiefs (although of the same tribe or iwi) did not exercise any right over each other's land, for the land in the district in which each lived was under their own control. On the sale of a certain piece of land at Kaitaia, in which Papahia of Hokianga was a claimant, he received a small portion of the payment, yet the other chiefs of the tribe at Hokianga did not. Again, in the sales by Moetara, Papahia and the others did not receive any payment, but in one of the sales by Papahia, Maetara, as a claimant, received a payment. The Hikutu Tribe is also a hapu of the Ngapuhi, whose ariki is Moehau. Out of all the sales of land by this hapu, Moehau received part payment for only one, while in some of the sales minor chiefs of the Barawa were claimants and received part of the payment. Again, the Ngaitupoto (the ariki of which was Whatia) sold land in which Tawhai, the chief of Te Mahurehure, had a claim, and received a portion of the payment; yet the ariki of Te Malmrehnre (Moka) did not participate. Again, a number of Mahurehure (of which Tawhai is chief) had claims not only in the district in which they lived, but in other districts (to the exclusion of their leader, Tawhai, and many of the other chiefs), who sold these claims and received the whole of the price themselves. But in one of the land sales by the Rarawa (or that portion or hapu of it called Te Patu), when they sold a piece of land at Mangomiri, the chief Tawhai, of Hokianga, being a claimant, received part of the payment. Again, the hapu Te Urekapana sold a piece of land in their own district, and a minor chief of the Mahurehure, called Tiro, being a claimant, received part of the price; yet not any of the chiefs or ariki of Te Mahurehure received any payment. Again, the Ngaitupoto sold some land in their own district, and a chief in the Popoto Tribe, Tahua, received part of the price as claimant, but not as ariki. Again, in the Waimate District, the Ngatitautahi sold land, and a minor chief of the Ngatikaihoru, a hapu of the Mahurehure, called Netana, received as claimant a portion of the price; and also; when the Ngatimatakiri, in the Waimate District, sold land, the ariki of the Popoto, as claimant, received a portion of the price, but not any other of the tribe. Again, the Tahawai of Whangaroa sold a piece of land, and, the ariki of the Hikutu at the Bay of Islands, being a claimant, received part of the price. Again, the Ngatiuru of Whangaroa sold land, and chiefs of the Ngatirehia and Hikutu of the Bay, as claimants, received part of the price, but not the arikis of those hapus. Again, the Ngaitawake sold land in the Bay, and Wi Hau, of the Ngatiwhiu (at Waiiate), as claimant, received a part of the payment. Again, the Hikutu at Ngunguru sold land, and chiefs of the Ngatihau in Hokianga, as claimants, received a portion of the price. Again, the Urikopura hapu live in their own district on the borders of the Patu District; yet five of the minor chiefs of the Urikopura sold a block of land which was situated in the middle of the district of the Mahurehure, and not the slightest part of the payment was given to the ariki of their own tribe, or to the Mahurehure ariki or people. These will suffice as examples out of the Ngapuhi iwi to show that the head chief or ariki of the Ngapuhi does not possess any manorial right over the land of the iwi. It will be apparent to all that not only the ariki of the Ngapuhi iwi has no veto on the disposal of land, but even the ariki of any of the hapus do not possess that right; for in the examples I have given there is proof enough to show that the members of a hapu dispose of land without the slightest reference to other members of their hapu, and that members of different hapus join and dispose of land as though they were of the same hapu. And not only so, but it will further be seen that in many instances minor chiefs have received a portion of the payment for land disposed of by members of another hapu when the ariki of the hapu of the receiver has not, and also that the minor chiefs of a distant hapu have the power to dispose of land belonging to them which is situated in the midst of land belonging to another hapu, without any permission on the part of their own ariki or the ariki of the hapu in whose district the land is situated. But I will pass on to the Kaipara District (the Mahuhu migration), in which until of late years there has been very little land disposed of to Europeans. I would here remark that it is believed by many that Maori intercourse with Europeans has materially altered their ancient manners and customs, and especially so in reference to the power of chiefs and the customs relative to land; but how such an idea should have taken possession of the public mind is a matter of wonder if we look into the history of the people and their wars which related so often to only one point—namely, the right to land. The history of their claims and their daily occupation causing them to rove over their whole territory, their having no written records, their minds being imbued with the feats of their fathers in protecting their lands,—made it impossible for any communication with the Europeans, before 1840, to cause any alteration in their customs relative to their ancient tenure of land. I have, therefore, selected all my examples from sales by Natives before the Government took possession of New Zealand, so that it will be seen the idea to which I have referred cannot be fairly deduced from the cases given. The chief Paikea is the ariki of the Roroa or Uriohau Tribe, in the Kaipara District; yet he is a witness (not a principal) in the sale of a piece of land by Ngaukora, a minor chief of the tribe. Again, in the district over which Paikea is ariki, and even within four miles of his principal residence, Parore and other minor chiefs of a distant tribe; (the Ngaitawake) sold a piece of land, in the payment for which Paikea and tribe did not participate; and not only so, but Tirarau, the ariki of the Ngaitawake hapu, at Kaipara, was witness to the sale, the sellers being minor chiefs of his tribe. In another instance the two arikis, Paikea and Tirarau, were the sole sellers of a piece of land. Again, in another instance, Pa<sup><?></sup>ea sold a piece of land when Tirarau was witness to the sale.

I will now pass on to the next subject—viz., "mana." But before I speak on this it will be as well to define the meaning of this word by examples of its use. Mana has many and Various meanings. For instance, it means "fulfil," as in this sentence: Ka mana taku kupu i au (I will fulfil my word); and it means potent, as he karakia mana (a potent charm); and it also means effective, as He kupu mana tana kupu (His word is effective); it also means granted, as Ekore to tonu e whakainana (Your request will not be granted); it also means support, as Ma waiemana ai tau kupu? (Who will support you that your word may be effective?). There is also another form which the word mana takes when it is joined by the preposition ki (to), forming the word manaki. I will give the meaning of this word with examples of its use: for instance, it means acceptable, as E kore ahau e manakitia mai e ratou (I shall not be acceptable to them); and it means 'like, as E kore a ia e manaki mai ki au (He will riot like me). Again, the word mana takes another form if the preposition ko (to) is joined to it as an affix, when it means desire, as Kaltore aku inanako atu (I have no desire); and again, if the word tunga (which means of itself a secret gift, the purport of which or for which it was given is only known to the receiver) be made as an affix to the word mana, we have manatunga, or keepsake; then again, if the noun of space be added to it as an affix, that is wa, we have manawa, or breath; and again, when the adjective nui (large) is added it becomes manawanui, or bravery; and if we add the verb popore to the Maori word for breath, we have manawa-popore, which is greediness, desire, regret, or anxiety. It will be seen, therefore, that mana expresses in its many shades of meaning nothing more nor less than the unseen determination of that uncontrolled something, the human mind. I will now refer to the mana of a chief or priest.

The mana of a Maori priest is circumscribed, and only extends to those matters in which the interference of the gods may be recognized, as in the many internal arrangements of the tribe in times of war or in specific acts of agriculture. In war (when the tribe has determined for hostilities) the mana of the priest is seen in every movement of the tribe being guided by him; this does not only include his own tribe or hapu, of which he may be a member, but includes all men of other tribes who may join them; but his mandates are only obeyed while the war lasts. I will give an instance or two: In the wars of Hongi, whenever Hongi wished his army to halt, he signified such wish to the old priest of his expedition, To Kemara, who thereupon sent a man forward to a certain point, where he was to deposit the priest's garment, as the signal to halt, and in no instance was the signal disobeyed. In the wars of Te Waka Nene, an old priest, Te Ngau, guided all the movements. In one instance Waka's people were short of food, when it was determined to send out a foraging party to obtain some from the enemy. In such an expedition deeds of valour could be shown in taking the food from the enemy, out of or near their camp. On this, account all the people longed to join, in the party; but the old priest having retired into the scrub near the pa for a short time to consult the omens by the Niu, he returned and named those who should go: this command was obeyed, and, although dissatisfaction appeared in the countenances of those who were prohibited, yet the priest's word was mana, and no murmur was expressed. I have said the priest's word was mana where that to which it referred would allow the influence of the gods to be inferred, but the opposite applied if the express wish of the priest, and not an omen of the gods, was given in his command. An instance will show this: the ariki and priest of Ngatiawa at Taranaki, on the eve of a battle between that tribe and the Taranaki Tribe, uttered a contemptuous expression against a hapu of his own people, which was, "Who ever thought that men who fish with a rod could be brave in battle?" (This priest, Te Rakino, uttered it to the hapu of which Korotiwaha, was chief.) When the battle did take place and was raging, in the height of the battle, Korotiwaha held up his spear and called out to his hapu, "My sons, the sign of blood," at which signal they all withdrew from the combat, and Te Rakino and his party were routed by the Taranaki, when Korotiwaha turned the fortune of the day by attacking again and gaining a victory. This will show that the mana of a priest is only so far as he is the medium of communication between the gods and the tribe. This has reference to his mana in times of war; but, as the priest is also ariki by birth, he also exercises certain mana as before stated in particular times. In agricultural pursuits, for instance, it is his prerogative to say at what time the tapu shall commence (when the crops are to be put in the ground), and when it shall be taken off when a canoe is allowed to pass up or down the river in the vicinity of which the tribe are cultivating, and how long this prohibition shall last; it is also at his intercession that the gods allow the tapu to be taken off any person who may have touched a corpse. His food, raiment, house, and all belonging to him are sacred, or tapu, and his mana is inherent in them; that is, if touched by any common person, that mana or influence of the gods (as expressed in the word mana as applied to them) will cause death to that person. It is, therefore, the influence of the gods, or the superstitious dread in which they were held by the people, and not human influence, that gave the mana to a priest; which I will further illustrate by following on to the mana of the ariki or chief, in the concerns of every-day life. First, hereditary mana, its extent, and by what curtailed; secondly, the dictatorship of a tribe, assumed by a minor chief of the tribe or even a member of another tribe, by what means gained, and to what extent allowed by the tribe. The mana of an ariki or chief was not in any instance disputed by his own people or adjoining tribes, when exercised for particular purposes. It was in his power as ariki to say when the prohibition for fishing for shark should be taken off. He was also allowed to decide when the rat snaring season should commence. He had also power to decide when and where a corpse should be buried, when that corpse should be exhumed and exhibited to the people, previous to its final interment, and also where it should have its final resting place. As there is a great deal of labour connected with the ceremonies over the dead, such as providing food for those tribes invited to the hahunga, it may be supposed that the, ariki is supreme ruler of the people, and his word is law for the ceremonies of the dead. As the gods are in more immediate connection with the dead and the ceremonies over them, it is supposed that, if the superstitious rites of the Maori are not fully carried out according to ancient custom, the gods will curse the tribe, so that the ariki is not obeyed on account of his own influence. An ariki also may covet any article belonging to another person, and upon his calling it by the name of any part of his own body the owner is forced to make him a present of such thing; still, this is not done in honour of his own rank, but on account of his connection with the gods, as the naming of that article after part of his body (his body being the abode of the gods) prevents the owner from keeping it for fear of them, since no one but the ariki thus naming it could by any possible means use or cause to be used the article without incurring the displeasure of the gods. Not that such an act ends as a gift; if the ariki does not repay to the owner, or his offspring after him, a two fold price, he is looked on with disgust by the people, and thereby loses any personal influence which he may have. This leads me to the next point—namely, to show by what means a chief may lose his personal power. The foregoing will show that covetousness will militate against him so will neglect to entertain visitors, or an over-austere manner to his slaves, or a bad memory in respect of past history and mythology; but that which inevitably excludes an ariki from any power over his people is want of intellect; If a chief or ariki should be loquacious or bombastic, he is thought little of by his people; hence a studied silence is the rule of a chief. In no instance will a tribe be led by or listen to the counsel of an ariki of the ablest mind if he takes that which is not his own; but still his mana on other points holds good against all these obstructions: for instance, in a case where war exists between two tribes with which such an ariki may be related, by his intercession with each he can bring about a peace. Still it is not personal mana that does this; his being related to them is the introduction to pave the way for peace and as an ariki he carries the influence of the gods with him. This, of course, is not the only ingredient in the matter; but as the Maori people do not delight in war (though when once in it they are so proud that they cannot think of wishing or offering terms of peace), an ariki related to each of the contending parties may offer terms of peace to each without insulting their Maori honour; thus, therefore, is the mana of an ariki admitted, but still not on personal power or influence.

It will appear, then, that any influence which may be exercised by an ariki or chief is allowed by the people, and not assumed by right of birth; this I will illustrate by a few examples. I must however, state that in times of peace an ariki does not appear to be anything more in the tribe than the minor chiefs, save that he eats alone, and that the house in which he sleeps must not be polluted by food being taken into it, nor the fire at which he sits he used for cooking, for fear of the gods. He cultivates with his people if he is so inclined; but as a general rule he is merely the overseer of the work, receiving at the harvest a portion of the crop. This last remark must not lead any to suppose that the crops of a minor tribe or hapu are not common property, for the produce of a hapu is stored all together, and the food cooked at a settlement is a common meal at which all the hapu partake then as such, the ariki receives his portion when cooked. But in cases of dispute in the tribe a minor chief may set at defiance the opinion of the ariki. and act as seems to him good. An instance of this occurred where a minor chief had a dispute with another member of the tribe belonging to Waka Nene. The minor chief, Ngahu, having taken a horse from his opponent, Waka interfered, and sent a man to bring the horse back; but the messenger was insulted by being asked what Waka had to do in the matter. Waka knew he could not use force, and therefore as ariki he sent his own horse to Ngahu, saying that if it was really a desire on the part of Ngahu to have a horse, and that he had merely taken the opportunity in that dispute to obtain one, he wished him to send the man's horse back and take his. This could not be done by Ngahu, as the message implied insult; and, Ngahu's pride being hurt, he sent the two horses back. In order to show that the ariki, or chief does not possess an imperative power over his tribe, I will illustrate it by an ancient custom. In olden times, in times of war, when an attack was expected by any section of a tribe and the aid of other portions of the tribe was needed, the ariki did not send a command, but conveyed his wish by a token called ngakau, which token varied according to the danger then impending; also, if a hapu or section of a tribe intended to take vengeance for an old insult, a token was sent to gain the assistance of other sections of the tribe. It was not a command. The token was sent without a message, and it was received without a question being put by the chief to whom it was sent; it was therefore optional on the part of the receiver to attend to the summons thus implied or not. An instance occurred about the year 1838 when a Maori war was raging in the Bay of Islands, in which Kawiti, ariki of the Ngatihine, took part; he sent a ngakau to Mate, a chief of the same tribe then residing at Kaipara, but the request was not complied with. If it had been (as some suppose) that a chief is supreme in his tribe, such a custom as I have given could never have been practised for generations. The custom itself is a sufficient refutation of the assumption that the chief has a manorial right over his tribe. But it may be said that this is an isolated case: I will, therefore, give another, where not only the hapus of a tribe were concerned, but where the whole tribe and all the chiefs of the tribe were concerned in the refusal, to accede to the request of the ariki. I have before said that an ariki of a tribe (being priest) is supreme ruler in times of war, when his orders are admitted by the people to carry an appearance of an order from the gods; but in the attack on the stronghold of the Thames tribe (Ngatipaoa) about the year 1822 by the whole of the Ngapuhi iwi, led by Hongi, there arose a dispute as to how the pa was to be attacked, which eventually caused a separation of the Ngapuhi; four or five of the hapus retired, and would not join in the attack on this place, but joined after the battle, and assisted in all the further attacks made on the Waikato.

I have said that the dictatorship of a tribe may be assumed by a minor chief of a tribe, or even by a member of another tribe. Although the Natives allow a great influence and even pay a great respect to the offspring of their aristocracy, yet, if this power is unaccompanied by intellect and bravery, the ariki of a tribe or chief of a hapu may be supplanted by an inferior chief; as in the case of the ariki of the Ngatiraukawa, who was succeeded by Te Rauparaha. Te Rauparaha was not a chief of rank—that is, he was the offspring of a junior branch of the ariki, family of Tainui, and by intermarriage of his progenitors with minor chiefs and women of other tribes he held no influence by birth; but when the principal chief of the Ngatiraukawa (Hape ki Tuarangi) was on his deathbed, and the whole tribe were assembled, the old chief (who had been a noted warrior in his day) asked if his successor could tread in his steps and lead his people on to victory, and so keep up the honour of the tribe. This question was put to all his sons, but no reply was given; when Te Rauparaha got up from the midst of the minor chiefs and people who were sitting at a distance from the sick chief and the chiefs of high rank, and said, "I am able to tread in your steps, and even do that which you could not do." As he was the only speaker in answer to Te Hape's question, the whole tribe acknowledged him as their leader: hence his influence to his dying day. Te Parana was a man of superior powers of mind as a Native, and as a leader of a war party was not even surpassed by the noted Hongi; but let it not be supposed that by gaining a certain influence or mana by his superior powers of mind he had the power to make anything tapu; his niana only went so far as his protecting power and, counsel were required; the Ngatiraukawa ariki and the Ngatitoa ariki still retained the power of making or taking the tapu off anything, as I will again instance in an ariki of a hapu of Ngapuhi, whose name was Manu. He was ariki of the Ngatikaihoru, but being a thief he lost all influence over his people except that of tapu: his nephew (his sister's son) took the leadership of the hapu. But it so occurred that a certain piece of land was required by the hapu on which to cultivate; a decision was given by, the then leader; but he could not go beyond his wish, and it could not be occupied till it had been made noa, or the tapu taken off by an ariki. Manu, being the ariki, objected, but at the combined request of his hapu he removed the tapu by incantations, and the land was occupied by the people. This example speaks for itself in a twofold way: not only can the people transfer their allegiance to a person not an ariki by birth, but they can compel by united request their own ariki to do that to which he is opposed. The word "chief," as understood by Europeans, leads to false conclusions in reference to the application of that name to a New Zealander, or (to put it in another way) Europeans expect more to be done by chiefs of Maori tribes than even these admit themselves to possess. I may confidently say there never was, nor is now, a chief in New Zealand who can order any one in his tribe (slaves excepted). The members of a tribe do resist orders given by a chief with impunity. I may say, further, there is not any chief or ariki of a tribe, or even all the chiefs and *ariki*s of any iwi together, who can collectively give a guarantee that they will make their iwi, or any hapu in it, act up to any terms they (the chiefs) may agree to. I do not wish to tamper with the rank or influence of a Maori chief, but let facts speak for themselves. When Heke had, for the first time, cut the flagstaff down at Kororareka, and troops (though a few) had been sent from Sydney, and when the Governor had gone to the North to within seven miles of Heke's home, the *ariki*s of the Ngapuhi hapus laid a number of guns at the feet of His Excellency as tokens, and entered into a contract that Heke should not cause any more disturbance. Although these chiefs were the greatest men of Ngapuhi, Waka, Rewa, Tareha, and others, and Heke was only a minor chief, yet he in defiance of them all cut the flagstaff down again, and burnt the Town of Kororareka. A Maori chief, when he promises anything in the name of his tribe, invariably implies the proviso that he promises for as many only of his tribe as will listen to him; and when he promises anything for his individual self, he has a proviso in his own mind (when he is reminded of his contract) which he makes known in this way, "O, my love to my relatives, who condemned me for my act, made me think as they do." And if reprimanded for not conveying the news of his change of mind at a sooner date, his answer is, "I thought it would be the same if you did not know of it."

I said that a member of another tribe may assume the dictatorship of a hapu of an iwi not his own. As my time is limited one example must suffice. In the war of Hongi with the Rotorua he took many slaves, and at a recent time a young man named PiriHongi (of no note even amongst his own people as a chief of birth) paid a visit to some of his relatives who were taken slaves by Hongi. Being of an intelligent mind he eventually became, and is now, the leader of one of the Ngapuhi hapus at the Waimate, to whom many of the *ariki*s and chiefs of Ngapuhi apply when they want the advice and assistance of the hapu of which he is now the leader.—[By Mr. John White: Lectures on Maori Customs, No. 2. 1861.]

Schedule.

Memorandum by His Excellency the Governor.

Government House, Auckland, 12th March, 1861.

- THE possibility of establishing a Court for the settlement of disputed claims to land (over which the Native title has not been extinguished), whether between Maoris themselves or between the Government and Maoris, is a subject to which the Governor desires to call the special attention of Ministers. If it is possible to devise any plan which is likely to be practically useful he thinks it should be embodied in a Bill, and should be referred to in the Governor's Speech on opening the next session of the Assembly.
- The Governor thinks that arrangements should be made to separate the office of Land Purchase Commissioner from that of Native Secretary.

T. GORE BROWNE.

Memorandum by Mr. Stafford.

If such a Court as the Governor suggests could be established, and the Natives be induced to refer disputes with respect to their land claims to its arbitrament, the result would be most beneficial. It is to be feared that the greatest difficulty would be found to arise from the indisposition of the more powerful chiefs to submit to decisions adverse to their pretensions. The constitution of such a Court requires consideration. Referred to the Minister for Native Affairs, and the Attorney-General, with that object. The separation of the offices referred to in the last paragraph of this memorandum can be carried out at once, and the doing so will be in accordance with a resolution of the House of Representatives last session.—E. W. Stafford.

MEMORANDUM by Mr. WHITAKER.

This appears to me to be a question for the Native Council. I think it would be wrong to take so important a step just before its establishment as the constitution of such a Court as that referred to, the result of, which, under any circumstances doubtful, will much depend on the details.—Fredk. Whitaker. 23rd April, 1861.

MEMORANDUM by Mr. WELD.

I see no difficulty in the establishment of a Court of Appeal on land questions, if the Assembly will grant the necessary funds. I should commence by establishing a Court of Appeal, consisting of a Commissioner and two Native chiefs, at good salaries. The Court would necessarily, be peripatetic, and I would strengthen it by the assistance of Native Assessors whose local influence and knowledge would be of much value. I think that the jurisdiction of the Court should at first be confined to hearing appeals from the decisions of the Land Purchase Commissioner, and to the settlement of such land questions as may be referred to it by the consent of both parties. I am not at the present moment disposed to attempt more than this. I think that the immediate establishment of such a Court would throw open the way for the establishment of Courts with larger jurisdiction; but, before we give a Court power to deal with all land, questions, we must be in a position to enforce its decrees in all cases, or at least the Natives must have time to learn to appreciate the advantages of such a tribunal, and to give it their full confidence and support. Until we see some prospect of such a result—either from the well working of such a Court as I propose or from some desire expressed by the almost universal and decidedly expressed wish of the Natives themselves (who should be invited to discuss the subject at the next conference)—I think we should be ill advised to go beyond a Court of Appeal and reference. I concur with the Attorney-General in thinking that this subject is one that the Native Council (if established) should consider and advise upon, but in any case the next session should not be allowed to pass over with out action on this matter. The details need not be finally arranged at present, but the subject might be alluded to in the Governor's Speech at the opening of the session, in connection with a grant of money, which I believe to be imperatively necessary for this and other Native purposes, and which I believe it will be the duty of Ministers to propose next session.

In reference to the separation of the office, of Land Purchase Commissioner from that of Native Secretary I have already expressed my strong desire that it should be done as soon as possible. Some time ago I requested the Native Secretary to furnish me with all the information that might be necessary to aid in the reorganization of the department. The urgent duties on which he has been since employed, involving his absence from Auckland, have alone prevented steps having been taken in that direction; but, at the same time, I do not see how anything can be effectively carried out until the establishment of the Native Council is authorized by the Home Government, or at least until their answer is received on the subject. As soon as that is received, the reorganization of the whole department should be proceeded with with the least possible delay. I trust it may yet be effected before the Assembly meets.—Fredk. A. Weld. 24th April, 1861.

No. 2.[Extract from New Zealand Gazette.]F.D. Fenton, Esq., appointed Chief Judge of Native Land Court.

Native Office, Auckland, 9th January, 1865.

His Excellency the Governor has been pleased to appoint Francis Dart Fenton, Esquire, to be the Chief Judge of the Court established under "The Native Lands Act, 1862."

WALTER MANTELL.

No. 3.[Extract from New Zealand Gazette.]

Judges of Native Land Court appointed. Native Office, Auckland, 9th January, 1865.

His Excellency the Governor has been pleased to appoint John Rogan, Esquire, and George Clarke, Esquire, to be Judges of the Court established under "The Native Lands Act, 1862."

Walter Mantell.

No. 4.[Extract from New Zealand Gazette.]

Judges of Native Land Court appointed. Native Minister's Department, Wellington, 11th February, 1865.

His Excellency the Governor has been pleased to appoint James Mackay, the younger, Esquire, and William Bertram White, Esquire, to be Judges of the Court established under "The Native Lands Act, 1862."

Sir WILLIAM MARTIN to the Hon. the NATIVE MINISTER.

Auckland, 18th July, 1865.

SIR,—

I have the honour to report to you that the notes I undertook to prepare on the best mode of working the Native Lands Act are now completed and in print. Some copies are forwarded by to-day's mail; the residue will be sent by the next. In these notes I have endeavoured to set forth the several parts of the system to be pursued in their ordinary relation to one another, confining myself to questions of a political kind. Therefore I have contented myself with pointing out that, for the success of this undertaking, we require first of all a state of rest and peace, without inquiring how rest and peace are to be attained. But knowing your desire to bring the Act into operation, and considering the benefits which may be expected to accrue to both races from its success, I have been led to reflect seriously on the way in which the pacification of the country may be effected.

I now beg leave to offer for your consideration a few words on this point as a sort of postscript to the notes, praying that the paramount importance of the subject may be my excuse. It is my conviction that the course of proceeding devised in 1863 is not the best for the purpose. We ought not to be surprised if it be found that measures, adopted in a season of excitement and panic, do not approve themselves now, after a fuller consideration and a longer experience.

The necessities which press upon us at this time are the following: It is necessary to quiet the minds of the Natives, many of whom, in different parts of the country, apprehend that the part they have taken may expose them some day to serious consequences, and therefore seem to have no interest in the restoration of peace. Also, it is necessary to get rid of the grievous burdens which must continue to be borne by ourselves so long as we are holding possession of land by mere force, and many of the former occupants are sitting by, saying (as it was expressed at Hanganiki) "neither Yea nor Nay" to our doings. Further, it is necessary that the attempt of the Natives to set up a separate and independent Government for themselves be seen to have failed so signally as to leave no temptation to repeat the experiment.

Now, Sir, to my mind, the only direct and sure mode of reaching all these results is by the way of an open and express cession of land, accompanied on our part by an amnesty large enough to include at any rate all persons who have committed no offence against us beyond that of bearing arms in the war. A piece of territory being once so ceded, no hope or thought of recovering possession of it at some future time will be entertained by the hostile Natives. By the abandonment of a delusive hope their own minds will be so far set at rest. Thenceforward our possession will be undisturbed, and a great and continued outlay, which we must otherwise incur, will become unnecessary. As to the Maori King and the hostile tribes, the most manifest proof of failure will be such a cession. To have to retire before the large force which we have had in the field against them may not be regarded by themselves or other tribes as a complete defeat; but to be constrained to cede land in the centre of the King's territory, and publicly to cut themselves off from all hope of recovering it, would be an undeniable proof of defeat and failure. I remember how strongly the need of such an amnesty (or murunga hara, as they call it) was felt, and how the subject was discussed in Waikato, after the cessation of the former hostilities. There is ground for hope that a like feeling may be taken advantage of for granting the land, and that, through the intervention of friendly chiefs, a settlement such as I have here suggested may be brought about for the real interests of all.

I have, &c.,

WM. MARTIN.

The Hon. the Native Minister.

NOTES. on the Best Mode of Introducing and Working the NATIVE LANDS ACT.

IN compliance with requests made to me by the Hon. the Native Minister and the Hon. the Attorney-General, I have put together the following notes on the best mode of introducing and working the Native Lands Act so as to render the Act most effective for its purpose, and most conducive in its effects to the peaceable settlement of this Island:

Though I have done my best to keep these remarks within compass, yet they have unavoidably run to some length. In fact, by the course of events and by repeated discussion during the last few years, the several parts of the Native problem, and their mutual relations and connections, have become more manifest, and the order in which they may be attempted with best prospect of success more apparent. This has rendered it necessary for me to touch on nearly every part of the work to be done, in order that each part may be seen in its proper place and its due proportions. If some of the proposals herein made appear at first sight inadmissible, I only ask for a patient hearing and serious consideration. For the views here expressed have been formed not lightly or rapidly, but after long-continued observation, and by the aid of light drawn from every available source, and after much conference with persons of various classes and of different ways of thinking on these subjects.

I regard this Act as the turning-point in our work. If it can be brought into smooth and safe operation, and be made acceptable at the outset of our proceedings, it will powerfully attract the Natives to our system, and give us the means of gradually and quietly introducing that system into all parts of the country.

- 1. For this end the greatest care and forethought are required, not only because the work is in itself complicated and difficult, but also because we have to overcome great obstacles. We have to commend our measures to a population in which there exists a wide-spread and deep distrust of the Government. There are, it is true, many amongst the Natives who are attached to us, and who are convinced that in union with us and conformity to our usages lies the only hope of their race. Yet even these are perplexed and harassed by the contrarieties of our so-called policies, by the divisions of our political parties, and by the language of our newspapers. We do not readily estimate the effect of these things on the minds of men keen and shrewd, yet ignorant and ill-informed, and at the same time well aware how vitally their own interests may be affected by them. Another large portion of the population is demoralized, sore of heart and almost desperate, driven half mad by losses and sufferings, by uncertainties and fears. Everywhere the land needs rest.

Time is needed not only for the settling-down of men's minds, but also for the preparation and revision of our own plans; for the success of this measure must depend entirely on the manner of working it. It might be so worked as even to complicate our difficulties and diminish our influence. The solicitations and the keen competition of land-buyers, working secretly and sometimes unscrupulously against each other, might, unless checked by proper regulations, raise up again, even in an aggravated form, a general irritation and opposition, such as were produced by the old system. Our one hope of success lies in our proceeding on a very limited scale and in a very measured way in the outset, and in our mode of proceeding being so framed as to exclude to the utmost all sources of irritation, and to produce by the most facile mode a clearly advantageous result. Considering that we have to construct and test our mode of proceeding as we go on, and to ascertain by experience many things which no forethought can suggest or devise; considering also the extreme difficulty of finding agents fit for this work, it is evidently necessary to begin our work on a very limited scale and in some district which is well prepared to receive our operations. We may be quite sure that, in working in such a district and in appearance for that district only, we shall be really working under the eyes of all. Our operations will be keenly watched by the Natives in all parts, and the benefits or disadvantages carefully noted and discussed everywhere. On the other hand, to keep a number of operations going on at the same time, and that with inferior instruments, would be to increase unnecessarily the chances of error and failure. If our work shall be successful in a single district, and our system be seen to yield real and substantial benefit to those who come within it, that system will readily find acceptance elsewhere, and in due time spread itself through the country.

The Certificate.

- 2. The principle of the Native Lands Act is to make the certificate of the Land Court the primary evidence of title and the basis of all our dealings with the land: a principle which appears to me sound, and even necessary, as the only mode of avoiding great difficulties. The requiring of such a certificate can be no cause of suspicion, because every man sees that, for the peace of the land and as a safeguard against fraud, some public inquiry and some certificate to show the results of the inquiry are necessary. To require a certificate which asserts, on the authority of a Native Court, that a certain block of land, properly identified and delineated thereon, belongs to certain Natives enumerated therein, and to require and connect therewith an actual survey and marking-out of the land, will be seen to be a reasonable and necessary precaution for the good of all—a needful security against mischief between the races, and even war. We know that the offer of a Crown grant for their land is apt to be regarded by the Natives with suspicion, and declined as seeming to involve an admission that their title to their lands is defective, or that it depends on the pakeha rather than on their own forefathers.

Another and a weighty reason for preferring the certificate is that a Crown grant would at once bring with it our English law of real property, our canons of descent, as well as a large body of rules not understood or even heard of before; and so would cast upon the Natives a burden which would be to them intolerable. We must be on our guard lest we discredit Crown grants, so as even to render it impossible to induce Natives to accept them; which we certainly shall do if we introduce them as a means of security and protection, and if afterwards a crop of questions and disputes shall grow up, not to be settled except by reference to the Supreme Court—that is to say, to a tribunal which to the great body of the Natives is, by reason of distance, cost, and their own ignorance of our procedure and our language, practically inaccessible. Mr. Dillon Bell, in moving the second reading of the Native Lands Bill, clearly pointed out the nature of this difficulty, and the necessity for propounding for the Native districts a body of rules touching interests in land and the transfer and devolution of them, which should be substantially English, but adapted and simplified. I believe the remedy proposed by Mr. Bell to be perfectly practicable; but, until we are in a condition to propound such rules and to set up local and accessible Courts to interpret and administer them, I think it is absolutely necessary to avoid all these sources of difficulty and to keep within safe limits. The certificate will give us all that in the first instance we need, for the first thing is to mark out the boundaries of separate pieces of property and to register the owners thereof, to gather those owners into groups, and to bring them as groups into legal action. This is the first step. The individualization (of which much has been said) is a further step, for which every facility ought to be given, but for which there is no reason why we should wait, as the members of the several groups of owners may join in letting or selling the land. Much of the soil of England was at one time in a similar condition.

Selling and Letting.

- 3. The certificate of title, a document created by an Act of the Assembly, will confer on the holders of it such powers as the Assembly may think fit to give, and none other. Those powers should be, in the beginning, the power of letting land for a term not exceeding twenty one years, and the power of sale. To make the exercise of those powers safe it should be enacted that all contracts for letting should be entered into, and the lease in every case be executed, by the parties in the presence of a Civil Commissioner or of a Resident Magistrate, who shall attest the same, and should certify that the lease and a certified copy in Maori had been read over to both parties in his presence, and that both parties understood the same. The rent should be made payable to some person or persons named in the lease, so that no inconvenience should arise to the lessee from the number of the lessors. In case of the death of any of them, the lessee would have nothing to do with any question which might arise as to the division of the rent amongst the persons entitled thereto according to Native custom. That question would be settled by the Resident Magistrate, on the finding of a Maori jury, after the manner of a copyhold Court. It would be convenient for the officers concerned in this business that all such leases should be computed and made to run from fixed quarterly days, so that the rents may fall due at the same time.

At present there is often found a considerable disposition to let lands where there is no great willingness to sell. And the letting of lands will of itself, if properly managed, quietly and effectually open the country and prepare the way for sale. For it will put us in possession of a survey of the lands and a complete register of the owners of the several blocks. In this way the title will be made clear and safe beforehand, and roads—not merely main roads, but smaller roads also—will be opened peaceably and in all directions for access to the lands under lease.

Public Auction.

- 4. As to the power of sale, to make the exercise of it most attractive and satisfactory to the seller, and to exclude all private intriguing, all sources of jealousy and irritation, one precaution is necessary and sufficient. Let no Native land be sold under this Act otherwise than by public auction. Let the Natives see that their interests are fully protected, and that land is sold by the Government on their behalf just as the Government sells its own land. The auction should take place, after due notice, in such one of the English settlements as might be appointed for that purpose. The name and description of the purchaser being reported to the Civil Commissioner of the district in which the land was situate, he would cause the conveyance to be executed in the presence of himself or of some Resident Magistrate of the district, and forward it to the office in Auckland. The office would receive the purchase-money and either remit it or deposit it, as desired by the sellers, and would hand over the conveyance to the purchaser. Thus the great inconvenience and evil which often attends Government dealings with Natives, of keeping a number of persons hanging about the town for days together, might be avoided. The purchaser should, after a certain time, be entitled to receive a Crown grant.

It would be a valuable addition to this plan if some convenient mode of investing the proceeds of sales could be open to the Natives, where they might obtain good interests on their deposits, and so might see that they derive a substantial and permanent benefit from our management. The frequent and natural complaint of the Natives, that the land abides whilst the payment perishes, might thus be obviated. The present savings banks have been instituted for a different purpose, and by the limited amount to be deposited, and by other regulations, are rendered unfit for the object here contemplated. Yet the political advantages to flow from any system which should attract Native investment, and so bind Natives to the Government, are great and obvious. For the attainment of a political end it would be wise to lay stress on those economical considerations which ordinarily prevail in such matters. If made attractive in this way, the selling of land may be expected to be, after a season, resumed freely. It is possible that in particular cases some inconvenience may be felt, but I have no doubt whatever that (if we look to the general working of the Act, to the attractiveness of its operation, and the peace of the country at large) the advantages will be found to preponderate enormously on the side of the sale by public auction. By no other mode can the settlers at large be secured against the forestalling of the land by a few; and by no other will the Natives be satisfied that they receive the fair value of the land.

Cases will be found where money has been received by Natives as an advance upon a contract or understanding for sale of land; and such cases will need to be specially provided for. The persons who have in this way sought to gain a preference over others have no claim to consideration on the part of the Assembly or of the Government, inasmuch as it is provided by the express terms of the Native Lands Act itself that "Every contract, promise, or engagement for the purchase, lease, or occupation of any Native land, or of any interest therein, made prior to the issue of a certificate of title under this Act, shall be absolutely void;" to which enactment, moreover, attention has been drawn by an express notification in the Government Gazette. Care should also be taken that the Native seller should not have the benefit of such unlawful contracts; for which purpose, upon the land being afterwards sold by auction, an amount equal to that which had been already received under the private dealing should be deducted out of the purchase-money, and paid into a fund for the general benefit of the district.

Land Court.

- 5. The constitution of the Land Court by which the certificate is to be given is a point of vital importance; for it is provided in section 14 that the certificate shall be conclusive as to the Native proprietors of the land for which it is issued. The Court should then be so constituted as to give the utmost attainable security for the correctness and trustworthiness of the certificate. It is essential that the Government shall be able to entertain a well-grounded assurance that it will be safe and right to act on the certificate.

The constitution and procedure of the Court should be such as to exclude, as far as possible, all deception or collusion. If the Court consists of too few members, the certificate may be simply a snare to the Government. The safest mode appears to be, to form a panel of the leading men of the district, and out of them to select not fewer than six as a jury, either by ballot, subject to challenge, or by a process similar to that of striking a special jury. They should receive a payment for their work, so much a day; the regulation of the sittings, both as to their length and frequency, resting with the President of the Court. The utmost care should be taken to secure the due circulation of notice of the sitting of the Land Court, and ample time for attendance should be allowed. Applicants for certificates should be required to have the boundaries of the land surveyed, and actually marked out upon the ground, before the application is made.

One System for Land-buyers.

- 6. It appears to me essential to our success that the system to be established should apply to all purchasers equally, and that the 34th section of the Act should be repealed. A trustworthy Land Court being once constituted, let all transactions pass through the Court on the same footing. Let all purchases be subject to one and the same course of procedure, and let the efforts of the Government be confined to the establishment and working of a sound system for the use and benefit of all. Any regulation which is needed for the guidance and protection of the buyer on his own account must be equally needed for the guidance and protection of the buyer on behalf of Government.

Reserves.

- 7. All lands to-be reserved for Native cultivation or occupation, under the 9th section of the Act, should be separated by natural boundaries from lands to be settled by the pakeha. This is to be desired, not only for the sake of avoiding strife between the Native and the European neighbours, but also to enable the Natives to cultivate within a ring fence, and to spare them the cost of a fence for each separate holding, which cost will sometimes equal, or even exceed, the value of the land to be included within such fence.

Endowments.

- 8. By the Native Lands Act, sections 21 and 23, it is provided that the Governor may, at the request of the owners, make regulations and plans for settlement of Native lands; and that in such regulations reserves may be made for public roads and highways, or for schools, hospitals, churches, &c., and for the endowment of such institutions, or for any other purposes of public or common utility to the Native proprietors. On our success in providing in every Native district an adequate endowment in land for the purposes of law and education, must depend in large measure our success in attaining our great end. In no other way can success, if attained, be rendered permanent. No doubt grants of money made by the Assembly may be depended on to meet the cost of introducing whatever system may be thought the best, and of sustaining it for a time; but such grants can hardly be depended on for upholding it through a series of years. We must look elsewhere for the means of fully establishing and permanently supporting the system, so that it may have time to do its work, which, in the nature of things, cannot be done rapidly. Wherever the new Native Lands Act shall be brought into operation, let it be made, as far as possible, a condition that a liberal endowment be first made for the support of the administration of law, as well as for schools where the English language shall be taught. There is nothing unreasonable in urging strongly, at the commencement of our undertaking, such terms as are in themselves necessary and essential to secure for it a successful issue. The attractiveness of the Act, so far at any rate as the power of letting land is concerned, gives us an opening for effecting our purpose. So soon, then, as any district shall show a desire to receive this Act, that desire should be met by a readiness to confer the boon, on a pledge being given by the people of the district, after a public meeting; that the pakeha settlers who may be introduced into the district under the operation of the Act will be secured from disturbance and lawlessness; and, for that end, that the Natives of the district will concur in establishing law in the district. The best evidence of the assent and co-operation of the Natives will be the appropriation of land as an endowment for the permanent maintenance of the administration of law and of instruction in the English language. If we allow them, what they may reasonably claim, a fair voice in the management of the properties so appropriated for endowment, and in the application or apportionment of the income derived from them, we may count on their hearty co-operation. There are especial reasons at this time why we should endeavour to build on a foundation of endowments voluntarily furnished by the Natives themselves. It is well known that Government contributions in money are regarded by many of the best and ablest of the race with much suspicion as a sort of bribery, from which they count it a point of honour to stand aloof.

Nor could anything be less wise than to pauperize the people, and to destroy the self-reliance of the Native character—a point in which it greatly resembles our own. It may be comparatively easy to produce an outside show of order; but, if there be on the part of the Natives no sacrifice or effort to maintain the system—no contribution of money or labour towards it—there will be in it little of reality or of permanence.

There is in the Native population a readiness to make efforts and sacrifices for the support of institutions which they clearly see to be beneficial, and in the working of which they have a practical share. Of this a striking example is furnished by the conduct of some of the tribes of the district between the East Cape and Poverty Bay. Within a period of five years, from 1859 to 1863, and that a period of distrust, trouble, and war, there were contributed for the endowment of Native clergymen more than £1,300, and for the endowment of the Bishopric of Waiapu (after the decease or resignation of the present Bishop) the sum of £589 11s. 9 d. Every one of these sums of money represents a large amount of effort and co-operation, for the Maoris are rich in land, poor in money. We need not doubt, then, of their willingness to contribute land towards the permanent support of institutions for the purposes above mentioned, provided they have themselves a reasonable share in the working of the system. Care will of course be needed to select for this purpose lands which, by reason of some peculiar advantage of position, may be sure to be in demand for permanent occupation by tenants.

In cases where, from one cause or another, it may prove impracticable to provide a direct endowment in land for the purposes here mentioned, an indirect mode of attaining the same end will be afforded by the system of public sale. A certain percentage on the proceeds of the sale may be retained and invested in the purchase of land to be held as such endowment.

Administration of Justice.

- 9. Thus far I have considered the operation of the new Act as capable of being made instrumental for the purpose of reviving or creating among the Native population a sense of the substantial benefits to be derived from their connection with us. I have been looking chiefly to present difficulties, and the prospect of escaping out of them into a better state of things. But in all our operations it is necessary to look beyond this, and even from the beginning so to direct and shape our proceedings as may most facilitate the establishment of a permanent and legal order of things. Therefore, from the very beginning, we must form to ourselves some distinct conception of that which we desire to establish.

It is quite true that there is no use in attempting to force institutions on people who do not desire them, or to push them on over-rapidly whilst a population is ill prepared for them; but it is exceedingly important to miss no opportunity of introducing them that may offer itself. For this end, then, it is necessary that we shall have considered the whole matter beforehand, and formed our plans for acting when the time comes.

I think it will be admitted by all that our system ought to be something simple and intelligible in itself, and free from all complication and causes of unnecessary delay; moreover, that it should be so modified from our own system and so far adapted to the condition of the Native population as to remove prejudices and obstacles, and to make the transition from the one to the other as easy as possible; lastly, that it should be such as may be combined easily with the general system of the colony, and ultimately blended therein. If the procedure be tardy or costly, or clogged by a necessity of referring frequently to the seat of Government, and especially of references backward and forward from one Government office to another—from one person uninformed and uninterested to another equally so, and back again—it will most surely fail in its object; it will never come to be valued or respected by either race, and it will never beget a peaceful and contented spirit in the population. To the Maoris resident in the Native districts the necessity of referring for a settlement of disputes to the seat of Government, or to the nearest English town where a Judge is to be found, is a very great grievance and evil. When parties come on such an errand, they often hang about the town with wives and children, either at the charge of the Government, in which case they linger on, becoming gradually pauperized; or, if at their own charge, incurring debts on a ruinous system of credit. Of course the leading practitioners, whose hands are already full, are not inclined to take business of such a kind. Even if such a man is moved to take it up, all must be done through interpreters, and therefore at an increased cost; and it may after all be found that the ultimate point in dispute is one which is excluded from the jurisdiction of our ordinary Courts. If we wish to commend to the Natives our ways of proceeding, we must clear them of the many difficulties which beset them now. In this respect the present state of things is more likely to create disaffection than to remove it. Instead of bringing the Natives to our Courts of justice, we must carry our Courts to them. How, then, is a speedy and efficient administration of justice between the two races, in matters criminal and civil alike, to be established and maintained?

Native Districts.

- 10. In the first place I assume it as settled that, for this purpose, the country is to be divided into districts, in each of which districts a Civil Commissioner is to be placed. It appears essential that the district should be no larger than such as can be effectually supervised by one man, subject only to such amount of control from the seat of Government as may be absolutely necessary, and even that control exercised as far as possible through the Commissioner himself.

The district of the Civil Commissioner should not be merely a geographical division of the country, but rather its extent and boundaries should be determined by considerations of relationship and intercommunication subsisting between the Native inhabitants. It should comprise tribes or divisions which have a common sentiment and generally act together, already feeling themselves to be naturally one, and which are thereby in a certain degree prepared for union of administration under our system.

In the following remarks it will be desirable to sketch a district fully organized, with all such subordinate officers as may be needed in any case; but I do not mean that we ought at once in every district to seek to set up such complete organization. On the contrary, I should prefer to set it up nowhere, except on the requisition, or at least with the assent, of the population. In a large part of the country our objects might for some time to come be best advanced by the appointment of a single officer, who should be rather a resident than a Magistrate, ready to advise and guide whenever there should be an opening, but claiming no coercive jurisdiction whatever. Such an officer would be the root out of which the full system might grow in due time. I return now to a sketch of the system, as it should be completed and established, whenever the course of time and circumstances may allow. A completely organized district would have for its officers a Civil Commissioner, Resident Magistrates, and Native Magistrates. Out of the number of the Resident Magistrates the more experienced and able would be selected to fill vacant Commissionerships. The several places and functions of these officers should be so clearly defined as to prevent clashing. A multiplication of officers either coordinate with one another, or in an ill-defined subordination, is sure to be a source of weakness and inefficiency. Starting, then, from these principles, we shall consider first the relations of the several parts of the proposed system, and next the rules by which the several parts are to be ordered, with a view throughout to the utmost simplicity in the organization of the district, and to its completeness, as far as possible, within itself.

Native Courts.

- 11. In the first and lowest place we shall have Native Magistrates, settling questions between Maori and Maori. It is necessary to uphold these Maori Courts, not only because we have in some sort ourselves set them up, but also because it is impossible in dealing with this people to create and keep in efficient working any system in which they do not take some practical part. Above all it is to be remembered that these Courts are absolutely necessary for the purpose of effectually carrying the operation of law into the remoter parts of the country and over the whole of the scattered population. If this object is to be effected it must be by guiding and supervising Native efforts for that end, not by attempting to do the work ourselves. We have neither money nor men for so vast an undertaking.

But if it be necessary to sustain these Courts, not less necessary is it to restrain them; for there is no doubt that at this time they are, in many parts of the country, often grievously perverted and made instruments of oppression and wrong. The smallest grievances are hunted up and arbitrarily treated as offences against the law; and even in the case of real offences fines altogether unreasonable in amount are often imposed, out of which the administrators of the so-called law pay themselves for their trouble. Bad as this state of things is, no better could be reasonably expected from the history of the system, which I will briefly recount. We began some years back by appointing certain chiefs to administer justice among their own people. We called them Assessors, though in the Maori forms of appointments they were called Kai-whakawa or Magistrates. It was of course intended that they should learn something of law before they began to administer it. With that view it was arranged that the chief English Magistrate in each district should hold periodical circuits, and so both orally expound and practically exhibit to the Assessors the rules and methods of our laws. Unfortunately it came to pass that the proposed circuits were not holden and the desired instruction not given, though the need was growing every day. Accordingly the Native officers set themselves to do the work in their own way. The result has been such as strong wills, acting ignorantly with little instruction and less supervision or control, might be expected to produce. The new principle of law was taken up earnestly and carried through the country by Native agents, just as the Gospel itself had been to a large degree carried through the country in former years. What was understood by law was this that all grievances and causes of strife were to be removed for the future by peaceable means—by decisions formed and penalties imposed after public discussion; not as in old times by intimidation or force. Each set of administrators set itself to carry out this general principle as best it could, and assumed at once the fullest powers for that purpose—that is to say, the power of determining both what matters should be treated as offences and also the rule according to which they should be dealt with. In general, they followed so much of the English procedure as they happened to have learned by observing the practice of English Magistrates.

It is now essential to supply the omissions of past years, to try to complete these our own half-formed institutions, and to supply the instruction and supervision which are necessary to insure their usefulness. In effecting this reform it is necessary to deal tenderly with all that exists and which has acquired a certain degree of acceptance, and to use and incorporate it rather than to destroy it; especially to accept and encourage the spirit of self-reliance and self-government, which, however untrained and undisciplined, is present in the Maori mind.

The first step, then, towards terminating this lawlessness under the name of law, is to establish and carry out thoroughly the fundamental distinction between the two separate businesses of making law and of administering law; between Councils to frame rules and Courts to enforce them. The distinction itself is apparent to every, intelligent Maori when he is reminded of it, and is clearly expressed in his own speech; for the two functions can hardly be more aptly distinguished than by the two phrases, whakatakoto tikanga, literally to lay down a rule; and whakahaere tikanga, literally to set a rule agoing—that is to put it in operation. For this end the jurisdiction of these Courts should be exactly defined, and a careful supervision kept up to prevent any transgression of the limits assigned to them from time to time. The Magistrates must be tied down to written rules, and checked, as English Magistrates are checked, whenever they act in any way in excess of their jurisdiction. In case of any such Court assuming to exercise a jurisdiction not so given, a reference should be open to the Court of the Commissioner, who should have power to award damages. The Commissioner would possess the means of enforcing his own decision, the salaries of the Native Magistrates being paid through his hands.

As to the constitution of these Courts, the first reform needed is to remove their tumultuary and irregular character, and to reduce them within proper limits as to number and order. Yet as the men who are now considered members of the village assembly are equal or nearly so among themselves, and have been in possession of equal power, and are about equally informed or equally ignorant, it is not practicable or even reasonable to begin by disfranchising a portion of them. The simplest way appears to be to treat all these persons as jurymen, with no other limitation than that which is imposed by our own colonial jury law—namely, that they be persons of full age and of good repute. The list should be subjected yearly to a public revision. The process of winnowing such bodies is one which the Maoris well understand, and has been brought into operation already in the North.

The experience of Sir Alexander Johnstone when, many years ago, he introduced a similar jury system among the natives of Ceylon, showed that great social benefits might flow from it. To be on the list was to be certified as a man of good character and trustworthy; so a place on the jury list became an object of village ambition.

On every trial the Maori Magistrate should act with a jury of four persons selected by ballot out of this list, after proper challenges. Without such support his authority and coercive power will be small. A jury of four is already allowed by "The Jury Law Amendment Act, 1862." I think that such a Court might be so worked as to create confidence and obedience. The Court would be, in fact, much like the panchayat, which Governor Gore Browne recommended—the simple and effective institution which has from time immemorial, through a long series of conquests and revolutions, supplied the needs and secured the tranquillity of the village communities of India.

The limitations on the jurisdiction of these Courts should have reference to the nature of the proceedings, to the competency and fitness of the tribunal, rather than to the amount sued for. As to the amount, a sufficient check would be supplied by the power reserved under the rules circulated by the Government in 1859—namely, the power of revising the sentence by reducing the amount of the penalty or damages. In this way the authority of the Queen is commended to the Natives by being interposed only in the form of protection and mercy.

Between themselves and in their own Courts there [unclear: ought] to be no bar to proceedings in the nature of actions of trespass, ejectment, &c., in respect of Maori land; but the decisions of such Courts should not be accepted as conclusive evidence of the title until confirmed by the Land Court.

Every decision should be recorded in a book to be supplied for that purpose to the Native Magistrate, and be inspected by the Resident Magistrate on his circuits, to be made at short intervals through his district. Native Magistrates, when once fully appointed, should not be removed, except after full opportunity has been given for explanation of the acts complained of.

In these Native Courts the Resident Magistrate should be at liberty to take his seat at all times, not so as to take the place of the Magistrate or to weaken his authority in any way, but rather to help and direct him.

Resident Magistrate.

- 12. As to the jurisdiction of the Resident Magistrate in settling civil questions between English and Maori, sufficient provision is made by the existing law. Their decisions in such cases should be subject to an appeal (under proper restrictions) to the Civil Commissioner. The Resident Magistrate would also exercise the ordinary summary jurisdiction in criminal cases, and also the ministerial jurisdiction with a view to trial before the Civil Commissioner or the Supreme Court.

Civil Commissioner.

- 13. Coming now to the question of the jurisdiction to be given to the Civil Commissioner, I find in the memorandum submitted to Governor Grey by the Colonial Ministers in November, 1861, a recommendation that all criminal cases arising in Native districts should be disposed of in the Commissioner's Court, excepting only cases of homicide. The Ministers go on to say: "The District Commissioner will be a person of personal character sufficiently high to create confidence in the decisions of the Courts which he superintends; and ultimately the Governor in Council has the power of pardon. The proposal to establish regular circuits of the Supreme Court Ministers submit to be premature; they think that for the present the Supreme Court should be resorted to in the case of homicide alone, in which case Ministers concur in the very great importance of the trial taking place in the district where the offence may have been committed—a proposition which will, no doubt, be fully appreciated by the Native race. The Supreme Court could in such cases be put in motion by special Commissions. Ultimately, when more complicated relations arise between the Natives and Europeans living together, regular circuits will no doubt be desirable." I would propose that resort should be had to the Supreme Court, in the way proposed by Ministers, not only in cases of homicide, but also in cases of any actual violence of a grievous kind to the person of a man or woman.

With this exception, all cases civil and criminal, where the defendant or accused person is resident within the district, should come within the jurisdiction of the Commissioner. Also that jurisdiction should attach equally, whether the offence or cause of action arose on lands held under the Native tenure or under Crown grant. The accused should, in all cases arising between the two races, have, if desired, the benefit of a mixed jury, a device which was long employed in England for the settlement of questions between persons of different races, and is to a considerable extent recognized in the Jury Amendment Ordinance of 1844, and in "The Jury Amendment Act, 1862."

To guard against an occasional failure of justice, it might be provided that, if three-fourths of the jury pronounce the accused guilty, it shall be competent for the Judge or Commissioner (if he agree with the finding of the majority) to award such punishment as he shall think right, within the limits allowed by law. With this exception, offences should be dealt with by the Commissioner and a mixed jury, in all respects according to the ordinary course of procedure; the sentence being of course subject in this, as in all cases, to be remitted in whole or in part by the Governor.

Police.

- 13a. The number of serious crimes committed in Maori districts has hitherto been small. But it is necessary, in order to quiet men's minds and to keep up confidence and good feeling between the races, that proof should be given, when needed, of the existence and nearness of a power strong enough to repress wrongdoers and protect the peaceful and well-disposed. For this purpose an efficient police force is needed, which should receive its orders from the Civil Commissioner. A Native police force might be raised by calling on the friendly tribes throughout the country to supply volunteers. No combination need be feared in such a force. The position of every such guardian of the peace should be made valuable and honourable. Their duties should be clearly defined. Amongst ourselves in old times the duties of ministerial officers of the law were in some cases set out very minutely in the oaths of office. Some such forms might under our circumstances be found useful, and be made impressive by being formally and publicly administered before the Commissioner.

Civil Cases.

- 14. In civil cases the Commissioner should exercise within his district all such powers as by law belong to a Judge of a District Court, mixed juries being employed here also in cases above a certain amount.

English Procedure to be modified.

- 15. In order that the system here sketched out should be complete, that is to say, should carry within itself all requisite powers up to the full measure of the need, it will be necessary in cases between persons of the two races to allow a certain departure from the usual course of English procedure. I refer to the rigid separation between the civil and the criminal consequences of a wrongful act, which in England is even now so strict as to render necessary in most cases an entirely distinct set of operations to enforce each of those several consequences. This state of things appears to be traceable, not to any deliberate judgment or purpose of our forefathers, but rather to the historical circumstances under which distinct branches of our law grew and extended themselves, and especially to the old rule according to which certain forfeitures accrued to feudal superiors in consequence of such acts as were pronounced by the Courts to be felonious. The feudal lawyers, therefore, were led to mark very strongly the distinction between felonies and mere trespasses or wrongs. At this day the contrary principle is steadily infusing itself into our English system; and it is coming to be accepted as a maxim that, when two litigants are at issue in a Court of competent jurisdiction, the facts of the case should be then and there investigated once for all, and all the redress which the law will give be given at once.

In conformity with this sound principle, the proceedings in the Commissioner's Court should be such as to give complete redress. If, for example, an unlawful taking of property be complained of, the Court should inquire into the case, and deal with it according to the result of the inquiry. If it be found upon the trial to be only a trespass, the complainant should be at liberty to adduce evidence of the damage caused by the trespass, and should recover accordingly. So if a man be wantonly assaulted and receive injury, either in person or otherwise, damages should be awarded and a fine imposed at the same time. The Colonial Ordinance of 1845 leaves room for carrying out this principle in cases of summary proceedings for assault, but falls short of the mark by leaving to the discretion of the Magistrate that which should rather be prescribed by the law.

Outstanding Claims.

- 16. As to the civil jurisdiction of the Resident Magistrates, a very serious difficulty is presented by the relations generally subsisting in many of the remoter parts of the country between the European traders and the Natives. All reports agree in representing the amounts of outstanding debts or claims to be very great, and that a very sore feeling on both sides has grown out of them; each party charging the other with dishonesty, and both parties being in many cases greatly to blame.

I will cite one passage from the report of Colonel Russell, Civil Commissioner of Hawke's Bay, in June, 1862: "I explained to the Natives the proposed institutions, but met with small encouragement. I believe this arose in some measure from the fear which had been imposed on them that debts which are brought against them to the extent of £400 by one European, of £500 by another, and of £700 by a third, would have to be paid up now that law and order were to be established. I believe that such claims extend all over the province, and that £10,000 would not cover them. My present interpreter, Mr. E. Hamlin, estimates his claims alone at £1,000."

It is plain that it would be inequitable to use the authority of the proposed new Courts and the compulsory action of the law for the purpose of enforcing contracts entered into in a full belief on both sides that no speedy payment was to be expected, and that no legal process would be available. On the other hand, every facility should be afforded for a speedy and fair adjustment of all such outstanding claims. It should be competent for the Commissioner, with the consent of both parties, to settle such disputes as an arbitrator, with full discretion to allow on the one hand such price as at the time and under all the circumstances might be reasonably charged, and on the other to allow all fair claims to be set off on the part of the purchaser, and to make such arrangements for payment by instalments as might appear to him reasonable under the circumstances.

Contracts respecting Lands, Vessels, &c.

- 17. The utmost care should be taken for the future to guard against evils of this kind, in respect of money dealings between English and Natives. Such matters are apt to be regarded as minute and insignificant, but in truth they are of great moment. A few special regulations adapted to these cases would be of great service. The lack of such regulations has produced much disaffection and much demoralization. In various places grudges have been strongly felt for years by men who believe themselves to have been wronged. The fraud of one pakeha has often been retaliated upon others who have had no share in the fraud.

Thus all contracts for the occupation of land, all licenses to cut timber or to pasture cattle on land, should be in writing, both in English and Maori, and should have a memorandum written or indorsed thereon, signed by the Civil Commissioner or Resident Magistrate, certifying that he has caused the same to be read over, both in English and Maori, to all the parties in his presence, and that the same was perfectly understood by them. A promissory-note in English only should not be valid against a Maori. It should be laid down as a general rule that no action should be allowed for any debt exceeding a certain limit, unless the contract were made in the way above mentioned.

All contracts for sale or transfer of any ship or vessel, or otherwise concerning any ship or vessel, should be subject to the like regulations. This point is one of the utmost practical importance. Frauds committed in respect of the purchase of small coasting vessels have in some parts caused extreme irritation and soreness against the pakeha; for it has happened repeatedly that a whole community, being keen to enter into trade with Auckland, and having set their hearts on some particular vessel, have combined their efforts to raise the price. They have worked for months in an English settlement for the purpose of providing the instalments of the purchase-money, and then in the end have found that the vessel has been transferred to another purchaser, or removed out of their reach, and that, by reason of the insolvency or disappearance of the person they have dealt with, all chance of obtaining compensation, or even of recovering back their instalments, has been lost. Cases of this kind have produced great dissatisfaction and a strong feeling of distrust towards our whole system. In all future transactions of this kind, where instalments or other money shall be paid in respect of the purchase of a vessel which shall not be in possession of the parties making the payment, such instalments should be paid over into the hands of the Civil Commissioner or a Resident Magistrate, and impounded until the completion of the contract.

Rules in purely Native Cases.

- 18. In cases between Maori and Maori there is still more room for departure from our English system. For here, in the first instance at least, our object is to get some law established and obeyed—the substance of law rather than any particular form of it. Here we should bear in mind that the old usages and ways of thinking of a people cannot be changed all at once, and that the laws of England, venerable, and useful as they are, are not part of the laws of nature. The fitness of a law depends largely on time and place and many circumstances. At different stages of our own history, our laws have varied greatly. The English Commissioners on Criminal Law say justly (7 Report, p. 92), "Penalties, being a positive institution, vary exceedingly indifferent nations, and even in the same country at different times, according to a great variety of circumstances and opinions. According to the Mosaic, and also according to the Roman law, the crime of theft was punishable by compelling a pecuniary compensation to the party injured; by the ancient law of England the crime of theft, where the thing stolen was above the value of 12d., was punished with death. At the present day the maximum of punishment is transportation for seven years." Even since the date of that report another important change has taken place.

There is no reason then why the usage which has grown up in Maori districts of punishing theft and other criminal acts with a fine (over and above compensation, in cases where restitution is not possible) should not for the present be retained. The power of imprisonment should be reserved in aid of that usage, and not used instead of it.

It ought to be remembered that our English system has been throughout its growth singularly indulgent and tolerant towards special and local customs. The progress towards uniformity of law and procedure has been very slow, and in England itself at this day there is nothing like a complete uniformity. If we are to determine what is English by reference to the history and practice of England, it may safely be said that nothing is less English than an attempt to force one system upon all persons at once, without regard to their different circumstances and degrees of preparation for it. By the Acts passed in 1848 for regulating the local affairs of Native districts, and for the administration of justice in Native districts, the Legislature of the colony has fully sanctioned the principle of modifying our own rules and usages so as to suit the peculiar circumstances of the Native people.

District Council.

- 19. This brings us to the consideration of the constitution and powers of the District Council itself, the only body in the district which will exercise functions of a legislative kind, that is to say, the function of making rules and regulations for the district and that of appropriating the yearly income of the district. In this part also we should conform, as far as circumstances may allow, to English modes of proceeding. This Council then should not consist, as has been proposed, of Magistrates and officers sitting there in virtue of their offices. Such a constitution, besides being an un-English one, would tend to keep up that existing confusion, of which we have spoken, between the two distinct functions of making and of administering law. Moreover, it will not improbably happen that the favourite orator of a village, and the man best qualified to be a magistrate, will be one and the same person. The Council should then be elective. To make it elective the machinery is ready to our hands, and most simple. All persons on the jury list of each village are to be deemed electors. A set of villages grouped together, according to local convenience, form one electoral district.

It will probably not be found necessary to call this Council together more than once or at the most twice in the year. The occasion of its meeting should be made a sort of festival. A moderate sum might usefully be contributed by the Government in aid of the cost.

By holding the sessions of this Council in the several Courthouses of the district in succession, the burdens and the benefits of the system might be equalized throughout the district.

Such a District Council may (as has been proposed) continue in office for a term of four years. As to the two kinds of business which will belong to this Council, the former—namely, the business of framing by-laws or special regulations for the district—may well be reduced within narrow limits; for such regulations as will be absolutely necessary may, for the most part, be laid down beforehand, and amendments will be needed only occasionally. But it is a great matter to provide for such bodies a regular supply of practical business, simple in itself, yet of such a kind as to interest many persons. This kind of business will be supplied by the general superintendence of the lands appropriated for endowment, and the appropriation of the income to be derived from these lands, in conformity with the rules framed by the Council and assented to by the Governor. Also the fines and fees coming in from the several Native Courts would be disposed of by the same authority for the benefit of the district, subject to the like assent.

So the contributions to be made in labour or materials towards buildings and other works for the benefit of the district, in return for Government aid in money, should be made a matter for discussion and arrangement by the District Council.

If business of such a kind be transacted in an orderly and becoming way, the District Council will be a valuable means of Native education and advancement. The experience of Bishop Williams in the sessions of his Diocesan Synod at Turanga suffices to show that a satisfactory result may be expected wherever the like pains are taken.

It might be well to let the panel, from which the members of the Land Court are to be taken, be subject to some sort of revision by the Council, which would cause the operations of that Court to be felt as more authoritative and binding. The proceedings should be opened by an address from the Civil Commissioner, but a Native should preside during the discussion, to be aided and advised (if necessary) by the Commissioner. It is of importance to find in our system positions of honour such as the leading men of the race may be willing to accept.

Book of Laws.

- 20. At this time we are requiring the Natives of this Island to submit themselves to the laws of England, and are assuring them that if they do so they will receive therefrom protection and manifold advantages. It is therefore reasonable, and indeed necessary, that an attempt should be made as early as possible to do something more than this: not merely to propose general invitations and assurances, but to convey to their minds a clear notion of the main rules and requirements of our law. Now is the proper time for completing the work which was begun by Governor Browne in 1858. The publication put forth by the Colonial Government in that year, under the title of "The Laws of England," was chiefly devoted to an exposition of the principles of the criminal law as administered in the Supreme Court of the colony. At present an exposition is needed of other portions of our law, in particular of the rules which concern the devolution and transfer of property, the making and enforcing of contracts, and the modes of obtaining redress and compensation for loss or damage caused by breach of contract or any wrongful act. There are at this time many Natives in this Island who are well qualified and desirous to receive instruction on these points. Besides, as it is impossible to carry law throughout this Island without Native agency, one of our first objects should be to raise a supply of men competent to act as Magistrates among their countrymen, and able, by virtue of superior knowledge, to command their respect. It is desirable that persons eligible as Native Magistrates should pass through a regular course of instruction and examination, and not be appointed until they have been certified as competent. This suggestion cannot be applied to the elder men who now hold these offices, and whose presence and influence on the side of order cannot, in many cases, safely be dispensed with, even for a short season. The best course would be to train promising young men to act as clerks under the Magistrates in the first instance, and, after due probation, to become Magistrates themselves.

Representation.

- 21. Within all districts which have come within the operation of our system of property it will follow that Natives will take a direct part in the political, as well as the legal, system of the colony by becoming electors. I understand that even now such is the case to some degree in the south of this Island. This is a result absolutely essential to the end we are seeking—namely, the establishment of a just and equal system for both races. It is one which need not excite any alarm, for the average capacity of a Maori is not below that of many of our present electors. The effect will be to provide the Maoris of the district with a constitutional helper and protector, interested in obtaining their confidence, and able to convey to the Assembly an accurate account of their wants and grievances. Thus the system of representation will yield to the Natives that first and most obvious advantage which was its chief recommendation in England itself in old time. It will open a path by which a knowledge of local needs or troubles may be carried directly to the Government, and the best modes of supplying or removing them be suggested and considered. The need of such an opening, under our circumstances, is very great; for such local matters, small in the outset, are apt, if they be overlooked and allowed to accumulate, to become causes of permanent disaffection. That such matters should be speedily and directly brought under discussion is especially to be desired in the case of the Natives, in dealing with whom a grievance promptly attended to and discussed is already half healed.

It has recently been proposed that the Maoris should be represented in the Assembly in a general way, and without reference to the ordinary electoral divisions. On that plan the members would be rather orators on behalf of the Maoris in general than well-informed expositors of practical grievances and local needs; and the fact of a few members of the Assembly being regarded as specially representing the Natives would naturally have an injurious effect on the rest of the members, leading them to take less interest in Native affairs, and to feel less responsible for the management of them. I think it far better to fall into the existing system. Representation, to answer its purposes completely, should be one and the same system for all.

Superintendence of the System.

- 22. We now reach the third main question. Having endeavoured to make our plan itself as simple and as effective as possible, and also to provide the means for keeping it in continued operation, where are we to find the thought and will necessary for the successful guidance and prosecution of the work? In order to succeed in such an undertaking as this, the superintendence of a single authority is needed to combine the various operations, so that they may support and not clash with one another. And this single authority will need a great knowledge of persons and things, so as to make due allowance for all local or peculiar circumstances, and yet steadily to hold fast to general principles, in dealing with a people naturally disposed to follow precedents, and very apt to remember what has been done in other cases. Above all, it is necessary that some one consistent and well-considered system be carried on steadily for an adequate length of time. In order to secure these requisites, as far as possible, I see only one mode of proceeding that can be recommended. I mean that, the plan of operation being once settled and defined by the terms of a statute, and the amount of pecuniary aid being fixed, the working of the plan should be intrusted to a Commission or Board—to a body of fit men, to be permanently occupied with this business alone, and bound to report their operations yearly to the Assembly.

I know that at first sight great objections will seem to lie against this proposal, but I am persuaded that, upon mature consideration, it will appear to be the only one that gives a reasonable prospect of success. To say that the administration of all Native affairs shall be part of the business of the Colonial Secretary, or of a separate Native Minister, is to say that which is likely to be popular and acceptable; for it suggests the notion of a victory achieved over a bad system, of an advantage once gained, which it is a duty to maintain for the future. With that, however, I have no concern. I never defended the old system, and have no wish to see the like of it again. A system which involved an indefinite expenditure, without any account rendered to the Assembly, was properly condemned. Moreover, it did not tend towards the solution of the Native problem, for it settled no principles and registered few facts. But, because we have escaped from a bad system, does it follow that we have fallen into a good one? It appears to me that the utmost that can be expected under the present order of things is, that occasionally a competent man will have the guidance of Native affairs for a short time. Yet very much more than this is required for the success of this work. To the proposal formerly made for a Native Council there were objections grave and manifest. It appeared to be a plan for withdrawing from the Assembly the control over an important portion of the public business, and over a large and even indefinite amount of public money. We may father wonder that anything in the shape of a Native Council was accepted at all than that the result was not of a very practical kind. The Assembly, in passing the Act of 1860, declared its belief that some special organization was needed for the successful management of Native affairs.

Now circumstances are much altered. The Native problem has taken a more definite form. The political aspect of the question is giving place to the administrative and social one. We are now able to determine in a general way the operations which ought to be performed in Native districts, and the yearly expenses which it will be necessary to incur. But, in order to the successful accomplishment of the undertaking, there will be a necessity of determining from time to time as the work goes on a vast number of minute and novel questions, to which the best answer will generally be derived from the experience which has been gradually accumulated by the administrative body itself. The business will be not merely to administer a system, but to make it as the work goes on. Like cases have occurred again and again in England, where great changes have had to be carried out over large surfaces and under circumstances continually varying. How has Parliament dealt with such cases? Not by Parliament itself or the ordinary officers of Government taking charge of the novel undertaking, but by committing the work to a special body of persons, prescribing their powers and the extent of the resources to be at their disposal, and requiring a periodical account of their doings. Such were the Poor Law Commission, the Tithe Commission, and the Copyhold Enfranchisement Commission, and many others.

The great advantage of this mode of proceeding is obvious, and is one which would be in this case of especial value: the question becomes severed from politics. All political parties may criticise the proceedings of the Board; no political party is committed to a necessity of defending or screening them. Moreover, whilst subject at regular intervals to a searching and thorough scrutiny, they are allowed to escape from that series of references and interferences at every step which paralyse business. Therefore I think that the best course to be taken, with a view to the solution of the Native problem, is the constitution of some such Commission or Board. If it should be found practicable to connect with it Natives of standing and influence with their own people, as proposed by Governor Browne, a great advantage would be secured thereby. The Board, or central authority under whatsoever name, should do its work through the District Commissioner as much as possible—always at any rate after communication with him, never acting behind his back.

- 23. There is in the whole question no element more important than the one which remains to be noticed, the character and qualifications of the persons to be employed as Commissioners or officers in the Native districts. The experience of Native affairs has shown that, among the Natives, personal qualities are especially influential for good or evil. If such affairs are committed to men whose chief or only recommendation is a knowledge of the Maori language, they will have no fair chance of success. This is not a work to be done by hasty or over-busy or overbearing men, by men unduly tenacious of their own dignity or unable to subordinate themselves to the object which it is their business to effect; least of all is it to be committed to men of openly immoral lives, for such men bring on us dishonour as well as failure.

- 24. The foregoing remarks are confined to the immediate object of inquiry—namely, the working of the Native Lands Act, and the objects which we ought to aim at in working it. But in substance much of what is here said applies also to those lands which have come into our hands by surrender or by military occupation, and parts of which we have undertaken to restore on certain terms. In those cases also it will not be safe to content ourselves with simply giving a Crown grant to each individual. If we make no provision to prepare the Natives for so sudden a change, and for the consequences of it (as above pointed out), it is to be expected that the new system, naturally unacceptable when imposed by superior power, will become more than ordinarily unpopular. Either then the issuing of grants in such cases should be postponed until proper legislative provision has been made; or if it be in any case thought necessary to issue the grants at once, yet every such grant should be made expressly subject to the provisions of an Act to be passed by the General Assembly for defining the rules of devolution and transfer of Native land between the Maoris themselves; and it should be enacted, as in the Native Lands Act, that all dealings or contracts relating to such lands, entered into before the proclamation of such Act coming into operation, should be null and void.

In the cases just referred to we have in our hands the means of rendering our system permanent and self-supporting. We can appropriate so much land as shall be requisite for endowment both of the judicial system and of schools for teaching the English language.

For the reasons above indicated, it is desirable that Native reserves, whether under the Native Lands Act or under any former law or contract, should be placed under one system of management, and under such local superintendence as might be expected to be most vigilant. It would be convenient that all the Native reserves in the district should be brought under the control of the Native Council of the district and the Civil Commissioner, subject to existing contracts and engagements. All questions raised under the Native Succession Act might be decided, with the least cost and inconvenience, in the Civil Commissioner's Court. The whole Native business of the district, both as to management of property and as to administration of justice, would then be brought into one system.

- 25. Thus I have in some sort surveyed the whole field of the Native problem, with an earnest desire to contribute something towards its solution and towards the peace and prosperity of the colony. The recommendations which to me appear to be at this time of paramount importance are the following: (1.) That the Native Land Court be so constituted, especially in respect of the number and standing of the Native members, as to render the certificate entirely trustworthy. For the function of every such Court is to ascertain certain matters of fact known within certain limited districts only, and to be ascertained through the Natives of the district themselves. The efficiency of the Court, therefore, must depend mainly on the qualifications of the Native members of it; the chief business of the English president being to secure the notoriety, fairness, and regularity of the proceedings. (2.) That in order to prevent the land being forestalled by a few to the detriment of the many, and to render the system attractive by assuring the Natives of the fairness of the price, and to, save both races from the mischiefs to be apprehended from the solicitations of land-buyers, all sales of Native land be by public auction, and be conducted by the Government on behalf of the Native owners. (3.) That the working of the Native Lands Act, after making the necessary amendments therein, and the business of introducing the law and language of England into Native districts, be committed to a separate and permanent body. (4.) That civil institutions be not forced on Native districts, but rather be introduced in such districts only as are disposed to receive them; and even there be planted in the simplest form or germ, and left to grow with the growth in the Native mind of a sense of the benefits they confer. (5.) That care be taken to provide in every district endowments in land for the maintenance of the administration of justice, and of instruction in the English language, in that district.

Auckland,

30th June, 1865

W. MARTIN.

No. 6.[Extract from New Zealand Gazette.]

Judges of Native Land Court appointed. Native Secretary's Office, Wellington, 15th November, 1865.

His Excellency the Governor has been pleased to appoint John Rogan, Esquire, Henry Alfred Home Munro, Esquire, Thomas Henry Smith, Esquire, William Bertram White, Esquire, and Frederick Edward Maning, Esquire, to be Judges of the Court established under "The Native Lands Act, 1865."

A. H. RUSSELL.

SIR,—

Auckland, 23rd December, 1865.

I have the honour to address you in reference to the important subject upon which I entered in the "Notes on the Best Mode of working the Lands Act," and in the letter, dated 18th July last, accompanying those notes. Further consideration has confirmed my conviction that there yet remains open to us a course of action whereby we may escape from our present difficulties in Native matters, and may attain the objects we desire, and that by a process neither costly nor difficult. I desire, therefore, now to complete the review of the subject which I then commenced. I feel assured that you, Sir, considering the importance of the matter, will give a patient hearing even to a statement which, from the nature of the case, cannot be very brief. Before proceeding to define the course of action which I desire to commend to the consideration of the Government, it will be necessary to notice our present relations to the Native population of this Island.

The whole Native population may be divided into two sections:

- The first section comprises the population in the North, in the Gulf of Hauraki, and in the lower part of the Waikato; and again in the greater part of the Provinces of Wellington and Hawke's Bay; and again in various districts about the East Cape, and to the southward of that Cape. These people are, as a whole, desirous of living at peace with us, and the more intelligent of them are convinced that a real union with us is the only means of securing to themselves peace and prosperity. Amongst them many have shown themselves willing to support our cause, even to the death. Yet it is not to be supposed that there exists in these districts universal or complete confidence in the pakeha. On the contrary, distrust and suspicion exist even in the most friendly districts. Men actually engaged in fighting on our side have avowed that they could not feel assured that even their sacrifices on our behalf would in the end secure them just and considerate treatment, and have calmly and reasonably stated the grounds on which it appeared to them impossible to repose entire confidence in us.
- The second section includes the greater part of the former occupants of the lands comprised within the blocks marked out by various recent Proclamations issued under the New Zealand Settlements Act, in the district of Waikato, and of the south-western tribes from Taranaki to Whanganui, together with all such portions of the Native population elsewhere as have espoused their quarrel. The new Hauhau worship appears to have become, for the present, the recognized bond of union of all these.

Let us now consider the elements of which this latter group is comprised.

Waikato.

- 3. In Waikato a large portion of the Native owners hold their position outside the boundary-line traced by the Proclamation, kept from their old possessions by the presence of a large force, suffering privations, exasperated but not subdued. If we desire to comprehend rightly the state of mind of these people, we must put ourselves in their place. We must also remember how widely the estimate formed by the Natives of our dealings with them differs from that which is current among ourselves. To them all the doings of the pakeha present themselves as one great whole. Englishmen are apt to accept various solutions of the public questions which cannot be accepted them. If the justness or fitness of a public measure be canvassed, we often hear it said that such a measure was adopted or acquiesced in for such and such reasons: the reason being oftentimes connected, not with the intrinsic merits of measure in question, but only with the internal working of our complicated system of government. The Natives, knowing little of our internal politics, look only at the general result. There is reason to believe that the view commonly taken by the people of the Waikato and Waipa Rivers is the following: They had combined in an attempt to form an independent Government, a movement which they had come to believe right and even necessary. They were told that the name of King would not in itself be deemed a cause of war, and the more moderate party were careful not to give their stronger neighbour any other cause for entering their borders. For a long time they succeeded in restraining their turbulent brethren, even in the face of preparations for war visibly and steadily advancing on our part. Then came the reoccupation of the Tataraimaka, and the resumption of hostilities by Rewi, and soon after the entrance of our troops into Waikato. Two vain attempts were made to withstand our advance by fair fighting. Shortly after, on the 6th December, a letter was written in the Governor's name to all the chiefs of Waikato. "Your letter of the 2nd December has reached me. Sons, my words to you are these: The General must go uninterrupted to Ngaruawahia [the King's village]. The flag of the Queen must be hoisted there. Then I will talk to you." The promised conference did not take place. The troops went forward, not indeed to follow Rewi into his territory, but to take possession of the lands of the nearer tribes. Can we be surprised at this course appearing to them severe and unjust, when they saw no distinction made between the two sections into which the population of Waikato had been divided through the whole period of these troubles: between those who had been driven to take up arms by the Natives, which they could not honourably disregard, and those whose wilfulness had renewed the war; or rather, when they saw the less offending heavily punished, and the more offending visited with a comparatively slight punishment?

- 4. Our adversaries in Waikato believe themselves guilty of no wrong in contending for their nationality. It has not been usual for Maori tribes to yield up their lands to an invader without repeated efforts to recover them. Some may be disposed to submit, but this cannot bind or control their brethren. It may be expected that the majority may have much the same feeling as the majority of our own people would have if they could be placed in like circumstances. There appears to be ground for the apprehension which has been expressed that in case of the dispossessed Maoris actually making an effort to repossess their lands they may find allies on the northern side of Auckland. Persons who have had good opportunities for observing, report that the presence of the prisoners in that part, after their escape from the Kawau, has generated in some portions of the population a strong sympathy with their cause.

At present there is in the way of any such attempt the obstacle presented by the English regiments, which, in conjunction with the Colonial Force, occupy Waikato and Tauranga. Whilst this advantage still remains to us, every possible security should be provided against the breaking-out of fresh troubles whenever those regiments shall be withdrawn.

The South-western Tribes.

- 5. From the beginning our relations with the Ruanuis have been unfortunate. The visit of the "Alligator" in 1834 could not leave on their minds any favourable impression. Since we have entered the land fewer reclaiming influences have been brought to bear upon them than on most of the other tribes. In Governor Browne's memorandum on Native affairs, dated 25th May, 1861, it is stated that "even up to that time many districts, such as Taupo, Ngatiruanui, Taranaki, and the country about the East Cape, have never been visited by an officer of the Government. The residents in these districts have never felt that they are the subjects of the Queen of England, and have little reason to think that the Government of the colony cares at all about their welfare." The Ruanuis, like the other Maoris, had seen their own need of being aided and raised. In 1853 they were urgent for a missionary, but none could be found. At this very time the Bishop of Wellington is building his cathedral church on a site which was given for the purpose by Governor Grey in that year as a memorial of the earnest desire of these very Ruanuis for Christian instruction, and of their readiness to give annually a tenth part of their produce for the support of ministers of religion.
- 6. A strong feeling is commonly entertained against the Taranakis as having rushed into the Waitara quarrel without any immediate provocation. In fairness it ought to be remembered that circumstances, to them very alarming and irritating, had occurred at New Plymouth a very few years before (in 1855), and had wrought strongly on their minds, and that they then openly declared their apprehension of an attempt by the pakeha to dispossess the Maoris of their land, and their fixed determination to resist any such attempt. I do not seek to extenuate their misdeeds. I only say that there had been no concealment of their determination, and that there was every reason to expect them to act upon it. (Parl. Papers, July, 1860, p. 170, and March, 1861.) Warea, the chief settlement of that tribe, is the place where we now meet the most determined and unceasing resistance. May it not be that in our recent measures they believe they see the verification of the suspicions they expressed in 1855? I do not say that when these small nations voluntarily come into collision with a great nation they ought not to suffer for their temerity. I only point out facts which cannot properly be overlooked in estimating the amount of punishment to be inflicted.

The Hauhau Superstition.

- 7. Amongst these southern tribes the new superstition had its birth at a time when the relations between the pakeha and the Maori were such as greatly to favour its growth. For at that time the suspicions which had from the beginning existed as to the intentions of the Government appeared to many of the Natives to be clearly justified. From the very beginning it had been apprehended by some that the English Government would, when strong enough, seize the Natives lands. This suspicion was suggested to a number of chiefs by an English subject in the year 1814 at Sydney, just when Mr. Marsden was on the point of sailing for this country ("Nicholas's Voyage to New Zealand," I., 41). Once kindled it never died out. From time to time it has blazed forth, as at Waitangi and on other occasions. It was apprehended that the ministers of religion, whether knowingly or not, were employed or encouraged by the Government for the purpose of gradually weakening the power of resistance on the part of the Natives, a view which was favoured by the diplomatic habits of the Native tribes accustomed to seek by craft ends which could not be attained by force. It was seen that an active part was taken by the missionaries in introducing into the country first a Resident and afterwards a Governor. The responsibility which the missionaries in so doing took upon themselves was rightly estimated at the time by Dr. Maunsell, of Waikato (Parl. Papers, 1841, p. 99).

In 1843 I heard these notions broadly avowed on the shores of Lake Taupo by one of the leading chiefs of that district. They gained great strength from the events of 1860. When the southern tribes set up their toll-gate on the coast road the highest tolls demanded were for ministers of religion—English or Maori. In Waikato children were withdrawn by the parents from the missionary schools which were known to be aided by grants of Government money. Mr. Gorst, with all his qualifications and resources, could draw into his institution scarcely any purely Native pupils. Many public discussions took place at Turanga and other places on the East Coast upon the conduct of the missionaries and their relations to the Government.

- 8. When the result of the hostilities in Waikato was seen, and the soldiers had taken possession of all the lands of the tribes on the Waikato and Waipa, it appeared now clear to many that the old apprehensions had been too well grounded, and that they had, in fact, been the victims of a plot in which the ministers of religion had been the agents of the Government. Along with the first bitterness of their exasperation there broke out a hope that in their extremity supernatural aid was at hand. That aid appeared to be supplied by the new revelation to the prophet Horopapera te Ua. A sort of preparation for the new superstition had been noticed by an intelligent traveller who passed through the territory of the southern tribes in 1861. After the cessation of active hostilities at Taranaki there was a widely-spread notion that supernatural help had been already vouchsafed. The vaunted energies of the pakeha had really inflicted little damage. The people stated that by our Armstrong guns only three persons had been killed. In this they saw a proof that the hand of God had been over them.

The new superstition, having gained strength in the south-west, began to spread northward and eastward. Everywhere very many were predisposed to welcome it. Some accepted it in faith, many in wilfulness and bitterness. Some thought it true, others thought that it might be useful. Some men severed themselves from their missionaries in perfect calmness and quietness. One of the chiefs of Opotiki informed Bishop Williams of his conversion to the new creed in these words: "Bishop, many years ago we received the faith from you; now we return it to you, for there has been found a new and precious thing by which we shall keep our land" (kua kitea tetahi taonga hou a mau ai to matou whenua). A common feeling united fanatical believers with cool politicians who believed nothing, but who kept up the fervour of their brethren by false reports of miracles wrought at Taranaki, and of great loss sustained by our troops. The new religion combined men of every sort, from the ferocity of Kereopa to perfect inoffensiveness—some of the best as well as some of the worst of the race. It was accepted as the religion of all who were no longer willing to accept religion at the hands of the pakeha. As in all times of national ferment the fiercer and more determined natures got the lead.

In the beginning of the war the Kingites had prayed for their King after the form in our Prayer Book, and that sometimes with fasting and great earnestness. Now a new form of prayer was put together, and the new worship was accepted as the bond of union amongst all who still adhered to the cause of the Maori King.

- 9. No spot in the Island was better prepared to receive this fanaticism than Opotiki, in the Bay of Plenty. The people of that place had sympathized with the Waikato, and some of them had taken part in the war. Various circumstances had caused their minister (Mr. Völkner) to be suspected of being in secret correspondence with the Government on the subject of their disaffection. The feeling of the people became more bitter when their leading chief, Aperotanga, who had been wounded and taken prisoner by our allies, was murdered by a woman of that tribe (the widow of Pekama Tohi), in revenge for the death of her husband who had fallen in the war. Yet this provocation did not at once lead them to retaliate on Mr. Völkner. Even two men of the offending tribe, who had come into the district of Opotiki from the eastward in ignorance of all that had passed, were spared. The cry for blood which arose from the widows was rebuked by a woman, and the men were fed, conducted to the western boundary of the district, and sent on their way.

Mr. Völkner, having again visited Auckland, was continually troubled by the thought of the miserable condition of his people. Their cultivations had been neglected, and a low fever, caused by lack of food, had carried off more than 150 persons. It appeared to be worth while to try the effect of an attempt to minister to them in their distress. He resolved, therefore, to revisit them, carrying with him wine and quinine, though, as he said, "It was doubtful whether, in their then state of mind, any one would take such things from his hands." These were amongst the last words I heard from his mouth. In the meantime a party of the Hauhaus from Taranaki had crossed the country to Opotiki. They had determined early in the year (1865) to carry the war to the opposite extremity of the Island, and to divert part of our troops thither. So they marched across to Taupo Lake, and thence to the Bay of Plenty. On their way they passed near to the station of a missionary (Mr. Spencer), who has remained through all these troubles unharmed at his station on Tarawera Lake. They reached Opotiki seven days before the vessel which carried Mr. Völkner thither. Every night the leaders of the party harangued the people on the conduct of the missionaries. One who heard them reports that the burden of their discourses night after night was the same. "These men," said they, "were always telling us, 'Set your affections on things above, not on things on the earth;' and so, while we were looking up to heaven, our land was snatched away from beneath our feet." After two days the house of the missionary was plundered, and the goods sold to the bystanders. After five days more a small vessel was seen entering the river, and it was discovered that Mr. Völkner was on board. As the people clustered on the banks of the river the Hauhau leaders pointed to the Vessel as a proof of the magical power of the new worship which had so brought their betrayer into their hands.

- 10. Even after this foul crime the superstition continued to spread. Patara, who was himself not present at the murder, proceeded with his party to Turanga. He kept Kereopa in the background, and spoke of the murder as a misfortune—a great blow to a good cause. Even then men, who had for years exhibited a sober, thoughtful character, were induced to join, carried away by what the Maori calls aroha ki te noi (pity for the people)—what we should call a strong sympathy with the national cause. The Maoris were strongly affected by the novel practices and the burden of the worship, and especially by the bitter crying and wailing for their countrymen slain and their land seized by the pakeha.

It is plain that this delusion has no real strength, and that Maoris, drawn by various motives and influences to support it, do not fight as well as others have done who believed their quarrel to be just. And we see that those who have recently submitted and taken the oath to the Queen have, as a matter of course dropped at the same time the Hauhau worship. Moreover, this very crime has roused into action a body of Native allies in the same part of the Island—a resolute minority, whose bravery and knowledge of the country have proved of essential service. A like effect was produced, as you are well aware, in Hawke's Bay and elsewhere. Perhaps the Government may not be aware that some Native Magistrates from the Gulf of Hauraki and the Thames came up to Auckland to propose a combined expedition of "all the churches" (as they worded it), for the purpose of crushing the guilty tribe. At that time there was no person in Auckland to represent the General Government. The resistance, then, on the East Coast is less formidable than that on the West; still, that radical evil remains of which the acceptance of the Hauhau creed was an indication and a measure. The practical fact with which we have to deal is this: The old feeling of distrust and exasperation towards our Government has been strong enough to lead thoughtful men, incapable of being parties to such acts, to join the Hauhau cause, even after the commission of the great crime at Opotiki. This is our real difficulty; the same in kind as ever, but greater in degree. I believe that this feeling is now more deep and more widely spread than at any time. I believe there are now many who are convinced that we are determined, even by fraud and violence, to get possession of their land, and force our dominion upon men who have never consented to it. Many, therefore, on their part, determine to hold their own as best they may, and are content to sacrifice their lives in the contest. The state of the case is this: We have put too great a pressure upon these people, more than they can bear—more than we can continue to exert; we have driven many of the Natives into a state of determined resistance, bordering on desperation; we have brought upon ourselves the necessity of bearing burdens beyond our strength.

Need of Peace.

- 11. The practical business before us is first to terminate the present evil state of things, and then to take such measures as may introduce a better state, and render it permanent. The obstacles to be overcome are not merely physical, but moral, and such as mere physical power, even if it were at our command, could not remove. Moral means must be employed, and it is in the nature of such means to work somewhat slowly.

For the whole country, for both races, peace is necessary. Some settlement is needed, such as may be depended on as complete, safe, and trustworthy. I think, Sir, there is no chance of any settlement, unless it be such as to show moderation, if not generosity, on our part, and to exhibit a clear distinction between the different classes of our opponents. As to the blocks included in the Proclamation under the New Zealand Settlements Act, the reasons urged in my letter of the 18th July last for resorting to cession instead of mere seizure, appear to me to receive additional weight daily, as the real state of things becomes more manifest to ourselves and also to our adversaries. If we consider the relations between the two races from the beginning, and the history of this quarrel, there appears no reason why we should make the terms of submission as exasperating, and not rather as palatable, as possible consistently with the establishment of our authority and the permanence of peace. Our best security against a desperate effort being made by some section of the expelled Natives to reoccupy the lands taken, and the recurrence of such miseries as we have just emerged from, lies in our so acting as to turn the general opinion of the Maoris against making any such attempt, and so convincing the most hostile that they will have no support or sympathy from the great majority of their countrymen.

Happily the language of the recent Proclamations of 2nd September, 1865, shows that the more liberal course is proposed to be adopted: Out of the lands which have been confiscated in the Waikato and at Taranaki and Ngatiruanui the Governor will at once restore considerable quantities to those of the Natives who wish to settle down upon their lands, to hold them under Crown grants, and to live under the protection of the law. For this purpose Commissioners will be sent forth into the Waikato and the country about Taranaki, and between that place and Whanganui, who will put the Natives who may desire it upon lands at once, and will re-mark out the boundaries of the blocks which they are to occupy. Those who do not come in at once to claim the benefit of this arrangement must expect to be excluded." But a considerable time must be given for that Proclamation to work its due effect. To require a speedy acceptance of our terms would be to require that which, in the present disorganization of the Maoris, or rather in the new combinations into which the war has thrown them, is not possible. Besides, men who believe themselves wronged do not very readily come into terms.

The great principle of all our policy towards the Natives, the one hope of success in overcoming their fear and distrust of us, was expressed by the first Native Minister in words which ought not to be forgotten: "The fears of the Natives can be calmed, and the peace of the country secured, only by a policy which seeks not theirs but them." (Mr. Richmond's Memorandum, p. 25.)

- 12. It is clear that no policy can succeed and secure peace for the future unless it be in accordance with the actual facts. And out of our troubles this advantage at least has come, that we have been brought by them nearer to the facts. The prisoners at Rangiriri, and again at Weraroa, have been treated as prisoners of war. It has been recognized as a fact that the tribes with which we are at strife are for the most part not in the strict sense subjects of the Queen, though included within the dominions of the Queen.

Not only in newspapers, but in public documents, from the commencement of these troubles, the hostile Natives have been called rebels. It is now admitted that a large portion of the Native population has never intelligently, or at all, assented to our dominion, and therefore remains where Captain Hobson found it. Such portions of the population are still what the terms of our first national transaction with them admitted them to be, and what (as I showed on a former occasion) the natives of North America have been uniformly recognized as being—that is to say, small communities entitled to the possession of their own soil and to the management of their own internal affairs. This is for them an unsafe position, for they are subject to the risk of a war with their strong neighbour. For both it is an undesirable one; but it is their position at present. Those, therefore, who are actually in arms against us are to be regarded as enemies in war—as hostile, but not criminal. If so, then so far as these communities are concerned the Acts and Proclamations are not properly laws, but simply announcements that the stronger party will take the lands of the weaker. The taking itself is an act of war, an act of the Queen, to whom alone belongs the prerogative of peace and war. It is for the English nation, therefore, finally to determine how the "giant's strength" of England is to be used. The object of the war itself was to repress and terminate the efforts which the Natives were making to set up a separate nationality, an effort dangerous to both races; but though that effort was a great folly it was not a great crime.

In respect, then, to these portions of the Native population, let our policy be confined to the facts. Let us not attempt to exert an authority which we do not in fact possess, and which, upon our own principles, we cannot claim. Let us abstain from any attempt at direct or internal control over them, and from threats. They may be warned of their insecurity, and assured of our readiness to extend our system to them whenever they may desire it. Then let us leave them alone until the present exasperation shall have ceased and time shall render them more reasonable and disposed to union. It is idle to attempt to force our laws on people whose very principle of union amongst themselves is a common determination not to submit to our authority, and whilst the attempt involves the carrying-on of a chronic war, and destroying those whom we are seeking to benefit and professing to govern.

Legislation in Native Affairs.

- 13. In proceeding to consider the mode of dealing with Native affairs for the future, I begin with the source of legislation—the General Assembly. We are all agreed that the General Assembly should become the one acknowledged Legislature for both races; but it would be a great error to assume (as it is sometimes done) that the Assembly has actually attained this position. Can we maintain that the Assembly possesses constitutional and rightful authority over these people? Rather, our business is to find some way by which it may be brought into possession and exercise of such an authority.

As to the former, how is the English Crown to transfer to the Assembly the obligations which it has contracted in respect of those portions of the Native people who have assented and adhered to the authority of the Crown—without their assent or manifest acquiescence—without at least every possible precaution and safeguard for a fair and beneficial exercise by the Assembly of that power which the Crown finds itself unable to exercise? And as to the tribes who have never assented to our dominion, how can the Crown bestow on the Assembly an authority larger than that which (as we have seen) the Crown itself possesses over them? Let no man think that the trouble of this Island will be summarily terminated, or even diminished, by merely handing over this authority to the General Assembly without due provision for rendering the exercise of it safe and legitimate. I know that at this time there are, even in the peaceful North, quiet and well-disposed men who view any such transfer of authority, or (as they term it) the "ceasing to be called children of the Queen," with the liveliest apprehension and alarm.

- 14. Has it ever happened in the history of the world that a purely democratic body, with an Executive which depends solely on the will of the majority in that body, and where the members and the constituency belong to one race, has dealt justly with a race assumed to be inferior, and, in fact, unrepresented, especially where the relations between them have begun in a state of open war? To this intrinsic difficulty add in this case the practical difficulty arising from the peculiar relations between the two Islands at this time, the majority of the Assembly consisting of members from the Southern Island, whose interests are much less closely connected with those of the Natives than are those of the northern members, and much less seriously affected by a Native war. We do not trust men of our own race with the power of governing us until we have, secured protection in many ways against their possible misuse of power. Can we say that no safeguards are needed for the Native race? Can we reasonably expect a full acquiescence on their part until they see that some such safeguards are provided? It should be remembered that, in conferring powers on the Assembly, a reservation has always been made of Imperial interests; and what interest is more truly Imperial than the honour and good faith of the Crown of England?

Is it possible then to find safeguards which may be effectual for their purpose, yet such as to involve no minute interference with the proceedings of the Colonial Government, and no cost to the English Government? I suggest the following as being at present necessary conditions of safe legislation by the General Assembly: (a.) That the war be speedily and completely wound up. If Government, by the Assembly, is to have a fair chance of success, let it have a fair start. The Assembly will not become more competent, or better disposed for calm and wise legislation, by having first to pass through years of slow and exasperating war. (b.) Representation being, under such a form of government as ours, a necessary security for fair legislation, yet representation of the Native population being at present unattainable, let us do the best we can to supply its place. Before any measure of importance to the Natives is brought forward in the Assembly let a draft of it be published, with the proper explanations, in every district which has accepted our system, and let the people of the district be told that they are at liberty to address the Assembly by petition, and that any objections which they may entertain to such measures will in that way receive full consideration. No course can be less favourable to the peaceful settlement of the country, or the contented acceptance of our legislation, nothing more irritating even to friends and allies, than the sudden announcement that some novel and severe measure has been already passed without any previous intimation to them of what was intended. We shall not create confidence or make friends without openness and, straightforwardness on these matters. (c.) Let no Act of the Assembly affecting land still under Native tenure, or in any way especially affecting the, Natives in person or in land, be brought into operation until the Government shall have received a notification from the Secretary of State that the Royal assent has been given. Experience shows that every real safeguard against hasty legislation will be a boon to ourselves as well as to the Natives.

Administration of Native Affairs.

- 15. Equally serious is the question as to the administration of Native, affairs. At the best the Assembly can do little more than lay down sound general principles, with an outline of the mode of administering them. In this point of administration lies our great practical difficulty. I have already indicated that which appears to me the only mode of surmounting this difficulty; I will therefore be brief on this point: That for our success we need the continuous and consistent working of some one system for an adequate length of time most men will admit. Can any man, who has watched the present mode of proceeding, see in it any security for the permanance of plans and arrangements, or even for the fulfilment of promises? Supposing a Native Minister to have formed some distinct conception of what ought to be done, his office will soon be transferred to another, who may have other views or none, so short-lived are our Ministers. One of two things must be expected to happen: either the substitution of officers will be left to go on at their own discretion, without aid and without check, or business must stand still until the new man has acquired the requisite knowledge. Such a state of things would be detrimental to the public service even in routine business, but in a business so novel and peculiar as this it may be fatal. With all this delay and uncertainty, projects put forward and never carried out, one expectation after another raised and disappointed, the soreness and distrust of the Natives will remain unallayed, or even increased; many more will come to say, what too many say already, that our plans and proposals to them are maminga—devices to cheat them and gain time.

Whatever be the outward form or nature of the Native Department there must be somewhere a set of persons intrusted with special functions, and possessed of special knowledge, and empowered to carry out steadily and uninterruptedly some one consistent plan, if we intend to have contentment and peace. A mere theoretical uniformity of the outside of our administration will only screen from view a fact which it will be wiser to recognize. Special circumstances need a special organization to deal with them.

Plan proposed.

- 16. The plan of internal administration for Native districts, which I submitted in the "Notes on the Best Mode of working the Native Lands Act," and which may be established by means of that Act, interferes in no way with the existing institutions of the colony. It lets them work, and lets the Natives gradually and safely take their part in working them. Under it they must become really subjects. They cannot have the benefits of the system without working through the Government, and accepting the authority of the officers of the Government in all matters of business with the English. They will become possessed of the franchise in common with the settlers whom the operation of the Act will introduce. For their own wealth and prosperity, they must become dependent on the presence of the pakeha alongside of them. The only part of the system which will be in any degree independent will be the function of the Native Magistrates in deciding disputes among themselves—an arrangement which has always existed, and which relieves our officers, whilst it tends to satisfy within safe limits the desire of self-government. The Native Council will, if worked in the mode suggested, become simply a Board of Trustees for managing certain property, and appropriating the income amongst the purposes of the trust similar to the many local Boards which already exist in the colony. The natural effect of the measures recommended will be to unite both populations and bring them under one system.
- 17. The Native Lands Act puts into our hands a lever wherewith to move the whole Native population, a means of establishing law and carrying settlement everywhere. If this great power be thrown away or wasted, the mistake will deserve to be classed with the most serious of the mistakes hitherto made; yet we shall waste it if we are content to use it for effecting purchases here and there in detached patches and on no system.

This boon ought not to be given except on terms clearly expressed beforehand. Nothing can be so reasonable as to require that law shall be accepted and criminals given up in tracts in which we are going to plant our people. The whole history of the colonization of this Island shows the need of this. Much suffering and cost have resulted from the scattering of settlers among populations subject to no control. Therefore, whenever a desire is shown to have the benefit of this Act, that desire should be used as a means of inducing the people of a definite district to come within our system. Our great object should be to facilitate the transfer of their superfluous lands, and to clear those portions which will remain in their ownership of, the perplexities and endless questions which arise amongst a people who have no written rules and no statute of limitations. Several districts might be marked out here in the North, and I presume in the South also, each as large as an English county, in which the people as a whole desire to be one with us, and to have the protection of one system. In some one of these districts let us make a beginning of a system such as has been proposed, and on it concentrate our strength. I use these words in the fullest meaning. It is a necessity for us to use every means of influence to economize our power and combine our efforts towards this end. In such one district, or at the most two, let the plan be tested. If a clearly beneficial-result be exhibited, that result will certainly tell upon the minds of the people throughout the Island, and will gradually dispel distrust and repugnance as surely as the sun's heat removed the wayfaring man's cloak in the old fable.

If the system we introduce is to have the effect we desire, it must involve the acceptance of definite rules, and a real co-operation on the part of the Natives. To set up a system of nominal local government without such rules practically enforced, and without some exertion and sacrifice on their part, is to keep up a show which throws on the General Government the maximum of cost, and effects the minimum of good.

- 18. There is, I think, no lack of persons qualified for working this system; in fact there were some fourteen months ago in actual service in the Native Department three men who would have been quite sufficient for the Central Board. Two remain; the third, who has left the colony, might possibly be recovered. These three men possessed a large stock of knowledge, local and personal, extending over the northern and central parts of this Island, and each of them enjoyed the respect and confidence of the Natives of certain districts in a high degree. As to subordinate officers, there is a sufficient force, if we will confine ourselves to doing real, work in limited districts, and so bringing one after another effectually within our system. In fact, in the mode proposed, the presence of one able and active man in each district will be all that will be permanently necessary. The gradual settlement of Europeans in the district, which must accompany the working of the Act, will, of course, bring with it a Resident Magistrate, and in due time a District Court. The main part of the purely Native work of the district will be done by the Natives themselves.

Recent Enactments.

- 19. In all this business of bringing the Natives within the operation of the law, it behoves us to be ourselves careful to act according to law, and that the law of England. As long as we are able to say, "This is part of the law of England," we insure a certain degree of acceptance; for 'the-belief is widely entertained among them that our superiority is owing in great measure to the fact that by the act of writing we have been able to preserve and accumulate the experience and wisdom of past generations. They are willing to recognize in the greatness of our nation a proof of the excellence of our laws. But we offer them as a boon the name of English subjects (as we are now doing by the Native Rights Act just passed), and, if they find that in practice for them that name is to mean subjection to hard rules, which no man in England is subject to, they will not be eager to accept our offer. 20. A strong instance of the evil to which I am referring is supplied by the Outlying Districts Police Act, also just passed. From the beginning of our connection with the Natives, the one principle which has been more than all impressed upon them as the distinguishing excellence of the law, not only of England but of all civilized nations, is the principle that crime is to be avenged by smiting the actual offenders, and not by visiting the whole tribe with war: the more advanced among them have learnt to accept it as such.

The recent enactment embodies the opposite principle. It makes it lawful for the Governor to take land at discretion and appropriate it for purposes of settlement, wherever a supposed criminal is not given up on demand. The demand may be made on rumour or suspicion, for no previous inquiry is required by the Act; all lands alike are made subject to seizure, with only one exception applying to a very rare case.

To the Natives this must appear tyrannical. There exists amongst them no organization for the purposes of police, and' any person who may be disposed to apprehend offenders can do so only at the risk of civil war. Is this to be to them the manifestation of our authority and government, to cast on them the very work which we took upon ourselves in the beginning, and to punish them by seizure of land of all alike incase they fail to effect that which we confess to be beyond our own power? Can this appear to them anything but a device for getting land?

As to the suggestion that there is some English precedent for this enactment, true it is that in old times the inhabitants of a district were under pledge for the peace of the district, and were liable to the extent of a fine to be levied upon the district in case of a person suspected not being forthcoming. Nothing like the present enactment has proceeded from the Parliament of England, so far as I know, even in the worst times. The circumstances attending the passing of this Act were singular. Misgivings as to the probable effect of the measure were strongly expressed on all sides. I do not learn that any one member gave it a cordial support; but it was a Ministerial measure, and at that time the Opposition were not willing to give the Ministry any ground for resigning.

Amongst ourselves of late years much has been said of the necessity of keeping questions of crime apart from questions of land. This seemed to be one of the few points upon which men of all ways of thinking had come to an agreement; but all our experience is now put aside.

The new enactment affords a striking instance of the mode in which measures, which are at first defended only as exceptional, come to be extended to entirely different cases. The seizing of the land of innocent men for the offences of others whom they could not restrain and did not aid, was recently justified, in the discussions on the New Zealand Settlements Act, only as being a consequence of war. It is now attempted to make it a part of the ordinary and permanent law, and this too at the very time when the principle is abandoned in the practical working of the original enactment.

- 21. Another instance is found in an Act passed in the session of 1864, intituled "An Act enabling Land, to be taken for Roads and other Public Purposes through Native and other Districts of the Colony" (13th December, 1864, No. 5). The effect of this enactment is to assert a general authority to take land for roads, &c, at the discretion of the Government, whenever and wherever the Government may see fit. The ordinary English provisions for securing a safe exercise of this power in each particular case are omitted, and resistance to such taking is made a ground for taking more, and for applying to the case the provisions of the New Zealand Settlements Act, which in this case also are to be made a permanent part of the law of the colony.

Thus within twelve months two Acts have been passed which, if they should actually remain as law, would leave to scarcely any Maori in the country any security for the retention of an acre of his land. To these enactments the objections which were urged by the Secretary of State against the New Zealand Settlements Act apply in their full force. In consequence of these objections, it was enacted in the session of 1864 that the New Zealand Settlements Act should continue in operation until the 3rd December, 1865. In the session of 1865 the Outlying Districts Police Act was passed, by which, the extraordinary powers given by the former Act are in fact revived and greatly extended; for by the former Act the power of taking land for settlement is to be exercised only in cases where at least "a considerable number of persons shall have been engaged in rebellion against Her Majesty's authority;" whereas, under the new Act, it suffices that a single person be supposed to have committed a crime, or that a single suspected criminal be supposed to be concealed in any district.

Summary.

- 22. Thus, Sir, in this letter and the previous communication taken together, I have drawn the outline of a plan by which we may hope to arrive at a better state of things. I should have no heart for entering so fully into the subject if I did not believe the way to be still open. There is no reason for desponding about this people, but great reason for changing our mode of handling them. We have tried force, we have tried diplomacy, we have tried money. Whenever we resort to a sound and consistent policy, clearly and openly laid down, and steadily acted upon for an adequate time, then we shall succeed. We have abundant resources and means of influence if only they be used aright. The Maori population is to be rendered contented and peaceable by the same influences as other populations.
- 23. There is even much to favour the undertaking in the present state of men's minds on both sides. It is now becoming manifest to the leaders of the Maori race that the scheme of separate government for themselves cannot succeed. Many of them are even now slowly receding from it What is now wanted is something to reassure them that it is safe to trust us, and this must be derived from some exhibition of moderation and generosity on our part in winding up the war, and from the gradual establishment of a beneficial system for the future.

On the part of the settlers at large there is no hindrance now to the establishment of a just and well-considered plan. As a body they did not desire the resumption of hostilities, though the war of course became popular for a season. They are now returning, according to the wont of Englishmen, to a cooler view of things. The Maoris have won respect by their manliness in standing up in defence of their nationality against immense odds. It is now seen that the peace of this Island can be kept only by the aid of the Natives themselves. The great body of intelligent settlers are disposed to support a fair and equal system in Native matters.

Of the particular plan here suggested, the details must be gradually worked out and modified by experience, and after many conferences with Natives. It appears to me to open to the Home Government a way of escape from the pressure of obligation towards the Native people which that Government knows not how to discharge, yet cannot honourably abandon. Along with the gradual extension of the system, the Home interference and control would be gradually withdrawn. I am bold enough to believe that under the operation of such a system, steadily continued, this Island—even the minds of its Native inhabitants—may be in less than twenty years subdued, and that by a process beneficial to every man of both races.

- 24. The foregoing may be summed up in the following recommendations, which are to be taken in connection with those appended to the "Notes on the Native Lands Act:" (1) That the war be brought to an end speedily, and that on terms of cession of land, instead of mere seizure; (2) that, until the Natives be represented in the Assembly, no Bill affecting the Natives be brought forward until a draft of it shall have been published in every district which has accepted our system, and a reasonable time given for petitioning the Assembly on the subject; (3) that no Act affecting land under Native tenure, or in any way specially affecting the Natives, be brought into operation until the Royal assent has been given and duly notified in the colony; (4) that the Public Works Lands Act and the Outlying Districts Police Act be not brought into operation.

I beg, Sir, to submit these suggestions to the consideration of the Government. I also beg that a copy of this letter, together with my letter dated 18th July last, and the accompanying "Notes on the Best Mode of working the Native Lands Act," may be forwarded to the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for the Colonies.

WM. MARTIN.

The Hon. the Native Minister,

Wellington.

The CHIEF JUDGE, Native Land Court, to the Hon. the NATIVE MINISTER.

Enclosing Letter-from Judge Maning, Native Land Court.

SIR,—

Native Land Court Office, Auckland, 13th March, 1866.

I have the honour to transmit for your information the enclosed copy of a letter addressed to me by Mr. Maning, relative to a land dispute at Ohaeawae, and beg to say that I do so because I think that you will read with interest an able picture of our difficulties in the North.

I have, &c.,

F. D. FENTON,
Chief Judge.

The Hon. the Native Minister,

Wellington,

Enclosure. Mr. Judge Maning to the Chief Judge, Native Land Court.

Respecting Land Dispute at Ohaeawae.

SIR,—

Hokianga, 6th February, 1866.

I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of a set of papers relating to a land dispute at Ohaeawae, and other matters referred to me to be dealt with, and accompanied by your request that I will say what should be done in the affair.

This dispute is one of several years standing and is not the worst of several now pending in this district, any of which may not improbably bring much difficulty if not bloodshed, amongst the parties concerned.

That the Natives bring these obstinately-contested disputes which they cannot settle themselves, and which they themselves vehemently declare can only be settled by "death," before the notice both of the Executive Government and the Judges of the Native Land Court, is owing to—First. That hitherto Civil Commissioners, Police or Resident Magistrates, and Judges of Land Courts indifferently have interfered in these quarrels, having avowedly for their object the conservation of the peace and making the inquest as to the ownership of the land merely as a means to that end. Second. Both parties to the quarrel, seeing the anxiety manifested to preserve peace by the Government, think now that by threats of entering into an intertribal war, or by actually doing so, they can force a decision from the Land Court, which would be hailed by the party in whose favour it might be as an accession of prestige or moral influence in their favour, and which they would be ready to support by arms, but which often in these old and embittered disputes, into which so much personal animosity has been imported, would be equally resisted by the party against whom the decision is made.

The Natives, as I have said, do not in many cases bring these worst cases of disputed claims before a Court in any hope or expectation of a just or equitable decision, as they are aware that they can involve the case in utter obscurity by a mass of absolutely conflicting evidence; but each party hopes to obtain a favourable decision by indirect influences brought to bear on the Court or on the Judge, such as holding out a prospect of great bloodshed being likely to ensue if a decision is not come to, or, what they trust even more to, a threat to complain of the Judge to the Governor. The truth is that, from what the Natives have hitherto seen of the County or District Courts, they have acquired no better idea of the position of a Judge of a Land Court (the abstract idea of the Court and its authority is not by them at all understood as distinct from the individual holding office for the time as Judge, his personal character and interests) than that he is a subordinate executive officer, whose decisions are or may be influenced by every petty consideration of temporary expediency, or reversed by the superior officers of the Executive Government on the same grounds.

I have thought it right to make the above remarks previously to answering your request that I should say what should be done in this dispute to which the papers I have received refer, as they will show that the very great obstacles, which these Native land disputes throw at present in some cases in the way of the action of the Land Courts, are merely the effect of ignorance, or chiefly so, on the part of the Natives (I speak of this district), but which are likely to disappear gradually as the Natives are convinced by practical demonstration that the Native Land Court is an independent and impartial and strictly judicial tribunal, having power to give final decisions, or to refuse to give any decision where sufficient data or evidence is in the opinion of the Court wanting on which to found a decision. Before, however, the Native is educated to this point on the subject by observation of practical facts, illustrative of the true position, functions, and authority of the Courts, we may expect trouble from them in their endeavours to warp the action of the Court to what, in their own opinion, it ought to be— viz., a personal interference of an executive officer or officers, over whom each party hopes to prevail by interminable koreros, alarming threats of bloodshed amongst themselves, and hints of accusations to be made to head-quarters against the officer himself.

I shall now answer your question as to what should be done in this particular case and all similar ones; what in fact I consider it my duty to do as a Judge of the Native Land Court, supposing always that I read "The Native Lands Act, 1865," aright, and interpret its meaning correctly.

My procedure in this case would be exactly the same as in any other, that is, strictly according to law, and without any regard whatever to any extraneous circumstances or expedencies or consequences, except in so far as the discretionary powers vested in the Court might be applicable to such considerations. To refuse to hear any claim, supposing it in the discretion of the Court to so refuse— which I doubt—merely because it is by common report an obstinately contested one, would be to virtually come to an extrajudicial conclusion on the matter not warranted, as I think, by law or supported by evidence. (I should be glad of a legal opinion on clause 22. Does it give discretionary power to the Court to refuse a hearing?) Should, therefore, this disputed case, to which the documents received by me refer, be brought before the Court in the regular form prescribed by "The Native Lands Act, 1865," I should have no hesitation in entertaining and hearing it, and coming to a decision on the merits as established by evidence, without, as I have said before, any regard to any considerations of mere temporary expediency, or whether a breach of the peace might or might not arise from the disappointment of turbulent Natives against whom the decision might have gone, except in so far as the discretionary powers possessed by the Court might be brought to bear on those circumstances.

It is most probable, however, that in most of these pertinaciously-disputed cases no decision could be come to by the Court for the following reasons: (1.) In most cases the land would not be surveyed, as the contending parties would prevent each other making a survey, and a survey under the circumstances could not be dispensed with by the Court. (2.) From conflicting evidence; for in these obstinately-disputed claims the claimants unscrupulously contradict each other on oath, as do all the witnesses, they being mere partisans on either side, whose only object is to gain the case without much consideration of truth or justice, and to gain so much land at the expense of the other party, to sell as quickly as possible, for money to be divided amongst themselves. (3.) From question able right of both parties to the land in dispute. The Native Land Court does not decide on the ownership of Native lands by any rule of English law, but according to Maori proprietary customs, usages, and acknowledged rights; and as one of the primary Maori rights to land universally acknowledged as such is force, or the successful retention of the land against all other claimants, when the counter claimant is strong enough to jeopardize the possession of the other party a doubt may be entertained (under Maori usage) of the right itself; and this doubt evidently would apply to the right of either or both parties, and would probably lead to an adjournment and a recommendation to the parties to settle the matter amongst themselves, or a refusal by the Court to come to any formal or judicial decision on the case.

I have every hope that after a time, when the Natives have found by experience that their ferocious-disputes only retard instead of accelerating the issue of Crown grants for their land, they will give them up, and come into Court only after having agreed amongst themselves as to what their rights really are. But in the meantime we may expect some cases to occur likely to entail disaster on themselves, though as a whole I confidently believe that the operation of the Native Lands Act will prove eventually successful, and an inestimable benefit both to the Maori and European inhabitants of the country. I therefore conclude that the case in question, and which has been referred to me, ought to be entertained and heard as an ordinary case; and that in fact every application ought to be heard without considering whether it be disputed or not—a thing which can only be known, as I conceive, officially, after the case has come into Court.

I have, &c.,

F.E. MANING.

REPORT ON THE WORKING of "THE NATIVE LANDS ACT, 1865."(No. 1.)Mr. F. D. FENTON to the Hon.

J. C. RICHMOND.

SIR,—

Native Land Court Office, Auckland, 11th July, 1867.

In compliance with Mr. Hall's request, I have the honour to state that there will be no change, as far as I can see, in the expenditure necessary for the maintenance of this establishment. Some saving might be made if a Court could be legally constituted with one Assessor instead of two, in cases where the presiding Judge might think that one would suffice, but, as this would under the existing law be illegal, no deduction can be made on this account. It should be borne in mind that the officers of this department has also discharged the functions of the Compensation Court, and that no part of the permanent expenses have been charged to that department, with the exception of one clerk. I submitted this question to the consideration of Colonel Russell, stating my own opinion that £1,200 a year would be a fair portion to be placed to the account of the Compensation Court; and I also urged this view personally upon Mr. Richmond: but it was not entertained by either of these Ministers.

I observe that you request me to include in my estimate the outlay which, will be necessary on surveys, and the department organized by Mr. Heale. All the expenses of surveys are paid by the suitors, and therefore no provision is necessary under this head; and I am unable to state what funds will be necessary for the department organized by Mr. Heale. That gentleman is in the North trying to establish some base or principle on which the confusion of boundaries, &c., in that part of the country may be settled; and, though I wrote to him immediately on receipt of your letter, I presume that he has not received my communication, for he has neither arrived in Auckland nor replied to it. Mr. Heale's is an independent department, charged with other duties than examining the plans sent into this Court; and I am unable, therefore, in his absence, to furnish any estimate of the requirements of that establishment. If he has received my letter I do not doubt that he will arrive in Auckland by the next vessel, when Mr. Hall's request shall be immediately complied with.

Herewith I beg to hand you a return of the operations of this Court for the periods therein stated. Of course I have been to a great extent dependent on the clerks in the office in making out this return, and cannot vouch for its perfect accuracy. Indeed, I believe that it would be impossible between any two given dates to furnish a return that would be absolutely perfect, for, of course, many causes are in esse, and can scarcely be classed under any head; but, as far as I am able to discover, I believe the return may be implicitly relied upon in making deductions, or for any purpose for which such a return would avail. I have commenced the return, according to your desire, with the commencement of the Act in November, 1865. The period from November, 1865, to June, 1867, is not perfect, for Courts were sitting in many parts of New Zealand in June of whose operations I have, as yet, no knowledge.

In explanation of this return, I desire to state that the amount of land included in "interlocutory orders" is necessarily unascertainable with accurate certainty, as those orders were made by the Court under the authority of clause 71, which authorized surveys in certain cases to be dispensed with. But the amounts stated will not be very wrong. Thus, in the first return, the number of acres passed through the Court in this manner is stated at 564,000, comprised in thirteen orders. Eight of these were made at a Court held at Cambridge, at which I presided, and a surveyor produced rough trigono-metrical surveys of these, which showed the blocks to contain about 560,000 acres. These lands, I may mention, were the sole property of William Thompson's tribe, Ngatihaua and-Ngatikoriki, and his subject tribe Ngatiraukawa, who suffered so severely at the attack on No. 3 Redoubt at Tarauaki. For the remaining five orders I have added 4,000 acres. It is probable they will amount to very much more, as it is the large blocks of land that the Native refuses to survey until his title is established. This very sensible view was first taken by William Thompson at the Court held at Hamilton. He said that he had declined to survey land until the Court had recognized his title, for it might be that after he had completed a survey the Court might decide in favour of another's title, and how would he then recover his expense? but let the Court, he said, first decide on his title, and then he could survey with confidence. In all cases of interlocutory orders without surveys a time is limited in the order.

The orders on subdivision can only be made in case more than five names appear in the grant. In other cases the Legislature considered that subdivision was a matter for private arrangement by deed. Considering the difficulty of access to lawyers by Natives living in country parts, I think this provision might well be altered so as to allow the Natives to choose in, all cases whether they will resort to a private legal adviser to effectuate a subdivision, or whether they will return to the Court.

The production of this return has enabled me to form in my mind a system of record by which I hope in future to be able to furnish a similar and indeed a more comprehensive return without delay, and without the labour that has attended the making of this.

In compliance with the desire expressed in the concluding paragraph of Mr. Hall's letter I caused letters to be addressed to the several Judges, requesting a report of their experiences in the working of the Act, and the general effect likely to be produced by it. The replies which I have received are enclosed in this letter, and the others will be sent on as soon as they arrive. I thought that it would be more satisfactory to the Government to have the opinion of each Judge than that of myself alone, although of course based to a great extent on the operations of all.

With respect to the point on which Mr. Hall specially desires information—viz., the tendency of the Act to cause the parties to subdivide their lands—I remark that every certificate indicates as far as it goes subdivision of the tribal estate, and the insertion of certain names in a certificate of a block of land" is almost always the result of an arrangement amongst the members of a tribe, the consideration being that the names of those now inserted are to be omitted in certain other certificates, for it must be remembered that all lands are owned by the tribe. But perhaps Mr. Hall uses the word subdivision in a more limited sense, tantamount indeed to an individualization of titles. In this point of view I think the Act has not had time to operate extensively. Mr. Maning, indeed, speaks of the process as, having, commenced in the North, and being likely soon to be in active operation; but, generally speaking, I think that hitherto the Natives have only taken preliminary steps. Most of the blocks hitherto certified have been brought into Court for the purpose of enabling sales or leases to be made to Europeans, in order to raise money for the purpose of completely individualizing other, blocks or some of the blocks already passed. It must be remembered that the most formidable obstacle to the rapid progress of conversion of titles is the extreme poverty of the Natives; and the great commercial depression which has existed for the last twelve months, and which is now more aggravated than ever, has rendered sales of land almost impossible.

Two years ago no one could have foreseen the price to which land has fallen in the Province of Auckland. Thus, Walter Kukutai's tribe have in vain been offering 40,000 acres, in one block, of the finest land in the Waikato at 5s. per acre cash, or 6s. 6d. deferred payments extending over five years. A block in the North, called Waitaroto, cost 9d. an acre for survey, 1d. per acre in other expenses, and was offered for sale at 1s. per acre. I do not think, myself (although Mr. Maning differs, and I have the very highest respect for his opinion), that any great progress will be made amongst the Natives throughout the Island in obtaining individual holdings in the sense in which Mr. Hall uses the word, if I rightly apprehend his meaning, until the present period of appalling depression shall have passed away. Still, I should add that a great number of the certificates already issued are in favour of individuals, and whether these are trustees put in for the purpose of sale on behalf of the tribe, or whether they are to be regarded as intelligent members of the tribe determined to possess freeholds for themselves, it is impossible to say and it would be difficult, if not impossible, to obtain this information from the Natives, unless they are thoroughly satisfied that our motives in seeking it are not such as to excite suspicion; and to satisfy them on this as, indeed, on any other head must be the work of time and an unchanging policy. That the ultimate result of the operations of the Court will be the conversion of the Maori nation into two classes—one composed of well-to-do farmers and the other of intemperate landlords—I have little doubt, but I do not think that these results will be brought about as speedily as many people think. The intemperance and waste so noticeable amongst the Maori landlords of Hawke's Bay are matters much to be regretted; but, in my judgment, it is not part of our duty to stop eminently good processes because certain bad and unpreventable results may collaterally flow from them, nor can it be averred that it is the duty of the Legislature to make people careful of their property by Act of Parliament, so long as their profligacy injures no one but themselves. It is well that all the money squandered by the Maori landlords is spent in the place whence it is drawn. Education will cure the evil, for drunkenness is the vice of the uncultivated and brutish man.

I will take this opportunity of expressing my complete satisfaction with the Act of 1865. I never expected, nor, I think, did the Legislature expect, that it would have worked with the wonderful ease which has marked its operations. The preliminary notices and, other cautionary processes authorized by the Act have been long since nearly abandoned, and are now very rarely used. I am not aware that our operations in any single instance have excited apprehension in the minds of the Government, or caused them one moment's anxiety. Indeed, so regular and uninterrupted has been the course of proceeding, that I have been sometimes inclined to think that the vast change that has taken place in the history and status of Native land, and the views of the Maoris with respect to the Government on this great question, would not be, sufficiently appreciated.

The greatness of such a change might not be recognized, whose commencement and progress are distinguished by nothing but quiet. The entire submission of the Maoris to the decisions and orders of the Court is a feature of most encouraging promise. The first claim that William Thompson brought into Court was rejected, and an order made in favour of another, but he silently acquiesced. Indeed, I know of no case where any feeling stronger than that of temporary disappointment has been shown by suitors on the loss of a case, and occasionally we have had to resort to strong measures. In New Plymouth we sent a Maori to the gaol for twenty-four hours for prompting a witness. In Hawke's Bay Te Hapuku was forcibly ejected from the Court for disorderly behaviour; and in, Auckland chiefs were handed over, to the constables for contempt, but in no case was the slightest sympathy shown by their fellow-countrymen, and in each case a public apology was made. I should add also that each case sprang from the same cause—drunkenness. If any legislation takes place this session, I would suggest the following alterations in the Act, though they are not of sufficient importance to call for change on their account alone. Clause 12: For "two" insert "one." Clause 46: Declare that the second "therein" in the fifth line applies to the grant, and not to the certificate. Clause 50: For "five" substitute "two." Clause 55: In third line erase "lessee," and insert after "vested" in the fourth line "and by every lessee," and afterwards after "by any lessee" the words "an annual sum." Clause 62: Add a proviso that it shall be lawful for the Chief Judge from time to time to fix additional fees, and to alter those fixed by the Act, which scales of fees, when so fixed or altered and approved by the Governor in Council, shall be collectable and enforceable as if inserted in the Act. Clause 74: Enact that the execution shall be sufficient if made in the presence of the interpreter and another witness, and the declaration shall be subsequently made before a Justice of the Peace or a Judge of the Court. The last alteration would be very advantageous, as it is very difficult and expensive to get all the grantees together in the presence of a Justice and an interpreter, especially in remote parts of the country. Under the clause, as altered, the interpreter could take the deed of conveyance round to the signers.

The Act of 1866 should, I think, be entirely repealed; but the questions involved are questions of policy into which I would not willingly enter, unless invited by the Government to do so. But perhaps I ought to state that, in my judgment, the effect of this Act, so far as it has had any operation, has been of an injurious tendency, principally because both Maoris and English have seen in it a partial abandonment of the fundamental principles adopted by the Legislature in 1862, and confirmed in 1865; and I am of opinion that no law relating to Maori land or to Maoris will work well and effectually that does not command the approbation of both races. I think the Maori will progress the better the more he is exempt from protection or interference to which other citizens are not subject. I believe that in this opinion all the Judges concur.

The clause relating to an acreage fee for examination of surveys has never been brought into operation. I shall speak more fully on this question in my reply to Mr. Stafford's letter of the 15th May.

The great difficulty in the rapid conversion of the Maori titles and the individualization of holdings is the necessity and expense of surveys: some idea may be formed of the powerful character of this obstacle from the fact that the plans already in the Native Land Court Office have cost, according to Mr. Heale, nearly <?>40,000. This large sum has all been paid by the suitors nominally, though I presume that the greater part has been advanced by the intending purchasers. Nor can this expense be avoided, for it is obviously impossible to make a grant of lands unless there is a map of the land to be granted, except indeed in the few cases of islands or remarkable peninsulas.

In the Province of Auckland this difficulty is vastly increased by the unsatisfactory state of the Government survey, and the very defective surveys made by Mr. W. Clarke, who was largely employed as a surveyor in the Land Claims Court. This gentleman's surveys are extremely unconscientious, and indeed, in many cases that have come collaterally before the Court, can scarcely be called more than sketches. In the country south of the Waikato confiscated blocks the territory is untouched by surveys; and I venture to hope that Mr. Heale will be able by the establishment of a system of triangulation in those open plains, greatly to reduce the expense attendant on furnishing maps to the Court of the land to be investigated. Our operations under the form of interlocutory orders have already nearly extended up to Lake Taupo from the boundary of the confiscated block southward up the Waikato Valley, and Courts are fixed which will deal with lands extending from Maketu through the Rarawa country to Taupo; and I am aware that claims are, or soon will be, in for large tracts of country surrounding the Lake on all sides except the westerly side, and perhaps on that side also. I have great hopes that all these lands, under an improved system, may be surveyed at a greatly reduced cost.

In the Province of Hawke's Bay the Government surveys seem to be in a much better state, and the work of the Court has progressed there with less difficulty and I believe with less cost than in the Province of Auckland.

In Wellington Province the Government surveys seem to have been admirably conducted, and, as far as I know, no loss or difficulty has been occasioned to suitors in that province through the errors or defects of old surveys; but the Court has experienced singular misfortunes from the insufficiency or want of attention in some of its own licensed surveyors there. It would be very well if some of the large number of surveyors licensed in the Province of Auckland could be induced to remove to Wellington, for there is an abundance of claims from the latter province, but very few surveys.

I have refrained as much as possible in this reply from entering on questions of policy, as I do not understand that Mr. Hall desires any expression of my views on the principles of the legislation affecting Native lands. But I may be pardoned for saying that, in my judgment, nothing that has yet been tried has so largely tended to produce in the mind of the Maori peaceful desires and grateful confidence in the Legislature as "The Native Lands Act, 1865."

I have, &c.,

F.D. FENTON,
Chief Judge.

The Hon the Native Minister,

Wellington.

(No. 2.)Mr. MANING to Mr. FENTON.

SIR,—

Office of Native Land Court, Hokiamga, 24th June, 1867.

In compliance with your request, I have the honour to report on the working of "The Native Lands Act, 1865," in this district.

I shall first remark on those points to which you have called my attention—namely, the difficulties encountered, the state of the surveys, and the effect produced by the working of the Act; and shall add any remarks which I may think pertinent or likely to elucidate any part of the subject, though, from the great increase and pressure of business in this office and the necessity of preparing for a Court to be held here in a few days, I scarcely have time to give the subject the full consideration I could wish before writing.

The chief difficulties which have had to be encountered in bringing the Act to work arise from the fact that this, the Bay of Islands District, including Hokiamga, is the district which was first settled in by Europeans—the European population in Hokiamga thirty years ago having been double what it is now, and at the Bay of Islands at least equal to the present; and the difficulties, therefore, which have arisen from this cause are to a great extent peculiar to this district, and may be stated as follows (1.) The Natives in former times having sold great numbers of blocks of land in every part of the district, many or most of which passed subsequently into the hands of the Government. This would, under the most favourable circumstances, give rise sometimes to questions and disputes respecting boundaries; but it appears evident that the Government surveys, or oftener the representation of the position of the land surveyed made on the survey plans, are in many cases incorrect, and the difficulties, disputes, and suspicions arising from this cause alone have been most serious and obstructive to progress. The Natives, after the experience they have had of the working of the Act, do not suspect any deliberate intention to dispossess them of any part of their lands; but the difficulties arising from intermingled claims of the settler, the Government, and the Natives, still remain. Every Court, however, that is held will reduce this difficulty in some degree by ascertaining and finally settling the respective boundaries of Native and European claims. (2.) Not a few families and individuals, having sold in former times fully as much land as they could well spare, and being now particularly desirous to raise funds to pay for the survey and fees necessary to the procuring Crown grants for land Which they have retained (which lands, I may remark, are as a rule, almost without exception, of a far more valuable description than those which have been sold), have, being without any surplus lands to sell, endeavoured to raise the requisite funds by either bringing unfounded claims into Court or by opposing the more legitimate claims of others, with the intention of selling the land which they hoped to obtain by these means. This, together with the old Maori feuds and jealousies not unfrequently existing between the parties, led frequently to a fierce spirit of contention, making the most extreme caution, consistent with progress, necessary in the procedure of the Court, to avert violence and bloodshed. This danger had, however, to be deliberately undergone for several months. It is now much lessened in consequence of parties making false oppositions to claims finding that their pretensions are subjected to a searching investigation, and, if false, exposed; whereas it had been at first their belief that the mere fact of the opposition being made would cause the claim to be dismissed, and therefore that at the least they could obtain a bribe from the true owners of the land for withdrawing the opposition, so that the claim could be entertained. At the first Courts more than half of the Native claims were opposed in this way. (3) The other difficulties in the first working of the Act are chiefly such as are common to other districts, and chiefly arising from the desire of Natives to secure as much land as possible, under grant from the Crown, without much regard for the rights of others.

Altogether the difficulties and danger in the first operations of the Land Courts were such, at least in this district, as would have been insurmountable were it not that the Natives perceive that "The Native Lands Act, 1865," satisfies a great want and vital necessity of the Maori people, by offering them a means of extricating themselves from the Maori tenure, and obtaining individual and exclusive titles for land. That most of the middle-aged and younger Natives take this view of the matter is beyond a doubt, as is proved by many circumstances, some of which I shall notice further on, and it is to this that we owe the very marked and increasing authority which the Native Land Court has obtained in this district and, I believe, generally in the country.

That disputes and even cases of violence may occur about the division of lands is not at all unlikely amongst a people who value land now more than ever, and who, like the Ngapuhi, are ready to take arms on a small occasion. Every Court, however, which is held, and every block of land which is adjudicated upon, will render the recurrence of these land disputes more and more unlikely, merely by defining precisely and finally the boundaries of the lands of tribes and individuals, and thereby removing the causes for contention.

I think it may not be irrelevant here to remark that a very erroneous idea has been prevalent amongst Europeans as to the wishes and feelings of Natives in reference to the tenure of land. It has been thought that, because previous to the arrival of Europeans in this country the Natives did not hold their lands by individualized and exclusive titles, according to our ideas of what such titles should be, they neither wished to do so nor could understand the benefit of holding land in that manner; but the Natives are, in fact, remarkable for their fondness of appropriating individually every kind of property, land included, and the reason why they have not hitherto held their lands by exclusive individual titles is that before the arrival of the Europeans in this country it was impossible to do so.

In reference to the state of the surveys, I have only to say that I believe the surveys made under the Act are very correct, every possible precaution having been taken to insure their being so previous to their being accepted as such by the Courts, and all lands which have been adjudicated upon in this district have been surveyed. There are also a number of blocks of land surveyed which will before long be claimed in the Native Land Court.

The first sitting of the Native Land Court in this district took place on the 6th of March, 1866, or fifteen months ago. Since that time I have put on record 223 claims: of these, 17 were transferred to the Court at Mangonui for hearing, and I believe, have been adjudicated upon. One hundred and forty-three claims have been finally adjudicated upon by the Native Land Court in this district, and the remaining 63 claims should be finally disposed of at the Courts to be held during the next two months.

The blocks of land for which orders have been given are for the most part from fifty acres to one thousand acres in area. There are, however, blocks of two, five, seven, and ten thousand acres. Between one-half and two-thirds of the above land has been secured to the Native owners inalienably; the remainder they have power to sell. The average value of the alienable land is, say, about 5s. per acre; the average value of the inalienable land is, as compared to the value of the alienable, about five to one, or £1 5s. per acre; in fact, £2 per acre has been, not long ago, refused for 10,000 acres of land which is not nearly so good or valuable in any respect as the Whakaterere Block of 11,000 acres, and for which a certificate of title has been issued to the tribe, and not to individuals; but it is the intention of the Native owners to subdivide Whakaterere into over a hundred individual holdings, according as they can raise the funds to pay the expense of doing so; and in many cases, where three or four or more persons are named in grants, it is their intention ultimately to subdivide the lands, so that each man may hold his own share under a separate Crown grant; and I have no doubt that the Natives in this district will carry out this intention to a very great extent, though it will take them some time to accomplish it fully.

The cost which Native owners of lands have had to pay per acre for surveys and fees in bringing their lands before the Court ranges from 10d. per acre to £1 per acre, according to the size of the blocks, small claims costing proportionately more than large ones; and it results from this that very many Natives have paid for their own inalienable lands at all the intermediate rates per acre between 10d. and £1, which they do willingly merely for the privilege of holding their lands by grants from the Crown, and as individual property.

The land for which, as I have mentioned, £2 per acre was on a late occasion refused is unimproved land near Kaikohe, which has not yet been claimed in the Native Land Court, but that it and every acre in the district will be claimed ultimately is certain.

It is a circumstance worthy of note that during the last twenty or twenty-five years scarcely any first-rate land has been sold in this district, very little of that purchased either by the Government or settlers being nearly so valuable as the lands retained by the Natives for themselves. In one district of Hokianga where there are large and numerous tracts of the very richest alluvial soil—forinstance at Waima, at Waimamaku, at Waihou, at Mangamuka, at, Utakura, at Manganuiowe, at Omuia, at Whakarapa, and many other places—no block of really good land has ever been sold at all at any time —certainly not to the extent of twenty acres of first-rate land has been sold; the consequence is that there is not in the large and fertile district of Hokianga one settler engaged in-farming, or who has land capable of being cultivated profitably, and the European inhabitants are therefore, all who have any capital at all, engaged in commercial pursuits, and the others—labourers chiefly—in the timber trade. Another consequence is that the large tracts of fertile land which I have mentioned remain uncultivated, but there are signs appearing of a change for the better; and this brings me to that part of the subject which you have desired me also to report on, that is to say, "The effects produced by the working of the Native Lands Act in this district."

As it is but fifteen months ago that the first Court under the Native Lands Act was held in this district, and as it is but quite lately that the Crown grants have been issued here in any number, it is scarcely to be expected that in that time any very great progress would appear in a movement the success of which would create to a certainty a completely new set of circumstances with regard to the Maori people—a revolution in fact—which must of necessity displace barbarism and bring civilization in its stead; for the difference between a people holding their country as commonage and holding it as individualized real property is, in effect, the difference between civilization and barbarism. Such changes are not rapid, but there are nevertheless evidences not to be mistaken that the Natives are perfectly in earnest and alive to the benefits to be obtained by holding lands as individual property, and which benefits, if obtained by them, must reflect also upon the European population. In many places in the district the Natives are putting up substantial and expensive fences, chiefly done by European labourers. Indeed, I think some Natives are trying to do more in this way than they can accomplish. Two farms in this part of the district, the Crown grants for which were amongst the first issued, are already fenced round, the land cleared, and grass sown, and sheep (about 200) on them. I heard yesterday a Native agreeing with a European to put up two miles of fence on a fine piece of land which the Native feels sure he will get a title for. There are also many instances of Natives beginning to build better and more expensive houses than they have hitherto been accustomed to live in, and employing European carpenters for that purpose. The perceptible amount of progressive effect is certainly not yet very great, but it is sufficient to show that the Natives, especially the younger men, are moving in the right direction, and it is certain that they would never have gone to the expense which they have if the land had been held by them as formerly by the old Maori tenure. Everywhere Natives may be heard speaking of projected improvements, and I think that nothing but a want of sufficient capital prevents them from making a very rapid progress in bringing, their lands into cultivation. The fact of the Natives in this district having for so many years kept back all the choice and richest of their lands under many temptations to part with it, the fact of their having lately refused £2 per acre for land good, but not the best, and the alacrity with which they have availed themselves of the Native Lands Act, would show that in retaining their lands they have been all along acting from a set and intelligent purpose, and with a not unenlightened view to their own future interests; and in this is the best hope for the eventual success of the Native Lands Act, already successful in a small degree, and which, in my opinion, holds out to the Maori people their last chance of temporal salvation.

The only suggestion which I would make for any amendment or alteration of the Act of 1865; is that I think, it would be advantageous if section 50 of that Act were amended so as to allow that less than five persons who wish to subdivide their lands may do so in the same manner that, according to that section, more than five now can. This would facilitate the subdivision of lands, a thing, I believe, desirable; and I am of opinion that before many years scarcely any two Natives will be content to hold a piece of land jointly. Indeed they are already wishing to subdivide, and in several cases have cut the subdivision-lines on the land, and will no doubt soon apply to the Court to have the subdivision legally confirmed.

With respect to the Act of 1866, I have no suggestion to make I can only say I think it were better entirely repealed, with perhaps the exception of the 11th section—which section, however, I think hardly necessary.

I have, &c.,

F. E. Maning.
F.D. FENTON, Esq.,

Chief Judge, Native Land Court, Auckland.

(No. 3.)Mr. Maning to Mr. Fenton.

SIR,—

Hokianga, 28th June, 1867.

In addition to my report of the 24th instant, I have the honour to mention the following particulars illustrative of the working of the Native Lands Act in this district. I have lately been applied to by the representatives of tribes here for direction as to the proper mode of procedure in procuring Crown titles for four different blocks of land, two of which I estimate at about 100,000 acres each, and the other two at about 30,000 acres each. The survey of one of the 30,000-acre blocks is now nearly completed, and the application to have the title investigated will soon be sent in. The survey of the second 30,000-acre block will, I believe, soon be commenced, arrangements having been made for that purpose. The surveys of the two larger blocks may not be commenced for some time, as the expense will be very considerable, much forest line having to be cut, and the Native owners of the land will have to raise the money to meet the expense of survey previous to commencing the work, and also to come to an understanding as to exact boundaries with neighbouring Native landholders. The intention of the owners of the two larger blocks, which I estimate at about 100,000 acres each, is in the first instance to secure the whole tribal estate by a grant from the Crown to the tribe, and afterwards to subdivide the whole, giving each family its share, to be also secured by a grant from the Crown to individuals the heads of families. The labour and expense incident to the first general survey and the subsequent division and subdivision will be very great as compared to the means of the Natives for meeting it, and consequently I dare say it will be three or four years before the whole operation respecting these two blocks will be completed. The block of 30,000 acres, of which I have said the survey will probably be soon commenced, is a very valuable piece of land, and is intended to be offered for sale by the owners, who have already secured to themselves 14,000 acres of first-rate land by grants, inalienable, from the Crown, and have also about 25,000 more, which they wish to secure to themselves in the same manner, and of which the survey is now very nearly completed. Notwithstanding the heavy expense and consequent delay which Natives are put to in establishing their claims and procuring Crown grants for the same, I do not think it would be advisable, except in very exceptional cases, to give them any assistance under section 77, "Native Lands Act, 1865;" for if it was afforded in one case many applications would be made for the like, and difficulties would probably in many cases arise before the Government would be reimbursed the expense. Another reason which appears to me of weight against giving assistance as above is that the progress hitherto made in the working of the Native Lands Act has arisen and will arise from the bond fide exertions and expense gone to by the Natives themselves, and to which they have been prompted by a not unintelligent appreciation of the benefit of holding land as private property; and which progress, whatever it may be, will therefore present reliable data for political speculation, whereas under the circumstances of assistance being given, if to any considerable extent, the apparent progress made might be delusive.

I have, &c.,

F. E. MANING.

F. D. Fenton, Esq.,

Chief Judge, Native Land Court, Auckland.

(No 4)Mr MONRO to Mr. Fenton.

SIR,—

Auckland, 27th June, 1867.

I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your circular of the 17th instant, requesting a report as to the working of "The Native Lands Act, 1865."

Although always receiving the Act in a favourable light, I am unprepared for the very great success which attended it. A large quantity of land has been passed through the Court at its various sittings throughout the Northern Island, and in scarcely a single instance has a decision been appealed against. The Natives wherever I have been have repeatedly expressed their satisfaction at the mode of procedure, and appear generally to have the utmost confidence in the Court. Questions which a few years ago used to be decided by an appeal to arms they are now content to leave to its peaceful arbitration.

My operations have extended principally over the Districts of Waikato, Coromandel, Hauraki, and the Province of Hawke's Bay. In the latter place certificates of title have been issued for upwards of 290,000 acres of land, and the Natives are still sending in applications as fast as they can find money to pay for the surveys. I may safely state that at no distant period every acre of land in that province will be held under grant from the Crown. In the majority of cases no restriction on alienability was imposed, the grantee having abundance of other land. Where such was found not to be the case, the land was made inalienable. Several long-standing land disputes have been settled, which on more than one occasion had nearly led to bloodshed, and the bitter feeling engendered by such disputes is gradually dying out by the removal, through the action of the Court, of the causes which gave rise to it.

Apart from the question of surveys, I cannot say that I have experienced any difficulty in the practical working of the Native Lands Act of 1865, except what may have arisen from clause 23 limiting the number of grantees to ten persons, but this difficulty has in each instance been easily overcome, and, as one great object is to induce the Natives to individualize their titles as far as possible, I think it would be inadvisable to alter it.

In the districts above referred to the Natives have not as yet made any application for a subdivision of their lands in those cases where a grant has been issued to several, nor have they shown any inclination, as far as I am aware, to possess or cultivate individual farms. The lands passed through the Court in the Hawke's Bay Province have for the most part been leased in large blocks for sheep and cattle runs, from which the owners derive large yearly incomes. Having thus abundant means of purchasing whatever they require, they do not appear to devote much time to cultivation as a means of subsistence, and only grow what is requisite for their own consumption.

In the Coromandel District the most of the land passed through the Court has been sold to settlers in small blocks, as sites for shops, homesteads, and sawing-stations. The Natives never have cultivated extensively in this district, it being for the most part hilly and densely wooded. In agricultural districts, I think it will be found that they will endeavour to acquire individual farms.

I have, &c.,

HENRY MONRO,

The Chief Judge, Native Land Court. Judge, Native Land Court.

(No. 5.) Mr. W. B. WHITE to Mr. FENTON.

SIR,—

Native Land Court, Mangonui, 5th July, 1867.

With reference to your letter of 10th June, 1867, No. 521, I have the honour to report that I have found little difficulty in the working of "The Native Lands Act, 1865." During the many years I have been in this district I have had much to do with the Native lands, and have in a measure prepared the way by assisting to define the boundaries of the various Native claimants. The surveys have been generally backward, but the chief cause has been in the poverty of the Natives. They are in many instances unable to pay for the survey and the expenses of the Court, which has deterred them from bringing so many cases before the Court as they otherwise would have done.

Many of the grants issued have been avowedly obtained to enable the owners to sell to Europeans. Those which have been obtained for their own use the proprietors are living upon, but they have not been subdivided as yet. The Act itself is simple and easily worked, but it appears to me that, taking into consideration the very great desirability of inducing the Natives as speedily as possible to hold their lands under title from the Crown, every inducement ought to be held out to them by the Government to obtain grants. I would, therefore, abolish all fees upon inalienable property, except the fee for the Crown grant, and when the property is alienable an extra fee should be charged by the Treasurer on the transfer. When agreements to sell lands have been entered into before the survey, it is probable the purchasers have agreed with the sellers to pay the Court expenses. But the expenses deter the Natives from coming before the Court, unless they have previously agreed to sell the land. I would also suggest that the 74th clause should be altered so as to enable a conveyance to be made to a person on the attestation of a duly qualified interpreter, before a Judge or a Justice of the Peace, that the translation was correct, and was understood by the conveyor, instead of requiring all the parties to make the transfer in the presence of a Judge or Justice of the Peace. I have known persons to wait two months at Whangaroa before the necessary forms could be complied with, no Justice being resident in the district, and the expense incurred by requiring a number of Natives to travel a considerable distance is looked upon as a hardship. In this district the Natives have shown great anxiety to place as many names on the grant as possible, which, of course, adds considerably to the expense when they are required to go to a distance to transfer their property.

I have, &c.,

W. B. WHITE,

Judge, Native Land Court.

The Chief Judge, Native Land Court.

SIR,—

Resident Magistrate's Office, Kaipara, 29th July, 1867.

In acknowledging the receipt of your circular letter dated 17th June last, No. 518, I beg to state that, owing to my absence at the Wairoa, I did not receive your letter in time to reply to it before attending the Courts recently held by me in the Thames, and it was not in my power while there to write with any satisfaction to myself, as I was desirous of enclosing a statement showing the amount of work performed since the date of my appointment as Judge under "The Native Lands Act, 1865."

It will be observed from the schedule I have now the honour to enclose that my operations have extended chiefly through Kaipara, Whangarei, Mahurangi, and the Thames: Certificates ordered, Kaipara, 128,925 acres; certificates ordered, Whangarei, 64,417 acres; certificates ordered, Mahurangi, 6,635 acres; certificates ordered, Hauraki, 17,737 acres: total, 217,714 acres. Several extensive blocks of land in Whangarei, not included in the above, have passed the Court last held there, but the surveys are not yet properly executed.

Before the Act of 1865 had passed the Assembly, you did me the honour to forward a draft for perusal, with a request that I might suggest any alterations or improvements which might occur to me at the time; and as it then appeared to me that it contained every point necessary to carry out the intentions of the Act satisfactorily to the Natives of this district of country, who are deeply interested, I had no suggestion to offer. Now that my experience has extended over a considerable period of time, and I am better acquainted with its practical working, I do not hesitate to say that it has effectually met all the cases with which I have had to deal, and it is, in my opinion, complete in itself.

It is with much pleasure I have to state that the effects of the Native Lands Act on the welfare of the population of Kaipara, both Native and European, are better than I anticipated. For instance, three years ago the country was almost a wilderness; now the Natives are in receipt of half-yearly payments from [unclear: settlers] who have leased their lands for periods of sixteen and twenty-one years, and are busily occupied in stocking their runs with sheep and cattle; and a feature which never before was shown in Kaipara now begins to develop itself—namely, that fat cattle are being forwarded to the Auckland market. The Natives were never in such a position before, and I am glad to say they have as a rule sufficient sense to appreciate it. Pairama has an estate for which he receives £300 per annum. Arama Karaka, Manukau, and other chiefs are leasing extensive runs to Europeans, who are in a position to carry out their agreements; and after the next sitting of the Court shall have been held, a large proportion of the lands in central Kaipara will be taken up and stocked.

It was my intention to have made a comparative statement of the value of the property, stated in the schedule above referred to, before the Lands Act came into effect, and the value at the present time, which I believe would show better the real state of improvement than anything I could write on the subject; but I am unable to supply this information at the present time. I cannot say that the effects of the Native Lands Act have acted as stimulus to the Natives of Kaipara in improving their cultivations.

There are four chiefs belonging to the district who farm to a certain extent on European principles. Tirarau, Tomairangi, and Pairama are the principal persons who have horses and ploughs. European farming was first introduced into Kaipara by yourself years ago, by presenting Pairama with a plough; afterwards the Government, through Mr. McLean, gave ploughs to Tomairangi and Manukau, long before the Native Lands Act was passed. Te Hemara, of Mahurangi, has improved his property recently by fencing, and building a neat house with verandah and brick chimney, which may be said to have resulted from the sale of some of his land after certificates were obtained. Several weatherboarded houses have recently been erected by the Natives in Kaipara, and by my advice they are about to cause brick chimneys to be built. There is a marked improvement in the mode of living adopted by the chiefs. European articles of furniture are found in the houses about Otamatea; and I have frequently been astonished to see, at Paikia's and Arama Karaka's settlements, all the principal people living, while I have been there, quite in accordance with the manners of Europeans.

With regard to "The Native Lands Act, 1866," I have to state that it caused the Natives some excitement at the time it became generally known that further restrictions and expenses would be added in future on all lands passing through the Court. It gave me considerable trouble to allay these fears, and they appear to think of them up to the present time. They are still under an impression that the Government had in view, in passing restrictive measures on the free disposal of their lands, the object of preventing sales to private individuals, in order that the Government might hereafter buy at their own prices; and the Kaipara people were rather confirmed in this idea, because the Provincial Government of Auckland at that time commenced extensive negotiations for the purchase of land in the District of Whangarei. As the clause in the Act of 1866 regarding the inalienation of Native reserves has not application in this part of the colony, and as I have made no alteration in the fees taken in Court from the commencement, I have succeeded in showing they were not hurt by this Act. They are content; but I recollect Keene at the time had effectually stopped the further operation of the Act by inducing the chiefs not to sell any more land to Government if restrictive or further charges were imposed.

I am not prepared to say that it may not be necessary to stop the sale of certain reserves in Taranaki, Whanganui, Wellington, and Wairarapa, but my knowledge of the three latter places is very limited. I feel, however, persuaded that such measures will not be necessitated in the District of Kaipara.

I have, &c.,

JOHN ROGAN,

Judge, Native Land Court.

The Chief Judge, Native Land Court.

P.S.—"The Native Lands Act, 1865," has been translated into the Maori language and distributed. The Act of 1866 has only come to the knowledge of the Natives by hearsay; at least I have not seen a translation. The Native Assessors are called upon to assist in adjudicating under an Act written in a foreign language, which is, and must be, prejudicial to the satisfactory business of the Court until this is rectified.—J. Rogan.

No. 10. The CHIEF JUDGE, Native Land Court, to the Hon. the NATIVE MINISTER.

On the General Working of the Native Land Court, Surveys, &c.

SIR,—

Native Land Court Office Auckland, 31st July, 1867.

In reference to my letter of the 17th July, 1867, and Mr. Stafford's letter of the 15th May, 1867, I have now the honour to inform you that Mr. Heale has returned to Auckland, and is preparing a communication on the subject of surveys, and the maintenance the establishment necessary for securing their accuracy, which will go to Wellington by the same mail which conveys this. It seems to me proper that I should say a few words on this subject, and, in doing so, I do not see that I can avoid expressing an opinion on some principles of the Act of 1866, although it was not my original intention to question its policy.

I think it will be admitted that the only logical ground on which it can be argued that the expense of checking surveys of lands passing through the Courts should be borne by the suitors, is that the Governor has a right, or rather a duty, before signing a grant, to ascertain, at the expense of the persons to be benefited, that the land comprised in the grant is free from incumbrances and hostile titles; in other words, that the Crown is justified in granting the land which it proposes to grant. As far as the Court is concerned suitors have fulfilled the obligations imposed upon them by "The Native Lands Act, 1865," when they have furnished a proper survey of the lands claimed, which, complete in all technical matters, is uncontested as to its boundaries, and actually or tacitly admitted to be free from encroachments on other persons' property when the claim which it represents is heard and adjudicated upon in Court. A fee of not exceeding £1 was imposed by the Act to defray the expense of enabling the Government to employ a competent person to examine all plans on their behalf. Up to this point it would appear that the fees received are sufficient to defray the expense of the service for which they were provided, and practically, as far as anything is judicially disclosed, it is so, for when Major Heaphy was employed to examine the plans his charges were made at a certain rate per plan, which did not equal the amount of the fees charged under the Act under the head of "Examination of Plans." I should add, however, that experience has shown that a mere examination of the plans in the office does not suffice to render the Court secure in making certificates, or the Crown in making grants, for the honest execution of the work by the surveyor—i.e., whether the plan rightly represents what it pretends to represent—cannot be ascertained in many cases without an actual testing of the work on the ground.

The vast increase of the business of the Court, and the fact which has been subsequently discovered, that all the Native lands of this Island, embracing the larger portion of its entire area, would pass through the Court, and that at a rate of progress which seems to be annually accelerating, naturally caused the Government to regard with anxiety the confusion which might, and most likely sooner or later would, be produced by the operation of a large number of independent surveyors, who had no object in their work beyond that of earning money, and who might easily mislead the Court unless some officer were appointed by the Government competent from his professional knowledge to exercise some control over them, and who might, after actual examination at the locus in quo if necessary, bring before the Court any matter which required notice. Moreover, from the appointment of an officer of this description would result a compilation of all the maps, and also the gradual correction and reconciliation of previous erroneous and detached surveys. There will thus be framed a perfect and very valuable map of the country generally. It should be borne in mind that the most of the difficulties which the Court has experienced in the matter of surveys, and their technical imperfection, have resulted from the failure of the Government to secure anything approaching to a reliable map of the country, or that part of it acquired or sold, or indeed to cause to be depicted anywhere true representations of the land acquired by it from the Natives, or parted with by it to grantees. It is very probable that under the peculiar circumstances attending the history of the land at this part of New Zealand no other result could have been arrived at. The purchase at irregular intervals of blocks of land from Natives, some of them surveyed and some not; the system of sale which followed Sir George Grey's ten-shilling-an-acre Proclamation, when any person could employ his own surveyor; the acquisition of tracts of land as "surplus lands" under the Land Claims Court, marked by lines which on being tested are absolutely inaccurate, and in many cases have never been surveyed at all; added to the contract system of surveying, or rather of "line-cutting," which has so largely prevailed, have all combined to create a state of confusion and uncertainty which the Native Land Court has been the means of bringing prominently under notice, and which it and the Government have been compelled resolutely to face.

But the question of whether the Natives seeking benefit under the Act of 1865 should be compelled to pay the expense of setting all disorders right, is subject to other considerations. The expenses legitimately thrown upon them by the Act of 1865 have been borne by them without a murmur, and in fact could not be objected to with reason. They were offered certain benefits at a certain expense of money and trouble, and their refusal or acceptance of the terms offered amounts to nothing more or less than the making or refusing to make a contract.

That the Maoris generally have, with great advantage to themselves and benefit to the community at large, accepted and vigorously acted upon the beneficent offer of the Legislature is very apparent, but, in my opinion, it would not be wise, nor does justice or policy require, that any great deviation from the principles then established and the demands then made should now be advocated. When the Act of 1865 was before Parliament Mr. Robert Graham, then Superintendent of Auckland, and Mr. FitzGerald asked me if I thought there was any objection, as far as Natives were concerned, in fixing the duty at 15 per cent., instead of at 10 per cent. as proposed in the Bill, and I replied that, in my opinion, if the Legislature thought that 10 per cent. was likely to be insufficient to defray all expenses and leave a surplus, it would be advisable to fix a larger rate, but the amount then determined, whatever it was, should never afterwards be altered; in fact, that very great difficulty and embarrassment would be caused by any subsequent increase. And besides this political question, I respectfully submit that when the Legislature thinks upon the expense of maintaining Mr. Heale's establishment (which discharges other duties besides those attendant upon the operations of the Court), it should also reflect that the Natives have spent, during the last eighteen months, in surveying the land of the colony, £40,000, from which expenditure the Government indirectly obtains the benefit of having surveys and maps of the country made, for as soon as these private surveys are produced in Court they become its records, and are the property of Her Majesty, and available for public use.

Mr. Stafford particularly referred to the Act of 1866, and the tax thereby authorized, not exceeding 6d. an acre. Subject to the remarks contained in the previous part of this letter, I desire to remark that the clause to which he refers is objectionable in two points. Firstly, because the tax is made payable on the issue of the grant—i.e., by the Native grantee—a provision which would render its collection in most cases impossible; secondly, because the duty is a fixed duty, applicable equally to the block of 10,000 acres and the block of one acre, and can in no way be diminished by the fact that the Native had employed a good surveyor, whose work was in itself perfect, rendering expense by the Government needless; or be increased by the necessity of inquiring into and correcting the worthless production of an ignorant, unconscientious, or careless surveyor. As bad surveyors, generally taking less care and time in their work, can necessarily afford to make less charges than would be a fair remuneration for honest labour, this result would happen: The bad and cheap surveyors would be employed, and the good surveyors neglected by the Natives, the Government in each case alike taking care to see that the good survey was a good one, or correcting the bad one and making it a good one. The only advantage (apart from the question of revenue) which suggests itself to me as likely to result from any further imposition on account of surveys would be from the elaboration of a scheme by which the Inspector could make a demand upon the Court, supporting it with evidence of a sum not exceeding in any case—per acre, which sum would be regulated by the size of the block of land and the quality of the survey made and plan supplied by the Native suitor: in effect the demand would be regulated by the amount of trouble and expense to which he, as representing the Government, had been put. Thus the Court would judicially affix a payment in each case, variable according to the merits or demerits of the survey produced. I have known a block of 10,000 acres at Mangakabia which less required the intervention of the Inspector than a claim of one-fourth of an acre at Coromandel. The latter sold for £100, and the former for under £500; yet in one case under the Act of 1866 the duty would be 6d., and in the other £250. In the plains south of Waikato confiscation boundary there has passed through the Court a block of land containing 200,000 acres. From the open, clear, and level character of the country, and from the advantageous position of a few remarkable peaks, I am informed that the block could be profitably surveyed for £200, yet the fee for inspection under the Act of 1866 to be paid on the issue of the grant would be £5,000. It will be observed that I am speaking of the sum as fixed at 6d. an acre, the highest named in the Act. It is not the amount that is so objectionable to my mind as the fact of the duty being a fixed one at all, and not dependent upon the merits or demerits of each case.

I treat it as a matter that cannot be disputed that such an officer as Mr. Heale is indispensable, and, if the Government think that the whole burden of paying the expense of his department must be thrown upon the suitors in the Court, I feel sure that all the Judges of the Court will use their best endeavours to carry out the intentions of the Legislature and collect the tax or duty imposed or to be imposed; but I think my duty calls upon me to express my clear view that any heavy imposition will diminish the revenue instead of increasing it, by keeping away business, at least during the time of this great commercial depression. When confidence revives I feel certain that the present duties will do more than defray all direct and incidental expenses of the Court I hope you will pardon me for expressing the very great pain which I have experienced from observing that the Court appears to have established itself so weakly in the regards of the Government that it is not thought of sufficient colonial importance to warrant the maintenance of a department whose present cost, as far as I know, is under £1,000 per annum, and the maintenance of which Mr. Stafford states to be indispensable to the efficient discharge of its functions.

I first proposed the scheme of converting Native titles into tenures in 1857, and Mr. Stafford's Government thought the plan worthy of being printed and published; and in 1860 I prepared a Bill for effectuating the measure, which was approved also by him and submitted to Governor Browne; and it may be that from having devoted so much time and thought to the question, and indeed having at length, I may say, made its success the object of my life, that I am inclined to attach undue importance to the ideas which it embodies. This may be very naturally the case, but I continue to think that the great majority of the reflecting people of this colony, of both races, are also impressed with the belief that this (to use a vulgar expression) is the only card that is now left to us, and that, if this cannot be played, any solution of the Maori question, except that adopted by Alexander of Macedon, is hopeless, and I need not refer to the comparison of expense, affecting not only the provinces of the Northern Island, but the whole colony.

I have always allowed myself to believe that a reasonable confidence in the Government, and a desire to abandon strife and accept British law administered in open Courts, has followed the operations of the Land Court wherever its sittings have been held. The very remarkable case of William Thompson's tribe cannot have escaped the observation of the Government. When I sat at Cambridge the great majority of the persons present were avowed Hauhaus, and constituted tribes which have been the heart of the rebellion from the commencement. It was Ngatihaua who suffered at Mahoetahi; it was Ngatiraukawa, from Upper Waikato, who were repulsed at No. 3 Redoubt; and these were the tribes who appeared almost to a man at the Court to which I have referred. It is true that there was a silent impressive contest during the first day as the old chiefs refused to be sworn or to affirm; but their moral force was not equal to ours, and they yielded. The victory of law and order was complete, and when subsequently the disturbances were renewed at Tauranga these tribes kept aloof, although intimately interested in that part of the country, and in single individuals who joined the rebels. The lapse of a little more time will, I doubt not, see these people and the Native tribes generally actively asserting their rights as against the Hauhaus, and gaining sufficient moral courage (for want of that is the defect in the Maori character) openly to resist them, and, if necessary, forcibly to expel them or oppose their interference. When this result happens the peace of the country will be secured Confidence and quiet will return when the well-disposed of a tribe take the upper hand and restrain the caprices or infatuation of a turbulent minority, but will not be secured by the internecine contests of tribes between whom ancient feuds and hereditary animosities exist.

If I am wrong in construing Mr. Stafford's letter into an expression that the Government would not maintain an efficient machinery to enable the Court to carry out the great objects for which it was established, and that a principle which is applied to no other Court must be applied to this—viz., that it must pay its own expenses immediately, in times of great adversity as well as in times of prosperity, and that the surplus which may be fairly expected when commercial confidence returns, will not be waited for—I sincerely apologize for so misunderstanding him, and shall hear with great gratification that the rapid dominion which the Court has acquired over the minds of the Maoris, and the peaceful and willing acceptance which has followed its operations everywhere, have not been unobserved or unappreciated by him or the Government. I should add that my remarks respecting the confusion of boundaries and any other surveying questions apply only to Auckland Province; no such difficulties have been experienced in Hawke's Bay or Wellington. In the latter province especially the Government surveys appear to be in an admirable state, and I gladly take this opportunity of testifying to the Government the ready and energetic assistance which I, as administrator of the Act, and the other Judges when adjudicating, have received from Mr. Webber and Mr. Jackson, the Chief Surveyors of those provinces. Those valuable public servants have left me nothing to desire in their efforts to further our operations and remove our difficulties.

I have, &c.,

F. D. FENTON,
Chief Judge.

No. 11.[Extract from New Zealand Gazette.]Duties Payable on Native Land Sales.—Scale of Charges.

G. GREY, Governor.ORDER IN COUNCIL. At the Government House, at Wellington the eighth day of, January, 1868. Present: The President and Members of the Executive Council.

WHEREAS by an Act of the General Assembly of New Zealand, intituled "The Native Lands Act, 1867," it is enacted that, in addition to the duties made payable by the fifty-fifth section of "The Native Lands Act, 1865," there shall be paid upon each first sale or other disposal, except by mortgage, of any hereditaments or Native land, for defraying the expenses of examining, connecting, and recording surveys under the said Act, an additional duty at such rates as the Governor in Council may from time to time, and with respect to any districts to be by him from time to time defined, order, not exceeding in any case the sum of 6d. per acre upon the land or hereditament sold or disposed of:

Now, therefore, His Excellency the Governor, by and with the advice of the Executive Council, doth order that such additional duty shall be paid on such first sale or disposal at the following rate— namely: On Native land included in one certificate of title which shall not exceed 100 acres in area, at the rate of 6d. per acre; exceeding 100 acres and not exceeding 500 acres, on the first 100 acres £2 10s.; on all exceeding 100 acres, 3d. per acre; exceeding 500 acres and not exceeding 2,000, on the first 500 acres £7 10s.; on all exceeding 500 acres, 2d. per acre; exceeding 2,000 acres and not exceeding 10,000 acres, on the first 2,000 acres £20; on all exceeding 2,000 acres, 1½d. per acre; exceeding 10,000 acres, on the first 10,000 acres £70; on all exceeding 10,000 acres, 1d. per acre: and doth further order that the Colony of New Zealand shall be a district in respect of which these rates shall be paid.

FORSTER GORING,

Clerk of the Executive Council.

No. 12.[Extract from New Zealand Gazette.]

Transfer of Land Invalid until Duties be paid. Wellington, 31st January, 1868.

NOTICE to all persons having dealings with Natives in Native land.—Purchasers, lessees, and others having dealings with aboriginal natives in respect of lands, the titles to which have been passed through the Native Land Court, are hereby warned that all transfers of estates and interests so derived are invalid until the duty payable under the fifty-fifth section of "The Native Lands Act, 1865," has been paid, and the Colonial Treasurer's receipt indorsed upon the deed. With as little delay as possible after the execution of the deed of assurance it should be presented for assessment at the Registry of Deeds for the province in which the lands are situate, accompanied by an affidavit of the transferee, his solicitor, or some other person competent to speak to the facts, stating that the full consideration-money, directly or indirectly paid on the transaction, is expressed in the deed. Any deception or concealment in this respect will subject the parties to severe penalties.

On being satisfied that the true consideration is expressed, the Registrar will certify the amount of duty payable on the transaction. The deed, together with the Registrar's certificate, should then be presented at the Treasury, and the amount of the assessment paid. The Treasurer will indorse his receipt upon the deed, after which it may be registered upon payment of the usual fees.

It should be particularly borne in mind that, if the duty is not paid within six months from the date of the execution of the deed, the party liable to pay the same will be subject to a penalty of three times the amount of the duty payable; and that the Treasury will not accept payment of duty except on production of the Registrar's certificate. It should also be particularly observed that, under the provisions of "The Native Lands Act, 1867," in any case where a notification has been made by the Chief Judge of the Native Land Court to the Secretary of Crown Lands that any fees are due and unpaid for the survey of the land comprised in a certificate issued by that Court, the Crown grant of the same land cannot be registered until the said Judge shall have notified that payment of such fees has been made.

ALFRED DOMETT,

Registrar-General of Land.

[Extract from New Zealand Gazette.]

Native Title to Lands extinguished. G. F. BOWEN, Governor. A PROCLAMATION.

WHEREAS by the tenth section of "The Native Lands Act, 1867," it is enacted that any notification published in the New Zealand Gazette, and purporting to be made by the authority of the Governor, and stating that the Native title over any land therein described had been extinguished previously to a date therein specified, shall be received in the Native Land Court, and by and before every Judge thereof, in all matters which shall at any time be depending in or before such Court, or before any Judge thereof, as conclusive proof that the Native title over the land described in such notice had been extinguished at some time previously to the date therein specified, and that such land on such date had ceased to be Native land within the meaning of the said Act: And whereas it is expedient that the boundaries within which the Native title has been extinguished should be accurately defined between the summit of Pukemoremore and the Puniu River:

Now, therefore, I, Sir George Ferguson Bowen, the Governor of the Colony of New Zealand, do hereby give notice that the Native title over the block of land contained within the boundaries mentioned or described in the schedule hereunto annexed had been extinguished previously to the third day of September, 1865.

Schedule.

ALL the land lying within the following lines, that is to say, commencing at Pukorokoro, in the Gulf of the Thames, thence proceeding southward in a straight line to the Hapuakohe Pass; thence in a straight line to the summit of Pukemoremore; thence in a straight line to a conical hill named Kopuahau (otherwise called the summit of Maungakawa); thence to the summit of a peak called Takinga Wairua (Pukekura); and from thence to the southern point of Section 55, otherwise known as Orakau, in the Parish of Puniu; and thence by a straight line to the south-eastern point of Section 48, on the Puniu River; thence following the Puniu River to its junction with the Waipa River; thence in a straight line to the summit of Pirongia; thence in a straight line to the nearest point of the Waitetuna River; thence by the Waitetuna River to Whaiugaroa Harbour; thence by the harbour to the sea; thence by the sea to the Waikato Heads; thence by the Waikato River to the junction of the Mangatawhiri; thence by the Mangatawhiri River to the southern angle of the District of East Wairoa (being a district under the provisions of "The New Zealand Settlements Act, 1863"); thence in a straight line to the Surrey Redoubt; thence in a straight line to the Esk Redoubt; thence in a straight line to the commencing-point at Pukorokoro.

Dated this nineteenth day of March, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-eight, at Wellington.

By His Excellency's command.

J. C. RICHMOND.

Native Interpreters authorized. Native Office, Wellington, 3rd December, 1868.

The following gentlemen have been duly authorized to act as Interpreters under "The Native Lands Act, 1865," and "The Native Lands Act, 1867."

T. M. HAULTAIN.

MEMORANDUM by Sir WILLIAM MARTIN on the # PERATION of the NATIVE LAND COURT.

THE Acts now in operation for defining the powers and regulating the practice of the Native Land Court are the four following: "The Native Lands Act, 1865," No. 71; "The Native Lands Act, 1867," No. 43; "The Native Lands Act, 1868," No. 55; "The Native Lands Act, 1869," No. 26. It is believed that, unless these Acts be thoroughly and speedily revised and amended, great public mischief will ensue.

In January, 1870, Karaitiana, of Hawke's Bay, visited Auckland for the purpose of laying before the Native Minister the grievances of himself and others arising out of the operation of the above-named Acts. Further inquiry into the subject has shown that his statements were well founded, and that he had discerned the weak points in the existing system, through which the injustice of which he complained had found an entrance. Moreover, it has now become known that many like grievances exist, and that the Court itself has come to be regarded by many of the most intelligent Natives with strong suspicion and dislike. The visible results of the system are naturally imputed to the Court itself, and are bitterly felt as a disappointment and a wrong by intelligent men who have hitherto trusted our law and conformed to it. If we allow these men to be alienated, we shall have small chance of winning over the Native people at large to an acceptance of our law.

The two chief grievances complained of relate to certificates and Crown grants issued under the above Acts.

- 1. They complain that these instruments are so framed as to put it in the power of a few persons named in the instrument to sacrifice the rights of other persons equally interested in the land but not named in the instrument. They assert that in many cases that power has been actually exercised to the great loss of persons who had no means of protecting themselves. This complaint is just and well founded. By the Native Lands Act of 1865, section 23, it is enacted that "The Court shall ascertain the right, title, estate, or interest of the applicant, and of all other claimants; and the Court shall order a certificate of title to be made and issued, which certificate shall specify the names of the persons or of the tribe who, according to Native custom, own or are interested in the land, describing the nature of such estate or interest." By the same Act, the Governor is empowered to cause a grant from the Crown to be issued to the persons named in the certificate.

The original enactment was so framed as to secure the object of the Act as stated in the preamble, "the ascertainment of the owners," meaning, doubtless, all the owners. But upon that enactment a proviso was grafted, out of which these troubles have arisen—namely, "That no certificate shall be ordered to more than ten persons." This was added, no doubt, for the purpose of avoiding the inconvenience which would, in many cases, lie in the way of a person desiring to rent or buy land, if it were necessary for him to deal directly with all the owners. It was therefore provided that such intending lessee or purchaser should have a limited number of persons to deal with, and that the names of these persons should appear on the face of the document. That was a very reasonable object, and capable of being attained, as we shall see presently, without any unjust or injurious consequences. It could not be intended that the convenience of the purchaser was to be secured by ignoring or sacrificing the rights of any of the owners. The grievance of which we now hear is this: that the proviso and the original enactment have not been reconciled, but that the proviso has been allowed to overrule and defeat the substantive enactment to which it is appended; that, although the land comprised in the certificate may belong to more than ten persons, a certificate is granted which names only ten of the owners, and gives no indication of the existence of other owners; that the ten persons named in the certificate or the grant have not, on the face of the certificate or the grant, been made to appear as only joint owners with others unnamed and trustees or agents for those others, but have appeared on the face of those instruments as the sole and absolute owners; that as such they have, either of their own motion or being induced by other parties, conveyed the land to purchasers; and that in this way many persons have been deprived of their rights. To the sufferers hereby the loss appears to be a direct consequence of an act of the Court itself. They ask why the certificate and the grant were not so framed as to show the true state of facts; why all the owners were not protected by the law.

As to the future, this mischief is to some extent guarded against by a valuable enactment introduced into the Native Lands Act of 1867, section 17; but the remedy is not completely effective. Under that section, the names of all the persons interested in the land are to be, not indeed shown on the face of the certificate or indorsed thereon, but registered in the Court; and the certificate is to contain merely a reference to this section of the Act. but not any distinct form of words to show that the persons named as owners are at the same time trustees for other owners. This section further provides that no portion of the land is to be alienated except for twenty-one years, until it be actually subdivided among the owners. As to certificates issued before this Act of 1867, there appears to be no check as yet provided against the evils above mentioned.

- 2. Another serious grievance arises from the fact that, in the Crown grant so made to ten persons, under the earlier Native Lands Acts, the interests, even of the several grantees themselves, however diverse and unequal, are not defined.

By the Native Lands Act of 1869, section 14, it is enacted that for the future every grant shall contain the definition of the estate or interest of each of the grantees, which is required to be set forth in the certificate under the Act of 1867; and also that the estate or interest of each of the several grantees, whether theretofore granted or thereafter to be granted, shall not be deemed to be equal unless it shall be so stated in the grant: provided that the shares or interests already purchased are, for the purpose of that transaction, to be deemed equal. This provision naturally opens many questions. If the purchaser distinctly knew the quantity of the interest which he was purchasing to be not an equal share, but less or greater, is he to take more or less (as the case may be) than he actually contracted for?

- 3. The same Act of 1869, section 15, makes it not lawful for less than a majority in value of the grantees of any land under the said Acts to make any contract, lease, mortgage, or conveyance of their estate or interest in such land: Provided that, if any dispute shall arise as to such value, it shall be lawful for either of such parties to apply to the Court.

Here, in this question of value, we have an opening for unnecessary litigation. Why not allow each owner to claim a partition (as in the enactment above mentioned), and prohibit the mortgaging or selling of undivided shares? As long as the present system is allowed to continue it will breed more and more of bitterness of spirit and disaffection. When any one of the owners of such undivided property has mortgaged his undefined interest, the other owners become subject to constant pressure from those who have gained a hold on the land and desire to get possession of the whole block. Having secured the interest of some, they begin to work upon the rest, that they may be induced to yield up their interests too. These now find themselves entangled, and that by no act of their own, in a new sort of communism worse to them than their old one, because it is not fenced about by rules and customs known to themselves, but by others of an entirely strange and unknown sort. Sensible and well-disposed men find themselves harassed by claims which they regard as unjust and oppressive, and these claims often backed up by skilfully-written letters, sometimes coaxing, sometimes intimidating. Harassed in this way, the unfortunate man seeks to extricate himself. He has accepted the law, and theoretically and in general is protected by the law; but if in any particular case he seeks to bring that protection into a practical form, he must first obtain advice and guidance from men acquainted with the law. He goes to the nearest town and asks advice, but practitioners may be few, and those few may be already engaged on the opposite side. Such things as these are even now going on under the name of law and of justice. Is it likely that men possessing good common-sense, and keen and shrewd in respect of their own interests, will be easily reconciled to these things? Do we expect them to become good subjects, to obey the law readily, and support it staunchly? It is true the Legislature has now taken measures to remedy and to check frauds and abuses such as are here referred to, by the statute of last session, No. 75; but it is obvious that here, as in other cases, prevention is better than cure, even if cure be possible; and there can be no prevention except by a thorough reform of the system. There are among the Natives, of course, men who are dishonest and reckless enough to abuse, to the detriment of their fellows, the facilities which the present system furnishes. Let such men bear all the consequences of their evil deeds. I am not speaking for men of that sort, but on behalf of quiet, sober men, who have willingly received our law and accepted the Land Court, believing what they were told, that under its operation they would be placed in safe and quiet possession of their lands, free to sell them or deal with them as they might think best, without disturbance or interference from their neighbours. This was held out to them as the substantial benefit the new system was to bring with it; this was promised and was honestly intended by the promoters of the measure. Believing this, the Natives came into the plan readily. Now the result is the reverse of what was promised. There is no lack of disposition on the part of the Natives to sell land. This is an obvious fact. It is desirable for their sakes as well as ours that their superfluous lands should be alienated. The evil is this: that we are making the transfer of the land a cause of disaffection. The people are not only disturbed and unsettled, but exasperated by the present system.

- 4. Formerly the majority could protect itself, and no action was taken until a considerable amount of agreement had taken place. Now the owners feel that they have no rest. Any single Native may give notice in writing that he claims to be interested in a piece of Native land, and thereupon the Court shall ascertain the interest of the applicant, and of all other claimants in the land, and order a certificate to be-issued ("The Native Lands Act, 1865," sections 21-23). Capitalists who desire investments can have no difficulty in finding the single man needed, and the majority are forced to submit to the burden or risk the loss of their property.

- 5. If we are obliged to confess that the protection of the law which we promised these men is in these cases practically null; if we cannot, after all, supply guidance and legal help to those who need it, we can at any rate meet the evil in another way, and that the way most desirable and effectual. We need not retain those parts of the present system which tend to create troubles. We may make the system so plain as to preclude them to a great extent, and we may make the Natives acquainted with it. Let the healing enactments above referred to be made to apply not only to certificates and Crown grants of a date subsequent to the date of these enactments, but to all future dealings or dealings now incomplete under any certificates or Crown grants issued under any Native Land Court Act, whether of earlier or later date. Let all dealings with undivided interests, whether by way of sale or mortgage, be prohibited, as provided in "The Native Lands Act, 1867," section 17, any one of the persons interested being at liberty to require a partition. Let the certificate do what it was intended to do, that is, show all the owners of the land by their names, if possible, or by some sufficient description or reference. Let it also name a certain number of those owners as trustees or agents for the whole body of owners. To prevent such complaints as are now sometimes made, let a certain time, say twenty-four hours, be given by the persons interested for the nomination of these trustees. If, at the end of that time, no nomination be made, then let the Court select fit persons out of the owners to act as trustees or agents, with the powers and subject to the restrictions in "The Native Lands Act, 1867," section 17. Let these trustees or agents receive the rents and be chargeable with the due division and distribution, thereof among the owners, their receipts being valid discharges to the lessees.
- 6. As to the costliness of the Court, which is now bitterly complained of, this grievance may be met by a scale of fees, accompanied by a proper taxation of costs.
- 7. As to the jurisdiction in cases of succession to hereditaments: the present vague rule ("The Native Lands Act, 1865," section 30), "according to law, as nearly as it can be reconciled with Native custom," makes an opening for litigation in every case. The just rule of succession furnished by the Statute of Distributions is likely to be accepted by all without dispute. If now and then a dispute should arise, the question may be well left to a single Judge, or the less costly and more accessible tribunal of the Resident Magistrate. Assuming that rule, let the Natives interested according to that rule have a certain time allowed after the decease of the person last entitled within which to make a division among themselves. If no division be made within that time, then let a surveyor make the division under the direction and control of the Court.
- 8. There is too much reason to apprehend that we are now preparing for the future a store of troubles such as grew out of the proceedings of the Courts of the Commissioners of Native Land Claims. Two safeguards appear to be essential: first, that the Court should always be holden near the land of which the title is to be inquired into; secondly, that a previous survey of the land be in no case dispensed with.
- 9. As a check upon unnecessary or vexatious litigation, let the title of a party in possession for a certain number of years be not called in question except by a party who shall have deposited £—, to be applied, in case of failure, towards payment of the costs of the successful parties.
- 10. Is not the main business simply the collecting and estimating of evidence, requiring not so much legal knowledge as a certain degree of skill or acuteness in the officer collecting it, and honesty in estimating it? Might not much of this business be done by a Judge travelling from spot to spot, taking the evidence directly in Maori, and adjudging in Maori, resorting to the costly intervention of interpreters only when it may be specially called for? The chief business of the Court is in fact the business either of a Commission or of a jury. Let then a certain number of the Judges and Assessors be a jury; if unanimous, let there be no rehearing, except on the ground of evidence since discovered, and which, by full diligence, could not have been discovered before. Why keep up the resort to English counsel in a Court which is not constituted for the administration of English law, but only for the ascertainment of Native custom, and of the facts of occupation and ownership? English counsel will need interpreters. Let agents speaking both languages be the practitioners of the Court under proper regulations.

Auckland,

18th January, 1871.

THE work of a Land Court is to discover all Native owners of any given piece of land, and to insure to a European purchaser a title with quiet possession. The political importance of this cannot be over-estimated. What greater boon to both races than an inexpensive and safe means of exchanging surplus lands for cash, or other property, with mutual satisfaction? The machinery to effect this ought therefore to be simple, inexpensive, and well adapted to its work. The following points I believe to be the more important:—

Judges.

Each Judge should have assigned to him a district, as large as convenient, within which it should be his duty to make himself master of the history of its Native inhabitants, affecting the titles of their lands. All such information should be recorded in convenient forms, and copies furnished at the office of the Court. This would facilitate after-investigations, particularly if made by another Judge. By confining the work of each Judge to one district, he would become more efficient within that district. I do not doubt that he might soon acquire influence among the Natives of his district of great political as well as social value. He might, ere long, possess more knowledge on Native land matters in his district than any even of themselves, and so become a recognized authority as well as a Judge.

Assessors.

Assessors should not have family ties in the district where they are employed, in order to be as much as possible impartial.

Survey.

The surveyors to be employed should be paid officers of the Government, and form part of the staff of the Court. Natives interested should do all the work of cutting lines, and otherwise assist as required, of course without receiving any pay. Where competent, a Native should be employed as surveyor, and always some Native, while being educated as a surveyor, might act as an assistant. All surveys should be made on a uniform scale, and, whenever practicable, connected with previously determined fixed lines. Several important advantages would result from employing surveyors paid by Government. They would have esprit de corps and interest in doing their work well. There would be no temptation for fraud in deviating from a boundary-line. I lately heard of a case where deviation was made in a boundary-line after those interested in the adjoining land had left the ground, so as to include land of those parties. A Crown grant was obtained before the error was discovered.

Application for Investigation of Title.

The application should specify boundaries of land by Native names, also names of every hapu interested, and should be signed by at least one influential person of each hapu.

Investigation of Title.

After the application a preliminary inquiry should be made by the Judge on the spot, not in a formal manner, but by his visiting every neighbouring settlement. At this preliminary inquiry he should make an abstract of the title of parties interested. He should also record names of tribe or tribes and of hapus, and the names of as many as possible of the persons of each hapu, including heads of families interested. This would form the basis of a register of all the Natives of the district which he might obtain, in due time, as a natural consequence of his land investigations. He would thus do all the work which is now being done by agents paid by Natives, and he would do it much better; for, instead of fomenting jealousies of opponents as is now done by different agents, backed by the money of speculators, he might facilitate friendly compromise, at the same time that a great saving of expense would be effected.

If, after preliminary inquiry, the Court thought fit to proceed, a survey of the land should be made, after which a day should be named for more formal trial at a place the most convenient for all parties interested; and printed notices, naming the boundaries of the land, &c., and time and place of formal trial, should be posted on the land and at the neighbouring settlements, and otherwise freely circulated. At the second inquiry the Judge and Assessors should go into the case thoroughly themselves, no counsel or agent being allowed to take any part in the proceedings. English counsel are useless in a Court not constituted for the administration of English law.

Certificate of Title.

This appears to me an unnecessary complication, which it would be better to avoid.

Crown Grants.

When only one person is interested, the grant might be made free of any restrictions. When several are interested, the names of every tribe and hapu, and of the principal persons of each hapu, should be stated in the Crown grant; the persons named to have power to lease for periods not over twenty-one years, and to receive rents and divide them among the parties interested; but to have no power to sell or mortgage, being in truth merely trustees. When all parties interested are desirous to sell, the land should be advertised for sale by auction, under the direction of the Court, either in one or more lots as most for the interest of the parties concerned, a reserve price being always fixed.

It is recommended that one-half of the proceeds of the sale, after playing expenses, should be invested in Government security for the benefit of all parties interested, and not be paid off under twenty-one years; the other half only being paid in cash at the time of sale. The benefits anticipated by this arrangement are great. It would obviate the necessity of defining individual claims by survey before sale, a work of much trouble. The investing moiety of purchase-money would provide means of doing justice to minors, to a coming generation, and to any who might have suffered from unfair division of first moiety, and also form a bond of union between Natives and Europeans.

When a part only desire to sell their interests, an arrangement might be made for an equitable division of the land; one part to represent the interests of those who desired to sell, and the remainder to represent the interests of those who desired to retain their landed interests. Then the first might be sold under direction of the Court, by auction, in the manner and with the same provisions as before suggested; and a Crown grant of the remainder might be given to the representatives of the hapus of those interested therein, with power to lease for terms not over twenty-one years, if so desired.

Irresponsible Agents.

The Government has in its power to keep under its own control a powerful political engine, but has handed over the active working of an important part of the machinery to irresponsible agents, whose chief interest is naturally their own private emolument. The present system of allowing agents and counsel, paid by the Natives, to fight the title of opponents in Court, before a Judge who has only the evidence thus brought before him to judge from, is the parent of much mischief. These agents set to work to get up, to the best of their ability, the case of their clients. The land thus becomes a subject of contention in a new arena into which the Natives enter with a zest, regardless of the cost, which they never stop to estimate. Old land disputes, which have slept for years, are again stirred up, to be fought out in the Land Court. Each party is eager to support its own claims and damage its opponents. Each party is backed, behind the scenes, by some capitalist, who liberally advances cash, having in view the promised security of a mortgage at a large rate of interest. The interest is not likely to be paid, nor is it expected to be paid; but a favourable time for foreclosing will be awaited. This, I have heard on good authority, is what is being done and contemplated. The future of the successful parties is not pleasant to look forward to; the unsuccessful parties are of course dissatisfied.

What if they do not respect the decision of the Court? Is the Executive prepared to enforce its decisions? We believe there will often occur cases where amicable compromise would be a fairer and safer method than a contest as now conducted in the Land Court. But how much more difficult to bring about this after angry feelings have been stimulated by such contests. Perhaps a new trial is demanded and granted: more litigation, more expense. What with fees to the Court and fees to counsel, agents, and surveyors, the action of the Court is rendered burdensome to an extent which never could have been contemplated by the Legislature. Mr. Weld predicted that the Court would prove the straw thrown out to save a drowning race. It is feared it may prove the feather which will break the camel's back. To obtain a Crown grant for a piece of land containing less than a certain number of acres is now impracticable by reason of the expense.

Payment of Officers and Fees.

Let Judges, Assessors, and surveyors be all paid from funds appropriated by the Government for Native purposes, for it concerns equally both races to facilitate the dealings with Native lands. Let fees be demanded only—(1) For survey, at a fixed rate per acre; (2) For a Crown grant, at a moderate percentage on value of property.

Such appear to me the more necessary provisions to insure satisfactory results from the working of the Land Court.

In framing a new Act would it not be wise to make it as short and simple as possible, embodying only such provisions as are more certainly requisite, leaving it to subsequent legislation to enlarge and develop further provisions as future experience may demand?

The Act should be translated into intelligible Maori: never representing technical terms by words having a Maori form but no meaning in Maori, but by a form of words which a Maori reader will comprehend.

Sir W. MARTIN to the Hon. D. McLEAN.

SIR,—

Auckland, 29th July, 1871.

In reference to the subject of a memorandum submitted by me to the Government in January last; I have the honour to lay before you a draft Bill for consolidating and amending the laws respecting the Native Land Court.

The history of this draft is as follows: It being expected that a Bill for consolidating the Native Lands Acts would be introduced by the Government, I was requested a few months ago to frame some clauses, to be submitted to the Assembly whenever the Bill should come before it. When I consented to do so, the only object in view was to meet certain defects in the existing system. I had no thought of taking upon me the heavy and, as it may seem, the presumptuous task of framing a new Bill. But it soon became obvious that other points must be provided for, and the mutual dependence of the several parts of the subject at last made it necessary to carry the corrections, in a greater or less degree, over the whole field. The labour, which has been considerable, I shall not regret if the result shall be found serviceable to the colony. In this hope I now respectfully request you to bring this draft under the consideration of the Government.

In framing this Bill, I have benefited by the results of further inquiry and of conference with various persons conversant with the subject, including the Chief Judge and another of the Judges of the Court, and have been furnished with the views of persons interested in the subject and regarding it from different points of view. In particular, I have received valuable aid throughout from Dr. Shortland, with whose knowledge and practical experience in these matters you, Sir, are well acquainted. Some explanatory notes are appended, which, though unnecessary for yourself, may be useful to others.

You are aware, Sir, of the dissatisfaction on the part of the Natives with the Native Land Court, as dealing with their interests in a manner which they have no means of understanding, seeing that the law which prescribes the jurisdiction and powers of the Court is not accessible to them in any intelligible translation. The remedy for this will be found, not in an attempt to render into Maori, word for word, the Act which the Assembly may pass, but to frame first an intelligible statement in ordinary language (such as any intelligent man amongst us readily makes to his neighbour) of the substance of each clause, and then to put forth by authority a faithful and idiomatic version of such statement. That this mode may be fully successful, it is desirable that the structure of the Act itself be as simple and clear as possible.

On the subject of the Native Land Court different theories are current. Some think that the object of the Court should be to create a body of wealthy Native proprietors through whom the Government may influence the mass of the people; others think the sooner all alike are brought to the condition of day-labourers the better. The Bill now submitted has not been framed upon any theory whatever, but solely upon a mature consideration, with all attainable aids, of the means most likely to render the action of the Court just, intelligible, and cheap, so that it may command the confidence of both races, and be (what it ought to be) the means of securing peaceful relations between the two races throughout this Island.

I have, &c.,

WM. MARTIN.

The Hon. the Native Minister.

P.S.—The draft Bill now sent excludes the subject of the Native reserves, and leaves it for a distinct Bill, which I will send as soon as possible. It seems to me that the administration of the Native reserves, and of the income to be derived therefrom, should be closely connected with the Native Department, and not at all with the Native Land Court.

The Hon. D. McLEAN to Sir W. MARTIN.

SIR,—

Native Office, Wellington, 4th August, 1871.

I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 29th July, enclosing the draft of a Bill for the consolidation and amendment of the laws affecting the Native Land Court. It will be with the greatest pleasure that I shall submit your draft to the consideration of my colleagues, and I beg you will accept my best thanks for the arduous labour you have taken. There was no doubt that whenever any work was on hand calculated to secure peaceful relations between the two races your zealous co-operation might be depended on; and in this instance it has taken the form of most valuable suggestions. I entirely concur with you in the necessity for rendering easily intelligible a Bill affecting the interests of a race emerging from barbarism, and in eliminating from it all ideas of theory; and I have no doubt that the draft you forward will be found to answer all necessary requirements. Immediately on receipt the Bill was transmitted to the printer, and it will be shortly in the hands of Ministers for consideration.

I have, &c.,

DONALD McLEAN.

Sir W. Martin,

Auckland.

SIR,—

Auckland, 16th August, 1871.

I have the honour to forward by this mail the draft Bill for consolidating the laws relating to the Native reserves, to which I referred in my letter of the 29th July last, and which I respectfully request you to bring under the consideration of the Government.

I have, &c.,

WM. MARTIN.

The Hon. the Native Minister.

[NOTE.—For draft of the Native Land Court Act proposed by Sir William Martin, see Appendix to Journals, 1871, A.-No. 2, p. 9.—Ed.]

Mr. H. T. CLARKE to Mr. HENRY HALSE.

SIR,—

Civil Commissioner's, Office Auckland, 26th January, 1871.

I have the honour to report that I left Auckland on the night of the 16th instant to accompany the Hon. the Native Minister on a visit to the Bay of Plenty settlements, arriving at Tauranga at noon of the following day. Great numbers of Natives were in the town, chiefly Arawa, attending a sitting of the Native Land Court, presided over by Mr. Judge Smith. Everything was orderly and peaceable. No sooner was the "Luna" made fast alongside the wharf than she was thronged with Natives, each one having his own story to relate or request to make, and, to economize time, it was arranged that separate meetings of the Arawa and Ngaiterangi should be held on Wednesday, the 18th. The rest of the day was taken up in arranging the projected extension of the roads which had already been begun, and which it was intended should be vigorously prosecuted without delay.

On Wednesday the Arawa chiefs, Hori Haupapa, Matene Huaki, Wi Maihi, Mita Hikairo, Rewi, Rotohiko, and many others of less prominence, met Mr. McLean. The first subject introduced was the working of the Native Lands Act, in which the young and intelligent chiefs alone took part.

Rewi Tereanuku complained of the fresh imposition of fees, and desired to be informed how it was that a list of these fees was not published in the Gazette; that what with fees and the extraordinary way in which the surveys were allowed to be carried on, the expenses, which were a lien upon the land, were nearly as much as the land was worth; that, instead of every facility being given to bring their claims before the Court, the reverse was the case. He asked whether it was true that the reason the fees were increased was so as to help the Government to bear the working expenses of the Court, as such had been reported to them.

Aporo te Tipitipi said that not only were the fees heavy, but the manner in which the surveys had been made had greatly perplexed them. There was an instance of great hardship, which had been brought before the Court. There was one piece of land which had been surveyed, with slight alterations, no less than four times. Licensed surveyors flocked into the district, anxious to get work; they persuaded the Natives, and the Natives, believing the licensed surveyor to be in a measure responsible to the Government, had yielded, so that in one way or another it was a source of great trouble and expense. Another grievance arising out of these surveys was, they were often clandestinely made, insignificant names were introduced into the surveyor's plans, and the well-known places were altogether suppressed, so that encroachments were made, and the claimants were not aware of the fact until it was too late.

Mita Hikairo said: "I am an officer of the Native Land Court, and I feel some hesitation in speaking, but I have observed that there are alterations continually being made, and these alterations are not published in the Gazette. The Arawa were under the impression that the charges were the same as of old, and did not come prepared for these new fees. These heavy fees prevented many speaking who have a just claim to the land, simply because they have not the means to pay. Then with reference to the system of surveys. Every claimant has a survey of his own; and if all the surveys are paid out of the estate, it does not matter how large that estate is, it is swallowed up in expenses: as has already been heard, there is a piece of land at Maketu, which has, with slight variations, been surveyed four times. Already £1,200 of Arawa money has been swallowed by the surveyors; this, added to the heavy fees, is a great wrong to the Natives. It must not be thought that, because the Arawa do not bring their lands forward, therefore they have become Hauhaus. It is not so: the reason is they cannot pay the heavy expenses."

Mr. McLean replied that if he had been made aware in time he would have considered the subject of their difficulties that had been stated, and should have taken steps to have the Native Land Court adjourned for the present. And with regard to Wi Hikairo's speech, it was clear, and as an Assessor of the Court, who had had a good deal of experience, he ought to be able to judge. He would not charge the Arawa with becoming Hauhaus simply because they did not bring their claims before the Court. It was for the men they returned to the Parliament to move in this matter; they would be patiently listened to, and any suggestions or alterations they might desire would be considered. It was for matters such as these that Native members were admitted into the pakeha House of Assembly. It was not pretended that the Native Lands Act was perfect, and it would be well to urge the Maori members to assist in improving it.

Mita Hikairo said: "Now that you have introduced the subject of Maori representation, I wish to give the Maori view of that matter. We do not consider that we are sufficiently represented; there are too few returned in proportion to the number of Europeans. We do not consider that Tareha is a representative of ours; letters have been sent to him from this district, but he never took any notice of them."

Mr. McLean said: "There are several European constituencies not represented as well as the Natives, if numbers are to be taken as a basis of calculation. It was estimated that there were 40,000 Natives; they have one representative to every 10,000 inhabitants. On the other hand there are some European districts where they have nearly 20,000 inhabitants who only return one member—for instance, the gold fields. With regard to the Native members, the matter is in your own hands; the elections are now coming on, and you ought to return a man in whom you would have confidence."

Wiremu Maihi: "Why was the Tauranga District thrown into the Waikato (Northern) District, and Ngatiawa divided? Tauranga naturally belongs to the Bay of Plenty, and is closely connected with the Arawa. We held a meeting at Whakatane, and asked to have the boundary changed, but it has been overlooked. With regard to the question of the Native Land Court, why do not the Government appoint a district surveyor, who alone should survey the lands of the district to which he is appointed, and not leave the Natives to that mercy of surveyors, who, regardless of consequences, have but one object—that of getting money?"

At this stage of the proceedings, I suggested to the Natives that they should embody their ideas in the shape of a letter, and bring them under the notice of the Government, and leave the matter for its consideration. This they agreed to do. A desultory conversation took place on the mode of conducting elections, and other matters connected with Maori representation, after which the meeting broke up.

I beg to be allowed to make a few remarks upon the complaints of the Natives, especially in regard to the heavy expenses to which they are subjected in the matter of surveys. I made some inquiries, so as to satisfy myself that the allegations of the Natives were correct, and I regret to report that they have very good grounds for complaint. I would very strongly recommend that district surveyors should be appointed, who should be responsible to the Government, not only for the manner in which the surveys are executed, but also for the peace of the localities in which they act; and, to insure them every assistance from the agent of the Government resident in the district, make them subject to the directions of the Resident Magistrate. This would, I believe, relieve the Natives of the heavy expenses of which they complain, and effectually lessen the chances of awakening those bitter intertribal feelings so notorious amongst the Arawa.

There is another source of great expense to which it appears to me the Natives are unnecessarily subjected: that of professional assistance, which, by a rule of the Native Land Court, they are obliged to incur in the larger towns. Where Native title is settled by no rules of law, but by Native custom only, I do not see why English barristers should be employed. To illustrate this grievous infliction, I will instance the case of the Aroha, now being reheard in Auckland. Heta Tauranga, of the Ngatihaua, in answer to my inquiries, informs me that at the first hearing of this claim his hapu paid the sum of £170: this includes interpreter's fees; and in the present case they (Ngatihaua and Ngatihinerangi) had become liable for £187 4s. This is for professional assistance alone (lawyers and interpreters); and this expense is increasing at a daily ratio of from £8 to £10. The Natives are now hawking about their Waikato awards to raise funds to meet these—to my mind, unnecessary and ruinous—expenses; and I consider Mita Hikairo is quite justified in saying that "the real estate is swallowed up in expenses." It occurs to me that, to encourage Natives to bring their lands forward for adjudication, the expense should be cut down to a minimum rate, and that in the matter of surveys the Natives should be encouraged to do as much of the work themselves as possible.

To return to my narrative. After the conclusion of the meeting with the Arawa, if was found too late to see the Ngaiterangi. The meeting with them was therefore adjourned to the following morning, Thursday, the 19th. Early on that day the chiefs Enoka, Hamiora Tu, Hori Ngatai, Raniera te Hiabia, Wi Paura, and several of their followers, met Mr. McLean. Hori Ngatai was spokesman for the rest. He said they had only two or three matters that they wished to lay before him. He would put them, and asked the Native Minister to reply to each seriatim.

- They asked to have the Native Land Court adjourned to Maketu for two reasons: one was, that the strangers were eating up their food; and the other, that some of the Natives got excited with drink, and serious disturbances arose between the tribes. That they did not make this request on their own behalf alone, but on behalf of their European friends, with whom they lived as brothers.—Mr. McLean replied that he did not wish to interfere with the Court, but that their request should be made known to the presiding Judge.
- They wished to have the Commission for the settlement of the Tauranga land reopened, so that each individual or hapu might know to what piece of land they were entitled.—Mr. McLean replied that he had already signed a memorandum authorizing the reappointment of Mr. Clarke, and that the subdivision should be proceeded with.
- They were very anxious that village schools should be established; that they had already set apart a piece of land for the purpose, and were ready to hand it over in accordance with the law.—Mr. McLean replied that he was very much gratified to find that the Ngaiterangi were beginning to see the advantages of educating their children; that it was the only thing that would raise the Natives to a level with their pakeha neighbours; that he would give directions in the matter, but that it would be necessary that the requirements of the law (Native Schools Act) should be complied with.
- That the Ngaiterangi wished to be employed on the public works.—Mr. McLean replied that he would leave directions with Mr. Clarke; but in the meantime they should secure their crops, so as not to be interrupted while at work on the roads. He also explained that the works were all let out by contract, and that therefore the person who tendered lowest and was capable of undertaking the work would get it.

This concluded the meeting. It was on the morning of that day that a rather strange telegram was received from the Resident Magistrate at Maketu, reporting the imminence of a serious quarrel between two principal sections of the Arawa, arising out of a judgment of the Native Land Court; but, as it has been the subject of a separate letter, I will not refer to it here.

I have, &c.,

H. T. CLARKE, Civil Commissioner

The Under-Secretary, Native Office, Wellington.

Mr. H. T. CLARKE to Mr. HENRY HALSE.

SIR,—

Civil Commissioner's Office, Auckland, 27th January, 1871.

In continuation of my report of yesterday's date, I have to inform you that the Native Minister left Tauranga for the Bay of Plenty coast settlements on the night of the 19th.

In consequence of the state of Native matters at Maketu, Mr. McLean decided to land at that port, so as to give him an opportunity of visiting the principal men concerned in the quarrel which had been revived respecting their lands. We landed at 7 o'clock on the morning of the 20th.

Mr. McLean, by invitation, visited the Ngatipikiao at Te Pokiha's large "Ware Whakairo Kawatapuarangi", which was crowded almost to suffocation. As the closeness of the house was insufferable to Pokiha's endurance, the meeting was adjourned to the open air.

Te Pokiha, sweltering under a heavy dogskin mat, rose to welcome the Native Minister, and Matene te Whiwhi (who accompanied Mr. McLean in his tour). He then proceeded by saying: "What has occasioned this visit from you? Is it on account of this trouble that has arisen? The trouble has arisen from the surveyors. When I was doing militia duty at Tauranga, a survey of land was being made at Maketu. I complained to Mr. Clarke that this work was being done clandestinely, and threatened to go and pull up the surveyors' pegs. Mr. Clarke told me that it would not affect the title to the land in any way; that it was not necessary to make any demonstration in the matter. We have since found that this is not the case; that if we had interfered while the land was being surveyed we could have brought a good case in the Court. Not only so, but we find that in some instances as many as four surveys have been made of the same land. This is doing the Natives a wrong; and it is for the Government to devise means to prevent the Natives being put to such an expense. With regard to the fees of the Court, we want to have them abolished altogether; instead of the Native Land Court being a boon to us, it is a source of trouble and expense. Our disputes have grown out of these land matters. We complain of the action of the Court. In the first place I objected to Mr. Smith, because he formerly expressed to me an opinion how the land should be dealt with, in which I did not agree. We have discussed the matter amongst ourselves, whether the Court gives judgment according to evidence. If this is the case, how is it that right was construed into a wrong? Why was the land awarded to the black-faced individuals (tapuika) instead of to me? I am conscious that I am in the right. [Here Te Pokiha went into a history of the case from his point of view.] Now I intend to take possession of the land. I know it belongs to me and my tribe. I do not admit the claim of the Ngatiwhakaue. I shall clear and cultivate it at once. If I am interfered with I shall resist; the fault will not be with me." During the delivery of this speech, Te Pokiha worked himself up into a great state of excitement, and used some rather violent language towards his opponents.

Matene te Huaki spoke to the same effect, but in a milder tone, and with less gesticulation.

Mr. McLean replied that he did not know of this dispute till he arrived at Tauranga; and, as he was visiting the different settlements along the coast, he called in to hear the cause of the present difficulty. No good could arise out of a quarrel amongst themselves; it would be a subject of triumph amongst those tribes who had been opposed to them, and who were in the habit of considering the Arawa as almost identical with the pakeha, to see them disard the law by which they professed to be governed, and endeavour to settle their disputes in their old way. For the sake of peace, the Ngatipikiao had better give up their intention of taking possession of the land, as it would only tend to stir up strife and lead to evil consequences, which they would in their calmer moments regret as much as the Government.

Matene te Whiwhi then addressed the Ngatipikiao, and suggested that they should follow Mr. McLean's advice; that the winter was passed, and the summer had commenced, as they might very well tell by the note of the pipiharauroa, which is now "Whiliora." After some further conversation, in which Te Pokiha took part in a subdued and quiet manner, it was decided that the cause of quarrel should be left for future adjustment.

After taking leave of the Ngatipikiao, the Hon. the Native Minister met the Ngatiwhakaue. The old chiefs Taiapo, Hori Haupapa, and Paora te Amohau addressed Mr. McLean on the subject of the quarrel which had been revived between themselves and the Ngatipikiao through the action of the Native Land Court. Their speeches were not couched in very mild or conciliatory terms.

After them, Henare te Pukuatua, who is considered the fighting man of the Ngatiwhakaue, rose and said: "This quarrel has arisen through you. The Government are to blame; but for all that, if the Ngatipikiao wish to try their strength with the Ngatiwhakaue, we are quite ready to meet them in the battle-field. We do not wish to use the Government arms; we will use our own weapons: Do not suppose this is any new quarrel; the dispute about the land is only a pretext; the real question at issue is that of mana. Our opponents make no secret of this, and they say it must be decided some day."

The Ngatipikiao are old opponents, and the rivalry of the two hapus is traditional. Henare, in the delivery of his speech, worked himself up to a pitch of great excitement, and emulated Te Pokiha in his extravagant gesticulations.

Mr. McLean advised them to desist from their present proceedings, as it would be sure to lead them into trouble. It was not the wish of the Government to force the Native Land Court upon them. If they found that it did not work satisfactorily they could leave it alone. But it did not show any great wisdom to resort to arms simply because they did not find the Native Land Court work well in their district.

Matene te Whiwhi followed, and repeated in substance what he said to the Ngatipikiao.

Hone Mohi Tawhai, chief of Ngapuhi, then addressed the Ngatiwhakaue at some length. He went into a short history of the country from the time it was first colonized; the introduction of firearms, of missionaries, and, last of all, the establishment of the Government in these Islands. He said it was wrong to blame the Government for their troubles in this instance; that the Government had not forced the Native Lands Act upon the Natives, but that the Native had asked for it, and the Government had done their best to give them such a law as they thought would work well.

Petera te Pukuatua, Henare's half-brother, then spoke in a very quiet and conciliatory manner. He said: "Now you have heard what Ngatiwhakaue have had to say on the subject of this threatened disturbance. They have also heard your speeches. It is well; go back to your homes in peace. Do not let this matter give you any anxiety; it will not come to anything. You must not take in earnest all that has been said. Te Pokiha and the Ngatipikiao have had their say and spoken their boastful words to you, and it was nothing but right, according to Maori ideas, that Ngatiwhakaue should do the same. There is one thing I wish to say regarding these land disputes. In my opinion the coming of the Native Land Court is premature. It would be far better if we met amongst ourselves, and, with the assistance of the Resident Magistrate, determined our subdividing boundary-lines: these all settled, then the Native Land Court could, as a matter of form, do the rest. As far as the present quarrel is concerned, you may rest satisfied that it will not come to anything serious."

Subsequently the rival chiefs, Henare te Pukuatua and Te Pokiha, met and shook hands in the presence of the Native Minister. We left Maketu for Opotiki the same evening, taking with us Henare te Pukuatua, who, at his urgent request, wished to accompany the Native Minister to visit the Whakatohea and the Urewera surrendered tribes.

I have, &c.,

H. T. CLARKE, Civil Commissioner

The Under-Secretary, Native Office, Wellington.

No. 17. The Hon. D. McLEAN to the Hon. Colonel HAULTAIN.

SIR,—

General Government Offices, Auckland, 13th February, 1871.

It being desirable that information should be procured with reference to the working of the Native Lands Acts, the Government will be glad if you will undertake this duty. An impartial report upon this subject, embracing facts respecting the operations of the Acts, including the surveys and other expenses incidental thereto, the alienation of the land by the Native owners, and the expenses to which the Natives are subjected in establishing their title, will be very valuable as data upon which some revision and improvement of the existing law could be proposed to the Legislature.

I have, &c.,

DONALD McLEAN. The Hon. Colonel Haultain, Auckland.

(No. 1.) The Hon. Colonel HAULTAIN to the Hon. D. McLEAN.

SIR,—

Wellington, 18th July, 1871.

With reference to your letter (A.-No. 92) of the 13th February, 1871, requesting me to procure information with regard to the working of the Native Lands Acts, and to furnish an impartial report embracing facts respecting the operation of the Acts, including the surveys and other expenses incidental thereto, the alienation of land by the Native owners, and the expenses to which the Natives are subjected in establishing their title, I have the honour to inform you that I have minutely discussed these matters with such of the principal chiefs as I could meet at Auckland and Napier, and have communicated by letter with others who were thought most competent to express the intelligent opinion of their people. I have also conferred with a number of official personages, and with some of those Europeans who, from their calling and experience, or from their well-known sympathy towards the Native race, are qualified and entitled to express opinions in all matters connected with them. Through the courtesy of Mr. Fenton, the Chief Judge of the Native Land Court, I have had access to all the records of that office, and have received the readiest assistance from him in prosecuting my inquiries. I have procured from him various returns necessary to show the working and effects of the Acts, and I have consulted various other official documents (including Sir William Martin's and Dr. Shortland's recent memoranda) bearing upon the subject. The principal portion of these materials are attached as an appendix to this report, and extracts from Parliamentary Papers already published are included for convenience of reference; and I now proceed to summarize the information I have collected, and to offer suggestions for the remedy of those defects that are most apparent and pressing.

As comparisons will be made between the past and present systems of acquiring their surplus lands from the Natives, it is necessary that I should briefly refer to the circumstances which led to the abandonment of the old policy, under which the Government alone could lawfully deal with the Natives for the acquisition and occupation of such lands as they wished to alienate, and to the adoption—experimentally in 1862, and practically in 1865—of those laws which made provision for individualizing and fixing the titles of Native lands, waived the Crown's right of pre-emption, and empowered the owners "to dispose of their estate or interest to any persons whomsoever."

The old land-purchase system had, up to a certain period, worked well; and, although there had been at various times and on various grounds objections raised and threats made by turbulent and dissatisfied Natives with respect to some of the sales that had taken place, yet, except in one unfortunate instance—the blame of which, if any, could not be attached to the department—no serious troubles had ensued, the differences were ultimately arranged, and the engagements were respected, and nearly six million acres of land in the North Island were purchased at an average cost of not more than 1s. an acre. But the King movement amongst the Natives and the formation of the land league imposed serious hindrances to further acquisition of land; and amongst the friendly tribes there was a desire for a change of system, an impression that higher prices would be obtained from private persons, and an expectation amongst the commoners of those tribes that the individualization of title would remedy a grievance which they had keenly felt, though they had quietly submitted to it—namely, the appropriation by the chiefs of the greater part of the proceeds of the sales of their common property. With the colonists there was an impatience to see the country more freely opened to private enterprise—with some there was a recollection of the advantages that had been gained when the Crown's right of pre-emption had been waived by Governor Fitzroy; and with others a wish to free the Natives from all special restrictions, and a benevolent desire to break down those communistic customs which obstructed civilization and prevented their social improvement. Then there was the Waitara war. And there had been exhibited, in some parts of the North Island, a settled determination to deal directly with the Natives for the lease of their lands, which was not only illegal, but prevented the purchase of lands that were required for colonization; and no Government had been able to enforce obedience to the law, and it was well that such an anomaly should be wiped out. These causes and influences prevailed, the Crown surrendered its interest in the landed estate of the North Island, and the new system was fairly started in 1865. Since that time and up to the end of last year the Judges of the Native Land Court have heard 3,489 applications for investigation of title in the North Island, and have ordered certificates or Crown grants in 2,619 cases for an area of more than 2,400,000 acres.

What has been the effect of the operation of this new system? And have both Europeans and Natives realized the benefits that were expected to flow from it?

There have been, as in previous years, cases where the decisions of the Court have been disputed, and threats of violence and resistance to occupation have been uttered, but no serious troubles have hitherto ensued; and the dissatisfied are aware that turbulence on their part will not disturb the titles given by the Court. The general principle of a Court for the judicial investigation and determination of titles is almost universally accepted as satisfactory; but there have been serious defects in the Acts, which prevented the Natives from reaping all the advantages they expected, have opened the door to fraud and chicanery, and have caused much dissatisfaction amongst the sufferers. These defects have been largely modified by subsequent legislation, but they urgently require still further amendment.

There is scarcely a Native that I have examined who has expressed a desire to see the Court abolished or materially altered in its constitution. It is not to the giving of titles they object, but to the manner in which the Crown grants are prepared, which enables a few of those interested to defraud the others. The impartiality and ability of the Judges have been unquestioned. Out of the 2,619 titles that have been ordered by the Court, the instances in which their decisions have been seriously disputed are, so far as I have been able to ascertain, quite exceptional. It is to be expected that there will be some passing dissatisfaction in the minds of the losing parties, and an inclination to resist the law amongst those who have not been trained to its unquestioned acceptance; but up to the 30th December, 1870, there had been but thirty-five applications for rehearing, six only of which had been granted, and, of these six, in only two cases have the previous judgments been reversed.

Going over the statements of the Native chiefs (the majority of whom, I must remark, are chiefly from the northern parts of the Island), I find the following opinions on the subject of the Court: Tamati Waka Nene "likes the Native Land Court very well." Hemi Tautari says, "The Native Land Court has worked satisfactorily in the Bay of Islands up to the present time. I see no faults in the system. The only advantage of the old plan was that the Government bought all the bad land, which private individuals will not do." Henry Mohi Tawhai writes, "The Native Land Court—it is good exceedingly; through this we are admitted into the chief works of the Government." Eru Nehuru "approves of the Native Land Court, because it individualizes titles, and then no one can deprive the owner of his land." Wiremu Poinare says, "The Maoris who understand English customs approve of the Native Land Court." Te Wheoro wishes for a system of arbitration, instead of the Court; but he was then smarting at the loss of the Aroha case, which had just been decided against him. Paul Tuhaere "prefers the Court as it is." Wiremu Patene says, "The Native Land Court is generally approved of by the Maoris. It is a good thing." W. Hikairo "makes no objection to the Court, but proposes an elaborate plan with regard to applications for investigation of claims, and for settling disputes out of Court." Major Kemp says, "There is much trouble and confusion about the Land Court.... We do not condemn the old Court; but we are anxious to have some alterations." Harawira Tatere says, "The Natives were better off under the old system of purchase by the Government." Henry Tomoana raises no objection to the Court, but points out the evils of the present system of Crown grants. The letter of Karaitiana (printed in the Appendix of 1869, A. No. 22) expresses great dissatisfaction with the action of the Court, because it enabled one or more grantees to alienate their interest to the detriment of others, or to sell their lands in opposition to the wish of the tribe; but he does not advocate the abolition of the Court. And the same complaints are made by many other Napier Natives, who have been, more or less, sufferers primarily by the dishonesty of their own people.

The chief grievances complained of are—First. That the limitation of ten names to a Crown grant, and the giving grantees equal interests, have put it in their power to dispose of the property, or parts of it, without reference to other persons who were also more or less interested, which power has, in many instances, been exercised to the great detriment of those parties. Second. That under the present system the expenses of survey are enormous, and that the frequent sacrifice of property has been the consequence. There are other minor defects which I will presently notice. The weight of the first grievance has been felt most heavily in the Province of Napier, where much of the land is very valuable, where the Natives have acquired expensive habits and crave the means of indulging them, and where the settlers have been ready to purchase all that the Natives would alienate. The second grievance has been found to press chiefly in the northern part of the Island.

The Act of 1867 was intended to remedy the first, but it has not practically been effective. Strange to say, the Napier Natives, notwithstanding their experience, have not taken full advantage of the safeguards provided for them, and have registered their names in the Court as interested claimants, according to clause 17 of that Act, in only twelve blocks of some 42,000 acres. I attribute this chiefly to the ignorance of the mass of the Natives most concerned. They know nothing of the law, for they have never been instructed, and no translations of the Acts, or full information of their details, have ever been circulated amongst them. Even Henry Tomoana states he did not know till three years after the passing of the Act of 1867 that such a provision was in existence, and now he conceives its only object is to make the lands so treated inalienable except by lease. So that when they now wish to sell their lands they will not register any names besides those of the grantees (in some instances only one name has been put in a grant), and, when the Judge asks in the Court whether other parties are interested, there is no response. All concerned are anxious to facilitate the sale, and they will say nothing except to deceive the Judge. The framers of the Act of 1865 no doubt believed that the Natives would not fail to act honestly by each other; but the results of experience, and the statements of most of the Natives whom I have questioned on the point, prove that none can be trusted to do justice to his neighbour; and that, where the law puts the property of others in his power, the Native is not to be depended upon, for he will not hesitate to take dishonest advantage of it. Numerous instances are given from different districts, in which the grantees of property in which many are interested have appropriated to themselves the whole or the greater part of the purchase-money or rents, or have mortgaged the lands so deeply that, when sold, there was no residue to be divided amongst the outsiders. The Heretaunga Block is a notorious case in point. It was sold for £16,000 or £17,000, and Henry Tomoana himself, who was one of the grantees, confesses that the whole money (except what went to Arihi) was only sufficient to defray expenses and to pay the debts of the grantees to shopkeepers and others, and that not a penny in cash was received by them, or by the hapus who were also interested. And even the grantees themselves did not derive equal advantages. Henry's debts, by his own account, were £4,000; but old Waka Kawatini (if he is to be believed) owed only £200, and, with his people, claims more than one-half of the block, and declared that he got no cash payment at all. The ease with which grantees can mortgage or transfer the land has induced merchants, storekeepers, and others to give them large credit; and it is currently reported that unscrupulous and dishonest persons have encouraged their extravagance and vices to get them into their debt, have charged exorbitant prices for the goods they have supplied, and have taken advantage of their ignorance or intemperance to secure mortgages over the lands or portions of them: which was but a sure preliminary to transfer on their own terms. Henry Tomoana puts it forcibly: "The tradesman comes down on our heads like the monkey of a pile-driver, which crushes us by its weight and force." What money or credit the chiefs could get was too often spent in riot and debauchery, and the consequence had been that some of the principal men had been impoverished, the tribes having been defrauded, and the land has gone without a fair equivalent. As Tareha mournfully said, "Rum, rum, has dispossessed us." The Natives are greatly dissatisfied, and blame not in any way their own imprudence and dishonesty, but the operation of the law and the cupidity of the pakeha. There is, however, no doubt that this part of the law requires prompt and speedy amendment.

When it was known in Napier that I was inquiring into the working of the Native Lands Acts, I was invited by various persons to listen to statements that would have inculpated others, but, as I could not have given the accused the opportunity of vindicating themselves, I have avoided recording anything of this nature that was not necessary to demonstrate the defects of the law. It is not denied that inequitable transactions have taken place, and a commission of inquiry would be desired by those who have clean hands, and would like to be cleared from the imputations that have been cast on purchasers in general; but it is to be considered whether any public or general advantage would be gained by such inquiry. The evil has partially cured itself; it is now difficult to induce some Napier Natives to put their names or marks to a piece of paper. They have suffered from their imprudence, and will not be so easily imposed upon again.

The Native Lands Frauds Prevention Act of last year is now in operation, and is stated to be working effectively; and, although its action is not retrospective, the Supreme Court can take cognizance of cases of actual fraud, either at the instance of Government officials or of the individuals aggrieved.

The reports of these transactions, and of the poverty and humiliation of great chiefs, such as Tareha and Hapuka, cannot but have been circulated through the country, and they have no doubt been triumphantly made use of by the King party to prove to the loyal tribes how little they can depend upon the justice and friendship of the Europeans. Even amongst the friendly tribes the alarm has been given, and, as Major Kemp reports, they have had a large meeting of chiefs from different parts of the country at Parenga, where they spent five days in discussing the subject, and are about to send a deputation to the General Assembly.

Efforts are being made also by those who have felt the evil to prevent the further sales of the lands, by reserving them wherever they can, and by nominating as grantees only those who are known to be opposed to permanent alienation. There has also been discontent at Napier, because the Act of 1869 does not give them full redress in the case of shares or interests in lands which have been sold by different grantees before the Act came into operation, and provide that these several interests should not be deemed equal.

It is difficult to interfere with past transactions without doing injustice to the European purchaser, whose dealings may have been in good faith, on the assumption that the law fixed the equality of the interests; but it seems to me, from Henry Tomoana's statement on this subject, that he does not understand that the restriction only applies where actual sale has taken place, and that the Act does allow retrospective action in cases of lease and mortgage; and this is another instance showing the necessity for instructing the Natives themselves more minutely as to the various provisions that have been enacted for the protection of their rights. The Act of 1869 has, I believe, the power of removing a great portion of the hardships of which he complains. To remedy these defects, the proposition of the Chief Judge, as stated in his opinion given in Court on the 7th April, 1868, to issue no grant "that will not, on the face of it, disclose the names of all the persons who are shown to the Court by evidence to be the owners thereof" (the limit being ten names, and the land being subdivided until it is brought under this condition), and, as suggested by Sir William Martin, the prohibition of mortgage or sale of undivided shares, will meet the principal difficulties of the case. Several of the chiefs recommend it, and, although it may be attended with some inconveniences, these are nothing as compared with the evils that exist and require prompt removal.

In the case of blocks of land to which the owners may wish to fix their title, without going immediately to the expense of subdivision, certificates as now provided by section 43 of the Act of 1865 can be issued, and no such certificates should be alienable in any way whatever, except by sale to the Government or Superintendents of provinces. And the lands held under such certificates should not be subject to local rates or any other taxation. This plan, although it may temporarily affect the transfer of interests, will help to restore the confidence of the Natives who are dissatisfied with the previous action of the law, and will diminish the desire which now prevails amongst those who have experienced past evils, to make absolutely inalienable larger tracts of land than they can ever advantageously make use of. The great difficulty of subdivision is the expense of survey, but where the Natives wish to sell, and the Europeans are ready to purchase, the necessary funds will be forthcoming.

Surveys.

The other grievance which has been seriously felt, and has caused a great deal of embarrassment and discontent, arises from the practice of employing private licensed surveyors to make the necessary surveys of the land before it can be passed through the Court. In the Province of Napier, where purchasers are numerous, the Native has had no difficulty in procuring funds to pay for survey of lands that he did not intend to sell; or the intending purchaser, in case of those that he wished to acquire, has found the money, and has seen that the whole work was properly and economically performed. But, in the Province of Auckland, where there is no demand for much of the land that has received a Crown title, and where the Natives are poor, this system works very badly, and has been the means of much trouble both to the Natives and surveyors. The uncertainty of speedy payment causes the surveyors to demand excessive prices for their work. In some instances they have been kept out of their moneys for years, and have been nearly ruined by the delay, or have been obliged to sell their claims to money-lenders at an enormous discount. On the other hand, the Natives have been put to the expense of having their lands surveyed twice or three times over, either from work having been insufficiently done, and the survey having to be again made before the claim could be entertained by the Court, or from opposing claimants each employing their own surveyor for the same or part of the same block of land, because they would not trust their opponent's agent to lay down the boundaries that they insisted on. And the surveyors are so numerous and anxious for employment that they will undertake any work, believing that payment will be made sooner or later, as their claim remains a lien on the land. It is the interest of the licensed interpreter or Native agent, who receives from the surveyor 10 per cent on his receipts, to encourage and urge the Natives to put their lands through the Court. The latter are told or believe that the money need not be paid till the land has been sold, and in certain instances have made that stipulation, with a determination not to sell, and then defraud the surveyor. A loose agreement is drawn up and the work is done, but the land does not sell, or is not passed through the Court: the surveyor, impatient for his money, having perhaps no other means of livelihood, urges his demand, and the Native will either mortgage or sell his land at any sacrifice to avoid further annoyance, or will give a promissory-note; which not being paid, he is brought into the Supreme Court and judgment given against him. If he holds lands under Crown grant, or has other property, it is seized and probably sold far below its value. A maximum charge having been made, and the expenses of the Supreme Court being very heavy, when the Native does at last pay he finds the amount two or three times as much as a European would have been charged for the same work. If he would have applied to the Native Land Court the bill would have been taxed and a reasonable sum adjudged without the heavy fees of the other Court. But he does not know the law, and the surveyor prefers the Supreme Court, if he can get there.

The letter of Messrs. Turner and Jordan, and other documents which I give in the appendix, will show the existence of all these evils; but I specially quote the case of Ngakapa Whanaunga as being one of great hardship, and the price for which his land was sold at auction was so absurdly low that, if possible, some steps should be taken to cancel the sale. Ngakapa had his lands surveyed, expecting that an arrangement with a European would enable him to pay for the work; but this arrangement was not carried out, and he gave a promissory-note which he could not meet. He was sued in the Supreme Court for £560, and expenses of different kinds subsequently swelled the debt to over £1,000. He raised £400 on mortgage, and gave security for the remainder on an allotment in the Town of Shortland, on which were erected the Bank of Australasia, the old Union Bank, and other buildings, for which he was receiving a rental of £87 3s. per annum, and on mortgage of which he had been offered a loan of £400, and these were shortly after sold by auction, under writ from the Court, for £35! And he had to dispose of a cutter and other property to meet the balance still due. No wonder the Natives are dissatisfied with English law.

The necessity for the attendance of surveyors in Court to prove surveys is also a grievance to both parties, and cause much unnecessary expense. In one case a Native, named Aherata Mihinui, had to pay £10 for a survey of eleven acres, and £1 1s. a day for eighteen days to the surveyor for attendance at Court, which, with £4 4s. for Court fees, made up a sum of £43 for procuring a title for eleven acres. In December, 1870, several surveyors were detained at Tauranga for nearly a fortnight, living at inns and incurring heavy expense, because the Court would not take their evidence out of turn, though the whole of it might have been given in the course of an afternoon.

I believe that the great expense of surveys, and the consequent evils, may be satisfactorily and entirely avoided if the Government will take the work into their own hands and abolish the present system of private surveying. There is already an organized department, with an efficient staff, capable of undertaking and properly conducting the whole business, with such additional surveyors as the amount of work may require from time to time; and the extra expenses, if not fully met by the payments from the Natives, would be a charge against the provinces, which ought not to object to pay for the extension of a department which has, within the last five years, cost little over £10,000, and has put into their possession maps of survey for more than two and a half million acres of land, the cost of which has been paid for entirely by the Natives, and the value of which is estimated by Mr. Heale at nearly £100,000. In 1865, when the Native Lands Act first came into operation, the Government could not have carried on any systematic survey, as the Natives would not have permitted a chain or other instrument on their lands, but this difficulty now hardly exists, and the work will be better and more regularly performed by a Government department; and by insisting on survey in every instance before cases can be brought into Court, the Government will have in their own hands a means of regulating its business, should motives of policy ever require their interference.

Translation of Acts.

I will now detail some minor objections that have been made to other parts of the system, and would first refer to the necessity of instructing the Natives more fully in the various laws that have been made for guarding their rights and interests, and for protecting them from imposition and injustice. For this purpose a mere translation of the Acts in their technical phraseology would be of little assistance; but a summary digest, such as that in respect to criminal law by Sir W. Martin, should be prepared, and, with the Acts, be largely circulated among them. And not only should these enactments be explained to them, but they should be clearly informed of the corollaries that will certainly follow the Crown titles for their lands, such as road rates, land taxes, liabilities for fencing, &c., matters of which at the present time they have little or no conception, for it has not been the special duty or the interest of any one to enlighten them, but which will surely come upon them some day; and, as they seldom have funds, they will be compelled to sacrifice some of their lands to meet these demands; and, if they are not forewarned and prepared for this, there will arise dissatisfaction and bitterness against the Government and Legislature, whom they will accuse of having cruelly deceived them.

Dr. Shortland and others have recommended that each Judge should have a district assigned to him, within which his work should be confined; and amongst the chief reasons in favour of such a plan it has been urged that the Judges would thereby acquire valuable political influence among the Natives of the district, and more knowledge in land matters than any of themselves; and also that they would know the character of the people better, and whether their statements could be relied on. But I think that the objections to this plan have greater weight. If the Judge is to possess political influence, he would be bound to exercise it in the direction approved by the Government of the day, who only can determine what is required for the preservation of peace and for the civilization and well-being of the Maoris, and thus he would become a Government agent, which is not the position a Judge should occupy. His functions should be simply judicial, for he must be guided in his judgments only by strict evidence; and if he does not keep aloof from the Natives who have claims before the Court it will be almost impossible for him to preserve his character for impartiality. The Maoris are a peculiarly suspicious race, and it is difficult to prevent them from discussing their claims if they have access to the Judge. The Ngatihaua objected to Mr. Fenton's sitting on the Aroha case because he had resided so much amongst them and knew them so well; and one of the principal chiefs of the Ngatimaru complained that he had seen him talking to Te Raihi, a chief of the opposite party, whilst the case was going on, and, though told that he was not sitting on the case, the other replied that that was no matter, that he was the chief of the Court, and should not listen to statements made privately. The Arawas also objected to Mr. Smith's sitting in a Court held in their country, as they said he knew too much about the people; and Hemi Tautari, though content with his own Judge, says that "many Natives would prefer a stranger to investigate their claims." So that, on the whole, I believe the present system had better be maintained.

Assessors.

There is an opinion amongst many of the Natives that I have questioned that the Assessors are not of much use in Court; that they are too much in awe of the Judge, and do not exercise any influence on the judgments; that they "sit like dummies," or are like the pictures in a photographer's window, only there "to be looked at." Another, who had recently lost his claim, says, "They are so partial, and are deceivers." One of the grounds on which application was made for rehearing of the Waihi case was that the Assessor had fraternized with the other side, and the Native counsel, to whom the matter was referred, recommended a rehearing, because, amongst other things, "the Native Assessor was too intimate" with one of the parties. But scarcely one of the objectors would like to see the Assessors excluded; on the contrary, I gather that there is a craving desire amongst the Natives of intelligence for more general employment in the administration of those laws that apply to themselves, though they feel that their ignorance unfits them to be associated with European officials. Can no steps be taken to train the rising generation so that they may take part in their own government? Instead of diminishing the numbers or duties of the Assessors, I think that it would be an advantage if, in important and difficult cases, such as the Aroha or Manawatu, their numbers were increased to five or more, and the unanimous assent of Judges and Assessors should still be required. Juries can be dispensed with altogether; there has been but one instance in which a jury has been demanded, and then it did not give any satisfaction to either party.

Interpreters.

Complaints are made of the conduct of some of the licensed interpreters, and of the expense they entail, particularly in contested cases. They are said to have deceived their employers; to have procured signatures to deeds in an improper manner; to have urged the survey of lands, and the bringing-forward of unfounded claims for their own advantage; to have prompted witnesses to state falsehoods; to have interfered in opposition to the wishes of the owners, and prevented lands from being reserved, &c. But the services of agents speaking both languages cannot be dispensed with. There are men amongst them of high character and repute, and, if more were licensed, the Natives would fall into the hands of some of the inferior class, and fare worse. But the Judges should have power to cancel, or at least summarily to suspend, the licenses of those found to have been concerned in improper transactions. Their charges are sometimes very high. In the rehearing of the Aroha case, Te Wheoro states that the Ngatihaua expenses amounted to £575, of which upwards of £300 was claimed by the interpreter. But the Court can tax their bills if the Natives only knew that they had such protection.

English Counsel.

The Natives are almost universally opposed to the employment of English counsel in contested cases. They say that these know nothing of the Maori law and custom, and only protract the sittings and increase the expenses of the Court. If one side employs them, the other must do the same; but they would like to see them altogether excluded from practising in the Court.

Fees and Expenses.

The Natives, of course, wish to avoid paying the fees of the Court; but these do not add much to the expense of a suit, unless the case is a very protracted one. The total, amount charged as Court fees for the 3,607 cases that have been heard amounts to £6,085 10s. 8d., of which £3,517 2s. was in arrears on the 30th December, 1870. But the expenses outside the fees of the Court are often very heavy. In the Aroha rehearing, the expenses on the Ngatihaua—the losing side—were, as already stated, £575, and those of the Ngatimaru could scarcely have been less. In the case of the Owharoa Block at Ohinemuri, of 155 acres, the agent's charges against the Ngatikoe were £70 7s, chiefly for payment of witnesses; but I was informed by the agent that he had little hopes of getting the money, for as that party had lost the suit there was no land to give as security.

Applications for Hearing.

It has been objected that the power granted to any one Native of demanding a hearing of his claim to be interested in land has given rise to the following abuses: First, that unfounded claims have been put forward; and, second, that applications have been made by single individuals, and the case called on for hearing without the assent, or even the knowledge, of other persons or of hapus most concerned. It is important that every Native should have the privilege of individualizing his title to land, if he wishes it, and can do so without detriment to others; but to prevent these complaints application might be transmitted through the Magistrates of districts; and the Gazettes containing the notices, should be largely and promptly circulated. And if survey has to be made before a hearing, it is but in very rare instances that these objections can occur, as few persons will go to the expense of survey unless they consider their claim to be good, and surveyors cannot go on to the land without being seen.

That the Judges are very careful to reject doubtful claims is proved by the fact of their having dismissed 1,288 cases during the period that the Acts have been in operation. The Government should also have power to direct the Courts to suspend the hearing or decision of any particular cases. At present, if it is desirable to interfere, they must proclaim the Acts as suspended in a whole district, which is a clumsy and inconvenient arrangement.

Reserves.

The 20th clause of the Act of 1867 provides that "it shall be the duty of the Court in every case whatever, in which certificate of title is ordered, to inquire and take evidence as to the propriety of placing restrictions on the alienability of the land."

The letter of Mr. Fenton of the 3rd October, 1870, shows how difficult it is for the Court to ascertain what "it is the interest or the wish of the parties concerned to keep concealed." The Natives themselves cannot be depended on. Sometimes, as in the case of Henry Tomoana and others, they wish to put large tracts of land for ever out of the reach of Europeans which are not necessary for their own wants. On the other hand, Mr. Mackay, in a letter to the Auckland Evening News of April, 1871, states that "Te Hira was so embittered against the Court and Government, on account of the reservation of the Waihi Block that had been granted to him, that he stopped the Tauranga mail in consequence."

There has been no fear hitherto of the Natives as a body denuding themselves of too much land. There are still 11,000,000 or 12,000,000 acres in the North Island in the hands of the Natives, and 600,000 acres have already been made inalienable by the Native Land Court, and a great deal of this reserve is of superior quality. The Maoris have always been loth to part with their fertile land, and it is chiefly by confiscation that we have obtained any large tracts of really good land.

Judge Maning states in his report of 24th June, 1877, that "the average value of alienable land may be 5s an acre, but that what the Natives have made inalienable is worth at least five times as much." He adds that "at Hokianga not twenty acres of first-rate land has been sold, and that consequently, in that large and fertile district, there is not one settler engaged in farming, or who has land capable of being cultivated properly." Even in the Napier District, where so much land has been sold, at least 500,000 acres are still in the hands of the Natives. But, as before stated, there are cases, and not only in Napier, but in other places, where Native chiefs have been almost pauperized, having in their improvidence and extravagance made away with the greater part of their landed interests. And it is necessary that the spread of such an evil should be checked, but this is more the duty and within the sphere of the Commissioner or Trustee of Native Reserves than of the Judges of the Court.

It is impossible to obtain from the Natives any definite opinion as to the minimum quantity of land that should be reserved for each individual, and it must depend much on its quality and locality. But it would be no bad rule to lay down that each Maori chief should have amply sufficient to maintain himself like an English gentleman, supposing him to put forth the necessary industry and energy for its cultivation.

Whether it would be to the advantage of the whole body of Natives that they should have so much land reserved for their use as will eventually enable them to live in competence and ease, without exertion or stimulus to healthy industry; whether it is for their interests that the reserves should be scattered over the country, so that they might dwell amongst the colonists; or whether, as has been advocated by many of those most interested in their welfare, they should be located by themselves in separate blocks or districts, and isolated as much as possible from contact with Europeans, are questions on which the most opposite views are held by those who are considered qualified to form opinions. But I am not invited to discuss them, though I would express my belief that the last plan would be most fatal to the race.

I would, however, draw attention to the assent generally expressed by the Natives whose opinions I have recorded, that it would be desirable to reserve a portion of the proceeds of all sales of lands for the benefit of the sellers and of their children. Dr. Shortland recommends that one-half the purchase-money should be so set apart. Sir George Grey proposed to give annuities to Native chiefs as part payment of their lands; and reserved payments have been provided for in many instances. Whatever money now comes into the hands of the Natives is almost invariably squandered and wasted (or worse), with little permanent or substantial advantage to the people. The extracts I have given in the appendix show that this has been the case from the earliest days of the colony, and I believe it remains the same to the present time—their money is generally spent before they receive it. If we are to save the Maori of the next generation, he must be educated, and enabled to take his place as a citizen of the colony. And are not the means of commencing this now within reach? Reserves may be made both in money and in land for the special purpose of education, and the subject is engaging the earnest attention of some of the people themselves. Many of the natives of India go to England to be educated, and return to their own country to be physicians, ministers of religion, and advocates; and it is now the policy of their Government to employ all that are qualified in the public departments. The Japanese and Chinese are seeking knowledge and education amongst the whites. The North American Indian and the Australian may be incapable of melioration; but are not the Maoris as intelligent and as capable of high education as any nation in the world?

Expense of the Courts.

The total expenses of the Native Land Court since the passing of the Act of 1865 up to the end of the last financial year were £29,225 9s. 9d., and the receipts for the same period were £17,625 3s., being an excess of expenditure over receipts of £11,600 4s. 8d., from which, however, may be deducted the sum of £3,517, the amount of fees of Court as yet unpaid by the Natives, but which remain a lien on the land; so that the cost to the colony for the five years may be reckoned as little more than £8,000, and for this sum 2,600,000 acres of Native land have been invested with a Crown title and opened for sale to the settlers. The annual excess of expenditure has been reduced from £3,142 in 1865-66 to £293 in 1869-70; and, as sales of land have lately increased, it may be expected that the balance will be on the other side for the current year. I have not included the expense of the Survey Department, £10,497 for the five years, because I have already shown that the provinces have acquired, by means of this department, maps of much greater value at the expense of the Natives.

Land Sales.

The sales of land by the Natives within these five years have not been so extensive as, during corresponding periods under the old system. The settlers purchase only the better quality of soil, and will have nothing to do with a great deal of an inferior description, which the Government were compelled to take over when they acquired large tracts of country. The money paid to the Natives for this smaller quantity has, however, been in excess of what they have been accustomed to receive. By the Registrars of Deeds returns it appears that for 470,000 acres they have realized £162,844, an average of 6s. 6d. per acre; but a great deal of this money must have gone towards the expense of surveying the other 2,000,000 acres which have been passed through the Court.

In Hawke's Bay about 220,000 acres were sold for £87,012—about 8s. an acre; in Wellington, 21,356 acres, £9,976—about 9s. 4d. an acre; and in Auckland, 228,559 acres, £65,856—about 5s. 9d. an acre. The number of acres sold in Hawke's Bay is only an estimate based on the sales of the last fifteen months, as the registration returns from this province do not give the acreage of land sold prior to the 30th September, 1869, and none of these figures are offered as strictly accurate, for the returns are complicated by occasional variety of transactions for the same piece of land, and it is impossible to unravel them, but they are sufficiently correct for a general summary.

In the Province of Hawke's Bay I assume that there is not much Native land of good quality that is now for sale at anything like a reasonable price; but the Government have recently purchased 250,000 acres of land at the Seventy-Mile Bush for about £18,000—1s. 5d. an acre, and there have been, out of this, considerable reserves set apart for the sellers, which will be very valuable when the railway passes through the block. But in Auckland the market is glutted with Native land, and if the restrictions placed by the King over those districts where the aukati is enforced were removed there would be soon large quantities of very valuable land passed through the Court and open for sale. Of course all the country lands of this province have been depreciated in value by the action of the Court. Even so long ago as 1867, Mr. Fenton, in his letter of the 11th July to the Native Minister, writes: "Two years ago no one would have foreseen the price to which land has fallen in the Province of Auckland. Thus, Waata Kukutai's tribe have in vain been offering 40,000 acres, in one block, of the finest land in the Waikato, at 5s. per acre cash, or 6s. 6d. deferred payments extending over five years. A block in the North, called Waitaroto, cost 9d. an acre for survey, 1d. an acre for other expenses, and was offered for sale at 1s. per acre;" and prices have diminished since then, and yet only 230,000 acres out of 1,300,000 for which certificates have been ordered have been sold by the Natives. Very recently a block of 7,000 acres at the Bay of Islands, near Kirikiri, belonging to Mangonui, was sold for £300—about 8d. an acre; and large blocks, of several thousand acres, in Waikato and Kaipara have been parted with at prices varying from 1s. 6d. to 5s. per acre. 108,279 acres have been leased in the Province of Wellington for £4,465, and 434,167 acres for £8,970 per annum in the Province of Auckland. It is impossible to ascertain what rents are paid to the Natives in Hawke's Bay, as much of the land returned as leased has since been sold, and some of the lands still rented under former agreements have not been passed through the Court. £26,000 besides "accounts current" have been raised on mortgage, chiefly in Hawke's Bay and Auckland. I append lists of lands now in the hands of different land agents, with the prices that are asked, but, as a rule, these rates would be considerably reduced if a purchaser commenced negotiations.

In conclusion, I hope that it will be borne in mind that I do not submit this as a complete report of the various subjects on which I have touched. My inquiries have been made chiefly in the North, and I have not been able to visit several important districts, and it would have taken months to have gathered from all sources the facts and opinions that would have fully demonstrated the operation of the Acts, and their effect upon the Native mind, in all parts of the Island; but this incompleteness is not of so much importance, as the reports of the Judges, of the Commissioner of Native Reserves, and of those appointed under the Native Lands Frauds Prevention Act, the memoranda of Sir William Martin and Dr. Shortland, the opinions of the Native representatives, and of the depositions from several tribes who will be present during the session, will supplement the information that I have furnished if it is the intention of the Government to remit the subject for the consideration of the Legislature.

I have, &c.,

T. M. HAULTAIN.

The Hon. the Native Minister.

(No. 2.) Judge FENTON to the Hon. D. McLEAN.

Wellington, 28th August, 1871.

SIR,—

Having observed, amongst the papers placed before Parliament this session, a paper of Sir W. Martin, enclosing a memorandum by Dr. Shortland on the subject of the Native Lands Act, I have the honour to request your perusal of letters written to me by the Judges of the Court, in reply to one addressed to them requesting them to favour me with their observations on the past working of these Acts, and suggestions of amendments which it would be advisable to introduce into a consolidating Act, which I understood it was the intention of Government to bring forward this session. I have not a copy of my letter here, but the replies to it sufficiently indicate the nature of my inquiries. Mr. Smith did not reply, having been prevented, as he has informed me, by illness. I should not have deemed it necessary to trouble you with these papers, which I obtained simply for my own information and assistance, did I not think that the singular theories of Dr. Shortland, amounting, as they do, to a re-establishment of the Native protectorate in an aggravated form, might tend to influence the minds of men who have little practical acquaintance with the subject, and who might regard silence on my part as an acquiescence in the views propounded, or at least as an acknowledgment of the truth of the facts referred to as mischiefs to be remedied. On this latter and most important part of the question I can say but little, for these facts are very barely stated and the evils are described in a very meagre manner; but as far as I can gather from the memorandum of Dr. Shortland, which seems to have, had a certain influence on the mind of Sir W. Martin, the mischiefs on which he enlarges are confined to the Province of Hawke's Bay, in which the area of land yet to be dealt with is inconsiderable, and his scheme would, in my judgment, as little avail to cure them in the past as it would to prevent them for the future.

As early as 1866 I stated my views, that where counter-claimants, claimants, and proposed lessees had all a direct pecuniary interest in preventing the minute subdivision of lands, it would be impossible for any Court to discover the ownership of these lands beyond such a point as would suffice to terminate all contest amongst the claimants themselves. I therefore never expected that the Act of 1866 or 1867 would stop the mischiefs to which they were directed as they threw upon the Court a duty which it was quite incapable of performing; and so it has proved. Having once decided the class of claimants to which an estate belonged, the Court became powerless to discover more than these recognized claimants chose to disclose, as all opposition ceased. Sir W. Martin proposes to remedy this evil by carrying still further the plan which has already failed. He would reduce the Court to the position of a diplomatic negotiator first, and, having thus destroyed its standing as a judicial body, would place it on the Bench to act with authority—an idea which entirely ignores the principles of human nature. The true remedy, in my mind, was the presence of some of the local officers of the Government to watch the Courts, and bring forward such matters as were, from immediate and very apparent pecuniary interests, concealed from the Court by parties. Having failed to achieve this object by other means, when I had the honour of a seat in the Legislative Council I lost no time in introducing a Bill for the purpose. This Bill, as you know, passed the Council, but was lost in the House of [Representatives, although taken up by the Government.

The Frauds Prevention Act of last session has done much, but I respectfully submit that it does not begin at a sufficiently early stage of the proceedings in the conversion of Native titles to land. Prevention is always easier than cure, and proper provisions made in grants would absolutely prevent the possibility of transactions which the officer appointed under that Act can only frustrate after money has been spent, and, possibly, something like equities have been created.

The objections to the present system which are urged by such men as Wi Tako constitute, in my judgment, its greatest commendation. Shrewd men like him have not failed to observe that in the destruction of the communal system of holding land is involved the downfall of communal principles of the tribe, and the power of combination for objects of war or depredation. When a man is comfortably settled on his own farm, he is not ready to follow his chief in an agitation which promises nothing beyond a little excitement, and jeopardizes all he has got; and the feeling represented by Tako will doubtless spread as the power to give it any injurious operation will diminish. But for this very reason I think it just and politic that the Government should be furnished with authority to see that the old chiefs, whilst gradually losing one dignity, are invested with another. They should have sufficient land secured to them to render certain their status as gentlemen, though I should be sorry to see this principle extended to the whole race, as I understand Sir W. Martin desires shall be done. A very large number of the Maoris are, according to their customs, slaves, or entitled to no territorial rights, unless a permission to occupy is called such, and I cannot see any reason why they should be excepted from the general necessity of getting their living by labour; but, on the other hand, I see the strongest motives of policy, justice, and gratitude, why such men as Te Hapuku should be carefully provided for and their position secured. Whether Parliament will see fit to rescue men from the effects of their own improvidence it is not for me to say. I cannot avoid thinking that it would be a dangerous precedent to allow any man or class of men to gain the belief that, if their imprudence is only of sufficient magnitude, Parliament will come to his or their assistance. In the case of the Hawke's Bay Natives, I believe a great number of the transactions now complained of were perfectly fair and honourable on the part of the European purchasers, and I am not aware whether it has been found that the Supreme Court has been applied to to interfere in such cases as are of a contrary character. But I am inclined to approve of that part of Sir W. Martin's scheme which would confine the interpretation of deeds to official agents of the Court, though that gentleman does not seem at all aware how greatly this plan would increase the expense attending the execution of any conveyance.

I am not certain that when Parliament, in 1865, passed Mr. FitzGerald's Native Rights Bill, it was not premature in its action. I think the intelligence and caution of the Maori was estimated more highly than it ought to have been, for the action of the Supreme Court is rigorous, and documents, when taken there, are construed according to their expressed meaning, or their meaning implied by law, and what the party thought he was doing at the time he executed an instrument is presumed to be what he has expressed. Thus it is very probable that few interpreters have thought it part of their duty to explain, in the interpretation of a mortgage, that non-payment of interest involved the power of sale, with or without the intervention of the Supreme Court; nor is it probable that Maoris were aware that non-payment of their debts might be followed by judgment in the Supreme Court and the seizure of their lands by the Sheriff. Indeed, I have had letters from Natives complaining, as an injustice, that since they have obtained Crown grants to their lands they have been compelled to pay their debts, and these complaints without reference to the character of their debts. But all these questions are questions of grave policy, the principle of which Parliament alone can decide. That the time must come when nobody will venture to deny that if the Maoris are to have the advantages of British subjects they must also have the liabilities and burdens, no one will venture to deny, but whether that time has as yet arrived it is quite clear, from Sir W. Martin's paper, that influential and conscientious men have not unanimously decided. But, until the voice of the Legislature on this question is declared, I respectfully submit, as my own opinion, that it would not be wise to retrograde, especially as the lesson has now been learnt.

As a great public question, I think it is admitted that the chief object of the Government of a colony is as rapidly as possible to cause the waste lands to be brought into profitable occupation, by cattle and sheep first, but ultimately by the labour of a settled agricultural population. It is contrary to the habits of the Maori to cultivate more than a very limited area; but it is a matter of public concern that such an area should be secured to them, free from all power of alienation; and, that settlement having been completed, I cannot but think that they should be at liberty to deal with the remainder of their wastes as they think best. But in the exercise of this discretion they will not, of course, be precluded from accepting the advice of the Government or of their friends amongst the European race. If the quantity of land determined by the officers of the Crown as necessary to be retained by the Maoris in the case of the final settlement of their claims under the Ngaitahu deed, is to be taken as a criterion, I think it will be found that the amount locked up, even in Hawke's Bay, still exceeds their necessities. Whether they would willingly submit to have any portion of the proceeds of future sales permanently invested I am not prepared to say, but I should not be surprised to see any such interference, although intended and likely to prove for their good, very seriously resisted. Although the Maoris, like every one else, lament the result of their own imprudence, it does not follow that they would relish the power to commit the imprudent acts being taken away from them.

I also enclose for your perusal a memorandum by Mr. Heale, the Inspector of Surveys. That gentleman has, I think, suggested matter for very grave reflection. The progress of the Court has, perhaps, been too rapid, and I would willingly see more power given to the Government to moderate and influence its operations in the future; and the true way of doing this has been suggested by that observant officer. When the Act of 1865 was passed it was well known that Government surveyors would not be suffered on Native lands. The appearance of a surveyor's chain was at that time the signal for a riotous resistance by the Natives; but that feeling has now entirely disappeared, and I have been constantly in the receipt of letters from all parts of the Island requesting me to send Government surveyors on to lands proposed to be passed through the Court. The fact is that now Maoris are fully aware of the frightful expenses of the present system of surveying—a system which, in some cases almost consuming the entire proceeds of the land when sold, is still burdensome and unremunerative to the surveyor himself. Uncertain of payment, and compelled to obtain advances, for which a discount of 60 per cent. is sometimes charged, the surveyor is driven to indemnify himself as far as he can by exorbitant charges. Moreover, the same land is sometimes surveyed by two or more surveyors representing different sets of claimants, and when an adjoining block is prepared for adjudication the same line is again measured. A Government surveyor would be able to survey a number of blocks at once, and at the same time would perform, on the ground, without additional expense, the task of reconciling the minor differences which Sir W. Martin would effect by, in each case, sending on to the ground the Court itself. That the influence of the Court as a judicial tribunal—at present greatly respected by the Natives, because they are aware that it decides simply on evidence taken in an orderly manner in open Court—would not for six months survive such a degradation of its functions I am fully persuaded; and if you will look at the accompanying return of the area of blocks adjudicated upon in Auckland, it will be apparent to you that—except perhaps in Hawke's Bay, where the areas are large—Sir W. Martin's whole scheme, even if otherwise reasonable, would break down under the weight of its expense. If at the same time Mr. Heale's department were charged with the other surveys of this Island, now rendered especially necessary by the large plans of the Government, the saving of expense and the increase of efficiency would, I think, give great relief to the Natives—who now indirectly contribute such large sums to the public surveys—and would prove very satisfactory to the several Provincial Governments.

There are many minor points of practice—such as power for the Court to refer a case to the Supreme Court; the subdivision of lands after they have been dealt with without the unanimous consent of the owners, as in the case of a bill in Equity for a partition; the exclusion of European agents; the powers of Assessors; the calculation of duties; the issue of certificates where Crown grants are to follow—to which I must not advert, for, if I did so, this letter would be too long to be of any use. I will merely add, therefore, that to your plan of dividing land into two classes—one held under certificate, with which no dealings can take place, and the other under grant, with no intermediate certificate—I quite agree.

In again dealing with this great question we are in a position of advantage which we could not pretend to in 1865 and 1862. The knowledge of the able men whom the Government have appointed as my coadjutors, almost all of whom had a long antecedent experience of political and territorial dealings with Natives, enables us now to think with confidence on points which, in 1865, could only be dealt with tentatively; and the authority which the Court has gained throughout the Island—whether in consequence of its own character and operations, or from the proceedings of the Executive Government, or from both, it matters not—renders us now capable of taking steps which, when the first Act was passed, few would have dared to venture on. Although our proceedings have sometimes inflicted upon the Native Minister for the time being the trouble and weariness which, unfortunately, seems inseparable from Native affairs, and which seems to break men down before their time, yet I cannot remember that any decision yet given (Manawatu, perhaps, excepted, which was in exceptional conditions) has ever occasioned the Government a day of serious anxiety as affecting the peace of the country. That the Maori race will always be satisfied with a system which they will gradually learn, as Wi Tako has already learnt, is a very operative machine for opening their lands to colonization and reducing their holdings to some relations to their necessities, I cannot hope.

But although I believe, with Mr. Maning, that the final struggle between the races has yet to come, I do not think that that event will be precipitated by any operation of Government which is fair and perfectly understood and accepted by the Natives, and any law on these great and vital questions must now be also satisfactory to the European people settled in New Zealand. I am quite persuaded that no law which does not give reasonable satisfaction to both races can have any chance of success. But, after all we can do, it is against all our lessons of history, and opposed to the truth of human nature, to suppose that the soil of a country can, by any method within our powers of imagination, be transferred from an ancient race, which has long held it as sovereign owners, to an intruding people, without suffering and unhappiness.

I have, &c.,

F. D. FENTON, Chief Judge.

The Hon. the Native Minister, Wellington.

P.S.—I enclose a letter from Mr. McCormick, of Auckland, brought by yesterday's mail. That gentleman has been much employed in the Courts, frequently on behalf of the Crown. Also a letter from Mr. Field, surveyor, which is very suggestive.

(Enclosure 1 in No. 2.) Judge ROGAN to the CHIEF JUDGE, Native Land Court.

Kaipara, 26th June, 1871.

SIR,—

With reference to your letters, dated 9th and 8th June, numbered respectively in the margin, requesting me to furnish you with a report on several points in connection with the present working of the Native Lands Act, I beg to express my regret that circumstances have prevented me from giving the subject of your letters the attention I should have wished at the proper time; yet I hope the observations submitted to you will be in time to accompany reports from other officers, if they should be of sufficient interest to be placed before the Assembly. Before giving any distinct reply to the points alluded to in your first letter, I propose to make a few general remarks, being the result of events indelibly impressed upon my mind, in relation to the purchase of land from the New Zealanders, about the period when the New Zealand Company's settlers first came into the country.

You are aware that I held an appointment under the Plymouth Company of New Zealand as assistant surveyor in the year 1841, when, after the Township of Taranaki had been laid out in allotments, my duty required me to remove to suburban and rural districts to divide the land into fifty-acre sections. It will at once be perceived that, to carry on a survey in a district where, at that time, all the inhabitants were Natives, it was of the utmost importance to me, both in regard to my public and private capacity, to be on good terms with the people, and to accomplish this I very soon discovered that, where none could speak English, a knowledge of the Maori language in part was most essential to the progress and success of my operations. Accordingly, I soon made myself sufficiently acquainted with the Maori, tongue to conduct an ordinary conversation. From these circumstances I was enabled to ascertain the opinions of the Taranaki people regarding the purchase of that district, which was arranged with a few chiefs only. The all-absorbing theme of interest with the Natives, and the mode in which that district was paid for by the officers of the New Zealand Company, was openly ridiculed by such men as Katatore, for, to do justice to some of the leading Natives of that period, I must say that, from the very first settling of that district by Europeans, they (the chiefs) predicted that a time would certainly come when the real owners of the soil would return from north and south to reoccupy Taranaki. The fear of Te Pakaru and his tribe coming from Kawhia and occupying Taranaki or the north bank of Waitara, caused the resident Natives to acquiesce in the survey, and to live on general good terms with their neighbours; and settlement progressed favourably, as a rule, until the Wairau massacre, when the Natives, who were continually coming from the North, emancipated from slavery, and from the South, made a formal stand against a large party of the New Zealand Company's workmen, who were forming a road on the banks of the Waitara, and compelled the labourers to withdraw to New Plymouth. Other demonstrations of rapacity were made with a view of re-establishing their mana; such, for instance, as at Mr. Cooke's farm at Te Hua, where an old savage mustered a large force, felled the timber, and cultivated the soil for years afterwards. This was the time when the Natives said "the Jews were returning to Jerusalem." At any rate the Maoris came back in great numbers, and took actual possession, I may say, of the entire district, thereby producing the melancholy state of affairs in connection with the land question in Taranaki. The settlers became exasperated and desponding, and their industry entirely paralysed. Then came Mr. Commissioner Spain, who, for some reason, awarded 60,000 acres to the Company within the lines first cut by the surveyors of the Company. Subsequently, in 1844, the late Governor Fitzroy visited New Plymouth, and gave back the entire district to the Maoris, which at once and for ever annulled the arrangements by which the settlement was originally founded.

I have no desire to disparage when I point to the error of the purchase of the Company, which very probably was conducted without a knowledge of the Natives, and their custom or principle of dealing with land at the time. Something, no doubt, might be said for the social state of the Maoris, which at the time gave the warrior chief immense power that has now almost faded away. The Taranaki Natives, however, acknowledged no superiors, they were all chiefs—or rather slaves—and the proverb of the Poverty Bay Natives was peculiarly applicable to them, "Turanga tangata rite," ("Equality and fraternity") of the Maori in Taranaki. It can easily be imagined how exultingly the Natives triumphed over this easily-achieved victory, and the amount of patience, required by the Europeans to submit to the tawai of the Maori, when, the settlers were compelled to abandon their farms to the enjoyment of the Ngatiawa.

A new and radically different system of purchasing land was subsequently adopted by the Government of the day, and Mr. Commissioner McLean succeeded in purchasing a small block of land, including the township called the Fitzroy Block. This, it will be therefore seen, was the commencing-point of purchasing the district over again; and it is hardly necessary for me to weary you with the different purchases which were made from time to time by Mr. McLean, or under his direction, in that district. One of these purchases was attended by me long before I entered the Land Purchase Department, and it was clear to those who witnessed the transaction that the Commissioner exhibited an amount of energy, unwearying attention, and caution, in dividing the purchase-money among the respective families who owned the land, which established him in the good opinion of the leaders of the Taranaki tribes.

When I was a Land Purchase Commissioner in the Native Department I may say, without being egotistical, I was not unsuccessful in purchasing land under that system, and I am not aware of any real dispute or protest having been raised out of any land purchased by me, except in a political point of view by the adherents of the so-called Maori King. I am, however, prepared to say that, even before the Native Lands Act became law, the Natives in the Kaipara District were so dissatisfied with the amounts I was authorized to offer that it would have been very difficult, if not impossible, for me to persuade this people to alienate any more land to the Government.

It would only be troubling you if I were to relate some of my experience in the system of old land purchases; and as for the penny-an-acre Proclamation, it never reached so far south as Taranaki. The Manawatu purchase was, as a Maori at Otaki related it to me, the climax of all land purchases, when it is said that Mr. Buller and Dr. Featherston drove in a dog-cart to Rangitikei, spilled £25,000 out to be scrambled for, and left the settlement.

With regard to the working of the present law, I believe I have already expressed an opinion to the effect that "The Native Lands Act, 1865," was favourably received by the Natives, and the working of this Act was satisfactory to those Natives who were interested in and attended the Courts over which I presided. Whether it was because it was translated into Maori, or its mere novelty, I cannot say, but it is certain that the subsequent Acts and amendments, which to a very large extent allow every one to give his own translation to the Maori, who has no means of testing their accuracy, have caused an amount of suspicion to arise in the naturally susceptible mind of the Maori, and it is my belief that this suspicion can only be overcome by giving the benefit of a synopsis, in the Maori language, of any consolidated Act which may be passed by the General Assembly.

As regards the Kaipara, Whangarei, and Mahurangi Districts, the only real murmurings I have heard from the chiefs have been against the Government for imposing such heavy duties upon their land subsequent to its passing through the Court that they say the net proceeds received by them reduce the amount at times below the former rates. It has also been remarked by some of the younger class of chiefs of ability that as it was in the beginning so it is now—only a system of Land-sharking, with the purchaser on one side and the Government on the other, while the interest of the Natives, being left between the two, sinks into the gap of nothingness.

Whether the Europeans have in reality benefited much by the provisions made for land purchased under the Native Lands Act remains, in my opinion, still to be seen, as the land, for the most part, which has been purchased was not so much for the purpose of land-jobbing as for actual settlement and for a future home—for cattle and sheep runs, which are well known to require capital and time to make profitable; but it is certain that a great benefit has been done to the country, as a good deal of labour has been employed as well as capital for the stocking of these runs, which would never have been the case under the Government land regulations, which admitted of 320 acres as the maximum that could be held by one person.

It has appeared to me, from experience, that the investigation of Native title under the Native Lands Act, where the land has not been previously surveyed, is a very great defective point. I may mention the case of Te Aroha, which was always unsatisfactory to my mind from the first, and will, in my opinion, be found to remain a bone of contention for the future. The large blocks of land, inland of Mr. Buckland's run, which have passed your Court, and for which interlocutory orders were granted, are in a precisely similar position—a section of the Ngatiraukawa Tribe will always dispute the law. Raids are frequently made on Buckland's sheep by Natives from the interior, which cannot be prevented except by force. It has always been my opinion that the actual survey of a block of land, from being, as a rule, the result of preliminary discussions, however antagonistic, assists very materially to bring out the real ownership, and leaves the question of title more easily, and clearly determinable. I am, therefore, opposed to the principle of interlocutory orders previous to an actual survey. I do not think much, if anything, can be done now, after the late change, to improve the relative positions of the interpreters, unless you initiate examinations to classify them.

With respect to the surveys, I am of opinion that, with an efficient staff of professional gentlemen under the control of Mr. Heale, the land would be, in most instances, surveyed certainly with more economy and, no doubt, often with greater satisfaction to the Native owners, as, under the present system, a surveyor sometimes employed by a single member of the persons interested in a block of land goes on to the ground and finds that a dispute has taken place about something, probably a boundary-line, and not, perhaps, understanding what the clamour is all about, he remains quiet. A good deal of time is thus often lost, and instances have occurred where the surveyor has been obliged to return without even commencing his work, which was left, probably, to be executed by the more astute successor; while, on the other hand, the Natives at the Court afterwards have been, or pretended to be, astonished at the charges demanded for loss of time. At the last Court in Kaipara a long list of cases was disposed of, and to many of those who attended that Court it was a matter of surprise that most of the cases passed without any controversy taking place, caused by the Natives, at my suggestion two years previously, having taken the precaution to convene meetings for the specific purpose of settling their boundaries for the most part before the surveys were undertaken.

Let me not, however, be understood to say that a prerogative of surveying Native lands should be granted to members of Mr. Heale's staff, as it is evident that such a course would not only prove an, insurmountable obstacle to the purchase of land from many Natives holding possession of some of the most fertile lands of the province: along with the most decided antipathy to anything even resembling an authority from the Government to suppress their liberty of choice, it would not only give umbrage to the great bulk of our European population, who are advocates of general commercial freedom, but it would also prove a severe blow, if not privation of subsistence, to many holding a purchased professional license, which in itself implies a necessity as well as a right to enter the lists of competition.; though I must confess experience goes to prove that where there has been an over-competition, which means to do it anyhow as long as it will pay, the work was seldom executed to the satisfaction even of the Natives; so, while viewing all the sides of the case, I apprehend it to be a very great difficulty to organize a system which would reconcile all interests or be consistent with all principles, and without, being liable, by one side or the other, to reasonable objections. Before concluding my remarks on this subject, I beg to say, and I hope without disparagement or offence to Mr. Heale's office, that although the intellectual faculties of the present generation of New Zealanders are gradually growing more enlightened, I am convinced that a surveyor in the country should be able to have a knowledge of the Maori language, and better still (where convenient) if personally acquainted with the owners. This would obviate recurrences and check such feelings of prejudice as were displayed lately in the North, where the trigonometrical survey was delayed, because the officer in charge could not or did not explain the purpose of his operations to Komene, who could easily have been convinced of the advantage of this survey to himself.

I now come, to point 5 of your letter, which requires a solution of the very essence of the so-called Native question. As my mind is not yet clear on this subject, and as this letter is longer than was intended, with your permission I will leave it to time and the drinking customs of society, which will assuredly dispose of the New Zealander if some great change does not overcome their present mode of life.

I have, &c.,

J. ROGAN, Judge, Native Land Court.

The Chief Judge, Native Land Court.

(Enclosure 2 in No. 2.)Judge MONRO to the CHIEF JUDGE, Native Land Court.

Auckland, 12th May, 1871.

SIR,—

I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 9th February, requesting from me a report in reference to the past working, the defects observed, and the possible amendments that might be suggested in the Native Land Court Acts, under the several heads therein enumerated. It is not to be expected that so complete a revolution as is implied in the exchange of a communal and often-disputed tenure of lands held as the property of all the free members of a tribe, for one definite, personal, and subjected to at least the broader principles, if not in all cases to the technical niceties, of the real estate law of England, could be carried out over so large an area as that of the North Island of New Zealand without some occasional hardships being inflicted upon individuals in its progress; and it not unfrequently occurs, in cases such as that now under notice, that individual instances of hardship attract more immediate notice than the broader and far more important but more silent results which affect society at large as growing out of such a revolution. Hence arises, on the part of many, a disposition to overlook such results; to clamour loudly and unreasonably for a recurrence to the old order of things; and to ignore the changes in society which have made such recurrence not only undesirable but impossible. The advent of the English colonists found the Maori tribes and families in possession of certain tracts of territory, the boundaries of which were approximately settled, if not with the accuracy of survey, yet with sufficient distinctness to render any considerable encroachment upon them cognizable within such limits. It does not appear that there was any generally admitted individual and personal tenure, further than that of mere occupancy and cultivation, and certainly no indefeasible hereditary right limited to any one member of a family at all answering to our ideas of inheritance by primogeniture. A man enclosed and cultivated a portion of the common land of his tribe, and no other man had a right, to disturb either him or his family, sons or daughters, while he continued to do so. The land was theirs in occupancy, and its produce was theirs in property; but neither the original occupant nor his family had any estate in fee in the land. The communal right so existing was recognized by the Crown in the Treaty of Waitangi; but, inasmuch as it was one too much at variance with the habits of a civilized community to be adopted by the colonists, provision was made by the same Treaty for its gradual extinction in the pre-emptive right given to the Crown, which was thus made an instrument for the gradual exchange of the vague and imperfect occupancy tenure of the Maori tribes into the more definite and fuller proprietary tenure of individual citizens, whether Maori or European, which alone could be recognized by the law of a settled civil Government. It was, however, hardly possible that this system could be permanent; it had, indeed, such inherent defects that the very success of it in the commencement insured its final failure. The Crown, which was the purchaser of lands, was also the sole judge of the right of tribes or families offering, land for sale, and therefore was directly exposed to the suspicion of unfairness in extinguishing conflicting rights in proportion to the willingness of the claimants to alienate territory which was so urgently required for the purposes of colonization; while in the event of a purchase being made from a tribe not entitled to the land in question, the Crown was at once placed in the dilemma of either remaining a direct party to an act of injustice, or of having to extricate itself from that position by a, double expenditure of public money. Again, the proposal on the part of any tribe to sell, a block of land to which the fact of colonization had imparted a value previously unknown, could not always be unanimous, while it gave the signal for the revival of numbers of dormant claims, more or less well founded, and upon which there existed no independent tribunal competent to decide; and the refusal of any section of the tribe or of any of the numerous claimants to accede to the sale, or a general reluctance on their part to see what they considered as the inheritance of their fathers passing into the hands of another race, placed them in such a position of antagonism to the Government as would easily convert the non-seller first into a disaffected subject and then into an open rebel.

How far these several results have actually taken place is now matter rather of history than of speculation. At the time when the first of the Native Land Court Acts was passed by the General Assembly it had become generally acknowledged that the old system of Crown pre-emption (which, indeed, had once before been temporarily abandoned) was now absolutely effete, and that, if land was to continue to pass from the hands of the Maori tribes into those of the rapidly-increasing European population, it must be by the substitution of some other means, whereby the rights of the former could be first ascertained and determined, and converted into a legally-cognizable tenure before being transferred to the latter, while the Crown should exchange its invidious and dangerous position of a party to the transaction, buying from one and selling to the other, for the more appropriate and dignified office of judging of the rights of the sellers, and giving validity to their voluntary acts, whether of alienation or retention. If, indeed, the transfer of land had been the sole object the Legislature had in view, it might have been sufficient to have referred sales of land only to the Court for examination and confirmation; but inasmuch as it was plain that many of the rights of citizenship are inseparable from an individual tenure of property, and that land is one of the most important species of property, it was wisely determined to make the measure more general in its application, and, as far as possible, an instrument for the conversion of the Native communal into an English proprietary tenure, which would confer upon its possessors of either race, not only the rights of owners of the soil, but those also of freeholders—in a word, of citizens.

It has, indeed, been alleged by some that the system of the Court was recommended to the Maoris mainly by its novelty—by the love of change so characteristic of a semi-civilized race; and this may have been true in the commencement; but it cannot be denied that a conviction has gained ground among them of the impartiality of the Courts, and that, when a miscarriage of justice has occurred, it is in no respect attributed either to the Judges or to the system they administer, but either to a failure to produce evidence in the process of the case, or to an unfair use of the legal power put into the hands of those in whom the Court has found it expedient to vest the land. A comparison of the area of land purchased, under Crown pre-emption, in the twenty-four years between 1810 and 1864, with that which has been passed under the operation of the Native Land Court in the six years subsequent, will prove that the present system has brought under the cognizance of English law a nearly equal area in this Island. Even did this fact stand alone as the sole result of the establishment of the Court, it would be no trifling evidence of their value; but when to this we add the increased reverence for law, and increased confidence in the judicial tribunals which are intrusted with its administration, it is difficult to calculate the value of the system in its effects upon the Native mind.

In the foregoing observations I have not considered it necessary to preserve any distinction between the first and second heads named in the letter under reply, conceiving that present results are the best criterion of its past working. Defects in the working of so entirely new a system are, of course, to be expected; and perhaps the most prominent of these is to be found in the difficulty arising from the number of claimants interested in particular blocks. Although the entire lands of any tribe were owned by the whole body of it, in its widest extent, yet sections of that tribe had their several portions of territory restricted to them by the same condition of occupancy by which the larger tribe held the larger area.

In bringing the Native Land Court Acts into operation, it was trusted that the Maoris would see the wisdom of practically allowing such subdivisions of the territory to take undisputed effect, and such has been to a great extent the case, each sub-tribe or family waiving their rights over the lands occupied by others, on condition of being allowed undisputed ownership of their own particular holdings. Thus, one much-desired result, the individualization of land title, has been advanced a great step towards its accomplishment. With a view to that end it was decided that not more than ten names should be inserted in any Crown grant made in pursuance of an award by the Land Court, the Legislature having in further view, when making this provision, the great practical inconvenience certain to result, in any subsequent transactions, from having any larger number to deal with where unanimity in action would have become essential. In many, perhaps in most, cases this provision acted, as it was desired that it should act, in causing a minute subdivision of the land, so that not more than ten persons might be interested in any special holding; but there were circumstances more particularly affecting the grassy plains of the Province of Hawke's Bay which greatly interfered with this desirable result. Here, in consequence of its physical character, the country had been occupied in much larger blocks by runholders who had made contracts with the Natives prior to the passing of the Act; illegally—i.e., in opposition to the then standing statute law—and who were naturally anxious to have their presently existing and insecure occupation exchanged, unaltered, for a legalized and sustainable tenure. Nor were the Maoris at all averse to assist towards the same end. They had for years past been receiving large rentals for their lands, and no difficulty had been found in subdividing the money so received among the respective claimants in accordance with their own determination of their respective rights, while a subdivision of the blocks would have entailed upon them increased expense of survey and trouble in receipt of rents, without a corresponding advantage, visible at first sight to them, to counterbalance these. The runs therefore were passed, in accordance with the proviso, in the names of ten claimants, in reality and equitably trustees for the benefit of themselves and of their co-proprietors, but in appearance and at strict law absolute owners of these tracts. I need not enlarge upon the abuses to which such a state of things has opened the door.

The question, how this evil may best be remedied, is a difficult one. The insertion in the grant of the name of each individual interested in it is, in practice, in many cases so evidently impossible that it may be at once dismissed. The most effectual remedy, a more complete subdivision of the land, so that no more persons should be interested in a single grant than could practically be dealt with, is in the hands of the Maoris themselves, while any system of grants with trust expressed in them, other than for public purposes, is looked upon with extreme disfavour by the present age. The registration of the names of the claimants in the Court, under the 17th section of the Act of 1867, and the issue of a certificate only to determine the proper parties to be-dealt with, is the only remedy as yet discovered for this acknowledged difficulty.

The question of survey belongs more particularly to other officers than myself to discuss, but, without trenching upon this special province, I may remark that in my opinion it would be decidedly advantageous that the survey of the external boundaries, required by the Acts as preliminary to an adjudication, should be conducted under the immediate control of the Inspector of Surveys' Office. A more uniform and reasonable scale of charges, and much greater accuracy in avoiding overlaps and similar errors, might be insured, while greater punctuality in payment could be enforced. As matters stand, the right given to surveyors to retain a lien on the grant is, in many cases, virtually of no effect: the certificate insures the uninterrupted possession to the parties named in it, and where there is no intention to alienate they have no object to be gained by the expediting of the grant. Another complaint made of surveyors, and not without just ground, is the necessity for their attendance in Court to give merely formal answers to certain regular questions, in respect of which a certificate upon this plan, or, if deemed desirable, a statutory declaration appended to it, might, I think, be satisfactorily substituted. In cases where the evidence of the surveyor might be deemed necessary to establish any other point, he might be called by subpœna, like any other witness.

I have not touched upon the question of delay and expense incurred by useless prolongation of cases placed in the hands of agents, because the last and most flagrant instance of such a case has, in effect worked the cure of this crying abuse, and placed in the hands of the Judges themselves the power of preventing a repetition of such a scandal upon the administration of justice.

In conclusion, I would desire to remark that, so far from being averse to seeing large tracts of land alienated from their aboriginal occupants and passing into the hands of the European colonists, I have always looked upon the wide extent of the uncultivated holdings of the Maori as a curse to them rather than a blessing; and I maintain that every legitimate encouragement should be held out to them to part with their surplus lands to those who can make the use of them for which they were intended, care being taken that each Native has ample land secured to him for his own maintenance.

I have, &c.,

HENRY A. H. MONRO, Judge, Native Land Court.

The Chief Judge, Native Land Court.

Native Land Court Office, Hokianga, 27th April, 1871.
SIR,—

I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter No. 60, of date 9th February, 1871, requesting me to report on certain points regarding the working of the Native Lands Acts.

In endeavouring to answer the questions you have placed before me, I beg to be understood, except in cases where my remarks are obviously general, as coming to my conclusions from my experience in the northern districts where I have been chiefly engaged. I also hope that, as I am very much pressed by the business of my office, you will excuse me being as brief as possible in my answers, though at the same time I do not insinuate that were I to use a greater number of words my report would be at all more valuable.

1. Past Workings of the Present Laws.

The working of the present laws, or their failure, depended entirely from the beginning on whether the Natives would or would not accept the opportunity held out to them of individualizing their titles to land, and of holding it by grant from the Crown. They have accepted it with great promptitude and very clear appreciation of the advantages which they obtain, and it is to this, and the very strong public opinion in favour of the present Native land laws, that may be attributed the authority which the Native Land Court has acquired, founded only on a moral influence, and which has enabled the Court not only to work the law without check, but to finally settle very many old-standing disputes regarding the ownership of lands, which have been the cause of periodical disturbances, and which I do not think could have been settled by the Natives themselves without the intervention of the Court.

2. Effect upon the Maori and European People.

One effect which I have noticed myself, and heard remarked on by others, and which is indeed quite perceptible, is that there is evidence of an increase of industry, more economical habits, and a better mode of living amongst the individuals and families who have obtained Crown grants for their farms. This improvement I have a hope will be more progressive and more general as the Native lands become more and more subdivided. When Natives have received grants for their lands, they seem to have no hesitation in, as far as their means go, expending both money and labour in making improvements of a more permanent nature than they had previously done, and not a few have already made a respectable progress in this way, considering their means. I have also not unfrequently heard Natives, on receiving an order for a certificate of title, remark with great satisfaction that they now felt secure in the possession of their property, as, whatever others might do, their land could not be taken or confiscated so long as they themselves behaved as loyal subjects. I think this feeling among the Natives a matter of no little importance. It shows they have faith in the protection which the grant of the Crown, imparts, and that they in consequence feel bound by circumstances and their own interest not to commit any very serious overt acts in opposition to the Government.

The Natives in the northern districts, according to my experience, come into Court in the great majority of cases with the bonâ fide purpose of procuring Crown grants for farms, generally of moderate size, for themselves; they nevertheless do sell land to Europeans, and the ability to do this, given by the action of the Court, is felt as a great benefit by both parties, but particularly so by the intending settler, as it enables him to select exactly the land which suits his purpose; and, though no very extensive land sales have been made, I think the gradual settlement of Europeans, on not very extensive blocks of land, is the most desirable way of settling the country, particularly when the land has been purchased by the settler directly from the Native owner, as it brings the parties into contact in the manner least likely to cause dispute or danger, and most likely to lay the foundation of relations of friendship and mutual advantage.

3. Points found to be defective.

The only objection I have heard made against the working of the Native Lands Act is, that in some instances certificates of title have been given to only a few individuals for lands in which many Others had interests, on the understanding that the minority of the owners actually named as entitled would act as trustees for the rest, and guardians of their interests, but that they did not do so, and in fact sold the land for their own advantage. I do not know whether any such case has really occurred, having, only, heard a report that some such thing did happen at Hawke's Bay. On this I have only to remark that, apart from the question as to whether such a proceeding would be good in law, which it might or might not, according to the real circumstances of the case, I think "The Native Lands Act, 1867," section 17, seems a sufficient protection for the interests of Native owners for the future.

4. Surveyors.

I do not think it at all advisable that the surveys of lands should be undertaken by Mr. Heale's office, or by any other official department, for the claimants.

5. When it is taken to be a natural consequence of the contact of two races of men that the soil of the country of one shall pass into the hands of the other, the suffering to the losing race appears to me to be equally inevitable, and therefore not to be in any way reduced or prevented. The higher the losing race may have stood in the scale of humanity, and the greater their material advantages of life have been, the greater will be the suffering, because the loss of the soil means degradation and poverty to the race. I think, therefore, that no plan can be devised for reducing the suffering at all in amount, though it may be reduced in intensity, but only by extending it over a greater length of time. "Whether it is worth while to do so, or whether the more powerful race, though talking about ameliorating the condition of the other, would in reality do so, even were it possible, appears to me to be doubtful in the extreme. Individual benevolence has, no doubt, always existed, and has had more or less visible effects; but we look in vain for any marked proof of the exercise of benevolence as between races. I take it for granted that the two races more particularly pointed to by your question are the British and Maori races; and I therefore think it right to state my opinion that the time has not yet arrived in which we can assure ourselves that the soil of the Northern Island of New Zealand will pass permanently into the hands of the British people, or that the British race will be to a certainty the only ruling power in this country.

As the Native Lands Acts in their operation seem to attain the objects for which they were intended, I feel unwilling to suggest any alteration, except those few amendments which have been the subject of discussion between us, and the proposal of which I would leave to your better judgment.

I have, &c.,

F. E. MANING.

Hon. F. D.

Fenton, Chief Judge, Native Land Court, Auckland.

(Enclosure 4 in No. 2.)Mr. THEOPHILUS HEALE to the CHIEF JUDGE, Native Land Court.

Inspector of Surveys' Office, Auckland, 7th March, 1871.

SIR,—

The first and fifth heads on which I am desired in your letter of the 17th ultimo to report, justify me in going beyond my own proper province of survey. I am induced, therefore, to make a very succinct sketch of the whole question of Native land titles, and the means that have been adopted to convert them into legal freeholds, before considering the, improvements which appear to me to be required in the existing mode of dealing with them, both in its general conduct and especially in that branch of the system in which I am more particularly concerned. Omitting altogether, for the sake of brevity, the historical facts which sustain these, views, I take for granted—(1.) That the Native title to land is communal,—all the free families of the tribe which acquired land being its proprietors, the chiefs

Perhaps this was not always so: before the great numbers of hapus split off from the original tribes, the authority and recognized rights of the chiefs may have been greater. Since it is very common to hear adverse claimants, representing different hapus, all admit that the land originally belonged to one common ancestor, who is said to have made a division of it.

having no greater rights in it than the other members of the tribe, except in so far as, at the present time, they generally represent a greater number of families. (2.) That this title was founded entirely on ancient and uninterrupted occupation, or on conquest, followed by such acts as, in Native eyes, implied continued occupation, or at least dominion. (3.) That this title vested in the community, and maintained only by its physical force, was such as could not possibly be recognized or administered by Courts bound in matters of real estate by the rules of, the English common law. (4.) That these rights were in the largest and most general terms confirmed and guaranteed by the Treaty of Waitahgi, and that some machinery became absolutely necessary for ascertaining the individuals in whom the right to the land lay, according to Native views, and for converting those vague and unavailable rights into such titles, vested in individuals, as would enable transfers to be made to which the rules of English jurisprudence would apply.

The first and most obvious method was to buy up, on behalf of the public, these rights of the Natives, whatever they might be (and for this no close investigation or nice discrimination as to ownership was required, the only care necessary being that all claims, good or bad, should be extinguished by purchase); and then, having acquired to the Crown the absolute freehold, to reissue it under the sanction of Crown grants. I need not go into the history of this system, its progress, and its failure, further than to observe that it involved these fatal objections: First. That the buyer was the final and only judge of the rights of the seller, and therefore laboured under the suspicion of being disposed to view with favour the claims of those who were most willing to sell. Secondly, That, in practice, the only mode the buyer had of ascertaining the nature of the title and of learning the complex and disputable facts and traditions on which it rested, was by separate interviews with the different claiming tribes, who had a constant tendency to exaggerate their claims in order to counteract the exaggerations which they knew the other parties would use; and so, there being no means of confronting adverse claimants, all the old disputes and tribal feuds were renewed and exasperated. And, thirdly. That, since the land-buyer and the Government were, in Native eyes, identified, any violence or threats by which a tribe sought to maintain its claims to land appeared to be outrages against the Government. An indisposition to sell land became disaffection; and the land leagues, which were naturally formed as some protection against the alarms and suspicions of the Natives lest negotiations should be made with other parties for lands they claimed, were undistinguishable from hostile associations against the Government and the colony. That, after twenty-five years of this system, incurable suspicions filled the minds of the Natives; that the colony suffered miserably from want of lands, while purchases became increasingly difficult; and that the peace of the country was fatally disturbed—are matters of history, on which I need not touch. The remedy applied by the Legislature was based on two leading principles—(1) That the Government should no longer present itself to the Natives as a bargainer for their land; and (2) that all questions as to the ownership of Native land, and investigation of the facts on which it reposes, should be referred to a Court composed of Judges appointed for life, therefore independent of the Executive, and free from all suspicion of interest in the result; holding its sittings only in public, after due notification, and with the parties confronted before it. The soundness of these principles is so unquestionable, and the success that has followed their adoption is so manifest, that I apprehend they can never again be called into serious controversy; and the question now to be considered is, to detect and suggest a remedy for any defects which may have shown themselves in the working of the system based upon them, rather than to discuss the principles themselves.

Before passing to these supposed defects in the working of the Native Land Court system, I may notice—but only to pass over, as belonging rather to the domain of general politics—that extensive evils have arisen from its immense success, and its consequent over-rapid operation. Up to the year 1865, as far as can readily be gathered from published returns, the whole amount of land alienated by the Natives in the Province of Auckland only amounted to about 2,000,000 acres, of which a great portion has never passed into the hands of individuals; while, since that time, 2,000,000 acres have passed through the Land Court, of which the far greater part has been alienated by sale or lease, or has been thrown on the market for that purpose; and this large consumption took place although, during the same period, about 2,000,000 acres more have been confiscated, of which also the better portion has been distributed among the colonists. It is impossible that so enormous a change in the ratio of supply and demand can have taken place without many inconveniences arising, the most obvious of which is the great depreciation in price; lands equal in quality to what in 1860 were readily sold at £1 per acre, and which could only be obtained in small areas, are now hawked about in large blocks for sale at 2s. per acre, and even less. From this it is that much of the dissatisfaction with the working of the system arises. The Natives for the most part can only look at results, and their discontent is natural; the costs, too, which would have been an insignificant proportion to the value at 20s. or even 10s. per acre, look enormous when the land is sold at 1s. Even the colonists who were most friendly to the operation of the Act, having now for the most part bought land to the extent of their means or desires, are concerned to see the price still falling as fresh lands are passed through the Court. This evil is great, and it may well engage the attention of politicians, but it is the triumph, of the Native Land Court system.

The Native Lands Act did not bestow the lands of New Zealand upon the Natives: that had been already done, as fully as words could do it, by the Treaty of Waitangi. The object of those Acts was to make those absolute and complete but vague and indefinite rights available for transactions with the colonists; and if too much land has so been made available, and an overstocked market has resulted, that can never be made a reproach to the Native Land Courts or their system. I return, therefore, to the consideration of what I conceive to be the defects in, or the impediments to, its action. These, I believe, may all be resolved under the following heads, namely: (1.) The want of settled rules as to Native title and evidence; that is, some outlines, at least, of a code of received Native custom and usage and a settled and simple law for the guidance of the Court. (2.) The practice of vesting legal and convertible estate absolutely in a few individual Natives, who are, in fact, only representatives of a number of families. (3.) The great expense and imperfection of the means of ascertaining and fixing the limits of the parcels of lands from the want of a sufficiently comprehensive and accurate system of survey. And (4.) The great and increasing expenses involved in the hearing of contested claims, especially in the larger towns.

The first defect noticed is one which was inevitable in the commencement of the system. In the twenty-five years which elapsed between the foundation of the colony to the full establishment of the Native Land Court no progress had been made in ascertaining what constituted Native title to land—whether conquest absolutely extinguished the rights of the conquered; what right remained to conquered or submitting tribes suffered to remain on land in some subject capacity (rahi); rules of inheritance, &c.

Thus the Native Land Court had unavoidably to seek out, from the evidence before it, from its Native Assessors, and ultimately from its own experience, what the Native custom and usage was, as well as the facts to which it was to be applied. This happened to be a function to which the Court was peculiarly fitted, and it has unquestionably been very well performed; but I cannot but think that the time has now come when the experience acquired is sufficient to enable a tolerably complete system of rules to be laid down, and that their publication would save the Court and the litigants a great deal of time and labour, and would make the Court's judgments more clear and intelligible to the public, and so increase the confidence with which it is regarded.

As regards the application of English law to the issue coming before the Native Land Court, I cannot but think that the leaving decisions in any disputable point of law to the Court was an unfortunate mistake. Originated to deal with "Native customs and usages"—intended to sit in Native districts to decide on claims to land on the spot, and constituted partly of Natives—questions of technical law were peculiarly foreign to its nature and to the purposes of its institution. It appears to me that the carrying-out of its own proper objects requires that the Court should be as much as possible identified with the Natives, who should be able to follow the pleadings before it, and to understand all its proceedings; and that the introduction into it of solicitors and barristers, generally wholly unacquainted with the language or customs of the Natives—arguing technical points utterly unintelligible to the suitors, and even to the Assessor on the Bench—was a fatal departure from its principles, which has brought to it opposition from many of the colonists, has in some degree, estranged it from the Natives, and has introduced into its operation a delay and an amount of expense which is often utterly destructive to the interests it was constituted to protect. It appears to me that in any legislative revision of the Native Lands Acts a provision ought to be made enabling the Court, in case of any question arising on a point of English law, to make up a case to be decided in some cheap and expeditious way by the Judges of the Supreme Court; and that in the Native Land Court Natives alone ought to be heard, with the aid only of interpreters, whose functions should be strictly defined by the Court, and that the proceedings ought to be carried on originally in the Maori language, and be interpreted to the Court for record.

The evils which have arisen in practice under the third head have, been of so crying a character that several attempts have already been made to mitigate them. I doubt if any will be effectual which do not go to the root of the matter; and that I conceive to be, to leave the land, as long as it continues to be held by the original Native owners, to be held by all interested in it in common (in the non-legal sense of the word), capable of being dealt with only in the way which alone Natives can clearly understand, by common consent, and only to invest it with the attributes of English real estate when, by the general consent of the owners, to be proved, like any other Native fact, by appearance before the Court, it is transferred to an individual capable of understanding and being bound by the rights and obligations effecting real estate. The chief difficulty in carrying this out would be the necessity of making the Native Land Court always available in the chief centres of Native districts, since a recurrence to it would be necessary whenever the certified owners wished to make a first transfer to the land awarded to them; but other reasons exist in favour of establishing the Courts permanently in the chief centres of Native districts, instead of sitting in them casually: as now. As it is, the Natives generally have shown themselves incapable of appreciating the duties and responsibilities which they well know attached to the nominal estate in the lands of their relatives, which became vested in them by their names being put into the Crown grants; scandalous frauds have been committed, by which valuable estates have been sold for a mere trifle, no part of which has reached the real owner; and those very parties who have thus abused the trust reposed in them have turned round against the law and the Court which gave them the power to do it.

I now come to the question which more properly belongs to me, the defects and shortcomings of the system of survey. The Native Land Court system was not only in its nature tentative and obliged to work experimentally, and therefore subject to many risks of failure in detail, but it also inherited many of the evils which arose from the faulty system which preceded it; these operated especially against a good system of survey. In the time when every Native stood in terror lest his hereditary enemies or his own kindred should privately sell the land he claimed, the act of survey was particularly dreaded as evidence of such operations. The surveyor was watched for, to be hunted off the land whenever seen. Thus any system of general survey was impossible, and the practice became universal of making wholly detached surveys by cutting lines round the periphery of a piece of land, and traversing it with the chain by compass bearings, a system open to every kind of objection; it is enormously expensive; it defines the estate on the ground most imperfectly; it does not admit of any adequate check being applied to its correctness; and, above all, it does not enable the survey, when made, to be laid down on a record map. Moreover, the jealousy of the Natives of a surveyor, and particularly of a Government surveyor, was so great that, in 1865, it was not practicable to limit the performance even of such surveys as described to persons employed by the Government; but in order to avoid responsibility, and to disarm opposition, the Native claimants were left to employ their own surveyors, the only check upon their trustworthiness being that these were required to be licensed by the Government. Even this slight check was to a great extent nugatory, since, when the survey was a matter of bargain, it was found impossible to refuse to allow the Natives to employ the person who would undertake to perform their work cheaply, unless some strong objection to him existed: thus, in practice, licenses have rarely been refused to persons who could produce respectable vouchers as to character and competency. As a rule, the Native landowners have not the means of paying the surveyor for his services, not even for his out-of-pocket expenses; they are therefore commonly obliged to accept the services of some one who will do the work on the security of the land. With such uncertain prospect of payment, the surveyor bargains for a far larger price than would satisfy him if he were paid in cash. In addition, he has often, if not generally, to pay a heavy percentage to the Native agent who procures him the work, and often still heavier discounts to some one who will advance money on the security of his claims. The result of this system, as might have been expected has not been satisfactory as regards the quality of the survey; it is often ruinous to the surveyor and is very disastrous to the Native landowner. Its effect upon the Natives has latterly been exaggerated to a point which is becoming a reproach and a disgrace to the community, through the evasions by which some of the surveyors have succeeded in withdrawing their claims for survey costs from the cognizance of the tribunal which the Legislature specially appointed for their investigation, and practically from any check whatever.

Clause 69 of the Native Lands Act provides, "That in any case whatever in which a dispute shall arise between a surveyor and his Native employers, either as to the amount of remuneration, or as to the quality of the work done, or on any question whatever arising out of such employment, the Court may inquire into the case and take evidence thereupon, and give such a decision in the premises as it shall deem fit, which decision shall be final and binding on both parties;" and the Rule No. 58 of the Native Land Court, made in pursuance of that Act, provides that "Whenever a surveyor or his Native employer shall bring before the Court any question under section sixty-nine of the Act, the party intending to apply to the Court shall give to the other party at least seven days' notice of his intention so to apply, except in cases where both parties are present." Were these provisions carried out, some just ratio, at all events, between the quantity and quality of the work, and the price demanded for it, could be maintained; but a practice has arisen of inducing Natives, when desiring to have their land surveyed, to sign agreements, promissory-notes, or other legal instruments, on which proceedings in the Supreme Court can subsequently be taken; and by these means, in some cases, Native chiefs have been arrested for survey costs such as certainly would not have been allowed after investigation before the Native Land Court. In others, lands have been sold under execution at insignificant fractions of their value, the surveyor himself being sometimes the purchaser.

Those who know the fatal facility with which Natives, when eager to gain an immediate object, can be induced to sign documents which they imperfectly understand, and of which the effect is comparatively remote, will see that there is no limit to the extortion which becomes possible when the judicial issue is taken, not upon the equity of the original bargain or the way in which it has been carried out, but simply on the legal effect of an instrument which a Native has been induced to sign. Such a condition of things ought not to be suffered to continue; the original cause for its allowance has to a great extent passed away. The objections of Natives to have their land surveyed have diminished with the cessation of the cause which led to them (except, of course, to the King's territory), and there appears to be no sufficient reason why the Government should not now resume this portion of its abdicated functions. One of the first necessities of any civilized Government is accurate maps of its territory. When the Legislature undertook to give valid titles for Native lands it became bound to take due precaution to secure them against the risk of future litigation; there is only one way in which the duties can be properly carried out—that is, by the rapid extension and connection of the various triangulations which now cover about one-fifth of the accessible portions of the North Island; and by refusing to receive any surveys unless made in subordination to those triangulations and by officers directly responsible to the Government—that is, by the Government taking into its own hands the execution of all surveys of Native lands. I am satisfied that the work so executed, though infinitely superior in quality, would not cost one-half of the average prices now paid, nominally by the Natives, but generally by the purchasers of Native lands; and, while making a great immediate saving to the public, it would not ultimately involve any loss to the Government, since each land claim, as it passed, would be charged with its quota of the expense, which would ultimately be recovered in the same way as the other dues now are.

To carry this out I would, propose, not that the work should in all cases be performed by, salaried officers, but that in suitable districts one or more district surveyors should be appointed, who when called upon should survey any lands, required to be passed through the Court and receive therefor regular contract rates. Should, however, such a plan be seriously entertained, it would be necessary to prepare a very complete set of rules, which it would be premature to enter upon now. It may be necessary, however, to consider what would be the general effect of such a system. I think there can be no doubt that the cost of surveys now largely operates to deter Natives from passing their lands through the Court, and there is reason to believe that if this were removed a great increase would take place in the business of the Court, especially of large blocks not likely early to find purchasers; and the consequence would be that the Government would become the mortgagees of very large areas of land, and, unless special action were taken to prevent it, the land market would become still more burdened with unsaleable estates. Whether this is desirable or not it is not for me to say; whether it might with propriety become part of a system by which, without any bargaining, the Government might systematically purchase large blocks at a certain fixed scale of rates, is a question of politics with which I have no vocation to meddle; but I ought to state my conviction that the result of relieving the Native landowners from the task of paying for their surveys would soon be greatly to extend the operation of the Native Land Court, and at no distant date to put an end to Maori tenure, with its interminable disputes and excitement.

I have; &c.,

THEOPH. HEALE.

(Enclosure 5 in No. 2.)Mr J. C. MacCORMICK to Judge FENTON.

Auckland, 16th August, 1871.

SIR,—

I return the draft of the proposed Bill for the consolidation and amendment of the Acts relating to Native lands. Owing to my absence from the colony during the last month I have not been able sooner to peruse the Bill with the view of offering suggestions for amendments, as you requested, and must beg you, therefore; to excuse the hasty notes, which I have made in the draft, of alterations which I offer you for what they are worth. Many of the points suggested by me have presented themselves to me in practice, and in other cases I have suggested alterations and amendments which, if made, will, I think, give the Acts more beneficial operation than they have at present.

I believe that, on the whole, the Native Lands Acts have worked very well, and I approve highly of the general scope of these Acts, and am so fully persuaded of their beneficial operation, at least in this part of the colony, that I should be very sorry to see them repealed. I make this remark because I have heard, since my return, that there is a party inclined to repeal them. I earnestly hope that the Government will not support such a measure, for I believe there is no Act passed of late years which has done so much to promote the settlement of the colony as "The Native Lands Act, 1865." I am quite prepared to give good reason (as I believe) for my opinions on this subject, and I think myself entitled to express an opinion, having had some experience of the working of the Act.

So long as we recognize the right of ownership in the Natives in the lands of the colony—I mean not only in the lands cultivated or used by them, but also in those lands which are, and always will be, wastes, so far as any use of them by the Natives is concerned—I do not know any method of dealing with the lands of the Natives which will be of so much advantage to the community as the system existing under the Native Lands Acts.

I have made several suggestions, in a rough way, as I have, stated, but there are two matters particularly in respect of which I think radical amendments should be made in the Act. The first I mention is that the jurisdiction of the Court should be confined to the cases of claims to lands in the ordinary acceptation of the word, and that the Court should not have the power to entertain claims of fisheries, or such claims as that recently made to the foreshore at the Thames. If Natives have really claims to the enjoyment of such rights, there is no likelihood of any person interfering with them, and they certainly do not require a grant from the Crown to protect them in the enjoyment of such rights. The grant would only be obtained for the purpose of enabling the Natives to sell such rights to private individuals—to make a profit at the expense of the public. Such monopolies as the exclusive right of fishing in a particular place are bad enough in the Old Country; in the colony they are simply intolerable. I am doubtful as to your agreeing with me in this respect, but I feel very strongly on the subject. I have offered a suggestion in section 7, but I would like to see the alteration carried further than I have suggested. The other matter is, to alter the Act so as to secure the repayment of loans made by persons to Natives for the purpose of enabling them to obtain Crown grants of their lands. If I did not see the danger of legalizing contracts relating to land made with Natives before the title to such lands had been ascertained, I should be strongly in favour of removing all restrictions upon such contracts; but I believe that allowing such contracts to be made would only be causing continual litigation between Europeans, frequent strifes between the Natives themselves and between the Natives and Europeans, and probably bloodshed. I do not, on the other hand, see the objection to securing to the European the repayment of money he may advance to a Native for the purpose of his obtaining a marketable title to his land. The Native must, in nearly every case, obtain pecuniary assistance to bring his claim before the Court, and if the law recognized and protected transactions entered into for the purpose of giving this assistance to the Native (and such transactions there must be so long as there is a Native Land Court, whether or not the law recognizes them), it would have the effect of considerably extending and improving the operation of the Act; and would make dealings with Natives for their land look not like scrambling and cheating—the aspect they wear in many cases at present. To carry out my ideas, I have suggested, amongst other things, that the Court should inquire into these transactions, and validate them if proper and just; and I have suggested that surveyors should be placed in a better position for recovering payment from the Natives for services than they are at present. Such an alteration in the law as I have suggested would lead, perhaps, to a still greater amendment—that of legalizing, by the Court, all contracts relating to land entered into by Natives who were declared by the Court to be owners of the land affected by such contracts, and the legislation would then be gradual.

There is another matter, not strictly coming within the scope of the proposed Act, but which requires immediate attention. There are cases in which Crown grants have been issued with a day named in the habendum clause, for which there is no warrant in law, and people have been dealing with the lands comprised in such grants on the faith that such grants are perfectly good. I know that others besides myself entertain doubts as to the validity of these grants, and as I think the Government is bound to take steps to remove these doubts, and to establish titles resting upon such grants, I beg you to draw attention from the proper quarter to the matter, so that some provision should at once be made for such cases.

I have, &c.,

J. C. MACCORMICK.

F. D. Fenton, Esq.,
&c., Native Land Court.

(No. 3.)Mr. FIELD to Mr. COOPER.

Whanganui, 27th June, 1871.
SIR,—

I have the honour to acknowledge, with thanks, the receipt of your letter of the 17th instant, enclosing schedules showing state of grants for Native lands at Patiki. The schedule of 26th August, 1870, came duly to hand, and its receipt was acknowledged by me at the time. It however did not show whether the grants referred to in it had actually been executed or were lying in the Crown Lands Office unexecuted; and as some of the Natives who paid me, on my stating to them on its authority that their grants were ready, have since repeatedly asserted that they nevertheless could not get their grants, others naturally objected to pay, and I had reason to doubt whether the documents had actually been complete at the time I told the Maoris they were so.

I think it would be well if some machinery were devised whereby the Natives could have their grants delivered to them in their several districts. If, for instance, the grants, together with a memorandum of the amounts due on them, were forwarded, on their execution, to the Native Resident Magistrate of the locality, and he were authorized to receive and account for the money, it would obviate a good deal of the delay at present arising in the delivery of the grants, and remove a fertile source of unpleasantness between Maoris and surveyors, and of dissatisfaction with the working of the Court in the minds of the former.

As I understand an amended Native Lands Act is being prepared, and as you may not improbably have something to do with its preparation, it perhaps may not be amiss to call your attention to the present unsatisfactory state of the law as regards the payment of survey fees. The fact that, on the establishment of the Native Land Court, a number of wandering surveyors undertook surveys at low rates, and, after being paid, disappeared without attending to prove the plans in Court, led to the issue of a circular Gazette intimating to Natives that they had better not pay till the work was proved in Court. This not only operated as an injustice to surveyors who might have executed surveys for Natives who on investigation turned out not to be the owners of the surveyed land, in which case the surveyor could get no lien on the land, and had merely an apparent remedy against people whom it would be a waste of time and money to sue, but it had a direct tendency to impede the action of the Court by increasing the cost of surveys, and, by compelling surveyors to apply for liens on the grants, to delay their issue. It moreover emboldened Maoris to employ persons to survey lands to which they had doubtful claims, by making the recovery of his money by the surveyor practically contingent on the success of the claim. If they got the land the surveyor might get paid some time or other if not, they would have sustained no loss and incurred no actual expense, beyond their own time, by prosecuting an unjust claim.

Of late, the Court has evinced an unwillingness to authorize liens on grants unless in special cases, and surveyors did not care to press for them, because lawyers held that such liens were of the nature of securities, which would bar suits for the recovery of the survey fees; and quite recently a further difficulty has arisen, in the shape of a ruling by our Resident Magistrate, to the effect that survey fees, not secured by lien, were nevertheless irrecoverable in his Court, as being claims arising but of transactions in a superior Court. The whole question is thus, as you will see, in a considerable muddle. It seems to me that one of two courses should be adopted: either the circular should be withdrawn and the surveyors be left free to make their own terms with the Natives; or the amount of the surveyor's claim for his work, and attending in Court to prove it, should be marked on the map, and lodged in Court by the claimant as a preliminary to the investigation of his claim. The only objection to the latter course is the impecuniosity of the Natives generally; but this difficulty might be to a great extent removed if a less expensive style of survey were accepted as sufficient for the mere investigation of title. At present the Court actually insists on a far more elaborate and expensive survey for Native lands than the Provincial Government undertakes in completion of the title to lands sold by it. This appears hardly fair to the Natives, and it has, besides, an obvious tendency to increase the difficulty of obtaining payment.

It has always seemed to me that, for the mere investigation of title, a sketch-map prepared by a surveyor (Native sketches being very unreliable, and often actually showing everything turned end for end), showing the boundaries of the land, with its approximate area, and its position as fixed by a few prismatic bearings in reference to any neighbouring prominent natural features of the country, and which would cost but a trifle, should suffice; but that a proper correct survey should be required as a preliminary to the issue of the Crown grant. By this course any serious expense prior to the investigation of title would be saved, and, on the title being determined, those in whose favour the certificate was issued would have no difficulty in obtaining funds either from intending lessees or purchasers, or by means of such a mortgage as is at present allowed, to defray the cost of the grant survey. This course would in the long run add little, if anything, to the total cost of survey, as the surveyor, in running over the ground to prepare the sketch-map, would get such a general knowledge of it as would greatly facilitate the subsequent work.

Anything tending to promote the successful working of the Native Land Court is of such importance to the extension of settlement and furtherance of the interests of the colony generally, that I feel sure you will excuse me for noting the above matters.

I have, &c.,

H. C. FIELD, Licensed Surveyor, Native Land Court.

G. S. Cooper., Esq., Acting-Secretary for Crown Land

P.S.—I observe one error in the schedule of grants. The survey fees on Kariate No. 2 were paid as long ago as 26th January, 1869, and gave the tenant of the property who paid the money a memorandum of the satisfaction of the claim for him to forward to the Secretary for Crown Lands, and release the grant. I can only suppose he has omitted to send it, as this grant is one which the owner of the land has complained he could not get after paying the money. I enclose herewith a fresh memorandum.

(No. 4.)Juge MANING to Mr. DICKEY.

Native Land Court Office, Hokianga, 2nd September, 1871.
SIR,—

I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 19th ultimo, with copy of a draft Native Lands Act and communication from the Hon. the Native Minister, to the effect that he desires the opinion of Judges of the Native Land Court on the same. I, in consequence, enclose herewith some hasty notes I have made different sections of this draft Act intended for the consideration of the Chief Judge and the Hon. the Native Minister, and feel it my duty to state that I can only look upon this draft Act with feelings of the most unqualified disapproval and not a little alarm; for should it become law without such alterations as would, in fact, altogether obliterate the original, it would most certainly be, as soon as it came to be understood by its practical operation, indignantly repudiated by the Natives, who would return to those feelings of distrust and hostility to the Government which, I am glad to say, have, for several years back, been gradually dying out in the North, and are now all but extinct.

I have, &c.,

F. E. MANING.

A. J. Dickey, Esq., Chief Clerk Native Land Court, Auckland.

(Enclosure in No. 4.)

Notes on some of the Sections of the Draft of "The Native Land Court Act, 1871."

Section 13.—I think it well that it should be left to the discretion of the Judge whether or not to employ an Assessor. There are many cases where the presence of a Native Assessor is not really required, and consequently the expense not necessary; but as the practice of in all cases employing Assessors has continued so long, an abrupt change to the contrary practice would not, perhaps, be advisable. It is sufficient to leave to the Judge whether to employ an Assessor or not.

Sections 15, 16, 17.—I do not think that any formal division of districts need be made, but there would be no harm in doing so, provided that the Judges are liable to be called on to act in any other part of the country on special occasions. The present law and practice seem sufficient.

Section 20.—Difficulties have arisen from time to time, but seldom entirely of the nature named in the explanatory remark on this section. The difficulties have chiefly been from delays and misconduct of the surveyors. I would suggest—not, however, without hesitation, and subject to fuller consideration—that it might be an improvement on the present system to appoint district surveyors; each surveyor to have the monopoly of all work required to be done in his district by Natives, with power to employ any sufficient or necessary number of assistants, and no survey to be valid or recognizable by the Court except done by him, or under his supervision; but giving him no redress at law as against his employers, except in the way of enforcing any securities his Native employers might give him for payment previously to the work being entered into which they all can do in one way or another. Some such arrangement would place the parties in a better position: The surveyor would be enabled to refuse to survey until he was secured for his payment which should be at a fixed rate, determined by the Government); the Native claimant could not bring his claim into Court until he had either paid the surveyor beforehand, or given him security, and would be deterred from bringing before the Court, in most cases, any doubtful or vexatious claim; in fact, the expense of survey, which under such circumstances would be clearly unavoidable, would be a very strong guarantee that the claim was bonâ fide, or that the claimant himself believed he was right. The Court, however, should have it in its discretion to order, in case of a claimant who had been nonsuited, and the title given to a successful opponent, that the expense the first claimant had been to in making the survey should be reimbursed to him by the person who had made good his title. Surveyors, I think, would be willing to accept appointments on these terms; but I only make these remarks as a rude groundwork out of which something better may be made, as I am at present pressed for time, and cannot give the subject the full consideration it deserves, or that I could wish. I wish to be understood that in any remarks I make here I refer more particularly to all the country north of Auckland, from the Waitemata River and Kaipara to the North Cape, except where my remarks have an obviously general application.

Sections 21 and 22.—The present law and practice seem quite satisfactory and sufficient.

Section 23.—Absolutely impracticable and unnecessary. Under this section a Judge would have the whole of his time taken up in travelling about the country making extra judicial and impertinent inquiries, and collecting one-sided and, for the most part, false evidence, but which would be only calculated to warp his judgment when the case actually came into Court—a Court in which the titles to estates and interests of the greatest value are decided by the Judges under a deep feeling of responsibility, and of the necessity of doing strict justice, and which is indeed the only foundation for the surprising authority which the Court has acquired, without any support but a moral influence, amongst the Natives, who, though they may in a very few cases appeal against a judgment, have notwithstanding full confidence in the rectitude of the Court, and its intention to do in all cases strict justice. To take action under this section would at once destroy the confidence the Natives have in the Court, and would render the office of Judge contemptible. My practice always been directly to the contrary. I never allow any Native to say one word to me on the merits [unclear: any] claim until it comes before me in Court, and the result has been excellent. I am no longer troubled as at the beginning with attempts to prejudice my mind beforehand, and all parties have [unclear: confident in] the impartiality of the Court, and very few claims are made which are not bonâ fide.

Section 24.—Many claims must be heard at the same time and place, or the business could not be got through at all; and, as to making it a rule to hear or close to the land claimed, this would be to go as far as possible to insure a one-sided investigation, and often a wrong decision. The reason for this opinion I have fully stated formerly in a letter to the Chief Judge of the Native Land Court.

Section 25 and explanatory note.—Natives are always perfect able to manage their own cases in Court. In many cases I find them extraordinarily clever as [unclear: pleers], and they always suffer on both sides, where, in any opposed case, they have been prevailed on the employ European agents, especially lawyers. The present law and practice are sufficient; there is no need to endeavour to make the Court popular: it is highly so.

Sections 26, 27.—See explanatory remark, section 25.

Sections 28, 29.—The present law and practice quite sufficient.

Section 30.—I think that in the cases referred to in this section the Court should have full power to decide as to what restrictions should be imposed on alienability of land, and whether any should be imposed. I think it very necessary and important that the Court should have such discretionary power.

Sections 31, 34, 35, 36, 37.—Such interference between the [unclear: buyer] and seller would be politically unwise, and constitutionally wrong, and highly dangerous. The danger intended to be guarded against by section 31 does not exist, or only to a small degree, in the northern districts, where the Natives do place even, if anything, too much value on land. I think that were the danger alluded to in the explanatory note on section 31 does exist it might be averted in more simple manner. The procedure laid down for adoption in sections 34, 35, 36, and 37, I am bound to say, I think, generally impracticable, quite unnecessary, and highly dangerous. The Native in all the northern districts, and particularly in the Bay of Islands District, understand well what their own rights are; they are extremely anxious to hold their lands by tenure from the Crown, in the same way as lands are held by Her Majesty's European subjects; they are very determined to do as they choose with their own, and are not at all likely to ruin themselves by excessive or improvident land sales, and would, I feel sure, resist such interference and such a state of tutelage as the sections above mentioned would impose upon them, but will submit willingly to such restrictions on alienability of lands or other conditions as the Court can show are prudent, desirable, or necessary for their own [unclear: interests or] the interests of their children. I am bound by my duty to the public to speak plainly what I think this subject, for I can anticipate nothing but danger and difficulty should this proposed Act become [unclear: law].

Sections 38, 39, 40.—I think the present law and practice sufficient, and well understood by the Natives.

Section 41.—This section appears to me unnecessary, the present law being sufficient. The only remark I would make is that every decision by the Court should be founded on a full investigation, and that, in respect to the "peace of the country," the Court should endeavour to come to a just decision in every claim on Maori usage and custom as its first object, and that this will insure the peace of the country in as far as any action of the Court can secure it.

Section 42, of fees.—The fee of 10s. for application for inquiry [unclear: into] title I do not think advisable. The present scale of fees fixed by law appears to me sufficient, the Court having discretion in applying it.

Sections 43, 44, 45, 46.—No remark necessary, present law being sufficient.

Section 47.—There can be no objection made to this section, and it might be useful to decide any doubt as to the reading of an Act, but I do not see at present any [unclear: likelihood] of a question in English law arising in the investigation of a title founded on Maori usage and custom.

Section 48.—Present law sufficient, and I think better.

Section.49.—I think that in all cases of land claims contested between Natives and the Government the Court should not have jurisdiction, except only when the matter has been referred to the Court by the Governor, and in such cases I think the proceeding should be of the, nature of an arbitration: but I believe it would be better for many reasons that no such cases should be referred to the Court at all; and I think the Government would, in most instances, settle such disputes more advantageously by arrangements which might be made between its agents and the Natives. I, however, do not wish to be understood as speaking positively, on this point.

Section 50.—Very proper.

2nd September, 1871.

F. E. MANING.

[NOTE.—The appendix to these reports is too voluminous for insertion.—ED.]